The following is quoted from "Tregelles on Daniel": "Neither was it the decree given to Ezra by Artaxerxes in the seventh year of his reign, for that related to the worship of God, &c., but it evidently must be the decree given to Nehemiah in the twentieth year of the same Artaxerxes, in the month Nisan; this last is the only decree which we find recorded in Scripture which relates to the restoring and building of the city. It must be borne in mind that the very existence of a place as a city depended upon such a decree." Vide also "Barnes on Daniel," p. 145, vol. ii. When the two decrees are considered, there can be but little doubt that the latter one is the commandment to build Jerusalem, and not the decree in the seventh year. It is obvious why this view has not been more generally adopted, viz., because 483 solar years from the twentieth of Artaxerxes do not run out till A.D. 40, which was evidently many years after the coming of the Messiah. I have always thought that a solution of this question would be discovered some day, and that the decree mentioned in Nehemiah would be proved to be the correct one. Only the Temple was built up to the decree in the seventh of Artaxerxes (vide Ezra vii.), and in this there is no mention made of building "the city" or "the wall," but only "to beautify the house of the Lord which is at Jerusalem."

The Temple had been built many years before, and "the city" and "the wall" were found to be in ruins thirteen years after. The book of Ezra will be searched in vain to find "the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem"—"and the wall," but it is quite a different matter when we come to Nehemiah.

Nehemiah was cup-bearer to Artaxerxes; and in the twentieth year of his reign some of Nehemiah's brethren arrived from Jerusalem (Nehemiah i. 2). "And I asked them concerning the Jews that had escaped, which were left of the captivity, and concerning Jerusalem. And they said unto me, The remnant that are left of the captivity there in the province are in great affliction and reproach: the wall of Jerusalem is broken down, and the gates thereof are burned with fire." Then in chap. ii. we read, "In the month Nisan, in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes," that Nehemiah was sad in the presence of the king, and the king asked him why he was sad. Nehemiah answered him, "Let the king live for ever: why should not my countenance be sad, when THE CITY, the place of my fathers' sepulchres, LIETH WASTE, and the gates thereof are consumed with fire?" Then the king said to him: "For what dost thou make request?" Nehemiah answered, "If it please the king, and if thy servant have found favour in thy sight, that thou wouldst send me unto Judah, UNTO THE CITY of my fathers' sepulchres, THAT I MAY BUILD IT." Nehemiah then asked for letters, including an order for "timber" "for the wall of the city." The king granted the request, and virtually gave the commandment to build Jerusalem. There is a very great difference between the decree in the seventh of Artaxerxes, "to beautify the Temple," and the decree in the twentieth, which allowed the city to be builded again as a fortified city. We find a description of the state Jerusalem was in when Nehemiah visited it, in Nehemiah ii. 13, 17, 18. "The wall" was built again, "even in troublous times." This was evidently the revived national existence of the Jews, and the commencement of the seventy weeks of Daniel.

The next point to determine is the date of the twentieth of Artaxerxes. This, happily, is a well-known date, viz., B.C. 444; but it may be well to mention that the reasons for taking it in the year B.C. 444 are given in "The Approaching End of the Age," where Mr. Guinness quotes fully from Sir Isaac Newton, on the "Prophecies of Daniel," who satisfactorily establishes the date of B.C. 457, for the date of Ezra's decree in the seventh of Artaxerxes.

This date is also accepted by Barnes, and Dr. Pusey (vide "Dr. Pusey on Daniel," p. 169), &c. If the seventh of Artaxerxes was in the year B.C. 457, it is evident that the twentieth was in B.C. 444.

We will now consider the dates of the commencement of our Lord's ministry, and of the Passion. There is but little doubt that his ministry was about three and a half years' duration, and that He was baptized in the autumn and crucified in the Passover month, or spring of the year (fourteenth Nisan). Therefore, if we can determine the year of the crucifixion, the date of the commencement of the ministry is also clear.

The date that is most generally accepted for the Passion is A.D. 29. Tregelles says; "I believe this to have been the true date; first, because of the day of the week on which the Passover commenced in that year; and, also, because of the consuls of that year (the two Gemini) having been mentioned by several writers as those of the year when our Lord was put to death" ("Tregelles on Daniel," p. 102). Mr. Guinness also gives many reasons for receiving this date, and says: "Our Lord's Passion is assigned by Lactantius, Augustine, Origen, Tertullian, and other ancient authors to the year A.D. 29, and the correctness of this conclusion has been confirmed by Brown (Ordo Sæculorum, sec. 2), and at a later date by Clinton (Fasti Romani, p. 826)." This date is also accepted by Benson, Mann, Ideler, Bianchini, Savelemonti, &c.

We may therefore, I believe, conclude (firstly) that the decree given in the twentieth of Artaxerxes was "the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem;" (secondly) that the date of this decree was B.C. 444; and (thirdly) that there is a very strong presumption that the year A.D. 29 was the date of the crucifixion. Having come to the above conclusion, I was struck with the great difficulty of fitting in the parts of the prophecy of the seventy weeks, if the period be calculated in solar years; and it matters not from which decree the calculation be made. In the first place, as the sixty-nine weeks, or the 483 years ("unto Messiah the Prince"), commence in the Nisan (the Passover month), if the years be solar, they must necessarily end about the same period of the year, viz., at or about Nisan, or the spring of the year. But it is evident the sixty-nine weeks ought to end at the commencement of our Lord's ministry, which began in the autumn. In the second place, if the Messiah (predicted in Daniel ix.) was to cause "the sacrifice and the oblation to cease," by the offering of his body once for all, in the middle of the seventieth week—viz., in the middle of the 487th solar year—then Christ would have been crucified in the autumn, as the 486 and a half years commence in Nisan, or the spring (no matter whether Ezra's or Nehemiah's decree be taken), and the end would be in the autumn. But it is clear that our Lord was crucified in the Passover month Nisan, which was at the beginning of a year, and not in the middle of one commencing in Nisan.

* Those who wish to study the proofs will find them in Barnes, or Dr. Pusey on Daniel, and in "The Approaching End of the Age."

THOUGHTS ON HOLINESS.—16.

By Rev. MARK GUY PEARSE.

HOW CHRIST CAME TO DWELL IN THE HEART.

(Concluded.)

THE second passage of Scripture which will help us is in Rev. iii. 20: "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: IF ANY MAN HEAR MY VOICE, AND OPEN THE DOOR, I WILL COME IN TO HIM, and will sup with him, and he with Me."

Here is the King of Glory seeking our friendship—to dwell with us in real heart-communion. He is speaking to the Church—to those who had heard the Word of truth, and had yielded to Him the profession of their faith. But he longs for a closer relationship. "Open unto ME," He saith entreatingly. "Open unto Me that I may come in and sup with thee." He has all gifts, and now stands eager to come in and enrich us with them. He knows all our wants and sorrows, and in all his love entreats us to let Him be our friend and abiding helper.

This is what He has been seeking through all time. Up to this, step by step, all our redemption has led. We can stand at the very gate of Eden and look right down through the ages, until we see this as the great end of it all—Christ standing at the door of the heart knocking and saying, Open unto Me. For this, man was made at the first, endowed with reason, ennobled with the dignity of choice and the sacredness of love, that he may dwell in this close and intimate fellowship with God. Then God rests from his labours, for He has found a resting-place, when man's heart becomes his home. Then his "very good" is spoken of all things, as if God had nothing more to give, and man had nothing more to wish for. The Father had found the love of his child, and his child had found in that fellowship the fullest blessedness. Then earth was Paradise.

Then came sin, with its dark severing of man from God, and God from man. But from that closed gate of Eden every step is onward toward this his friendship. In the fulness of time the Son of God becomes a little child that He may be one of us; going down into all the condition of our humanity—its work, its wants, its sorrows, its loneliness, its fears, its sufferings, its agony, its death. So would He meet us in every path of life and touch us at all points; and by a perfect knowledge and perfect sympathy fit Himself to become the perfect friend and brother of all men, everywhere.

Then He who has become thus one with us, lays down his life for his brethren. Now the way of access is open; now in Christ Jesus we who were afar off are made nigh by the blood of Christ.

And now what more can He do for us? His great love and our adoring gratitude alike declare it is finished. He hath suffered these things; what remains for Him but that He should enter into his glory? We see Him standing, his face like the sun in its strength; girt with a golden girdle; his feet like unto fine brass that burned in a furnace. But come and see the very climax and completion of his love.

Tarry here—we shall see Him pass this way. But what a place is this in which to look for Him, viler much than Bethlehem's stable where the mother laid her first-born. See, here dwell all evil things! Gluttony and drunkenness; brazen lust and crooked covetousness; envy and hatred muttering evil things; fierce passion and pride; and poor blind ungodliness gropes on his way, cursing his misery. Now night cometh. Stillness falls upon the household, and only the lonely watcher wakes within. And now there comes a step along this way. See One standeth at the door. He lifteth his hand and knocketh. "Open unto Me," He saith. It is the King of Glory! Not in his majesty and splendour, but the lowly Brother of us all. "Open unto Me," He saith, entreating.

"This is no place for thee, O King," sighs the watcher. "Here all evil things have their home. Thine eyes should not look upon nor thine ears listen to that which is within here; much less shouldst Thou come to dwell in such a place."

"Open unto Me," saith He, "and I will come in and sup with thee!"

And lo, as the watcher openeth the door He passeth within, and heaven and earth and hell may look in wonder, exclaiming, "He is gone to be guest with one that is a sinner!"

There is the crown of his great love to us.

And how could it be otherwise? His love, so eager and infinite, has urged his coming down to Bethlehem in all its poverty and lowliness; has led Him forth to be homeless, a-hungered, outcast for our sakes. His great love has led Him up the dreadful hill of Calvary, to all the shame and agony and curse of that awful death. Now He has entered into his glory. But how can He rest? He holds in his hand the great gifts of our salvation; the power that can deliver us from all these evil things within. Oh, it is only like Him that He should come forth again. No height of his glory, no vastness of dominion, no splendid dignities can make Him forget the soul for whom He has died. His love urges Him again into our midst, and keeps Him standing and knocking. "Open unto Me—now I can bless thee, indeed. Let Me come in and be to thee all that thy heart needs and my love desires."

So Christ seeks for our closest heart communion. The next verse comes as the wondrous perpetuating and completion of the twentieth: "To him that overcometh will I grant to sit WITH ME IN MY THRONE." This friendship is to be his heaven, as it is ours.

Now we have heard his voice, what are we doing? Ah! so many things, instead of opening the door. Because we are so busy it may be that we have not opened the door, not surrendered ourselves to Him that He may have us all his own. It is often so; I have sometimes knocked at the front door, but the good soul within has been so busily talking at the back door that he neither heard nor cared to open it; talking possibly about my coming.

The Master often stands thus and knock we within so busily listening to one another, telling us about Him and about opening the door, that we do not hear Him. Some are so busily inquiring of the scribes and chief priests about the Holy One, that they have no time to seek Him. Be still. Wait and listen for his voice.

"I will rise now and go about the city in the streets and in the broad ways, I will seek Him whom my soul loveth: I sought Him but I found Him not. The watchmen that go about the city found me: to whom I said, Saw ye Him whom my soul loveth? It was but a little that I passsd from them; but I found Him whom my soul loveth."

Others hear his knocking and at once are moved, half-longing and half-frightened. They begin at once to try and make the place fit for Him to come in. Ah! when we do that, despair is not far away, we ourselves are so weak, and all within us is so wrong. We sigh and turn away. "Lord, I am not worthy that Thou shouldest come under my roof;" or perhaps we even pray with Peter, "Depart from me: for I am a sinful man." And yet He knocketh, still entreating us—"Open unto Me and I will come in." It is our very helplessness which moves his pity—our need hastens his steps. Our very failure gives urgency and importunity to his love. Be still and think within thee that there is One who knows us at our worst, knows all the hidden possibilities of evil within us—and yet He does not turn, abashed and hopeless. He bends over us in eager love; seeks to have us as his friends, near and dear as tenderest care can make us: comes to dwell in us, and by his own indwelling to sanctify us.

But most commonly perhaps, we keep the Blessed Master out of the heart by receiving his gifts and never expecting HIM. We think of Christ as One who died on the Cross long since, bearing our sins in His own body on the tree, and through Him we receive our forgiveness. We think of Him as gone up into heaven in great glory, and now at the right hand of the Father He is our advocate, through whom we have the hope of life everlasting. But knowing this only can neither satisfy Him nor us. Then only do we know the joys of our religion, richest, fullest, best, when we find our salvation not through Him, but IN HIM. He would have us know Him, and love Him, and rest in Him, as Brother, Saviour, Conqueror, everything. His gifts are given only that we may have Himself. The guest chamber is taken and furnished only that He may sup with us. Without Him his very gifts wither and die. We lose them or abuse them. "Father, give me the portion of goods that falleth to me," is a perilous request. The Lord Himself is the gift of God, and in having Him I have all; and I can only find the gifts I long for in his presence. Faith is mine when I see Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith. Love is mine when He is mine, who is Himself all love. Power is mine when He is with me, who has all power in heaven and in earth. Then only am I consecrated, sanctified, set apart for God, when He comes in to dwell within me.

Lo, He standeth now at the very threshold. He knocketh at the door. "Open unto Me," saith He. Claim just now his gracious will concerning you. Your part is but to open the door of the heart. Stay your mind on his sure promise, "I WILL COME IN."

THE DAY OF REST.—I.

In The Christian, some time ago, there was a paper calling us to awake to the dangerous attempts now making by certain societies to destroy the Day of Rest. May we indeed attend to the warning note!

Sustained and well-directed action is dependent upon the principles we hold, upon the importance we attach to them, and upon the correspondence of our own life thereto. Laxity of views or inconsistency between principles and practice would sap earnestness; while a rigid legality would repel others and be injurious to ourselves. "What saith the Scripture?" must be the method of our enlightenment; and this, with consistent practice, will enable us to witness with intelligence and boldness, having a good conscience. May I be allowed to repeat the teaching of parts of the Word of God upon a subject which is one of the uppermost topics of the day?

In Genesis ii. we read—

"Thus the heavens and the earth were finished, and all the host of them. And on the seventh day God ended his work which he had made; and he rested on the seventh day from all his work which he had made. And God blessed the seventh day, and sanctified it: because that in it he had rested from all his work which God created and made."

(1) "God rested." This was after six days' work in connection with man's sphere of existence, and our very nature as intelligent beings teaches us that we should act in harmony with Him who created us. God rested from his work, and therefore man if in fellowship with God would of course imitate Him and rest from his own work also. For the Creator to work, and that too on our behalf, and then to rest, and for the one created to work and not to rest, would exhibit a contrariety, a discordance, between the two. Something must be out of course if a difference exists between him who was made in the image of God and Him in whose image he was made. Further, in his kindness and foreknowledge, perceiving both what man is and would become, and seeing from afar the toil of life, God in his considerate thoughtfulness for our good made the Sabbath for man (Mark ii. 28).

(2) God "blessed it;" and he who regards the day as one that God has blessed will find it so. As a day that has been blessed, it will be the occasion to him of some happiness. It will bring him some special good. Having been blessed, a blessing is in it. A blessing and the day are annexed together. God desires that the seventh day should become an extra good one to us. That a day should be kept was, the Jews thought, the great end in view. This was not so. The keeping is not the end. It is a means to the end. The end designed is, that man should be benefited by its blessings held in allegiance with God. The very nerves are so constructed that it is some happiness to come round to Sunday, and to enjoy a day's relaxation from the continuous strain of the work of life repeated day after day for six days. As human beings, we bask in a Sabbath atmosphere. Those who have so lived, and who, through some necessary cause, are hindered from regarding a particular Sunday, feel that they have missed a happiness and suffered a loss. Being freed from planning and executing, we are blessed in spirit and tone, and on Monday morning we feel re-strengthened for the work of life. Unless there is some affliction, we rather enjoy re-entering upon work, for though toil is toilsome, and was appointed as our lot when sin entered, yet, seeing it has entered, real work is good for us, best for us, in this present world.

(3) God also "sanctified it." He set it apart as something to be used differently to other days. The six days would indeed be used by a godly man as unto God, yet still chiefly in doing what is needful to provide for himself and his family. The seventh day is not only for rest from labour and for blessing to ourselves in many ways, it is also a special day to be used unto God. And just as when we receive the seventh day as blessed and treat it accordingly, it brings us a blessing, so when we regard it as hallowed by God for Himself and use it accordingly, we find it sanctifying to ourselves also; and, in this way, incessant demands being suspended, we can then give ourselves more fully to think of God, his character, his goodness, his grace, his works, his ways, and the world to come. We can pray more, not to say more leisurely. We can read and meditate and converse about good things more than on other days. We can avail ourselves of opportunities for taking a quiet walk and enjoying the fresh air and the beauties of creation. We can worship alone, and in union with others. We can think more about our souls, and the good of our families, and render, undisturbed by work, the acts of pity and mercy needed not far from the doors of every one of us. And all this, though not exclusively on Sunday, but still with more freedom on that day; and amidst such duties and privileges fellowship with God is nurtured.

On the other hand, if we take the rest and the blessing as far as we can, and omit the further truth that the day is sanctified to God, that would be to accept the gift and disregard the will of the Giver. To turn aside from any known will of God is lawlessness. The effect of so acting will be this: We may obtain refreshment of mind and body, yet there will be barrenness of soul. For natural comforts do refresh us like as they refresh the lower animals, but only the living God can make us happy in our souls. For this we must live in harmony with Him.

Adam lived 930 years, and could give long-continued witness of that which took place at the beginning. In process of time men refused to have God in their knowledge, and God in his retributive justice gave them up unto a reprobate mind (Rom. i. 28), when everything dependent upon knowing God and holding fellowship with Him withered up. But whatever the condition of nations long ago, our condition is different. We have the Scriptures, and consequently the privilege and the accompanying responsibility of knowing the arrangements which God made in respect of the seventh day.

As time proceeded, God made a covenant with the people He had brought out of Egypt from the house of bondage. This covenant was of a contingent character. It was to depend upon the obedience of the people of Israel to God's law, namely, the Ten Commandments, and the Divine statutes and ordinances generally as given through Moses. The Ten Commandments contained nothing new as regards the things commanded or forbidden. It was the covenant with the blessings and curses annexed to it that was new.

It would not have been right, for instance, for a man to worship a graven image if the second commandment had not been given, nor to thieve if the eighth commandment had not been given. The rules contained in the commandments existed in principle before the covenant, in the way of unwritten law. The will of God was discoverable from his character, his actions, and his words. Afterwards, the hitherto unwritten will of God was expressed in words engraved on tables of stone, and these formed the basis of the first covenant. The covenant, thus made dependent upon the obedience of the people of Israel, they undertook to perform, and so they became debtors to do the whole law by their own contract.

They broke their covenant again and again, and in the Apostles' days it was vanishing away. But the will of God has not vanished away. The law of right and wrong, based upon the character of God, upon the will of God, upon the eternal principles of love to God and man, continues. Whatever is holy, and just, and good, existed before this covenant, and remains, covenant or no covenant. The passing away, therefore, of the covenant with Israel in no way affects God's original arrangements for the day of rest. They existed before, and exist still. For man, as such, the day was made; and for man, to use according to the mind of the Creator, it remains.

CONTINENTAL NOTES.

A writer in the Revista Cristiana, a Spanish journal, has called attention to the large sum of money spent annually in the Spanish churches in wax candles and incense. "So many millions," he says, "converted into smoke, and no thought given to the Spanish po to the canals, or to the schools which might be opened with such a sum; nor to the well-being, morality, and education which would result from such a use, to say nothing of the tears, the distress which might be avoided by the judicious use of the money among the poor."

Pastor Fleidner, who has long sought a refuge from the almost intolerable summer heat of Madrid for his large family of orphans, has found on the sides of the Sierra Guadarrama, just below the celebrated Æscurial Palace, a ruined village, where he has taken a house, to which he hopes shortly to transport his family.

Mr. McAll is enlarging his work in Toulouse. In October he hopes to send an agent who will reside there, and to open a second Mission station.

BELIEVERS' MEETING IN AMERICA.

Our eighth annual meeting for Bible study will take place (D.V.) at Niagara, commencing July 25, to continue for eight days.

The village of Niagara is on the Canadian side, and within fourteen miles of the great Falls. This conference is thoroughly pilgrim in its character, moving yearly to accommodate the people of many sections of the country. And perhaps this necessity keeps it from formality, stagnation, or exclusiveness. We are expecting a meeting of no common order this year. Canada and the various States will be well represented, and the topics decided upon, as well as the invited speakers, will command much interest. Messrs. Brookes, Parsons, Gordon, Erdman, Whittle, and other brethren of decided faith, are on the programme. Many of the subjects deal with the Bible: its inspiration, the integrity of its books, the Holy Spirit's relation to it, &c. The much controverted questions of Holiness and the doom of the wicked will form the theme of some of the addresses, and, I need hardly add, will be treated from the standpoint of a loyal orthodoxy.

Other subjects, experimental, doctrinal, and prophetical, will also be considered. In addition, there will be a study of select portions and particular books of the Bible; and each day will be opened with a meeting for praise and prayer. This conference is practically a Bible School. Evangelists, Missionaries, Ministers, Sunday-school workers, &c., come together annually for mutual enquiry and study. Will our readers remember us in daily prayer, that the Holy Spirit will preside over our conference in all of its sessions, and out of it bring a large revenue of glory to our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ?

HOME RULE.

THE other day an undergraduate who professes to be an atheist, speaking at Cambridge, expressed some views as to government which, consciously to himself or not, were derived from the Book which he condemns. He urged that the first duty of a Government lay at home; that domestic legislation was its primary concern; and he went so far as to say that before a man offers himself for Parliamentary election he ought to know the people he proposes to govern, and gain experience by living for a time among them.

If a man wants to learn any profession, he fixes his residence accordingly. The wild wastes of our seething populations are a terra incognita to our legislators. The futile attempt of Mr. Lowe, when Chancellor of the Exchequer, to tax lucifer matches, was as a straw on the surface, revealing the ignorance of the governing class as to the actual condition of the people. The same Book of Psalms which tells us that God had set his King on his holy hill, and would give Him the uttermost parts of the earth for his possession, tells us also that He prepared for Him a body, in which He might dwell among us, sympathise with us, in all our affliction be afflicted, and be tempted like as we are, that He might be able, from actual human experience, to succour them that are tempted. It might tend to lengthen the tranquility of this realm if those who aspire to be the people's representatives and rulers would, for a while at least, dwell among them.

Reverting to the young athiest's Scriptural views of domestic legislation, we venture to recall to remembrance the eighty-second Psalm:—

"God standeth in the congregation of the mighty; He judgeth among the gods.
How long will ye judge unjustly, and accept the persons of the wicked?
Defend the poor and fatherless: do justice to the afflicted and needy.
Deliver the poor and needy; rid them out of the hand of the wicked.
They know not, neither will they understand; they walk on in darkness: all the foundations of the earth are out of course.
I have said, Ye are gods; and all of you are children of the Most High.
But ye shall die like men, and fall like one of the princes.
Arise, O God, judge the earth; for Thou shalt inherit all nations."

God here complains, not that the rulers have been negligent or blundering in foreign policy, but that their domestic legislation has not been according to righteousness. It has become the fashion to deride the idea of "paternal government," but the Ruler of Princes demands justice and deliverance for the fatherless, the afflicted, and the needy. While we are busying ourselves in foreign lands, urged the Bible-taught atheist, and not seldom oppressing weaker nations there, our own poor populations are weak and helpless, neglected and oppressed; or, on the other hand, vicious and violent, dark and drunken, depraved and dangerous.

But there are Christian ladies from the west found nightly in the east—matrons who go into the drinking and dancing dens, and seek the lost until they find them—maidens who gather round them their poorer sisters from the factories and workrooms, and win them by human love to love the Son of God. These Christian workers, from whatever class they come, are the saviours of society; but unless the Government wakes up to deal in kindness and righteousness with the volcano of vice and misery and discontent which burns and boils beneath the feet of the orderly middle and cultured upper classes, there will come a day of retribution.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

THE Salvation Army has received a severe check in the judgment delivered by Mr. Justice Stephen on Friday. The persons who last year assigned the lease of the Grecian Theatre and the Eagle Tavern to Mr. Booth proceeded against him for the recovery of possession on the ground of forfeiture through alleged breaches of the covenants of the lease.

The breaches arose from annoyance and injury said to have been caused to the other tenants on the estate by the proceedings of the Salvation Army, and from the fact of the defendant using the Eagle Tavern as a coffee-palace, instead of as a public-house for the sale of spirituous liquors, and thereby risking the loss of the Excise licence.

In giving judgment, Mr. Justice Stephen said:—

It would be a pity that the defendant should lose the £20,000 he had laid out on the place; and he (Mr. Justice Stephen) had accordingly considered most anxiously whether this was a case for relief under the Conveyancing Act of 1881, but he could not see that it was a case in which such relief should be given. The defendant had from first to last been in the wrong. He took the lease, intending from the first to evade one of its terms. He solemnly engaged to keep the Eagle Tavern as a public-house, and he must have known what the substantial and fair meaning of these words was. He had tried to evade that obligation by an unsuccessful legal quibble. It was not honest. If a man's conscience did not allow him to fulfil a covenant substantially, in the spirit as well as in the letter, he ought not to enter into it. He could not in any case be justified in attempting to evade it, and could not be permitted to do so. His Lordship, therefore, gave judgment for the plaintiffs for possession, but stayed execution for a week, to allow the other side an opportunity for appealing, the defendant's counsel having intimated that it was his intention to do so.

It is deplorable enough that, unless this judgment be reversed or modified on appeal, the £20,000 should be lost; but we fervently hope, whatever may be the result of the appeal as regards possession of the premises, that Mr. Booth may be able to give some explanation which will place his action in a more favourable light.

Every right-minded person will be grieved if the Eagle Tavern should be reverted to its demoralising and ruinous work; and be utterly ashamed that the chief value of the premises should consist in the Government's licence to deal out present and eternal ruin to the people.

We have thought it right to give our readers the reply contained in our present issue, page 18, to Mrs. Butler's letter of June 21. But in spite of this defence of the Grand Council of Neuchatel, if it be true that a resolution has been passed proclaiming that all religious exercises connected with the Salvation Army, or any other movement, should be stopped, whether in private houses or anywhere else, we think Mrs. Butler's adjective is not too strong. It is "a revolting resolution." Even if it be true, as our correspondent affirms, that the Salvation Army is Jesuitism under another name, the Cantonal Government is not justified in dealing with it as it never attempted to deal with Popery. It does not forbid Romish worship in private or in public, and it is utterly revolting to all our ideas of Christian freedom and civil or religious liberty, that the police should be empowered to forbid well-conducted citizens, not only to hold any such meeting again, but to command them never again to attend any such meetings in any place whatever! Such tyranny as this is enough to perpetuate any movement, and the Salvation Army is likely to live the longer because of this tyrannous attempt of a professedly Protestant Republicanism to stamp it out.

For the Young.

JESUS IS ALIVE!

"I WISH Jesus was alive now," said a young friend anxious to be forgiven. If this is the wish of my reader, let me whisper some of Christ's own words:—"I am He that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive for evermore." (Rev. i. 18.) Yes, He is alive now, and ever liveth to make intercession for us. (Heb. vii. 25.) Then

JESUS SEES YOU.

Sees you reading these words; sees your body, your hands, and eyes. Try to realise that though you cannot see Him, He sees you, your inmost heart, your mind, your thoughts. Yes, Jesus sees you. Then

JESUS KNOWS YOU.

Knows you from everybody else. He must know you, for He has seen you so long. All through your life his eyes have been upon you. More than this, He has been close at your side, hearing every word you have said. Yes, He knows you, knows your name, knows your circumstances, knows your sins, knows at this moment your desire after salvation. Think of it. Put down this little paper and look up into his pitying and loving face, confident that He knows you perfectly.

If Jesus is alive,

JESUS CAN ANSWER YOU

when you pray. Kneel down, just where you are, and tell Him everything. There is a great ear in your little room, an open ear, and a bowing ear, into which you may whisper all your sins. Tell Him what you have done that was wrong, and what you have left undone that was right. Confess to Him your sins against parents, brothers, sisters, teachers, and those greatest sins against Himself. "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins." (1 John i. 8.) Being thus alive,

JESUS CAN RECEIVE YOU.

He is at your side, He sees and knows you, surely He can welcome you to his bosom. His hands are outstretched to you now, where you are and as you are. Still it is true, "This man receiveth sinners." (Luke xv. 2.) Still He says, "Him that cometh to Me I will in no wise cast out." (John vi. 37.) Coming to Him is believing that He is near, and so speaking to Him and trusting Him to save.

Jesus lives! then

JESUS CAN KEEP YOU.

If Satan could kill Jesus, he would soon kill us; but he cannot do either. Jesus lives as the Good Shepherd, and his sheep "shall never perish." (John viii. 28.) Jesus lives as the True Friend, to comfort, counsel, and help the poorest and most needy. As Jesus, He lives the same Jesus as of old; not a new Jesus, but the Jesus who "was dead," with the nail-marks in his hands and the same loving heart in his breast.

Jesus lives. He sees you. He knows you. He can hear you. He can receive you. He can keep you.

Will you not trust Him?

The Mildmay Conference.

FRIDAY EVENING, JUNE 29.

UNION WITH CHRIST, THE SOURCE OF FRUITFULNESS.

AS usual, Mr. S. A. Blackwood presided, and the meeting was opened with singing. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Frank White. A portion of the Song of Solomon (ii. 8) was read.

Fruitbearing.

BY REV. J. J. LUCE.

We came to the Conference to meet God; to see the face of God; to hear the voice of God; to feel the hand of God; and, beloved friends, we have not been disappointed. "Thou meetest him that rejoiceth and worketh righteousness," and our hearts have been filled with joy and praise. I was trying to imagine this afternoon what the thoughts of our dear Lord might have been as we gathered here together at that precious time. I thought how the Lord Jesus Christ, present in our midst, was taking far more delight in us, and in our worship, than ever we could feel; and now let us, as we just tarry together, still waiting to hear his last message of love at this our Conference, and longing to get our souls filled, I trust, with his presence and the reality of his presence: oh, let us hear the message that He has, I hope, put into his servant's heart to night. Turn, please, to Gen. xxvi. 19—22: "And Isaac's servants digged in the valley, and found there a well of springing water. And the herdmen of Gerar did strive with Isaac's herdmen. . . . . And they digged another well, and strove for that also. . . . . And he removed from thence, and digged another well; and for that they strove not." Thank God, there is a place where there is no more striving. "And he called the name of it Rehoboth: the Lord hath made room for us, and we shall be fruitful in the land."

I will call your attention to the last word: "The Lord hath made room for us." Now turn to Luke xii. 16—21. (These were read.) Now turn to Jer. xvii. 11. You will do well to read the whole chapter. "As the partridge sitteth on eggs, and hatcheth them not; so he that getteth riches and not by right, shall leave them in the midst of his days and at his end shall be a fool." The Master is still hungry. When God created man, "male and female (we are told) created He them." Then God blessed them. This is the first thing, and there is no fruit unless there is God's blessing. And then "God said," and there is no fruit unless there is the Word of God, as well as the blessing of God, "Be fruitful," and fruitful they became. And so, after the judgment of the flood, then again God said to Noah, "Be fruitful," and He blessed Noah and his sons. And so when He called Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, He said to each, "Fear not, I am with thee," and He blessed them, and said, "Be fruitful. Ye shall be fruitful. Multiply as the sand which is on the seashore, and as the stars in Heaven for multitude." And oh! has there not been in the heart of God, brought home to our own hearts at this Conference, the thought that He still co-operates through, and has a right to deal with us. In one sense He deals with us as we deal with one another. When a man makes an investment, he expects a return, and when he sows seed he expects a harvest. Well, God has made an investment in his people, and He expects a return, and oh! how much there is in that word fruit to inspire one's soul. Just think. He wants from us that which is to be to his praise and to his glory. We all agree that God has a right to his fruit, that Christ has united us to Himself that we should bring forth fruit; that Christ has chosen us and ordained us that we should go and bring forth fruit. What is this fruit? There are various kinds of it; but, first of all, let us think what is the fruit itself that the Lord expects from his people? Now, at first, I can just fancy someone saying, "Oh! the Lord expects from us the fruit of good works." Very well. We are to go and serve our Lord, and toil for souls; but is that all, and is it not possible for us to be making a mistake, especially in these days of so much blessed Christian activity and machinery?

Again, let us ask what is fruit in this matter? Fruit is not merely good works. God says: "I will bless thee and make thy name great, and thou shalt be a blessing." It does not say: "Thou shalt be a channel of blessing. Thou shalt be used of me," but he says, "Thou shalt be a blessing." A bad man can be used as a channel of blessing, and many a bad man has been used by God, but a bad man cannot be a blessing: unless we have the Blessed One Himself within us we cannot be a blessing. We are called upon not to show forth Christ, of course, in some one special form, but in every form—in the ordinary duties, pleasures, and activities of life. It is not to be just merely a question of winning souls; it is to be a question of bringing forth fruit in heart and will, and word, and work, in all our being, and in all our ways. That is fruit. But then, again, what is fruit? It is the result of life. Nay, more than that, it is the result of abiding communion. It is possible to have life and not to have fruit; but we are called upon so to live, so to know what it is to be united with our risen Lord and Saviour, that there should be the result of abiding communion between our souls and Him; and it is with this thought, beloved friends, that it seems to me we ought very specially to be impressed.

And then mark that the fruit we are called upon to show is not to be in our work and service for God just precisely of the nature that we might expect or even desire. How often some of us have romantic thoughts of work and service for God. Oh! there is a great deal in the present day to help us on in all kinds of romantic ideas in God's work, and I am not so sure that that chivalrous spirit which otherwise we might respect, calls for such respect in Christian work—at least I feel that it calls for our jealous and watchful care. I think, dear friends, it is very important in times like ours, when we hardly know whether to thank God for giving us such abundant openings, and drawing forth the hearts of such numbers of his people in his service, or to be more anxious and watchful because our dangers always lie in the pathway of our privileges. We need to remind ourselves that it is not a question of machinery or just merely falling in with certain kinds of grooves or ideas, but that we are to be so entirely consecrated to our Lord and be under the power of his Spirit that there is to be such liberty, such room for the Spirit to work, that we may be led where He leads us, and be bringing forth just the fruit that He expects, and only such fruits.

And this leads me to another point. We said just now that there are various kinds of fruit. So there are. There is a fruit that is not our own, and we are told to watch against bringing forth bad fruit, like the partridge, which we are told gathers together young ones that she has never had, and which did not belong to her, and fosters and cares for them, and then after a while they leave her alone and forsake her—just so it is possible for us to be mistaking fruit that we have only gathered for ourselves, in ourselves, of ourselves, for fruit which is from God and for God. A life that is lived in self and for self is a failure. A life that has no origin in God, and that does not send forth its springs to God—that life cannot bring glory to God, and cannot bring good ultimately to our own selves. And, my friends, is there not in the Word of God set before us this solemn fact that it is quite possible for the people of God to be living a life which is not for the glory of God, as regards their daily work?

Oh! think, my brother, my sister, think, what is your life worth before God? Is it fruit the result of life, of abiding union with your Lord, or is it all like the life of that rich man, in self and for self? God said of that man that he was a fool. Why? Because he lived in self and for self, and because he made miscalculations thereby, and expected that he was going to have something to show for his life when after all there was nothing. He went looking to the future. He had no room where to bestow his fruits. He didn't know what to do with them, and, oh! men who live in self are always so narrow, so limited. They have always looked forward to the future, and they hope that the day will come when they will be able to say, "Take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry." Why? Because their poor souls have never yet known what ease meant. They have never yet been satisfied or merry. They have to look forward to some vague indefinite future, and hope that then they will be satisfied. Oh! Did they but hear the voice of Him who says, "Come unto Me and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and ye shall find rest for your souls." Did they but know of the true satisfaction there is in following the will of Jesus, in doing the will of Jesus, they would know what it is to have present satisfaction. There are some of the people of God who are always living upon the experience of others, doing the work of others, gathering to themselves the results, thoughts, plans, and prayers, of others, always living other people's lives, but giving forth nothing to God. What was there in the life of Lot that brought forth praise to God? Was not his life a failure, not only at the end, but right through, just because it was not fruitful? And yet we know that his righteous soul was vexed from day to day at the wickedness about him, but what was the end of it all? Lot never was able to witness for the Lord in Sodom. Lot went near to Sodom, and into Sodom, and when he came out what had he with him? He escaped with his life and that is all. Saved he was, but so as by fire; and the Lord says that in the day when He returns so it will be. Men may build upon the very foundation, the one true foundation, but a life-work which won't stand the first test is a life without fruit; and we do well, brethren, to remind ourselves of this, for the day of the Lord which draweth nigh, shall try and test everyone's life-work. That day will discover what the Lord thinks of us and our life-work, and we shall have either his blessed approval and reward, or we shall not only get no reward, but suffer some loss. Oh! think of all eternity suffering loss, because down here, whilst we had opportunity, we did not live such a life as He called us to live.

But, again, fruit such as the Lord expects is fruit that often springs from very hidden sources. I love to think of Mary in connection with this. Mary brought forth wonderful fruit. Just think of that alabaster box full of very costly ointment, which she poured on his feet, and the odour of which filled the whole house. Mary was fond of sitting at the feet of Jesus hearing his word, and then choosing the better part. You know her life's work was a wonderful work. I do not suppose there was anyone in the time of our Lord had a deeper insight into the thoughts, purposes, and designs of the Lord than Mary. The Apostles do not seem to have realised that Jesus was really going to die, and be raised up again, but Mary knew. Why? She brought the ointment, and that proved it, because Jesus said, "She has brought this for my burying." And how was it that she had understood that Jesus was to be buried, and grasped the fact that He was going soon to depart! Because she had sat at his feet, and heard his word. And if we want to be fruit-bearing Christians, we must mind the roots. We must be careful in the inner life. We must be careful day by day to be true to Him, right in the heart—in the inner springs of our life. We are called upon to bring forth fruit unceasingly and that continues.

Think of Daniel in connection with this. It was said of him, "this Daniel continued unto the first year of Cyrus, king of Persia." He continued. That sentence is very striking when you come to look into it. What does it mean? It means that from the first, when he was picked out to be presented to the king, and purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the king's meat—we find from that moment, right away through the empire of the Medes and Persians to the time when his own prophecies began to be fulfilled, Daniel continued. Nay, more: Daniel continued right through the age and is continuing still and will continue. "Go thy way," it was said to him, "at the last thou shalt rest for awhile," and he resteth now, and then "thou shalt stand in thy lot at the end of the days." And he will continue, and continue till then, and stand in his own appointed portion and lot and inheritance when the Lord comes. Through all the great scenes of his life, as Prime Minister one day with the king of Babylon the great head of gold prostrate at his feet, and commanding that an oblation of sweet odours should be offered to him, the next day in the dungeon among the lions, and then raised up to a great climax of honour—that Daniel continued all through the shifting scenes of his life and brought forth fruit all the way. Oh, blessed is that man who does not cease to bear fruit, but who bears fruit in little things and great things, from the first day of the year to the last, and in old age still goes on bearing fruit in poverty or wealth, in reproach or in honour, in prosperity or in adversity, in dark days as well as bright days, who goes on steadily, continuously bearing fruit. Oh! continue, brother, continue.

There is one condition of fruit-bearing that is very much laid upon my heart, and with that I close. If we are to be fruit-bearing Christians, what we need, it seems to me, above all things, is the fullness of the Holy Ghost—to be baptised in the Spirit, immersed in the Spirit. This seems to me to be the great crying need of the Church of Christ now. We have earnestness, activity, organisation, machinery; but what we want is the power, the Divine power, the unceasing, the continuous flow of the power of God. And, my friends, we often have to ask ourselves the question, why is it that we have so little of this power? One reason I might suggest is, because some of us stop at those locks of which we heard last night. We get to the locks, and there we are locked in. We do not get through the lock. I have been much struck of late with the thought of the transitional experiences through which the disciples of the Lord went during the fifty days which elapsed between the resurrection of the Lord and the descent of the Holy Ghost. You know they knew Jesus had died, that He had risen, that He had manifested Himself to them, and that they had seen the Lord, and were glad. They kept seeing Him every now and then, as He was pleased to manifest Himself to them; but they did not yet understand their mission, or know what manner of spirit they were of, until it came to the point, when they were gathered "with one accord in one place." As they sat, suddenly there came a rushing mighty wind which filled the house. Then they saw the tongues of fire, and then the tongues sat upon each of them, until finally the Spirit came and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost. Now, dear friends, I see how possible it is for us in the present day just to be satisfied with knowing that Christ Jesus has died and is risen again, and that He has gone up into the heavens, that the Holy Ghost has come, that the Holy Ghost is ours, but not claiming, receiving, enjoying, manifesting, the fulness of his power. Oh! we have often prayed to know the reality of Jesus Christ, let us pray to know the reality of the Holy Ghost. This is what we need.

It seems to me that, above all things, in the present day, Christians need to be reminded that the only true secret of power and fruitfulness is simply the real, actual dependence upon the Holy Ghost himself; but we are too much given to theorising, talking, sentimentalising, instead of entering into the reality of the Holy Ghost. Do not we need, beloved friends, the Holy Ghost really dwelling in us? Oh! we have presented ourselves over and over again to God. We have said over and over again to him:—

"My spirit, soul, and body,
Jesus, I give to Thee,
A consecrated offering,
Thine evermore to be."

And it is well. But oh! have we been trusting in our consecration of ourselves? If we are so wholly, so entirely his, why is it that there is so little power comparatively in our hearts and lives, in our private and public gatherings? Why is it that there is so little manifestation of the real Spirit of God? Dear friends, it is one thing to bring the burnt offering, to present it in order, to place it on the wood; it is one thing to bring the meat offering ready to lay afterwards upon that altar, and join it to that same offering; it is one thing to be presented truly, sincerely, honestly, to God, and to say, "Lord, I am thine wholly, utterly, for ever, and for thy service," but it is quite another thing to have the fire from heaven consuming this burnt offering and this meat offering. But it is in the heat of the fire which consumes the first burnt offering and then the meat offering; it is in that fire that lies the true secret of all power and fruitfulness. O God, baptise thy Church! O God, baptise thy people! O God, baptise me with the holy fire! Henceforth let my life be lived in the Spirit. Let me be overwhelmed with the Spirit. Let me know what it is to be bringing forth the fruit of the Spirit to the praise and the glory of my God.

Earl Cavan then offered prayer, a hymn was sung, and the requests for prayer read out by Mr. Mathieson.

Led of the Spirit.

BY MR. VON SCHLUEMBACH,

After one or two prefatory observations he addressed himself to the subject as follows: Will you please turn your Bibles to Galatians v. 18. "But if ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the law." I prefer, by your permission, to use the German translation of that Divine instrument that God sent 400 years ago, by the very year, to our beloved fatherland through Martin Luther. He says, "If you are reigned over by the Spirit, governed by the Spirit; you are not under the law." Our topic, beloved, is "Union with Christ the Source of Fruitfulness;" and how sweet the thought of union with Christ! It is an old topic. It has blessed millions, and it is blessing everywhere. I have a Bible reading on that topic as an evangelist going through the land, and the experience everywhere I go, whether it be up in Minnesota or down in New Orleans, or in New York, or Berlin, wherever I have that Bible reading with the saints on "Union with Christ," it enters the hearts, stirs up the faith, and brings out the fruits of righteousness and holiness to God. Hence I expected great things when I came to Mildmay Conference, because I knew this was the most practical of topics. I thank God that we have it, and that it has been such a blessing to us. What a blessing it has been to-day! And I re-echo it to-night in your hearts. What shall come of this Conference? What shall we carry into the world? I can tell you nothing new on this subject, but will say a few words on three points. We will take the fact first that every human being is entitled to this union with Christ. What a grand thing that we can go out from this feast and tell our unconverted friends that we have fed upon heavenly things, but fed upon nothing to which they are not also entitled. The Holy Spirit tells us through Paul in 1 Tim. iv. 10, "For therefore we both labour and suffer reproach, because we trust in the living God, who is the Saviour of all men." He is the Saviour of all the human race, and you know the same Apostle states the same truth by the Holy Spirit in Rom. v. 8 and Eph. ii. Oh! there is the union with Christ for every human being. What a blessing it is to be able to go to the greatest sinner, the most wicked man in London, and tell him, "Christ has made reconciliation for you; come and participate." There are vast classes that know nothing of this union with Christ. The most of the world's inhabitants know nothing in regard to this union with Christ; and we are to blame for it, but I do not touch on that to-night. The union with Christ is only incomplete in the sense that persons may not know about it, and does not complete it by faith.

I have received a very beautiful illustration of this situation of the sinner. When I was last in Berlin as an Evangelist, I was introduced to a young lady in this way—"She is the bride of the Lord." I wondered how that was. The thing was curious. They told me she had consecrated herself to be the wife of a missionary, but that missionary who was to be her husband was not yet known to her, nor was she known to him—still she had consecrated herself for that. I inquired further, and found out that there are some good sisters in Germany who are consecrated in this way. Let us see how the union is brought about. There is a missionary in China or Africa, and he has served, according to the rules of the Society, four years, and he sends home to Berlin and says: "It is written in the Bible, 'It is not good for man to be alone,' and it is almost time for me to have a wife; if you please, send me one." You may laugh. He is satisfied with anyone sent by the Lord, and I would far rather have my daughter get her husband in this way than that she should look after a man of wealth who is an enemy of God and out in the world. When the bride is informed, "You are the wife of Mr. So-and-so in Africa," she says, "I am willing!" She is consecrated. They start that bride to London, and on the ship, and telegraph to the missionary, "Your wife is coming." It may be he gets a photograph, but photographs are poor things except you can put an imagination on them. Look at a family album as a stranger, and it is all very nice; but the relatives and friends know more about the family than you do. He knows his wife is coming and he waits for her. The union is not completed, so far as the outward sign is concerned, but he has the knowledge that his wife is coming. The telegram is sent—"Your wife has arrived, come and meet her." He leaves the missionary station and takes the girl consecrated to God, and she becomes a true wife. I have met some who have come home, and blessed be God they have worked together in love and fellowship. But where has the union been made complete? When he came to take her. The union commenced when the girl consecrated herself to be the wife of the missionary. So Christ himself consecrated himself under the will of the Father that He should save you and me, thank God, and He did it all while we were yet sinners. While I was an atheist I was saved by Him. When the message came and Christ said, "Come," I had to come and take the Bridegroom, the Lord Jesus Christ, and now the union is complete. Let me go and tell the people that this union ought to be made complete to-night. Tell every sinner you know that Jesus has died for him, and that he is now reconciled in the eyes of the Father. All that is needed is to be joined together. There are some who do not want to get a wife. They become solid; but we have to keep at it and tell them of the covenant Christ has made with the Father—of that sweet union which can be had for the asking by every sinner; and if they get angry because of the knowledge of sin brought home to them, no mattter: we must persevere, and they will come in at last.

For eight years I tried to keep Christ out of my heart, and at one short turn of the road the Lord stood there and said, "Will you be joined?" It was the hour when my heart was broken and melted down, and I cried, "Lord, take me into thy heart."

The second thought we take from here is the knowledge that to every believer there is a union with Christ that is a personal and real one in one's everyday life. The text I quoted (1 Tim. iv. 10) does not end where I ended, but it continues, "specially of those who believe." That is the complete union with Christ. By faith we bring it nigh, and if we have that faith then comes to us this truth: "But as many as received Him, to them gave He power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name" (John i. 12). How blessed! Receive Him. That is all we need. Stretch out the hand of faith. A poor heathen woman, converted to the Lord Jesus Christ, was asked by a missionary,

"My dear, what is faith?" "Faith is the hand of man that accepts the gift of God." That is right. That is what it is. By receiving Him in our hearts that union is complete, and it is written upon our foreheads; "There is no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus." There is a good reason for it in Rom. vi. 5: "For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection;" and elsewhere it says, "Your life is hid with Christ in God." How sweet that union! How my heart leaped for joy when I heard repeated with such emphasis the glorious truth that "justification by faith" was complete; and if anyone has accepted the Lord his union is complete, and no one can break it asunder.

There are in this house a great many believers who can say, "I believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and I know I am saved." I ask the question, "Are you saved?" very often amongst my own people in Germany, and I get the reply, "Oh, yes! I am in the Church. I am baptised, confirmed, and now saved." This is substituting for marriage to Jesus, marriage to an idea. There is no personal union. It is an ideal union, and that breaks down under the first temptation. We find on the right and on the left that amongst the Christians of this day there are many things so substituted for Jesus. There are so many things that enter the heart which ought not to be there, so many idols, and we trust to them instead of to Jesus. But that is not a vital union with Him. Let us see what He tells us in Gal. v. 16: "Walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfil the lust of the flesh." Here is where the Christians of our day are stumbling, and falling, and sorrowing along. They say, "I cannot do as I would." You are a hypocrite; you are not walking to please Him. You are always on your legs doing anything that suits you, and if the Lord catches you by your prayer, you say, "Lord, please have me excused." There is the difficulty. The union is not complete, for the simple reason that it has not yet taken into it Jesus Christ, the second person of the Godhead. It is a kind of illuminated text that Jesus died for me, and that I am dead with Him, and that I am raised with Him. No, no! The union with Christ must be complete in the heart by faith—by taking Him in.

We must take along with the knowledge of the possession of this union with Christ the union itself, and know that we have it. Turn to 1 John v. 18—20, there we get the three knows of St. John. We know what we have believed. We know that the Son of God has come, and that our faith has not proved in vain—that the Son of God has come in our hearts. We know also that He has given us our understanding. I beg leave here to take my German translation again, for I like it a little better. It says: "He gave us a sense," a new sense, a sixth sense. Other people have five senses; the true believer has six senses, and except you have a sixth sense you cannot understand anything about salvation, because our text reads this way: "He has given us a sense—an understanding that we may know through this sense Him that is true; that we may know we are in Him that is true, even in his Son Jesus." Oh! the knowledge that I have by this new sense is worth something—the sense which wraps up all the five senses and uses them, as it were, as the faculties which God needs to bring out the whole plan of salvation that He hath made known by the indwelling of Jesus in my heart in everyday life. He takes my eye, and if He has it, it is not a rogue's eye any more. It gets consecrated, and is safe. We read in 1 John v. 18: "We know that whosoever is born of God sinneth not." I am not afraid of the devil. I am as safe from him as I am from a dynamite explosion in this hall. He cannot touch me. He can come round about me and roar, but God being my fortress he cannot enter in, for God keeps me. The only enemy, as a friend said, is self. The Lord keeps the devil away from the believer. Oh! how blessed it is to stand before the world and explain to every inquirer that the Lord Jesus is here. He is not only the Rabbi of the Jews, but the Saviour of the world. He says that He is in us, and that is the knowledge we receive from the sixth sense. That is the understanding given to us, that He is within us. That gives power. That puts a man on his legs. Then he can walk, for Christ dwelleth in him. What does Christ say? What does He wish us to do when we are consecrated to Him? Does He stop there? No. There is where the mistake is made. Many stop there, and say, "I am consecrated to Jesus." How do we bring forth fruit? Our text tells us, "But if ye are reigned over by the Spirit, ye are not under the law." It is consecration by the Holy Spirit that is needed by the believer. You say you are safe in Christ Jesus, but it is a miserable creature who can only say, "I am safe from going to hell." He has not the first principle of Christianity. The true Christian wants to go out and tell to others what Christ has done for him. He cannot rest day or night till some soul has been brought within the knowledge of the salvation—the free salvation—in Christ Jesus, and to do works that will stand before God.

When Jesus comes again it will be to take believers home to that grand marriage festival of the Bridegroom. Oh, He wants his Bride there! Didn't we enjoy it this day, in memory of that blessed Saviour, and in expectation of that glorious Supper of the Lamb where we shall receive our reward. If we have no fruit, we shall be saved, it is true, but we shall be mightily ashamed if we bring nothing but that one pound talent which we up till then hid away in a napkin. The Lord God has provided the sap for the branches. It is all ready, and all we have to do is to receive it through the Holy Ghost. When I went to Germany, two years ago, I found a dear little niece who was not yet prepared to love the Master truly. She was a Christian girl, but she was alarmed about her future. After a few days I spoke about the Bible. She broke out one day when we were alone, and said, "Oh! I am so miserable." "Now," I said, "let me see, why don't you go to Jesus and tell Him about your misery." "Oh! uncle," she said, "I am afraid to pray to Jesus." "What for?" "It is idolatry." "Is it?" "Yes, you must only pray to the Father." "Is that so?" "Yes, uncle, it is a sin to pray to Jesus because the Father wants to have all the honour Himself." I showed her that to glorify the Son means to glorify the Father. There are many believers who do not seem to understand you when you tell them: You must be consecrated by the Spirit to Jesus, and take Him for your Saviour, and King, and Commander. When that King of kings cometh hereafter, the Spirit will deliver us to Him, but this is the dispensation of the Holy Ghost. He reigneth in the believer in this world till Jesus comes, and the Holy Ghost wants you and me to be so consecrated to Him that whatsoever you do must be done by Him through you. And how blessed it is that we may refer to the third person of the Trinity? Is it a dishonour to Jesus? Is it robbing Him of any of his glory? No. The Lord said, It is good for you that I should go home. If I go not to the Father the Comforter will not come. I will send Him unto you, and He will glorify Me and the Father. So let us not have a scare on that point. Be consecrated by the Holy Ghost, and you shall be a devoted follower of the Lord Jesus Christ. I warrant you will not wilfully sin: you will not wilfully rob Christ of his glory. You will be humble and careful, and not fanatical, and not ride a hobby. You will inquire into the whole of the Bible. Therefore, I repeat what the brother said, "Do not look for the coming of the Holy Spirit in your heart in a sensational way, or in an ideal way, or in a formal way. Look upon Him as the third person in the Godhead, the everlasting God, allied in power and glory with the Son and the Father, but now ruling over the saints, and through the saints bringing forth fruit." What fruit? Fruit in the saint, making him free from the law, but in absolute harmony with it.

I have a relative, a physician, who taught me this fact, that a human being has nerves which come not into play until a certain part of the body to which they are attached becomes disordered. For instance, the digestive organs. Ask a boy of ten or twelve about the digestive organs, and he will say, "I know something about them anatomically, but nothing about them in reality. I only know I have an immense vacuum for food, and my mother says 'it takes a great deal to fill it.'" But let him touch the intoxicating cup, let his digestive powers be interfered with and ruined by that miserable king alcohol or king barleycorn, and how soon will he know that he has digestive organs, and how soon he will sound the depths of dyspepsia. That is the law for the man. He is outside the law, and he is angry at it. When he comes near the law his mind is scared, because he wants to get out of it; but when he is well in it he knows nothing about it. When you are consecrated by the Holy Ghost He works in you that new life, and you say, "Yes, the law of God is just and right. I do not need to watch it. I live in the law, and therefore I am, comparatively speaking, free from the law, because I keep it—no, not I, but the Holy Spirit through me." This is the glorious fruit of the Spirit. It is not anything we have. It is not our fruit. It is not anything that we do. We are simple instruments in the hand of God, and we go whither He wants us to go; we stop where He says "Hold," sleep where He says "Rest," and we work where He says "Labour." We do what He pleases, and if we have done naughtily, He tells us that we may come to Him and tell Him, and that we have an Advocate with the Father, even Jesus Christ. That is the glory of my everyday life, that I do not need to cry in such a way that I must always tremble, whether I have done this washing right or that washing right. If you are led of the Spirit, you are not under the law. What a joy to be consecrated to Jesus, and governed by Jesus! If you receive the Holy Ghost when you believe, well and good; but if not, do you know what Jesus says: "How much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask Him?"

Let us ask Jesus to bless us to-night, each and everyone, with that sweet union with Him where we are for ever safe, and entirely hid with Him and governed by his Spirit in the least thing or in the greatest, always joyful in the midst of temptation and trial, and the life and strife of the world. Amen.

Lord Radstock then offered prayer, and with the Doxology the three days of Conference were brought to a close.

MEDICAL MISSION AT CAIRO.

At this time, when the dread of cholera is hanging over Egypt, the sympathies and prayer of Christian friends of the work will be more than ever with Miss M. Whately in her labours of love there. The Medical Mission is more frequented and more blessed than ever. She often reads to a group of twenty-five or thirty persons in a morning, including Moslems and Copts, patients of all classes, down to the emancipated negress slave. Two Moslems have begged for Bibles to take away with them.

But she is at present in great distress for the means of defraying the cost of medicines. Most of the poor must be supplied gratuitiously or go without, and it is heartrending to be forced to send them away unrelieved. Yet such must be the case if help be not forthcoming. Will not British Christians make a special effort for her in this hour of trial? Mrs. McDermott is the Lady Secretary, Triangle Lodge, Streatham, S.W.

MR. SPURGEON.—The Rev. C. H. Spurgeon was last Sunday unable through an attack of his old malady, rheumatic gout, to officiate at the Metropolitan Tabernacle. At the morning service a letter was read by one of the deacons from Mr. Spurgeon, stating that up to the night before he had intended to be present with them and to preach, but the state of his health that morning rendered it impossible for him to carry out his intention. It was unnecessary for him, he added, to ask for the prayers of his people, for he felt sure they would be freely offered for him.

Notes and Comments.

IT is pleasant and encouraging in every way to read words of cheer like the following, taken from The Evangelistic Record of Chicago. Dark and cloudy as the sky may sometimes appear, there is a bright light to be seen when we look at the great work being carried on in our days for Christ. We thankfully re-echo our contemporary's pæan of praise:—

In looking over the work of the past winter and spring, the labourers in the Lord's vineyard have every cause for rejoicing. Truly the Chief Husbandman has been among his people, and the harvest has been most plenteous. From every grand division of the grand field the word comes that the Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad. Not alone in our own land has this great activity and blessing been manifest. In England, the outpouring of the Spirit which has attended the work of Moody and Sankey has been unprecedented; the work of the McAll Mission in France is seeing bright days of opportunity for work; the work in Turkey is seeing a bounteous harvest; the national conference of Missions in India shows an awakening of missionaries to the necessity of united action, which is a harbinger of glorious results in the near future; and the isles of the sea are daily receiving more and more of the Word of God. Surely the labourers in the harvest have cause to thank the Lord for the abundance of the increase which has been vouchsafed to the planting and watering of his servants.

The Bishop of Worcester, in a charge to the clergy of his diocese, has spoken some timely words on the evil of unduly exalting ritual and outward forms in connection with Church Communion. The tendency to do this is found in more sections of the Church than one, and wherever found is detrimental to the maintenance of that "unity of the Spirit" which all believers should endeavour to keep. The Bishop said:—

There could not be a greater mistake, or one more fatal to the unity in which the followers of our Lord ought to be joined together, than to attribute to his Church as essential things which in truth belong to it only as accessories which may be adopted, or altered, or rejected according to circumstances without offence. Some outward organisation, and the observance of some forms, no doubt, are necessary for the "body of faithful men" in every place, whether house, or parish, or country. But it would be a grievous error to ascribe to such outward organisation, whether of Church service or ritual, the properties of inviolability and permanence which belong only to the spiritual body of which it is the framework.

At a meeting held at the house of Mr. Thomas Greer, M.P., last week, on behalf of the Bible and Colportage Society of Ireland, Rev. Dr. Donald Fraser, among other friends of the institution, pleaded its cause. His remarks on the Gospel and its adaptation to meet the necessities of the Irish nation, and as to how it should be proclaimed, were very worthy of attention. He said:—

"I believe that the Gospel is the cure all round for all sorts of political and social errors. We shall never get the people of Ireland to think wisely upon social questions until they are impregnated with the truth of the Gospel. This Society will, I hope, continue faithful to the Gospel. There is a great tendency now-a-days to be too mild, so that everybody may be pleased. If there is a single expression in a book that is not quite in accordance with their ideas they must immediately write to the society and say they must withdraw their subscription. They cannot think of belonging to a society holding such an opinion. Now, if you please everybody you will do very little good. Let us use a little forbearance and never offend needlessly, but in order to please do not send out a literature weak and insipid. Do not send out goody books or think that you can turn a strong man from his deeply-rooted prejudices by Gospel and water. Hold up to the people the Lord Jesus Christ, that He may draw them to Himself.

The Rev. Dr. Pigou, who has been spending three months in Paris, having been advised to take entire change of rest and work, has written to The Record a series of letters on religious work in France, in which he describes, in glowing terms of praise, the Missions of Mr. McAll, of Miss de Broen, and of Miss Leigh.

We fear that our faithful fellow-servant, William Joseph Lewis, who has been labouring in the east of London for the past twenty years in a very afflicted body, will be obliged to retire to some less laborious field of service. This will not diminish the need of help for the work which he has originated, and we trust that his equally devoted fellow-labourers will be generously sustained.

In some recent addresses to Christian workers at Mildmay, the veteran George Müller made the following statements on the study of the Word of God:—

The vigour of our spiritual life will be in exact proportion to the place held by the Word in our life and thoughts. I can solemnly state this from the experience of fifty-four years. The first three years after conversion I neglected, comparatively, the Word of God. Since the time I began to search it diligently the blessing has been wonderful. I have read since then the Bible through one hundred times, and each time with increasing delight. When I begin it afresh, it always seems like a new book to me. Since July, 1820, I cannot tell you how great has been the blessing from consecutive, diligent, daily study. I look upon it as a lost day when I have not had a good time over the Word of God.

In reference to the plea of lack of time for this duty, Mr. Müller said:—

Friends often say to me, "Oh, I have so much to do, so many people to see, I cannot find time for Scripture study." Perhaps there are not many beloved brethren present who have had more to do than I have had. For more than half a century I have never known one day when I had not more business than I could get through. For forty years I have had annually about thirty thousand letters to answer, and most of these have passed more or less through my own hand. I have nine assistants always at work, corresponding in German, French, English, sometimes Danish, Italian, Russian, and other languages. Then, as pastor of a church with twelve hundred believers, you may suppose how great has been my care; and, besides these things, I have had the charge of five immense orphanages—a vast work; and also at my publishing depôt the printing and circulating of millions of tracts, and books, and copies of Scripture. But I have always made it a rule never to begin work till I have had a good season with God. Then I throw myself with all my heart into his work for all the remainder of the day, with only a few minutes' interval for prayer.

We are glad to find that the flagrant injustice of the 12th clause of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, which makes it a crime for women to solicit men on the streets, but not vice versâ, is being widely seen and felt. Lord Shaftesbury's amendment in the House of Lords was lost by a majority of 17 votes. The House of Commons is now to be moved to alter the clause, and a special petition, which there is every reason to believe will be signed by 1000 clergymen, is being prepared. The co-operation of all interested is earnestly sought. Copies of the petition may be had from the Rev. E. Wyatt-Edgell, 40, Grosvenor-street, W. Surely large numbers of ministers of all denominations, and others of every class, will lend their aid to secure justice in such a matter. It is a disgrace to those who voted against it in the Upper House, that so manifest an act of common fairness should have been refused by them.

The new Parcels Post arrangements come into operation on August 1. It is satisfactory to see that, for the present at least, no parcels are to be received at the offices on Sundays. We hope careful watch will be exercised against any future relaxation of this restriction. Already there is too much Sunday labour in connection with postal and telegraphic departments, and any further addition to this would be a cause for great regret.

It is now definitely arranged that Mr. Spurgeon shall hold his services in Exeter Hall during the month of August, when the Tabernacle will be undergoing a thorough cleaning and painting. Large as the Hall is, it will be quite inadequate for the preacher's ordinary congregation; but it may be hoped that many will be drawn to hear the Gospel from his lips who, in that region of gaiety and indifference to religion, are at present ignorant of its power.

Professer Huxley has been chosen to fill the place of the late Mr. Spottiswoode as President of the Royal Society. His eminence as a physiologist, of course, fully qualifies him for such a post; it is only to be regretted that his attitude towards the Christian faith should be unfriendly and adverse in its influence rather than otherwise. Some of his predecessors in the office have been as eminent for their devotion to Christ as to the pursuit of science.

The American mind is wondrously fertile in plans for promoting the welfare of the Church, as well as in other directions. "The Young People's Society for Christian Endeavour" would seem to be an excellent method of developing youthful activity in the service of Christ, as well as of leading souls to put their trust in Him. It was started at Portland, Maine, just two years ago, and, according to the report presented at its second annual Conference held recently, has advanced its lines all along the States, so that some 300 societies are now in operation.

Our attention has been called to a plan for circulating false teaching on theological subjects which appears to be in vogue. Free libraries are established in which books orthodox and unorthodox are mixed, the former acting in many cases as pioneers of the latter. The books are lent without any desire to see them returned, so long as the borrower binds himself to hand them on to another, until they are worn out with use. By this means unwary readers are induced to read books presenting fundamental errors to the mind in a most fascinating and ensnaring way.

Adopting this plan, "The New Dispensation Circulating Library" places the writings of such authors as the Revs. J. Pulsford, Mark Guy Pearse, and others on the same list with those of Swedenborg, T. L. Harris, and similar teachers, as though there might be agreement between them as to the object in view. Many may be led by this to apply for the loan of such books as "Quiet Hours," "Daniel Quorm," &c., and so unwittingly be drawn to read the "Manual of New Church Doctrine," and other books equally misleading, which would follow in due course. We would earnestly warn our readers against such designs upon their faith. The dark mazes of Swedenborgianism are more easily entered than afterward escaped from.

At the annual meeting of Western College, Plymouth, last week, Mr. T. Lea, M.P. for Donegal, presided, and gave a most practical and outspoken address on "Politics in the Pulpit." He specially referred to Dr. Dale's recent sermon in defence of the Affirmation Bill:—

They must remember that there were men in all churches holding different opinions upon these questions, and if a subject of that sort came up it would create rancour in the minds of some persons present. He thought he might ask, "Did ever a political sermon save a soul, did ever a political sermon or political allusion tend to improve the religious or moral tone of any person present?" He thought he might say "No;" and he would beg of the ministers in preaching their sermons to remember that it was only a minority who were professing Christians in their congregations. He would ask them whether anybody casually dropping into a place of worship under such circumstances would benefit by such a sermon as his good friend Mr. Dale, for whom he had the greatest respect, preached? Were they not losing an opportunity when they preached such a sermon? There were very few occasions when there were not two or three, at least, in the chapel who very rarely attended any place of worship. Some came out of curiosity, some simply to pass an hour; but on those occasions they might hear something that would do them everlasting good, and he besought ministers to remember that there was no sermon they could preach but which might have the highest and most important, and, indeed, eternal consequences.

Mr. Lea has been somewhat severely censured by some sections of the press for his references to this matter. The Nonconformist says:—"A more unworthy view of the function of the pulpit and the work of the Christian minister than is suggested here could not easily be given." Having regard, however, to the high and holy purpose for which the ministry is designed, we cannot but think there is much force in Mr. Lea's advice to students on this subject. Viewed in the light of his closing words, we deem his position a wise and safe one for ministers to adopt:—

They were workers in the highest cause this world could offer. Their work was work for eternity. Let them not for a moment think they were living and working for a mere earthly and temporal benefit; but having chosen the highest work which was open to them, he asked them to proceed with it conscientiously and earnestly, and in the course of time they would enter into their highest reward, and there before the throne they would meet men and women who would thank them for the course upon which they had entered and the efforts that they had devoted to their work.

Mr. Lea referred to THE CHRISTIAN, and to a note which appeared in our columns recently concerning Canon Tristram's statement as to the prevalence of Arianism in the Congregational body. We are glad to take the opportunity afforded by his reference, to say that our allusion to the Canon's assertion was in no way intended to express concurrence with it, but to gather from it, in common with many other signs of the times, a warning for all against the tendency to broad views which prevails in every section of the Church. While we do not advocate the views of any one denomination, we have equally no prejudices against any, and only desire to uphold the standard of the old theology of the Word of God in opposition to all new theories and systems of men.

Two or three points of general importance and interest came before the Upper House of Convocation at its most recent session. The Bishop of Lincoln presented a petition against the use of unfermented wine at the Lord's Supper, in which "regret and alarm" were expressed at its use as an innovation calculated to weaken the position of the Church of England. The subject was referred to the consideration of a Select Committee. It appears to us to be a happy method of avoiding any hurt to weak consciences, to say the least of it, for unfermented wine to be used at this ordinance. Care should, of course, be taken that the wine selected is of suitable quality; but assuredly the process of fermentation can add nothing to the fitness of the symbol, and there need be no difficulty in obtaining unfermented wine in every way adapted for the purpose.

Another petition, forwarded by the Bishop of Salisbury, from the clergy and laity of that diocese, made a wise and good suggestion. It was to the effect that some Sunday should be set apart for special prayer for God's blessing on the fruits of the earth and on all agricultural undertakings. Whether as a permanent arrangement for each year, or specially at this season, there is room for regarding such a proposition with favour. God is the Lord of the harvest, and He alone can cause the earth to yield her increase. As a recognition of dependence upon Him, and as a means of inducing praise and prayer from many who are but too apt to forget such duties, it might be well if a season for these reminders were appointed by all the churches.

A minister recently remarked that the whole question of Missions must be faced; it has never yet been. We thank God the missionary spirit is growing and increasing, and the enlarging demands from the foreign field—as for fifteen hundred or two thousand missionaries for China—are themselves the promise of their own fulfilment. For if the sevenfold Spirit sent forth into all the earth creates in some hearts the expectation, He will work in other hearts to accomplish its fulfilment. Is it not little enough to hope that very soon every church will be represented by one or more of its members in the Mission-field, and that every important branch of the Young Men's and Young Women's Christian Association will, in like manner, be linked with some heathen land? Funds should be no difficulty, for the vital unity of interest maintained by communication between the body at home and the members abroad would ensure the supply of all their need.

The fearful disaster on the Clyde, by which one hundred and fifty lives were lost, furnishes another illustration of the uncertainty which attends all human calculations and attainments. The launching of a small steam-ship is so common an event, that no one would suppose it possible for such a complete collapse to occur as that which took place last week. The Times said, in reference to it, that "it is a discouraging circumstance that the advances of science, wonderful as they are, and coupled as they are with an enormous recorded experience, do not appear capable of eliminating what we call accident from life." The fact is, there are higher and mightier powers at work in the world than those we exert, both for evil and for good, and to show man that, with all his advances in science and practical experience, he is servant and not master—the subject of limitations spite of all—may be one reason why the supreme Disposer of events permits, as He often does, adverse forces to enter and overturn human arrangements, and allows the oversight of something which may be obvious enough afterwards, to supersede our most skilled and practised appliances.

It is distressing beyond measure to think of the many bereaved homes and hearts which are the result of this fresh calamity. Truly "earth of tears is full," and sometimes the heart sickens and the soul faints at the sight of sorrow and care which press so heavily upon our race. But the travail and the groans of creation are not for ever; they point onward to the nearing deliverance. Be it ours to pray that all who are distressed may learn to see in God their refuge and strength, and to know the blessedness and sustaining influence of that hope which is as an anchor sure and steadfast.

It is doubtless a very serious matter for engine-drivers to fall asleep at their post, as in the case of the men whose engine so nearly caused disaster to the Irish mail train the other day. But if it is true that they had been on duty for fifteen hours, their summary discharge by the company is like James Carey sending to the gallows the less guilty instruments of his crime. It is of great importance that the law should deal stringently with railway companies as to their keeping signalmen and other employés at work for periods beyond the power of physical endurance.

It is gratifying to see the way in which the members of our Royal Family place themselves at the disposal of philanthropic claims. Scarcely a week passes without reports of some one or other of them taking part in plans for the welfare of the needy and suffering classes among us. On Tuesday of last week the Princess Christian performed the ceremony of opening the Helena wing of the North-west London Hospital, Kentish Town-road. Like other similar institutions this hospital needs wider support. It was an interesting fact referred to by the chairman that the working men's societies in the vicinity had sent him £200 as a token of their appreciation of the work.

MISS DE BROEN'S MISSION.

EARL CAIRNS presided at a meeting held at Exeter Hall, on the 3rd inst., on behalf of the work carried on by Miss de Broen and her fellow helpers, known as the "Belville Mission." His lordship in a few kindly words commended the work as worthy of support. Rev. Neville Sherbroke also spoke of having visited the Mission, and found that a really good and needy work was being done in such a way that it could not but commend itself to any who saw it.

Miss KER then gave a description of the various branches of the work, which embraces, among other things, a medical Mission, attended by some thousands during the year, many of whom not only get healing for the body through the skill and indefatigableness of a kind Scotch doctor, but their souls are blessed also. Miss Ker gave several illustrations of cases of real blessing in conversions to God and consistency of life as fruit thereof.

Miss DE BROEN added further remarks to the details already given. Even infidels have begged them to take their children into the schools, saying, "Take our children, we know you will bring them up well." Although there are twenty-five workers all told, many more are needed. They would be glad to welcome any sent by the Lord to help them, but they must be real workers for the Lord. Miss de Broen pleaded very earnestly for a printing-press and a hospital or medical Mission-house, both of which are greatly needed, as well as a married gentleman to help in keeping the accounts and in the general superintendence. It is a matter for thankfulness that the character, manner of conducting, and results of the work are evidences of its genuineness, and deserve the sympathy of all Christians.

TROUBLES IN BASUTOLAND.

FROM a letter to Mr. James Mathieson, Mildmay-park, by Rev. T. Coillard, at Leribi, Basutoland, we make the following painful extracts, in the hope that our readers will earnestly pray for that troubled country:—

"Basutoland is passing through a most serious political crisis, and our district is one of the main sources of the disturbance, owing to two brothers contending for the chieftainship. In such circumstances it was clearly impossible for me to leave for the Zambezi and abandon the work of Leribi. It was, I confess, with a feeling of sorrowful disappointment and regret that I yielded, and postponed the expedition till October or November. But the Lord has since comforted our hearts and shown us that He had some work to do here still.

"He cheered us by letters from the Zambezi, telling that the chiefs are still expecting us. One of these letters was from a brother, Mr. Arnot, personally unknown to me, who has gone there to preach the Gospel of Christ, and who is keeping the door open for us. Then we had the most unexpected and welcome visit of a dear man of the name of Kukwe, the native evangelist of the Lake Ngami, whose labours have been so wonderfully blessed. All this, with the conviction that we do the Master's good pleasure, helps us to wait, patiently to wait for his own time. Patiently waiting, when one is nearly fifty, and the work is pressing, and the flight of time is swift, and opportunities seem golden ones, is a hard lesson. But it is to be learnt, and by the friends who give us their co-operation as well as by ourselves.

"The patched-up peace which followed the disturbances which desolated our district in November and December was hardly an armistice. We have ever since lived in constant alerts and rumours of wars. The minds of the people were kept in ceaseless excitement, and the political questions of the day absorbed everyone. Yet we were not left altogether without some encouragement. The daily school, under the energetic direction of my niece, has prospered, and lately our services have been marked by much seriousness and earnestness. Some young men who had strayed have come back, and were still coming back one by one. It seems to us that we felt already the first drops of the showers so long prayed and waited for.

"Since the beginning of the month, civil war has raged with a frightful energy, and desolated once more our district like a hurricane. We ask ourselves whether it is really past; it is a nightmare that still haunts us. On a tract of land forty miles in length by twenty, there is scarcely more than one village still in existence. All have been looted, pillaged, and burnt down. Frightful actrocities have been committed upon women, old men, and boys. And now there are thousands of women and children who have sought refuge on the border of the Free State under the rocks. The winter is setting in, and as the crops have been destroyed, we are threatened with a dreadful famine. The women and children who had sought refuge on the station have not been spared; they had their blankets or native clothes violently taken or torn from their backs spite of all our protestations and entreaties. The paramount chief Letsie and the Governor's agent, Capt. Blyth, have come and tried to make peace. All they were able to do was to stop bloodshed. But before long war will likely break out again with increased proportions and fierceness. What will the end of it all be? God knows. He has his own designs on this tribe, and even the passions of men shall surely accomplish his purpose. It makes one very thoughtful indeed to try to read the future of those African native races, of this interesting nation especially. If it is at all possible for me to leave in July, I am to visit all the churches previous to the departure of the Zambezi expedition. That great tour, which will take me six weeks or two months, is an important Mission.

"We long to take the Zambezi road. The Zambezi Mission becomes more and more urgent, and I feel more and more convinced that we must look to carry it on to all those who are Christ's, and who pray that his kingdom may come. I am sure there are many in England who take a true interest in our enterprise, and many who would gladly help if they knew that we need £50 to get a transport wagon and other oxen for our long journey, especially if it could facilitate my dear wife's accompanying us at least as far as Shoohong, or Leshoma, this side of the Zambezi River. It is to us a matter of prayer and expectation. No one goes to war at his own expense, and our Lord has ever dealt with us bountifully; we do not presume to teach Him what is necessary.

"May 31." "T. COILLARD.

THE LATE SIGNOR ROSSETTI.

A FRIEND has kindly sent us the following account, translated from the Italian, of the departure to be with Christ of one of the Lord's servants in Italy:—

"On Sunday, June 3, there occurred in the assembly of the Brethren in Via della Vigna Vecchia, Florence, an event most affecting to the heart of Christians. Before the breaking of bread Signor Rossetti rose and addressed to those present some reflections on the happiness of the communion of the saints even now on earth, and then still more in heaven, from Acts vii. 56; Heb. xiii. 8—15; Rev. i. 4—6, iv. 1, v. 9—13, xiv. 13. He then sat down, and another brother added some words on the same subject. This one having finished, Signor Rossetti was rising to speak again, when he was seen suddenly to totter and fall back on his seat. His wife, who had been just before looking anxiously at him, observing an unusual expression in his face, ran to him, but he made her a sign to stand aside. Feeling the approach of death, he was desiring to say a word more to the dear brethren whom for so many years he had fed with the Word of God. With one last effort he could only articulate 'Farewell!' and this was his final word here below. Medical help, though immediately rendered, was of no avail; and our dear brother, without suffering, breathed his last before one o'clock.

"The world calls such an event a misfortune, from which everyone would desire to be preserved by the mercy of God. But who is the Christian that would not envy so happy a departure? At any rate it was an answer of divine goodness to the constant prayers of Signor Rossetti. Knowing his family tendency to apoplexy, and having himself had some partial attacks of the same during the last two years, he dreaded the prospect of a helpless old age, burdensome to himself and others, and besought God to take him in the very midst of his labours. And God heard him. He died in the breach as a good soldier of Christ, with mind and heart fixed on that Jesus whom he loved so well, and who has now welcomed him to heaven. His death was a happy testimony given by God to his faithful servant. From the Church militant he has been transported to the bosom of the Church triumphant, and it may be well said of him that he scarcely tasted of death.

"It was a good thought to leave the remains in the very church where he had so often preached saving grace to sinners, till the following Tuesday at five, when a numerous gathering of brethren of all the churches of Florence, with their pastors, followed the funeral to the beautiful cemetery of the Laurels, beyond the Porte Romano. In compliance with his wish there were no addresses given over the grave, and the funeral service consisted almost exclusively of passages Scripture of hymns and prayers.

"Signor Rossetti was converted while an exile in London after the events of 1848. This happy event occurred through the words, 'Were you to die to-night what would become of your soul?' addressed to him by another exile older than himself, and subsequently his fellow-labourer in the Gospel in Italy till the hour of his departure. In Signor Rossetti the whole Church of Italy feels that it has lost one of the most godly and devoted of labourers. May God deign to raise up in his place many others not less devoted to his service, or less animated by that spirit of love and concord which so becomes true Christians?"—L'Italia Evangelica, June 9, 1883.

LORD SHAFTESBURY AND THE COSTERMONGERS.

IN connection with the Golden-lane and Hoxton Costermongers' Christian Mission, conducted by Mr. W. J. Orsman, the annual Costers' Donkey and Pony Show was held on the 2nd inst. near Costers' Hall, Hoxton-street. There was a very good show of animals, the entries comprising 71 donkeys and 30 horses and ponies. They evidenced by their appearance the kind treatment by their owners and drivers.

Thesh ow was well attended, and that particular part of Hoxton in which it was held was crowded by costermongers and their friends, who seemed to take much interest in the anniversary. There were five donkeys exhibited of the ages respectively of 40, 30, 28, 20, and 14 years. The Earl of Shaftesbury, the President of the Mission, who was accompanied by Lady Edith Ashley, was welcomed by genuine costers' cheers as he entered the show-yard to inspect the donkeys.

The anniversary meeting was held in the hall, the Earl of Shaftesbury in the chair. "All hail!" was heartily sung, and Rev. John York offered prayer. Mr. W. J. ORSMAN made a statement, from which it appeared that 1072 Gospel and other meetings had been held during the year. The membership of the Sunday-school was 620, and that of the Band of Hope 447. They had never drawn from the capital of the Sick and Burial Club, and there was £630 to its credit at the present time. Referring to dwellings for the costers, Mr. Orsman said the model dwellings in Whitecross-street were not suitable for the costermongers, as they had not the little yards and stables for the donkeys. He wished some of our wealthy philanthropists would erect dwellings for this most deserving class.

His LORDSHIP said that among all the meetings he attended, none gave him more satisfaction than that of the costers. Mr. Orsman had every reason to be thankful for the results of his twenty-one years' work. The people of Golden-lane were once almost the most lawless of the human race, the pest of London, a nuisance to Society and a danger to the police. What was their character now? Colonel Henderson had told him that amongst all the people in London there were no more orderly, honest, and well-conducted folks than the costers of Golden-lane. That showed the regenerating power of the Gospel, and it was time that all the costers of London were improved by the example of those of Golden-lane. The exhibition of donkeys and ponies was most creditable, and showed that the costers had practised the duty of humanity to animals. He asked the owner of a donkey 40 years old, what did it do? "Do?" the man said, "it walks about and plays with the children."

Prizes were distributed to the successful costers, and the proceedings closed in the usual way.

MANITOBA.—Will our correspondent, who sent us a request for prayer for Mr. Duncan's work, kindly send his or her address?

"DO LIKEWISE."—Staying at a watering-place on the Welsh coast, where the cottagers speak only their own language, I had the pleasure and privilege of distributing several packets of Mrs. Grimké's pretty text-cards, which were most thankfully and pleasantly received. God's promise is, "My word shall not return unto me void." He often blesses the feeblest efforts of the weakest to the bringing about of great results. A. L.

A SUGGESTION.—When the sixpenny edition of the Life of George Whitefield (Morgan and Scott) was issued, I spoke of it to some of my fellow workers, and recommended it as likely to be of use to them, at the same time offering to obtain as many copies as might be needed. A number at once had copies, and the reading had the effect I hoped for—viz., a stirring up and stimulating of the spirit to more devotion in service for the Lord. I would respectfully suggest that others do likewise with their fellow workers, for surely it is a record of God's grace in Christ Jesus to poor sinners, and of the Holy Spirit's power, which it would be well to circulate widely at the present juncture. WM. JOSEPH LEWIS.

HARLEY HOUSE ANNIVERSARY.

A LARGE assembly gathered at Harley House, Bow-road, E., on the 2nd inst., to give thanks to the Lord and hear an account of his work carried on by our excellent friends, Mr. and Mrs. Grattan Guinness, during the past year. These devoted servants of Christ must have been cheered to see so many of the Lord's people more than filling a large tent in the garden, who were glad to have the privilege of seeing the faces and hearing the voices of some of those who had given themselves for Gospel work among the heathen.

After prayer by Mr. Glenny, of Algeria, Mr. GUINNESS, who presided, read a part of Rev. xiv., and said that he had no doubt but that the fall of Babylon mentioned in this prophecy was the period of the Reformation, and of universal proclamation of the Gospel. Since the French Revolution a hundred societies had been engaged in some way or other in spreading the glad tidings of salvation; the Bible itself had been translated into over two hundred languages, and seven thousand copies were being issued daily and sent forth among the nations. The work of evangelisation had extended on every hand; every country in the world was now open, and this work at Harley House was a little part of the great work that had been, and is still going on under God in these last days. This was their tenth anniversary; during those years nearly three hundred missionaries had gone forth from the Institute—viz., one to some part of the world every fortnight. This of itself was deeply encouraging. Some of them had laid down their lives in distant climes in their work, and others had taken their places. More than a dozen young men were on the platform, most of whom were going to different parts of the world, more especially to China and Africa.

Mr. BAIN gave an account of his early life, how the Lord had met with him, and how he had been led to the Institute, and what a blessing it had been to him. Senor BARROSO, a Spaniard, spoke in French of the work he hoped the Lord would lead him to do in telling of his love on the continent. He was followed by Mr. BARNETT, a converted Jew, who has lately joined Mr. Wilkinson in the Mildmay Mission to labour among his brethren. Dr. SINCLAIR PATERSON remarked that though we might not be at one on the subject of prophecy, we were at one on the subject of the blessed work which had brought us together—viz., the spread of the Gospel, the object for which this college had been established. There was a readiness among the nations to receive the Gospel such as there never had been before. There are many difficulties to encounter, but we have to take care and not act as the twelve men who spied the land: they brought up an evil report, and yet it was a true one. They said the country abounded with fruit, but there were giants and walled cities, and so they discouraged the people. The secret was, they left God out of their reckoning; and if God is left out of our calculations, of what value is anything else that is put in? Their superstition led to setting up a calf; their common sense said, let us go back, but faith says, let us go up and possess the land. We need to have faith in God, and faith in the Word of God. That Word must govern our heart, mind, and conscience; then we shall have success in our souls, and bring success to others.

Mr. REGINALD RADCLIFFE gave an earnest address on the work of the Gospel among the nations, and repeated what he has often said lately, that God had to take away Livingstone in order that the Church might be stirred up with regard to Africa. He instanced the cases of three men whom God had used to move many to the foreign field, as well as to work at home; these were W. C. Burns, H. G. Guinness, and Dr. Livingstone. Mr. Radcliffe urged all present to confess with shame the great sin of leaving the work undone so long, and to redouble their energies in fulfilling the command that has so long been disobeyed. If a person got drunk he was excommunicated from the Church; he had been disobedient to the Word of God; but what about those who were disobedient to the command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature"—were they excommunicated? No: we practically think it is wrong to break one command, but right to break another.

At the evening meeting Mr. GLENNY, who was dressed in the costume of the people in Northern Africa, spoke of the great need, open doors, and easy-to-be-reached countries, all along the northern coast. He exhorted some to go, if only for a month's change, instead of taking their holiday elsewhere. M. BUREAU spoke of the work among the soldiers during the Tunisian War, and the readiness with which they received the Word of God. He was now about to go to Hayti to work among the French. This dear brother paid a warm tribute to the McAll Mission in France, by which he was brought to a knowledge of Jesus.

Mr. HUDSON TAYLOR then spoke a few words to the young brethren going out, from 1 Tim. iv. 12. After speaking of some of the difficulties a foreign missionary has to meet with, difficulties that he has no idea of at home, he said the words he had chosen gave them some very practical teaching. (1) "Take heed to thyself." This was the all-important point for them all. If they took heed to themselves, and kept themselves right, there would not be much fear of their work going wrong. They must keep themselves right before God. They must study his Word prayerfully and carefully for their own soul's good. (2) "And to the doctrine." It must not be their doctrine, but "the doctrine," the Lord's doctrine; the whole Word of God, and not parts of it only. (3) "Continue in them." There must be no spasmodic effort, but a patient continuance. That, and that alone would tell; and, lastly, the result would be that "thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee." These earnest and telling exhortations were very opportune, and it is to be hoped those who stay at home, as well as our dear brethren who go abroad, will profit by them. Such a work as this deserves the support of all who are interested in the Lord's service. Mr. and Mrs. Guinness are, indeed, doing a service that must bring glory to the Lord, and salvation to men. A happy day was brought to a conclusion by singing the Doxology.

GROVE HALL MISSION.

THE first quarterly meeting of the above Mission was held on Tuesday, July 3; Mr. C. C. UNDERWOOD presided. The report showed that meetings were held for the preaching of the Gospel every Sunday, Tuesday, and Friday evening, and a Monday evening meeting for policemen and their wives.

Rescue work has also been carried on amongst the fallen in the neighbourhood of St. John's Wood. One young woman has been rescued from a life of sin, and has been placed in a respectable situation.

Nine hundred and thirty-nine houses have been visited with much encouragement, and open-air meetings are held every Sunday afternoon and evening in the neighbourhood of Lissongrove.

Mr. THOS. KIRTLEY delivered an address upon "Communion," followed by Mr. W. H. SMITH, on "Obedience," and Mr. A. GREEN, on the "Baptism of the Holy Ghost."

Gospel papers, &c., will be thankfully received by Mr. Jas. Sprunt, 16A, Omega-place, Alpha-road, N.W.

CORRECTION.—On page 7 of our issue of June 28, "Vevey, France," should have been "Vevey, Switzerland."

CAUTION.—We are requested by a clergyman to say that a man calling himself the Rev. She. Jee. Hu, who is going about lecturing for a mission to the Cheroku Indians, has absconded from Nottingham, leaving several bills unpaid. He has left many pounds in debt. He carries about with him letters (?) from the Bishops of London and Rochester.

HIS ROYAL BOUNTY.

1 KINGS x. 13.

WHAT is "his royal bounty?"
What are his "gifts" to me?
Love which o'erpasseth knowledge,
Life which is full and free,
Light for the hour of darkness,
Faith for the hour of care,
Strength for the hour of weakness,
Need, at all times, for prayer.

Joy in the lowliest station
Which He would have me fill;
Gladness in full heart-service,
Striving to do his will.
Calm which no storm can ruffle,
Hope which no doubt can dim,
Peace flowing e'er like a river,
Peace coming straight from Him.

Shadow for glaring noontide,
Streams in the desert dry,
Rest when my heart is weary,
Answering all my cry.
Conquest o'er foes that would master,
Help in the night of fear,
Grace to make full surrender,—
These are his "gifts" so dear.

But, beyond all his "bounty,"—
Bounty so royally free,—
Is the great gift of the ages,—
The gift of HIMSELF for me.
This is "his royal bounty,"
Christ is Himself my King!
What shall I yield my Master?
What to his footstool bring?

*Every*thing, all for Jesus,
Letting his beauty shine
Through me, and in me, and on me,
Showing that He is mine.
Taking the life which He offers,
Giving the life that He gave:
This my return for his "bounty"—
All that I am—that I have.

JEWISH REFUGEES IN PALESTINE.

ALLOW me to thank, in Mr. Kelk's name and my own, the numerous readers of THE CHRISTIAN who have generously supported us in our work among the Jewish refugees in Jerusalem, and to inform them that what we have been labouring and praying for for months past is about to be accomplished—viz., the formation of a society for making the refugees self-supporting, and freeing us from the care for their temporal wants.

The committee appointed on June 12, at Mildmay, I am happy to say, will, in a week or two, inform the Christian public of their intention of buying land on which to accept the refugees as tenants.

If they receive the support they deserve, we shall have a glorious field for preaching the Gospel in Palestine, and there will be no more need for our present work of charity, which we dare not continue much longer for fear of the pauperising effect it must have.

Your readers, I know, support an immense number of deserving charities; but I venture to hope that, nevertheless, this new society will be favoured by some of them, not only because it wishes to help poor people to help themselves, but also and chiefly because it is a work subserving the preaching of the Gospel to Jews in their own land.

The Gospel has made many conquests among these refugees, but only after the "Jewish Refugees' Aid Society" has succeeded in making them self-supporting, we shall have a clear test of what God has wrought.

FOREIGN GOVERNESSES.—Mdme. C. F. Ryffel wishes us to state that she is now ready to receive applications from families for foreign governesses during the summer holidays. Address: 16, Powis-terrace, London, W.

GOSPEL TEMPERANCE AT HORNSEY.

MAJOR and Mrs. Evered Poole concluded, last week, their twelve days' Gospel Temperance Mission at Hornsey. The meetings were generally well attended, but more especially so when it was known that the Major and his gifted wife were to chiefly occupy the platform. Through the admirable arrangements of the committee, a handsome tent had been rigged up for the occasion, flying (very suggestively) the Union Jack and the dark blue temperance flag side by side. The interior, with accommodation for twelve to fifteen hundred persons, was well lighted and tastefully decorated in various parts with flowers and bannerols. The generous co-operation of an efficient choir, and a zealous band of workers, contributed very materially to the success of the Mission, which registered at the close upwards of fifteen hundred newly-pledged abstainers. Major and Mrs. Evered Poole were also warmly supported by the clergy of Hornsey, and by a staff of well-known temperance advocates, including Mrs. G. S. Reaney, Rev. E. P. Lowry, E. Arrowsmith, Esq., and others.

On Wednesday last Major Poole delivered an address to men only—a model of fine, outspoken English—on "National Vices, and Individual Responsibility," prefaced by a solo—"The Dying Child's Appeal to his Drunken Father"—sweetly sung by Mrs. Poole, who afterwards herself addressed a crowded meeting of her own sex at the Mission House.

On Friday night the Major again occupied the platform; his place being taken the following night by his wife, whose pure, unfettered eloquence in "The Story of a nameless Woman" (Matt. ix. 20) touched many hearts.

The Sunday services, afternoon and evening, were fully attended, impressive Gospel addresses being given by both Major and Mrs. Poole. At the after-meeting a large number availed themselves of an express invitation to request special prayer on their behalf.

The farewell service on Monday night drew very large crowds to the tent, in spite of the intense heat. The Major vindicated the distinctive principles of Blue Ribbonism, striking, in the course of his remarks, the note of the brotherhood of Humanity; upon which Mrs. Evered Poole, who immediately followed, founded an original and pathetic discourse. Taking as her text the inhumanity of the elder son's conduct toward his prodigal brother (Luke xv. 25—30), she showed that while both were sons, both were also sinners—the elder (whom we are too apt to regard as a saint) as the proud, self-righteous, self-seeking Pharisee; the younger as the shameless profligate. This elder son—what had he done to rescue his brother from ruin? Had he put out a single finger to stay him in his career of vice, or even to bring him back, when gone from home? With a rare power and eloquence she pleaded the cause of temperance upon the broad platform of Christian principle and human brotherhood; urging that brotherhood means privilege, but also responsibility, and that only in proportion as we enter into the spirit of the Divine Humanity itself, shall we recognise the claims of this noble work upon ourselves individually.

Many pressed forward at the close to shake hands with Major and Mrs. Evered Poole, and to thank them cordially for their work and labour of love amongst them.

ENTERTAINING STRANGERS.—One of a number of ladies on their way to India for Zenana work writes that Miss Esther Beamish, of Algiers, who has since gone home, kindness by making it a point to welcome and attend to strangers calling there. Our correspondent adds:—"Would it not be nice if Christians living in foreign ports would be on the look-out for travellers passing through, that they might bid them 'God-speed' on their journey? We could not show our gratitude to our friend for her kindness in any tangible way, but her deed will ever remain a bright spot in the midst of much that was trying in a long voyage."

THE CHURCH ARMY.

THE Record of the 6th inst., states that "A drawing-room meeting in connection with the Church Army was held, by the invitation of Lord Mount-Temple, at 15, Great Stanhope-street, Mayfair, on June 29. His Lordship, in opening the meeting, said that the Church Army seemed to him just the thing that was required at the present juncture. As time advanced, and as the habits and customs of the people changed, new methods and modes of working must be adopted, and that which did very well in early times would not fulfil all the necessities of the present moment. He considered that this was a path that ought to be explored and extended, and he did not think money could be better spent than by awakening the dormant spiritual life of the lower classes.

Rev. W. Hay Aitken, who followed, said the Church Army proposed to utilise all the aggressive forces of its members, and if a man were not qualified to be a Sunday-school teacher, at least he could carry a banner or distribute tracts. They all knew the power and advantage of co-operation, and it was especially so with regard to working men, who were thrown so much in each other's society that there was a danger of their losing their individuality. The Church Army was also a standing protest against that soft, emasculate Christianity which seemed to lead people up to the idea that they could believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and then throw themselves down on a sofa and be carried up to heaven.

The Rev. W. Carlile then detailed the origin, nature, and constitution of the Church Army. Firstly, he said, it was under the clergy. Secondly on the principle of sending men in rotation from parish to parish. Thirdly, that when the Church Army was established in a parish, it was self-supporting or nearly self-supporting. Fourthly, that the plan of action would vary in each parish, nothing being alike in any two parishes. Every officer must be a total abstainer from alcohol and tobacco, and every soldier must be a total abstainer from alcohol."

RICHARD WEAVER IN SWANSEA.

THE town of Swansea has enjoyed great favours from the hand of God in connection with the several Missions which have been held within a comparatively brief space of time. The tide of Gospel Temperance which rolled through the neighbourhood during the visit of Mr. R. T. Booth, was followed shortly after by Messrs. Moody and Sankey's Mission, so much blessed to the town; then Mr. Francis Murphy came to help forward the good work, and now Christians are sending up the voice of thanksgiving to God for directing the steps of his servant Richard Weaver to their town. Many petitions are being offered up to the Throne of Grace that his errand may be blessed of God in the salvation of many souls through the preaching of the Gospel.

That this simple Gospel, this old, old story, is as powerful to attract in this nineteenth century as ever it was, is manifest by the large numbers who nightly assemble in the Albert Hall (the largest in the town), where the services are being held. While we listened to the preacher's stirring addresses on "The Precious Blood," "This is my Friend," &c., we could but feel thankful to God that He has given his honoured servant grace to keep so firmly to "the faith once delivered to the saints." That Mr. Weaver's burning words of eloquence are well calculated to rouse the enthusiasm and awaken the sympathies of a Welsh audience, is most marked and unmistakable by the tearful eyes and breathless attention throughout the building as he so graphically describes some of the terrible incidents that have come under his own observation in connection with his long service for Christ. The best of all is that souls have been blessed at every service, and as the Mission is to continue another ten days, the Lord's people are looking for a great ingathering of precious souls. He intends (God willing) taking a tour through the southern part of the principality, preaching the kingdom of God in the towns and villages. P.

CONFERENCE OF Y.W.C.A. WORKERS.

BY the invitation of Mr. S. Morley a very interesting Conference of Christian workers connected with the Y.W.C.A., both in London and the country, was convened at his residence, 34, Grosvenor-street, on the evening of June 26.

Mr. Morley opened the proceedings with a cordial welcome, and expressed his pleasure at seeing before him so large a number of those engaged in this truly Christlike work. He considered that this Association did a most deeply important and necessary work, as it was impossible to exaggerate the perils to which young working women are exposed, unless reached and shielded by the influences of Christian help and guidance, and this was ably furnished by the Institutes and other agencies of the Y.W.C.A.

Rev. H. Webb-Peploe gave a stirring address on the ability that God gives for Christian service. He said this dispensation differed from the preceding one in that now we are not only possessed by the Spirit but are possessors of the Spirit. And our work, instead of being to declare God's judgments, as was often the case under the old dispensation, is to exhibit the love of God—the one a destructive work the other a constructive. He made an earnest appeal for more to join in the work of the Y.W.C.A.

Lady Hope followed with a brief address upon "The Three Takings," which are the experience of the Christian life. (1) "I will take the cup of salvation;" (2) "Take my yoke upon you;" and (3) "Take with you words;" and beautifully touched upon the need for constantly holding the cup of blessing under the fountain to be again and again filled afresh from Christ Himself, the source of eternal life.

Miss Lucy Moor next gave an account of the Y.W.C.A. throughout England, numbering 600 branches and about 40,000 members. Mrs. Menzies, of Liverpool, spoke of the work in that city, which has been mapped out into seventy districts, visited by a staff of young women workers, who carry packets of Gospel tracts from house to house. Four Homes have been opened for young women in Liverpool, and it is calculated that about 10,000 persons are reached by classes, meetings, and monthly letters.

Rev. J. Bennett said that the Association met with his hearty approval, and for this reason he hoped to help forward the West Brompton Branch. He thought that every Christian should ask the question, "Is there any work of this kind for helping young women near me? if so I will help it. If there is not, can I start it?"

Miss Raymond spoke of the Rochester Institute, with which she was personally connected, and referred to the London agencies of the Y.W.C.A., numbering 62 branches (24 of which are institutions) and about 6000 members, while a much larger number are reached by meetings and classes. Four new institutes have been affiliated within the last year, and the Rochester Institute is adding a second house as restaurant and home to its original premises.

Rev. Canon Barker remarked that, after all he had heard, he could not imagine any work more Christlike, more simple, more important, or more needed than this. Let us not despair in our efforts, if we can gather 6000 members into the Association in London out of the degradation of sin, but go forward bravely, for the rescue even of one soul is of incalculable value.

SWITZERLAND.—Mr. and Mrs. Cheyne Brady, Chalet Feuz, Grindelwald, hope Christians visiting the neighbourhood will favour them with a call.

GLOUCESTERSHIRE.—Mr. Opie Rodway and other Christians of various denominations are holding outdoor and indoor meetings, during the summer, in the villages of this county. At Leonard Stanley, they hire a brake, and about ten or twelve go in the evenings and on Sundays, as weather permits, to publish the glad tidings. Prayer is asked that hundreds may be saved.

MY FORTIETH FAMILY ON THE OCEAN.

MANY of our friends are aware that Miss Macpherson sailed from Liverpool on June 7 with a party of sixty boys and girls, the third party sent out this year. The following extracts from her journal on board the Circassian will interest our readers :—

"Friday, June 8.—Our vessel is perfectly still, lying off the coast of the Isle of Man, for a dense fog prevails. The fog-whistles have sounded; our pilot and captain have been on the watch all night, in order to steer quite clear from vessels and sunken rocks, but we have slept well, unmindful of the dangers around us. 'He leadeth the blind by a way they know not.' How foolish to attempt to guide ourselves!

"After the night journey to Liverpool, we remember Mr. Moody's words lately: 'If you haven't got opportunities, make them.' So we got our music-books and hymn-sheets, and made our way westward, among the one thousand emigrants, and soon had a motley crowd listening to the Gospel story. Many weird, drunken-looking men, running away (friends may think) from the habits of drink, that obnoxious demon which is destroying our nation. One boy who gave much trouble seems the most helpful of all; he is at my elbow at every turn when anything is wanted. Cheer his widowed mother with this answer to prayer.

"Monday 11.—Yesterday had a splendid time distributing Gospel books amongst the sailors and steerage passengers, and conversing with them. Presented a copy of 'Grace and Truth' to one of the officers, as he happened to be alone, and gave a 'Sailor's Packet' to one of the stewards, when he said, 'I've done nothing for you.' 'No,' said I; 'it is a free gift,' and was thus able to illustrate the freeness of salvation through Jesus. During the morning my children and Mr. Middlemore's united as one band, and I gave them a Bible lesson, which we all enjoyed. It was a lovely day; sea calm, no rolling, and everything peaceful. In the evening we had another Bible lesson, on the life of David.

"Tuesday, 12.—This evening we are exactly half-way on our voyage, and are full of praise for the mercies which surround us. We are greatly helped day by day and hour by hour, and we feel that our fellow-workers are praying for us. What a rest it will be when the next two thousand miles will have been travelled, and the strain quite over! Had our Bible lesson on deck, and spent the morning with the children. Some were knitting, others amusing themselves with skipping ropes, dolls, &c. W. and H. and J. are the favourites; they accost everybody, and have a number of 'Dadas' and 'Grandpas'! W. runs to the Captain's room whenever he wants a 'drink o' water'! The Captain is a family man, and seems quite pleased with the childish confidence.

"Friday, 15. — This afternoon we have sighted Cape Race. A grand concert is to be held to-night in the saloon. How much more befitting to hold a meeting of thanksgiving for the hidden dangers passed, and the gracious lovingkindness of our heavenly Father! I have been a prisoner to my berth since Wednesday, being seized with a severe attack of rheumatism whilst sitting in a mist; two long weary nights and a day have been passed in great pain—quite unable to move. Much mercy is, however, mixed, with this trial; it may yet be my privilege to go to the steerage on Sunday with a sweet message from the Throne. My severe pain will turn out to be among the 'all things' which shall work together for our good and to his praise.

"Saturday, 16.—The weather is inexpressibly lovely. All our dear belongings, old and young, are looking the picture of health, with appetites not easily appeased. The trying fogs have altogether disappeared, and we are nearing the land of blue skies and continuous sunshine. You, who tarry at home by the stuff, and are toiling on, watching for rescues among the masses of our people, be of good cheer in your labour of love, for every pale-faced orphan little one is now rosy with health; bright eyes are glistening with gladness; their sweet songs and gentle manners have won every heart, and softened our side of the ship.

"Monday 18.—Yesterday my comrades were holding meetings with the children and steerage passengers all day long, each one telling out the Gospel as the Lord enabled her. In the afternoon I found the right sailor, and arranged to meet the sailors at seven o'clock in the fo'cs'le. At the time appointed we found everything prepared for us, a table covered with a flag. It was a solemn hour, as some of our number witnessed, of the great salvation, and sang together of its freeness and fulness. There is a humility and want of criticism among sailors, which predisposes them above all other classes to accept the Gospel message. The little books given the previous Sunday had prepared the way for our message. Nothing is ever lost that is done in the name of Jesus, but one has to be ready for every opportunity, and it is only by keeping in full communion that we can be in readiness to use our opportunities. I was able to speak to one of the officers, having to compare lists and count over the children. May our conversation concerning the 'Lamb of God,' and the little book 'Royal Commandments,' of which I asked his acceptance, be blessed to him. It was sad to see numbers of young men with wild, drunken-looking faces, pacing the deck in the glorious sunset; what a cruel shame it is to send young men away from home influence in the hope of curing confirmed habits of drinking. One such in the cabin vis-a-vis to ours has actually a whole case of brandy; his drunken frolics, whilst I was laid aside, have led us out to pray that the Sunday-closing movement may speedily be a reality in our land, and that Gospel Temperance work may increase continually. Let us all be persistent in wearing the 'little bit of blue.' One gentleman said at table; 'It is not at all pleasant or easy to drink my bottle of wine in your presence.' Evidently his conscience was ill at ease.

"Thursday, 21.—Our start on the long railway journey from Quebec was under temporary difficulties; two thousand emigrants were arriving at the same time with us, and all had to be assisted by the agents to their cars. The children had a good meal in one of the emigrant sheds, and, meanwhile, I wandered through the crowds gathered out of all nations, just landed from several vessels, till after lifting up my heart to the Lord I was permitted, all in the dark, no gas lamps near, to meet an agent known to me, and implored him to find out about our car, when we could start, &c. Ere long we were seated in a beautiful, well-ventilated, first-class car, which was put on specially for us, and soon the dear children were soundly sleeping. As we journeyed on, hour after hour, nothing could exceed the kindness of the officials; they brought us water to drink, helped us to ventilate the car, and offered a separate one for the boys. Tuesday morning we breakfasted at Montreal, and the day was chiefly spent by the little ones in dressing and playing with their dolls. Wherever we stopped, everyone fell in love with their beautiful young faces, saying to me that they had not seen such a band before. Little J. found a home at Montreal. Everybody loved him; they said he called them 'Dada,' and were won by his ignorance of what the term really meant. Toronto was reached at four o'clock on Wednesday morning; with some difficulty we got a meal for the children, and started again at eight, only to be shunted on to a side line to wait for two hours and a half before we could proceed the last few miles of our journey. On calculating the difference of time between Canada and England, we found that our fellow-workers would just then be gathered at the usual Monthly Workers' Meeting at the Home of Industry, and joined with them in spirit, feeling the power of the prayers that were then ascending to the throne. A warm welcome awaited us from my dear sister, Mrs. Merry, on arriving at the Galt Home. From six o'clock this morning visitors have been here, anxious to secure a child; several have already left us. Little B—— was the first to go, taken by a gentleman who has two little boys. He and his wife wished to have a girl in the family, so determined to come and ask for one. B—— looked so pretty, and when the gentleman took her up in his arms he said he would not exchange her for another for a thousand dollars. M—— is also gone, taken by a nice Christian man to take care of a little child of two years, and be treated as an elder daughter. The two sisters M—— are going to-morrow to father and son, occupying adjoining farms, and we hope to place their brother near them. This going away is rather sorrowful; all the workers shed tears when little B—— left."

A few lines dictated by one of the little girls to a worker at the Home of Industry will be an appropriate ending to this interesting journal. They are as follows :—

"I am sure you will be pleased to have a note from your little Ivy. I liked living on the ship very much; we had lots of games—jolly miller, french tag, skipping, and many more. There was another party of children, and we all sang together Sunday afternoon; it was so nice; and afterwards a little red-hooded girl, and one with a white hat, went for a walk all round the ship. We had such a long ride in the train from Monday evening till Wednesday afternoon, but I slept just as well as in my little bed. The big engines made us all laugh; they looked so funny. Thirteen children have been chosen to-day. Some people came before we had breakfast. I expect your little Ivy will soon be in a nice home, as so many want little girls. Please give my love to all the dear ladies and girls.

From your loving little girl, IVY G.

P.S.—I mean to learn to write soon without anyone guiding my hand.

STREET IMMORALITY.

A SECOND meeting of noblemen and gentlemen was held at 12, Charles-street, Berkeley-square, by kind permission of the Marquis of Ailsa, on July 2, to discuss the best means of suppressing to the greatest possible extent the very terrible amount of open and hidden vice that has grown up in the midst of England, and which has, until the last few months, been allowed by the inadequacy of legislation and the apathy of public opinion to prevail.

Before separating, the meeting resolved itself into a Central Vigilance Committee, with power to add to its number.

Its duties will be to endeavour to institute Local Vigilance Committees, much on the principle of St. Judes, Gray's-inn-road, in every district and parish of London; also to promote legislation and every other possible means calculated to further the ends so earnestly desired, especially the suppression of houses of ill-fame, and of the open profligacy and loitering in the streets.

THE SEAMEN OF ROUEN.—The work among the seamen and residents of Rouen is still carried on at 8, Rue Grand Pont, Rouen. A special effort is to be made for the conversion of souls on board the Bethel boat Annie, and we earnestly ask the prayers and help of the readers of THE CHRISTIAN in behalf of this enterprise. Books, tracts, &c., for the reading-room will be gratefully received by WILLIAM GILCHRIST, 8, Rue Grand Pont, Rouen.

CHRISTIAN COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS.

ON Saturday the members and friends of the Commercial Travellers' Christian Association had their usual half-yearly meeting and excursion. A party of more than three hundred were conveyed to Hampton Court by water in one of the steamers of the London Steamboat Company.

Mr. George Williams, founder of the Y.M.C.A., who has recently become President of this Association, presided at the luncheon table. Indeed, it was to Mr. Williams' liberality that the guests were indebted both for the steamboat and the luncheon at Hampton Court.

After the repast prayer was offered by Rev. R. C. Billing. The Hon. Secretary, Mr. Henry Holme, was then called upon, and stated that during the last half-year seventy new members had been enrolled. Seven new libraries of standard works had been set up in hotel commercial-rooms, thus making a total of 144 libraries containing about 13,000 volumes, and valued at something over £3000. More than 9000 copies of the Word of God had been placed in as many hotel bedrooms since the work began.

The beneficent fund for the temporary relief of commercial travellers or their families in sickness or sudden distress was nearly exhausted, and sixteen sad and urgent cases had been dealt with since the last half-yearly meeting. The special effort to raise £1000 for sending out more copies of the Word of God, as well as for renewing or adding libraries, was not yet complete. Mr. Geo. Palmer, M.P., had given £100, and Mr. Geo. Williams, £50. Many other friends had given of their substance also. The amount still wanted is £557 18s. 0d., not including £50 promised by Mr. T. A. Denny, subject to £950 being raised or guaranteed within the next two months.

The Secretary spoke of the great influence which the new journal, On the Road, was acquiring amongst commercial travellers, and quoted special testimony as to the result of the Word of God being placed in the bedrooms of commercial hotels. Captain James Cundy spoke of the great difficulties which commercial travellers had to face in their temporal things as well as in their spiritual. The speaker had the full sympathies of his audience when he told them that if day by day they began their journey with Jesus Christ they would be comforted and sustained in the arduous position unto which God had called them. After the Rev. R. C. Billing had spoken some kind and cheery words, a hearty vote of thanks was given to Mr. George Williams, who responded very briefly, and said he would help on the work of the Association whenever and wherever he could. It was making great progress throughout England, and was calculated to do immense good. Mr. Williams was sure that there were many firms throughout the country ready to open their purse towards the special effort for the Bibles and the libraries, if only they knew of the need and the opportunity.

The very interesting and businesslike meeting concluded with the doxology, and the friends made their way to the steamboat. The journey back to town was very pleasant, as tea was served on board. The friends, "fore and aft," sang praises to the Giver of all blessings, as only people can sing when their hearts are full of gratitude, and their minds lightened and refreshed by communion together.

More than £10 was, we believe, collected or promised on the steamboat towards the exhausted beneficent fund, and eventually the large party of Christian men and women were landed at Blackfriars Pier just after the evening had chased away the twilight. A really happy day had been spent, and will, no doubt, be remembered as one of the most popular of the excursions of the Commercial Travellers' Christian Association.

Letters to the Editor.

DOMESTIC SERVANTS' INSTITUTION.

SIR,—In answer to Mr. Davis's inquiry as to some provident organisation for domestic servants, I would r fer him to "The General Domestic Servants' Institution," founded in 1846, and I doubt not still in existence. In 1872 their office was at 32, Sackville-street, Piccadilly. By an annual payment, ranging from 3s. to 10s., according to the age of member joining the institution, or one life subscription, ranging from £2 16s. to £8, a permanent pension is secured, by election, when unable for service.

A READER OF THE CHRISTIAN.

RELIGIOUS INTOLERANCE IN SWITZERLAND.

SIR,—May I request a place in your columns for the following remarks upon the letter in THE CHRISTIAN of June 28, headed as above? The announcement made by your correspondent that "English Christians will not find the same liberty as formerly . . . . to preach the Gospel," is certainly calculated to excite alarm, and perhaps deter many from visiting the proscribed Cantons. It is, therefore, needful to make candid inquiry into the facts, and see whether the action taken by the Swiss authorities in any way affects those who are not members of Mr. Booth's Army.

The kindness and hospitality with which missionaries have ever been received by Swiss Christians, and, we may add, the readiness of the people to listen to the strangers, is well known to all who have sojourned in that land of traditional freedom. Perhaps I may say that English Evangelists have hitherto been welcomed with special favour, owing to the grateful remembrance, still cherished, of the labours of the devoted Haldane, and later of Mr. Reginald Radcliffe, whose name has proved a passport for his countrymen holding the like precious faith. Throughout Switzerland we have ourselves met those who could testify of the blessing received in the meetings conducted by this messenger of the Lord, who at that period knew but three words of French:—

Dieu vous aime (God loves you).

Yet, though obliged to speak through an interpreter, always a serious disadvantage, Mr. Radcliffe was listened to respectfully, even by very rough congregations, assembled in the open air, all classes being quieted by the power of the Spirit, so that, as an eye-witness of these great gatherings told me, "Not a sound broke the solemn silence when the preacher paused in his discourse." Thus the Gospel message in its glorious simplicity, unaccompanied by any sensational addresses, melted the hearts of the people, and elicited even from learned sceptics the oft-heard remark, "I wish I could believe it" (see Acts ii. 47, iv. 21, v. 13).

Other evangelists, whose names space forbids my mentioning, have down to the present time had the same experience. Why should the visit of the "Army" produce such an opposite result, i.e.—exasperate, instead of winning favour with the multitude, and close instead of opening doors for their compatriots?

To enable English Christians to form a judgment on this question I shall quote from the official report presented to the Grand Council of the Canton of Neuchatel. Dr. Rouher, the director of public instruction, who presented the report, said:—"The Council of State looked upon the Salvationists at first as a sect of the same nature as those who have established themselves in our Canton for the last fifty years, and determined to give them the full benefit of the law which guarantees to all the free exercise of their religion, under the protection of the State. Later, the perusal of Madame de Gasparin's pamphlet, and of the writings of the Booth family, having proved that this "Army" is a religious corporation proceeding upon the same principles as the Order of the Jesuits, the Council changed their opinion and pronounced the decree of the 22nd of May."

In reply to the minority of fifteen which your correspondent says "represented liberty and order," and combated the resolution passed by the majority of the Council, three Liberal deputies stated:—

"The Salvation Army, so-called, is subversive of public order: (1) By causing scandal and disuniting families; (2) By exciting nervous emotions, and thus causing women to neglect their household duties; (3) This 'Army' is a religious corporation having no constitution, in which no discussion is permitted, and no voting takes place. The principle is absolutism—obedience to a single chief. The Government has been only too slow in stopping their proceedings. The eight gendarmes (policemen) of this city could not have preserved order; special constables would only have exasperated the people still more. Soldiers raised to protect the 'Army' would have refused to march, and we should have risked a civil war."

It was under these circumstances that the Council of Neuchatel, supported by a majority of fifty-seven against fifteen, and solicited by a petition signed by 10,000 citizens, passed the decree which your correspondent describes as a "revolting resolution."

No new law has been framed, nor is that which guarantees the fullest religious liberty to all sects, except the Jesuits, in any way modified! The peculiar military and despotic organisation of Mr. Booth's followers brings them under the penalty of that law framed to prevent the followers of Loyola from establishing themselves in this free and Protestant land where in ancient times they ruled. Christians are now called upon to make common cause with the Salvationists against the "powers that be," but we "must needs be subject not only for wrath, but for conscience sake." (Rom. xiii.)

Beware lest, moved by exaggerated accounts of persecution, we be led into the false step of identifying ourselves with those who claim from a Liberal Government that liberty which they deny to those who join their ranks. Religious despotism has in every age been proved to produce the most terrible results.

Are there not, even in free England, bereaved parents and helpless victims who have but too good reason to regret the liberty, precious as it is in principle, which has permitted Jesuit communities to be established, not subject to the public investigation which, ere their suppression, brought to light on the continent the "hidden things of darkness"?

Let this consideration deter us from condemning the enforcement of a law framed to exclude Jesuits. If Mr. Booth's Army is touched by this law, let this unscriptural and despotic organisation be abolished!

The Reformation introduced religious liberty. One of the fundamental principles of the reformers was that each individual was under the direct guidance of the great Captain of our Salvation and our great High Priest, and that the Holy Spirit was given, not that the whole body should be guided through a general, a pope, and subordinate officers or priests, but that each individual believer might hear the voice of the Good Shepherd and obey Him only.

It is on this point that an enlightened French pastor told me that he at once detected the Jesuitical organisation of Mr. Booth's followers, so that he felt bound to declare openly that such an organisation is entirely subversive of all Protestant principles.

Can we wonder that Swiss Protestants should be startled by such teaching as the following? "No man taketh unto himself this honour . . ." Heb. v. 4.; "God has as much appointed HIM (the General) to this work as He appointed Aaron to the priesthood . . .;" "If a female captain of a Salvation Army Corps, with two or three hundred men at her heels, ready to do whatever she tells them, is not a captain, then tell me what she is." (Mrs. Booth on Recent Criticisms.)

Much has been said about the meeting in the Methodist Chapel, Rue Roquepine, Paris, on June 12. We quote from the Semaine Religieuse, June 23:—"The female officers of the 'Army' gave a Conference in the Wesleyan Chapel. . . . in which these ladies related in their own way their campaign in Switzerland. As to the Maréchale, she continues to assert that she was expelled from Switzerland because she succeeded where the pastors had failed. O sancta semplicitas! . . . Let Miss Booth beware how she imitates Mr. Railton's example in making strangers believe that our pastors were jealous of her success. At the very moment when sixty pastors of the Canton of Neuchatel have put themselves in the breach to defend liberty of action for the Salutistes, thus braving public opinion which has arrayed 10,000 petitioners against them, such an accusation is not only absurd, but indicative of the basest ingratitude, and the candid ingenuousness of the young prophetess would scarcely suffice to absolve her from the condemnation due to such conduct."

I was present at this meeting, when Miss Booth, with Miss Charlesworth at her side, read Matthew x. 32—42. The latter spoke shortly of the recent events in Switzerland, and boasted that, in spite of the Government, there had been a large meeting of Salvationists on the previous Sunday. Whether this announcement was for the spiritual good of an audience numbering some representatives of the extreme Radical press, whether they were "words of truth and soberness," is a question our readers will answer.

Miss Booth excused herself, on the plea of fatigue, from fulfilling the engagement which had attracted these gentlemen, i.e., that she would at this meeting give an account of her "impressions on the Continent;" but she preached for nearly an hour to a very unquiet and displeased congregation, if we may judge from the remarks we heard.

Collections were made during the service, and at the door and in the entrance hall were sold, not New Testament and Gospel tracts as in other religious assemblies, but the portrait of the Maréchale, and Mr. Railton's controversial tract against the Countess of Gasparin. The remarks we heard were, "All actresses sell their portraits at the door of the theatre." In Protestant churches this is not the custom. In Roman Catholic chapels it is done, but there the preachers are not females!

We left this meeting sad at heart, and more than ever convinced that those who boast of being able to "blow salvation through a town," and "drum the devil out" (War Cry) succeed much as the sons of Sceva did.

Mrs. Booth calls the "Army" God Almighty's rough forces . . . pioneers. Is this true? Then why does the "Army" ever follow in the track of revival and break no fresh ground—never begin where Protestants are not already working? Heathen England—Scotland—Ireland (Protestant parts only)—dare they invade Cork and Galway, where Protestant pioneers have not merely risked their lives? At Paris, in the very quarter where the real pioneers began in 1871, Miss Booth established her headquarters within less than half an hour's walk of seven other popular meetings. "Fort" Oberkamp, about the closing of which so much noise has been made, is within less than four minutes' walk of one of Mr. McAll's first stations, where the meetings continue in quiet.

After the check in Paris—the failure, as all but the members of the "Army" call it—the next point of attack was Protestant Geneva, where popular meetings, attended by many Romanists from the Savoy shore of the lake, are still going on with success. When expelled from Geneva, did this pioneer force attempt to attack the Catholic Tribourg, where they said they were invited? No; they went next to Neuchatel, another centre of Christian work. Driven from Neuchatel, do they return to establish stations in a dark and neglected part of France? No; the next attack is made on Nimes and Valence, the great centres of French Protestantism in the South, where the "Mission Intérieure" has carried on work for many years. Here, we may add, the presence of "the Army" has already troubled this Mission. Mr. Clibborn speaks of the 100,000 Protestants scattered in hundreds of villages in this region, which he longs to occupy. These are not exactly the movements of "sappers and miners, pioneers," as Mr. Booth's forces style themselves!

In conclusion, we entreat Christians not to continue to believe the testimony the Army bears of itself. We ourselves, having been deceived for a time, have to mourn over some we cannot now extricate from the snare, and thus we feel bound to utter a note of warning. G. H. P.

MR. W. D. DUNN. — The recent evangelistic campaign in Edinburgh by Mr. Dunn was most fruitful; from the very beginning the presence and power of God were experienced, and night after night there were many weeping, anxious souls and numbers professed faith in Him. The meetings for believers were rich in blessing. A good many of the students came to the Bible-readings and professed to receive fresh power and blessing, to live for Him. Mr. Dunn commenced in Paisley-road, Glasgow, with the Rev. J. Riddel, on Monday week. The Lord has been working in a wonderful way! Prayer is asked for continued blessing.

DEATH OF MR. NORWOOD EARLE.—Many of our readers will regret to hear of the sudden death of Mr. Norwood Earle, a well-known evangelist of the Evangelisation Society. He died on Tuesday, the 3rd inst., of heart disease, without any illness or previous warning, aged forty-three. He had preached three times on Sunday, July 1, in Wiltshire, and a large number of his Sundays, to the end of the year, were already secured for meetings in London and various parts of the country. His death has cast a great gloom over Dover, with which town he was intimately associated, and over Acton, where he lived. We regret to say that he leaves a large family of nine children, for whom scarcely any provision is made.

Notices of Books, &c.

THE CONGREGATIONAL PSALMIST; a Supplement, containing 149 additional Tunes, to Dr. Allon's popular manual of praise, is issued by Messrs. Hodder & Stoughton. Compressed score, price 8d.

THOUGHTS ON IMMORTALITY. THOUGHTS ON THE SUPPER OF THE LORD. By Rev. J. C. RYLE, D.D. W. Hunt & Co. Both eminently Scriptural and Evangelical in their teaching and tone. Their wide circulation can only be productive of good.

OUTLINES OF OLD TESTAMENT STUDY, HISTORICAL AND CRITICAL. G. Morrish. A useful compendium of information as to the literary and critical aspects of the Bible. Specially so in view of the Revised Version soon to be issued. Those who desire to become acquainted with the Hebrew original will find valuable hints as to its study, while the description of the various canons and versions of Scripture is very instructive and helpful to the English reader.

STREET CHILDREN, SOUGHT AND FOUND. By A DELVER. Simpkin, Marshall, & Co. This little book is a story of the work being carried on at the Boys' Home, in Wood-street, Manchester, and contains facts well adapted to win sympathy from all readers with that and kindred institutions. We should like everyone who has a heart needing to be stirred and warmed in reference to philanthropic efforts like those Mr. Alsop describes, to read these narratives. It could not fail to convince them that such work is not only Christlike and divine in its spirit, but also the most practical and remunerative in its human results.

SELECTIONS FROM THE WRITINGS OF ARCHBISHOP LEIGHTON. Edited, with memoir and notes, by WILLIAM BLAIR, D.D., Dunblane. One of the series of Evangelical classics published by Macniven & Wallace, Edinburgh. It is beautifully got up as to its external appearance, ably edited, and altogether a volume to be treasured and read again and again. Leighton's works are among the richest and ripest of the Puritan class, and we can well understand the passage in Henry Martyn's Diary, which says, "Read Leighton, and found the writings of that holy man blessed to my spirit's real good." Our readers will be thankful to have their attention called to this charming relic of such an author's life-work.

BOOKS FOR THE HOUSEHOLD. Several useful little books have lately been issued that deserve the special attention of housewives and others engaged in preparing the food and drink of the people. TEA, THE DRINK OF PLEASURE AND OF HEALTH, by W. GORDON STABLES (1s., Field & Tuer), is a very chatty, amusing, and instructive dissertation on the history and virtues of this popular beverage. A CUP OF COFFEE (1s., T. Fisher Unwin), is an equally attractive compendium of the career of another popular drink, giving many of the historical, social, and literary associations that cluster around the coffee-houses of London and Paris. It is the first of "The Cup that Cheers" series. Mr. Fisher Unwin sends out another novelty—AMERICAN DISHES, AND HOW TO COOK THEM; from the recipes of an American lady. 2s. 6d.

ARE MIRACLES CREDIBLE? By the Rev. JOHN JAMES LIAS, M.A. Hodder & Stoughton. 3s. 6d. The above work is a further contribution to the Theological Library Series, now in course of publication by this well-known firm. It does not profess to deal exhaustively with the question of miracles, although its readers will find a very fair and candid presentation of the subject is laid before them by the author. "The plan of the work is as follows: It commences with a definition of the word to be discussed; it next enumerates the various objections brought against miracles, it proceeds to discuss (a) the possibility of, and (b) the evidence for, miracles. It next goes on to ask the reason why miracles have been worked, and why they have ceased to be worked, and concludes with showing the moral necessity for miracles." The author has in no case strained his points—indeed, sometimes we are disposed to think he is too ready to make concessions to opponents—but he has furnished a popular and yet thoughtful argument for the supernatural element of the Bible records, which cannot but serve to confirm the wavering, and in many cases convince the sceptical mind. There is an interesting and suggestive chapter on Special Providence, and Prayer for temporal blessings. It is a book which may be wisely placed in the hands of thoughtful young men, and indeed of all who are exposed to the sceptical tendencies of our times. It is by no means dry or uninteresting, but, on the contrary, pleasant and attractive in its style.

THE LIFE AND WORDS OF CHRIST. By CUNNINGHAM GEIKIE, D.D. Hodder & Stoughton. 2 vols., 16s. A new and cheaper edition of a well-known work, one which has already become a standard book on the grand theme it embraces. The author says in his preface, "I have tried in this book to restore, as far as I could, the world in which Jesus moved, the country in which He lived, the people among whom He grew up and ministered, the religion in which He was trained, the Temple services in which He took part; the ecclesiastical, civil, and social aspects of his time; the parties of the day, their opinions and their spirit; the customs that ruled; the influences that prevailed; the events—social, religious, and political—not mentioned in the Gospels, that formed the history of his lifetime, so far as they can be recovered." In his pursuit of these objects Dr. Geikie has been most successful, the results of his efforts being to present us with a biography of our Lord's human life and character which we deem unsurpassed, if not unrivalled, by all the similar attempts which have been made. It is a marvellous feature in that wonderful life that so many records of it have been made, and yet its suggestiveness is not exhausted. As the writer says again in his introduction, "The freshness and interest of the name of Jesus, and its power as a great factor in the spiritual history of the world, increase with each generation." To the proof of this statement in reference to our own times Dr. Geikie has contributed most emphatically; and those who desire to grasp the significance of the inimitable records of the Gospels cannot do better than avail themselves of the help afforded by this really valuable book. Its scholarly and devout, yet simple and popular style, makes it most attractive reading; whilst the wide research the author displays, not only in the continuous narrative, but also in the voluminous notes appended, make it instructive and informing to the mind on almost every point involved. The costliness of the work has hitherto placed it beyond the reach of a great number of readers, and we doubt not a large sale will reward the publishers for their endeavours to enable all who wish it to become possessed of it. We cordially welcome its re-issue, and commend it heartily to all, specially to Sunday-school and Bible-class teachers.

MORE JULY MAGAZINES.

THE QUIVER, (6d., Cassell & Co.) has a full supply of good reading, well mixed. We would direct special attention to the two sketches of life among the London poor—one referring to the East, and another to the West End. "A Nest by the Sea," with its illustration, will awaken feelings of envy and desire in many a city-bound spirit. LITTLE FOLKS (6d.) begins a new volume, and furnishes a rare fund of fine things for little readers, they will be sure not to overlook the "Prize Competition." THE SUNDAY AT HOME (6d., Religious Tract Society) has a delightful discourse from the pen of Rev. Dr. Maclaren, on "The Looks of Jesus." Rev. J. Mackenzie has a timely article on "Bechwanaland and the Bechwana Tribes."

GOOD WORDS (6d., Isbister & Co.) has many articles of high literary merit. The instalment of Mr. Besant's brilliant tale will be specially interesting to ambitious young authors. "Some Italian Memories," by the editor, is charmingly written and illustrated. "Home Industry for Irish Children," by Mrs. Jebb, is of present and practical importance. Dr. Boyd's brief paper, "How can they do it?" in THE SUNDAY MAGAZINE (6d., Isbister), will have a melancholy interest for many readers. Among other good things in the same number, are a sketch of the late Lord Lawrence, a short sermon by the late Thomas Jones, and a chapter of East End life by the graphic writer, Rev. A. R. Buckland. THE ROSEBUD (3d., J. Clarke & Co.) will amuse the small people in the nursery on rainy days, when they cannot indulge in outside recreations.

We have also received the following:—Church Standard, Hand and Heart, Church of England Temperance Chronicle, Sunday School Chronicle, Churchman's Family Bible, Part I.; Band of Hope Chronicle, On the Road, Herald of Peace, British Friend, Western Temperance Herald, Sunday School World, Onward and Upward, Messiah's Witness, Postman, A Calm Plea, Day of Days, Home Words, Evangelical Christendom, Reformatory Journal, God's Glad Tidings, Believer's Pathway, Evangelist, Sabbath School Magazine, Preacher's Analyst, Delving and Diving, Sunday School Magazine, Clergyman's Magazine, Church Missionary Intelligencer, South American Magazine, Old Jonathan, Our Own Magazine, Children's Record, Friend of Missions, Our Highways and Bye-ways, Juvenile Instructor, Child's Own Magazine, Temperance Record.

HYDE PARK HALL MISSION.

THE annual meeting of the above work was held at Stafford Rooms, on Thursday evening last, T. A. Denny, Esq., in the chair.

Mr. Charles Cook gave a brief résumé of the work for the past ten years, which began by preaching in Hyde-park, and has grown into its present dimensions, filling the large music hall in the Edgware-road, Hyde-park Hall, and almost nightly meetings are now held in Hyde-park. The results of the work are seen in the fact that evangelists and missionaries raised up in the work are labouring in America, Jamaica, France, and at home; several have given themselves to Colportage work, and others are in colleges training for the Lord's service.

Mr. Cook gave an account of £2627 19s., which had been carefully spent, and closed by saying that, by permission of the Secretary of State, he had visited all the convict prisons of England, and, besides other countries, had lately been through the French prisons, where he found the prisoners without Bibles or Prayer Books, and was told that no one ever preached to them, nor was anyone ever allowed to speak to them on religious matters. Having a special permit from his Excellency the Minister of the Interior to inspect the prisons, he gave away Gospel books and tracts to the prisoners, no one hindering him. Out of £90 given to him for personal expenses, he had spent £55 in visiting and helping convicts.

Mr. T. A. Denny bore testimony to the need and usefulness of the work, of which he knew a great deal, mentioning that some of his own household had been converted through its means.

Mr. Gawin Kirkham spoke of the need, responsibility, and success of the work, and the Chairman having asked any present who had been blessed by its means to rise and say so, many bore testimony of having been brought to Christ. Mr. A. Woods and Dr. Elliott also spoke, special mention being made of the highly trained choir, whose services were of so much value to these meetings. Seventy-five pounds were gathered towards the heavy expenses of the work, the meeting closing by the workers singing the Anthem, "Daughter of Zion."

Meetings are now held in Hyde-park, near Brook-street, every Sunday, Monday, Wednesday and alternate Fridays, at 7.30, and in Hyde-park Hall every Sunday, Tuesday, and Thursday, at eight. Friends will be welcomed. C. C.

Mission and other Appeals.

BILLINGSHURST.—M. J. A. Hide, Glebe House, Billingshurst, Sussex, says:—"We are just now endeavouring to raise funds for building a school-room for the use of our Sunday-school, and as we are a very poor people we should be glad of any help the Lord's people may be kind enough to send us."

CHURCH OF ENGLAND SCRIPTURE READERS.—An appeal is made by Mr. Robert Hanbury for contributions toward the expenses of this Society. Rather than reduce the number of readers the reserve fund has begun to be used. Help is therefore greatly needed if the work is to be extended, or even kept up to its present strength. The office is 56, Haymarket, S.W.

AGED CHRISTIAN BLIND.—Permit me to call the attention of your readers to an appeal made in your columns on behalf of the North London Home for Aged Christian Blind Women. Our object is to obtain possession of Freehold Premises offered in the neighbourhood, and so to render our work permanent. During the three years of our existence as an institution we have enjoyed many tokens of God's approval, and we trust our present appeal will elicit a hearty response. Our object is to shelter Christian women, aged and blind; and this we do wherever credible evidence is given, and without respect to denominational distinctions. The management is conducted with great singleness and devotion, and the comforts of the inmates are studied. God has mercifully met all the needs of our work thus far, and in this new effort we believe we are following his guidance. Help from loving hearts will be gratefully welcomed.—J. R. WOOD, 56, St. John's-park, N.

EAST LONDON TRACT SOCIETY AND CHRISTIAN MISSIONS.—The workers are greatly in need of funds and tracts to carry on this important work in the East End. A good work is being done amongst policemen, railway men, firemen, sailors, in docks, in cemeteries, hospitals, parks, and there are about 3000 families in addition to the above regularly visited every week. Contributions, tracts, clothing, &c., may be sent to the superintendent, G. J. FULLER, 34, Cawdor-street, St. Leonard's-road, Poplar, E.

JEWISH WORK IN NEW YORK.—Rev. Jacob Freshman, of New York, has come over to England that he may see the work carried on among the Jews at Mildmay and other places, as he has given himself to this work among his brethren in New York, having resigned a pastorate for that purpose. He is dependent upon the Lord, through his people, for the support of this effort. He requires £5000 for a house to carry on the Mission, and will be glad of the sympathy of English Christians. In a report just issued the Committee says: "The Rev. Jacob Freshman, a Hebrew Christian and minister, is known to us as a faithful preacher of the Gospel, and an ardent missionary among the Jews. We feel the need of such a missionary in this city, where 80,000 Jews reside; and, with our own personal support, commend Mr. Freshman to our brethren for this work, having confidence that he is called of God to enter upon this important field." Mr. Freshman's address is 25, Seventh-street, New York, U.S.A. He is now in England, and any communication may be addressed to our care.

An Open Door of Service among Christ's Little Ones.

THE VILLAGE HOME FOR GIRLS, AT ILFORD,

Is now quite full, while every day urgent applications are received on behalf of needy Candidates for admission.

But, three and a half additional acres of Land have been obtained close to the Village, on which to erect Fifteen Fresh Cottages, and needful School Buildings.

A Lady near Newcastle has just given £600 to supply one of the first of these.

It is thought that there are some readers of THE CHRISTIAN who, knowing the need, may wish to contribute a small House to hold 20 Little Girls, to be snatched by Christ's servants from positions of danger or suffering, and trained in Christian ways.

If promises enough were received soon, the work could be begun during this fine weather; and next summer would, if God wills, see the Fifteen Houses taken possession of for their holy purpose.

Communications are invited, and may be addressed to

T. J. BARNARDO,
18 & 26, Stepney Causeway, London, E.

Bible Studies

at NORTHFIELD.

BY D. L. MOODY, AND OTHERS.

"The Conference of Christian workers at Northfield, Mass., during the month of August, 1881, was a gathering of more than transient interest. The large experience in Gospel activities of those who presented the various topics, gave a peculiar competency to their words and specially adapted them to the instruction and upbuilding of all engaged in Gospel work."

BOOKS FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

GEORGE WHITEFIELD: HIS LIFE AND TIMES.

By J. R. ANDREWS. Cheap Edition, 6d.; with Portrait, Cloth limp, 1s.; Cloth board, 1s. 6d.; with Engraved Portrait, Cloth neat, 5s. (post-free).

"Whitefield was not a framer of discipline, not a leader of a sect, not a founder of societies, not a ruler of men, but pre-eminently a winner of souls. Would that such preachers were multiplied in the present day! We thank Mr. Andrews for this seasonable addition to our religious biography. No young preacher or student should be without it. But it possesses an interest far beyond any special class, and deserves a wide and general circulation."—Methodist Recorder.

BY ANNA SHIPTON.

"TELL JESUS."

Recollections of Emily Gosse. Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.; Cloth elegant, Gilt edges, 2s. Also a Cheap Edition for general distribution, price 6d.

"Presents us with notices of a life spent in loving, intimate, and uninterrupted communion with a personal Lord. . . . We have read the book with deep interest. We would that indolent professors might read it and be quickened, and that suffering saints might read it and be comforted."—Christian Times.

WHISPERS IN THE PALMS.

A Volume of Hymns and Poetic Meditations. Printed on Toned Paper, and attractively bound, Gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"A truly pious and Christian mind alone could have uttered these 'Whispers.' They breathe a spirit so pure, and in the richest harmony. . . . The extremely tasteful and elegant style in which this edition has been produced reflects the highest credit upon the publishers."—British Workwoman.

THE BROOK IN THE WAY.

Hymns and Poems Illustrative of the Christian Life. Printed on Toned Paper, and elegantly bound, Gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"A collection of sacred songs, which, as rippling murmurs, are intended to guide the pilgrim to refreshing streams. . . . The waters to which it allures us are evangelically sweet and pure. Whoever listens to these murmurs and tastes these waters cannot fail to be refreshed."—Sword and Trowel.

Books for Children.

"NETTIE'S MISSION" SERIES OF SMALL BOOKS.

Cheap Edition, 6d.; Cloth neat, 1s. each.

"Without exception, among the very best books for children ever published. Nothing better as gift-books for the young can be desired."—Hive.

NED DOLAN; or, "Lead us not into Temptation."

ALICE; or, The Early Crown.

By Rev. H. BURTON, B.A. Tinted Covers, 6d.; Cloth, 1s.

"A beautiful story of a Christian early sainted. It would be an admirable reward-book for thoughtful Sunday scholars."—Methodist Family.

LITTLE BUTTERCUP AND JENNY WREN.

Gilt Edges, with Frontispiece, price 2s. 6d.

By means of this attractive little story the authoress conveys to her youthful readers most impressive and precious lessons of contentment and thankfulness. From the histories of a Bird and a Flower, teachings of deep importance are educed and imparted to the minds of the young.

JOE WITLESS. A Book for Boys.

With Seven Illustrations. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.; Gilt edges, 2s. 6d.

"It is certainly an enjoyable thing to meet with a work professedly for children, written in language and style not only adapted to their capacities, but containing the important truths of the Gospel in a form sure to be acceptable to them."
—Liverpool Daily Courier.

Tinted Covers, 6d.; Cloth, bevelled boards, 1s.

THE CHILD MINISTER. Records of a Young Life.

By ANNA SHIPTON.

"A tender narrative of the life and death of a pious child; calculated to benefit greatly, and to interest little children."—Sword and Trowel.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF JOHN B. GOUGH.

REVISED BY HIMSELF.

Cloth, Bevelled Boards, with Four Illustrations, 3s. 6d.; Cheap Edition, with Portrait, 1s.; Limp cloth, 1s. 6d.

"What need be said of the 'AUTOBIOGRAPHY' itself? It should be read and re-read. It is the record of a life as strange and eventful as it is impressive and instructive. . . . A more perfect knowledge of such a life cannot fail to strengthen the faith of some, and to inspire the zeal of others."—Temperance Record.

BY REV. J. MACPHERSON.

LIFE OF DUNCAN MATHESON, The Scottish Evangelist.

Thirty-sixth Thousand. With Engraved Portrait. Tinted Covers, 1s. 6d.; Cloth neat, 2s. 6d.

THE CHRISTIAN HERO.

A Memoir of Robert Annan, the zealous Evangelist. Large-Type Edition, Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d. Cheap Edition, Tinted Covers, 6d.

"We heartily thank the Rev. J. Macpherson for his well-written, graphic, and telling life of this 'Christian Hero.' It is a book to be read by all."—Baptist Messenger.

HENRY MOORHOUSE, The English Evangelist.

With Portrait. Handsomely Bound in Cloth, Bevelled Boards, 2s. 6d.

"The record is full of interesting incidents from which counsel and encouragement may be gathered; and we heartily commend it to the attention of those who would know what may be done by workers somewhat off the ordinary recognised lines."—The Rock.

BY REV. DR. CULROSS.

JOHN, WHOM JESUS LOVED.

Sketch of the Character, Writings, Theology, and Influence of the Beloved Disciple. New and Enlarged Edition. With Chromo-Lithographic Views of the "Sea of Galilee" and the "Isle of Patmos." Cloth, Bevelled Boards, 3s. 6d.

"This is not a book to be taken up lightly, read hurriedly, and carelessly dismissed. It merits, and will reward, a quiet, thoughtful perusal."—The Record.

"THY FIRST LOVE."

Christ's Message to Ephesus. With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece. Cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

"A clear and thoughtful exposition. Dr. Culross writes in an easy, interesting manner; sometimes quaintly, always pointedly. Many a laggard in the heavenly race would be stirred to activity by reading Dr. Culross' exposition."—Pennel.

"BEHOLD, I STAND AT THE DOOR, AND KNOCK."

Christ's Message to Laodicea. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; Cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

"A most opportune book. Would that every professing Christian would thoughtfully and prayerfully peruse it! Sunday-school teachers also would find it immensely stimulating and reviving."—Hive.

MARY LYON.

Recollections of a Noble Woman. By FIDELIA FISKE. Eleventh Thousand. Cheap Edition, Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth, 1s. 6d.

"Miss Lyon established, and for many years superintended, the Mount Holyoke Seminary, from whence a large number of devoted and earnest women have gone forth to do good service in the Master's cause. The author of the 'Recollections' was herself a pupil of Miss Lyon, and after labouring with much success in Persia, returned to South Hadley to succeed her former instructress."
—Sunday-school Teacher.

FIDELIA FISKE.

The Story of a Consecrated Life. Edited by Rev. W. GUEST. Tenth Thousand. Superior Edition, with Engraved Portrait, 3s. 6d. (post-free). Cheap Edition, Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth, 1s. 6d.

"This charming memoir. . . . It is difficult to conceive of a more entire devotedness to the glory of God and the well-being of man than that which was the life-spring of this remarkable woman."—British Quarterly Review.

FIFTH SERIES OF WEEKLY CASES.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"

WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK

CASE of THOMAS CARLILE BRONCHO-PHTHISIS.

This man is a farm labourer at Handly Wood Farm, Barrow-hill, Chesterfield, in the employ of Mr. H. Marsden. Both Mr. and Mrs. Marsden corresponded with me on his behalf, the patient being an industrious man in whom they took great interest. Mrs. M. also states that she had heard of the case of Mr. B——, of Handly, whose son was in a consumption, and is now quite well.

On the 1st of January, this year, I received a statement of T. Carlile's case. For some years he had suffered from cold upon cold, taken in working at the mines. As regards symptoms, the old story—cough, expectoration, oppressed breathing, night perspirations, pain in the side, with great reduction of flesh, and corresponding weakness.

As the result of my treatment, in less than six weeks the symptoms had much abated. The patient wanted to resume work.

Mrs. M., writing me recently says: "The case of Carlile is a marvel; he has now resumed work. His wife specially asked me to thank you for reducing the charge for the medicine."

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

J. THEOBALD & COMPANY'S SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

THE ACME FIELD GLASS.

THERE are no glasses so highly recommended for power and cheapness as those sold by us. Why is this? Simply because we lay ourselves out specially for this line of business: we determine that we will get glasses of a quality so high and a price so low as to defy competition. The consequence is, we sell thousands where an ordinary optician would sell 10 or 20. Any person calling at our establishment can have over 3,000 glasses to select from, while to keep a stock like this would ruin half-a-dozen ordinary shopkeepers.

Travellers, tourists, and sailors alike speak loud in their praise. They are taken out by enterprising ship captains, and sold for double and treble our prices to passengers on board and travellers across the water.

The ACME FIELD-GLASS will give a splendid view of twenty miles, will show clearly the moving of birds that are but mere specks of dirt against the sky to the naked eye, the flags of a ship when only its topmasts can be seen on the horizon, a church clock three to four miles distant, and, in fact, for tourists, pleasure parties, sea voyagers, &c., it is an indispensable instrument; one which they cannot afford to be without. The object-glasses measure over 1¾ inch across, and these, together with the other lenses, are of the clearest definition and great power. To persons who cannot stand the fatigue of holding a telescope, we especially recommend it. In a neat black leather case, silk-lined, spring-snap, and strap, so that it can be slung across the shoulders. This wonderfully powerful instrument we offer for 15s. 6d., carriage free.

THE MINIATURE ACME

is a much smaller Field Glass, but far more powerful, having twelve best intensely clear lenses (double the number of the 15s. 6d.). The object glasses measure 1¼ inches across, and the entire instrument is only 2¾ inches high when closed, combining the greatest power in the smallest compass. This glass is sold by opticians at 50s., but is offered at the wholesale price of 29s. carriage free, each in silk and velvet-lined case, with strap, &c., as above. This is an opportunity never before offered to the public. The reason we can sell them so ridiculously cheap is because where an ordinary optician disposes of one we sell 500.

THE MINIATURE ACME No. 2.

Specially made in answer to many inquiries. The same size as the 15s. 6s. glass, but with twelve lenses. Gives a much larger view and far greater magnifying power than the 29s. size. An intensely powerful and clear glass. Price 37s., carriage free. Carriage to India on any of these glasses 2s. extra; all other foreign places, 5s. Only an immense sale for these Glasses will pay us at these prices.

All orders to be sent within 28 days, except from abroad, and to be accompanied by coupon.

The Herald of Mercy consisting of Eight Quarto Pages, issued Monthly, commencing with January 1883,

PRICE ONE HALFPENNY.

and several smaller Engravings.

The pages of The Herald of Mercy are devoted to Articles and Poems which present the Gospel in an attractive manner, the burden of each number being the glorious truth proclaimed by Christ in John iii. 16:—"FOR GOD SO LOVED THE WORLD, THAT HE GAVE HIS ONLY-BEGOTTEN SON, THAT WHOSOEVER BELIEVETH IN HIM SHOULD NOT PERISH, BUT HAVE EVERLASTING LIFE."

The Herald of Mercy

CONTAINS

Stirring Narratives,
Pointed Appeals,
Earnest Exhortations,
Tender Warnings, &c., &c.,

both in Prose and Poetry, written expressly for the unconverted.

Each number contains a page

FOR THE YOUNG,

which consists of short Articles and interesting Anecdotes in simple language, with at least one Engraving.

TO TRACT DISTRIBUTORS.

Tract Distributors and District Visitors will find The Herald of Mercy very acceptable and attractive, both to young and old, and many who would refuse an ordinary tract gladly take this paper. It is printed in a good clear type, so as to be easily read, and is suitable alike for House-to-House Visitation; for a Loan Tract; for giving away; for circulation in Hospitals, Infirmaries, and Workhouses; for distributing to Soldiers in Barracks, Sailors in Port, Agricultural Labourers, Mechanics, Factory Workers, and others; and, in fact, for circulation in any and all the channels for which Tracts are usually required.

☛ The matter is so arranged that each number may be cut up into two 4-page or four 2-page Illustrated Tracts.

The Herald of Mercy

will be forwarded to any address in Great Britain, or to any country in the Postal Union, i.e., U.S.A., Canada, France, Spain, Italy, &c., as follows:—

SCRIPTURE READERS' SOCIETY FOR IRELAND.

Supported by Voluntary Contributions.

President—

The Right Hon. the EARL of SHAFTESBURY, K.G.

Established 1822, for the purpose of employing humble Christian men, well versed in the Scriptures, to visit from house to house throughout the country, and visit all denominations. Irish-speaking Readers are sent to Irish-speaking districts when required. The work is carried on in a spirit of love.

Subscriptions or Donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary, Capt. KEARNEY WHITE, 27, Lower Pembroke-street, Dublin; or at 9, Paternoster-row, London.

The Earl of Shaftesbury says in his last letter to the Secretary:—Many thanks for your kind letter, and many thanks to Almighty God for the good intelligence you give me about your Scripture Readers in Ireland. I wish I could more effectively assist you. Your letter is the best thing that I have seen or heard from Ireland.

I enclose my donation, and only wish it was more.—Yours, SHAFTESBURY

N.B.—Friends will please notice the exact title, "Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland," and not as "Irish Scripture Readers' Society."

THE HOPELESSLY INCURABLE. The Unsuccessful Candidates.—The Committee of the Ladies' Samaritan Society of the National Hospital for the Paralysed and Epileptic, 25, Queen-square, Bloomsbury, earnestly plead for Contributions in aid of a collection they are making for the unsuccessful candidates at the recent election of pensioners. There were 44 candidates and only 5 pensions to bestow; 39 poor sufferers were consequently disappointed. To each of these the Committee desire to send a gift of money and they confidently appeal to the sympathy of the kind friends who have assisted at previous elections, and to the public generally. The smallest donations will be thankfully acknowledged by the Committee.

A DAY IN THE COUNTRY would greatly rejoice the poor of the Gee-street Christian Mission, Goswell-road. Please send subscriptions towards it, and for rent of Chapel, addressed to HENRY RUDGLEY, Hon. Secretary, 82, Wood-street, Cheapside; or to ROBERT BAXTER, Esq., Treasurer, 6, Victoria-street, Westminster; or Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, Tritton & Co, Bankers.

KESWICK.—Ninth Annual Convention will be held (D.V.) July 23 to 28.—T. D. HARFORD BATTERSBY, Keswick; ROBERT WILSON, Broughton Grange, Carlisle.—For lodgings apply to Mr. POSTLETHWAITE, Eskin Place, Keswick.

Educational.

TO GODLY PARENTS.—The undermentioned (who is in no way connected with the school) is desirous of recommending an old-established YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S BOARDING SCHOOL, DELIGHTFULLY SITUATED FACING THE SEA on the South Coast, a short run from London, in which a thorough and first-class Education is given, based upon the teaching of the Holy Scriptures.

It is one of the few remaining schools in which the power of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ influences the hearts and conduct of the pupils.

The success, happiness, and training of the Boys have been so remarkable in this School that a BOOK OF TESTIMONIALS GIVEN BY THE PARENTS should be read to appreciate results so unusual. Two Vice-Chancellors have placed their wards as pupils in the school. Reference kindly permitted to Dr. THORN, Paddington, London.

Mrs. BARNEY, Victoria-street, Ipswich.

For Delicate or Backward Youths.

PRIVATE TUITION

must always be far preferable to ordinary school life, where such boys are usually left to the care and tuition of inexperienced and often uninterested Assistant Masters, and to the rough treatment of hardier Schoolmates.

MR. WILLIAM PENN

devotes his personal attention, care, and tuition to such Pupils, of whom he takes only a few, as he desires to preserve the strictly family tone of his home. In the fear and love of God it is sought to train this family, great attention being given to the development of a manly Christian character, and moral training is regarded as more important than mere intellectual requirements. The House is admirably situated on one of the loveliest spots of the Northern Suburbs of London, and commanding an uninterrupted view of many miles. Abundant opportunity for close by. A Carpenter's Shop is fitted up on the Premises, and Pupils are taught Carpentry and Joinery by a competent Tutor. Drawing, Painting, and Shorthand are included in the curriculum. Full particulars on application with References, to parents of Pupils.

PHILOSOPHY

WE have advocated the claims of Magnetic Treatment in these columns by such arguments as are always unanswerable where the subject advocated has passed beyond the theoretical into the proved and practical. We have endeavoured to put the arguments in intelligible language, such as any reflecting reader could comprehend; and we are encouraged by the fact that our labour has not been in vain; but there is yet a class of readers who are not to be convinced by argument or converted by statements of our patients unless made by persons known to them. For the satisfaction of this class of inquirers we have arranged to append a list of 1000 names, some of whom are readers of The Christian, and may be known to other subscribers; these have endorsed the following general statement, and have expressed themselves willing to confirm it by letter or personal interview:—

"We have great pleasure and satisfaction in acknowledging the economy and efficacy of Mr. B. COPSON GARRATT'S Treatment by Magnetism."

AGAIN
THE GROWTH OF POPERY.
By JOHN MILTON.
(First Published 1673.)

1. .....first we must remove their IDOLATRY, and all the furniture thereof, whether idols, or the mass wherein they adore their god under bread and wine.

2. The next means to hinder the growth of Popery will be, to read duly and diligently the HOLY SCRIPTURES, which, as St. Paul says to Timothy, who had known them from a child, "ARE ABLE TO MAKE WISE UNTO SALVATION."

3. Another means to abate Popery, arises from the constant reading of Scripture, wherein believers, who agree in the main, are everywhere exhorted to MUTUAL FORBEARANCE AND CHARITY one towards another, though dissenting in some opinions.....The Gospel commands us to tolerate one another, though of various opinions, and hath promised a good and happy event thereof.—Phil. iii. 15.

4. The last means to avoid Popery is, to AMEND OUR LIVES.....Idolatry brought the heathen to heinous transgression.—Rom. ii. And heinous transgressions ofttimes bring the slight professors of true religion to gross idolatry—1 Thess. ii. 11, 12. Let us, therefore, using this last means,—last here spoken of, but first to be done, AMEND OUR LIVES WITH ALL SPEED; lest through impenitency we run into that stupidity which we now seek all means so warily to avoid, the worst of all superstitions, and the heaviest of all judgments—POPERY.

The Christian.

THE SEVENTY WEEKS OF DANIEL.—2.

SHOWN TO BE COMPLETELY AND ACCURATELY FULFILLED, IN JEWISH LUNAR YEARS.

By DR. ALDER SMITH.

[In last week's CHRISTIAN some proofs were given that the 70 weeks of Daniel must commence with Nehemiah's decree in the year B.C. 444; and that the probable date of the crucifixion of our Lord was A.D. 29.

It was also shown that no calculation in solar years can account for the facts that the 483 years commence in the spring and yet end in the autumn; and that the 486½ years commence and end at the same period of the year—viz., Nisan.]

I HAVE always thought that when the solution of this problem was discovered, the dates would be found to fit in exactly, and that there would be no gap between the end of the sixty-ninth week, and the commencement of the seventieth.

Those who have studied chronology, in connection with the Historical interpretation of prophecy, must have noticed how accurately some of the periods run out in lunar years. Mr. Guinness has so clearly proved this, that I will only mention a few of the important periods in lunar measurement to be found in his work.*

From the accession of Nabonasser, the first King of Babylon—Feb. 26, B.C. 747—to the end of the government of Romulus Augustulus, the last Emperor of Rome—Aug. 22, A.D. 476—is exactly 1260 lunar years; or, "A time, and times, and the dividing of time."

Then, while the Babylonian Empire lasted 210 solar years (from B.C. 747 to 538), the Persian Empire, which followed, and in which the prophecy of the 70 weeks commenced, existed 210 lunar years (from B.C. 538 to 334). Then the duration of the Grecian Empire was 280 lunar years (from B.C. 334 to 63). If we connect the last two measures, during which time the 70 weeks of Daniel chiefly ran their course, we find that the 30 weeks of lunar years (210) of the Persian Empire, and the 40 weeks of lunar years (280) of the Grecian, make exactly 70 weeks of lunar years!

Thus from the capture of Babylon by Cyrus to the capture of Jerusalem by Pompey, was 490 lunar years, or 70 weeks in lunar measurement. It is very remarkable that the period which intervened from the beginning of the Persian Empire—marked at its commencement by Jewish restoration—to the beginning of the Roman Empire, as dated from the subversion of the Grecian Seleucidæ, and the Roman conquest of Syria and capture of Jerusalem, should be seventy weeks of lunar years. The entire duration of the four Empires is also measured in lunar years.

Again, from the overthrow of David's throne, B.C. 602, to the Hegira date, A.D. 622, is 1260 lunar years. From the Hegira era, A.D. 622, to the year 1844, signalised by the Mohammedan decree granting religious toleration, is also 1260 lunar years. From the burning of the Temple by Nebuchadnezzar, B.C. 587, to the capture of Jerusalem by Omar, A.D. 637, was another interval of 1260 lunar years. Mr. Guinness remarks:—"Now lunar revolutions were the chronometric wheels measuring the intervals of the Levitical calendar." We find the Jubilee reckoning commenced with the 10th day of the first month, and ended with the 10th day of the seventh month (day of atonement) in the 49th solar year. But this period was exactly—to a day—50 lunar years. Thus the fiftieth lunar year terminated on the day of atonement, and the jubilee year commenced on that day. Now, Mr. Guinness has shown that from the 1st of Nisan, B.C. 457 (Ezra's decree) to the ascension of our Lord, 41-42 days after the crucifixion date, in the year A.D. 29, was exactly 500 lunar years, or ten times the length of the Jubilee period. Thus—dating from Ezra's decree—the ascension was at the period analogous to the day of atonement in the Jubilee type. This, again, is a strong confirmation that the year of the Passion was A.D. 29.

After noting these facts, can any one doubt that the seventy weeks of Daniel may not also be weeks of lunar years?

I was thus led about two months ago to calculate the periods given in Daniel in lunar years, and discovered the deeply interesting and important facts: that from Nisan, B.C. 444, to Nisan, A.D. 29, is a period of 486½ lunar years, or the 69½ weeks of Daniel's prophecy; and that the 69 weeks ("unto Messiah the Prince") end in the autumn of A.D. 25, which would necessarily be the date of the commencement of our Lord's ministry and his baptism, if the crucifixion took place in A.D. 29!

My first rough calculation was to take the epact (the difference between solar and lunar measurement) of the 70 weeks, or 490 years—viz., 14 years, 7 months, and 8 days—from the 490 years. I thus found that 490 lunar years are equal to 475 solar years, 4 months, and about 3 weeks. Now 3½ lunar years are 3 solar years, 4 months, and about 3 weeks. On subtracting the half-week of lunar years from the 70 weeks of lunar years, I was greatly surprised to find that 486½ lunar years, or 69½ weeks, are equal to 472 solar years—exactly 472 solar years, 5 days, 6 hours.

On working this out, I wrote to Mr. Grattan Guinness, asking him if my calculations were correct, and was greatly interested to have his reply, that as Nisan is regulated by lunar revolutions, Nisan, B.C. 444, was 69½ weeks of lunar years from Nisan, A.D. 29; that both were lunar months, and must be separated by a number of complete lunations, without fractional remainder; and that what I had noticed was "deeply interesting and important."

It is therefore evident that the crucifixion of our Lord at the Supreme Passover (if in A.D. 29) exactly bisects the last week of Daniel's seventy weeks, calculated in Jewish lunar years from the proper decree to build the city, viz., the 20th of Artaxerxes. Thus by taking lunar measurements all the former difficulties are removed.

(1) "The commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem" was the one given in the 20th year of Artaxerxes, when Nehemiah received his commission to build the city, in B.C. 444.

(2) If our Lord was crucified in Nisan, A.D. 29, then the 69 weeks of lunar years, from Nisan, B.C. 444, bring us to the autumn of A.D. 25, which would be the date of his baptism and the commencement of the ministry. This is the explanation of 483 years, commencing in Nisan, or spring, and yet ending in the autumn.

(3) It shows that the seventieth week is past, and that it commenced immediately after the sixty-ninth.

(4) It explains (what is inexplicable if calculated in solar years from either decree) how our Lord was crucified in the middle of a week, in the middle of a year, and at the end of 486½ years, which commenced in Nisan, and yet ended in Nisan. It is very remarkable that 486½ lunar years should be 472 solar years, and that all the events predicted fit in so accurately.

But some may say, What is the practical value of this discovery? Is it not the bearing it will have on the evidence which prophecy gives that Jesus was the Messiah, or the One Anointed, predicted by Daniel to come at the end of the sixty-nine weeks, "To make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness"? (Daniel ix. 24). It appears to me strongly to point to the Divine inspiration of that prophecy, and may, I trust, some day even lead the Jews to recognise how exactly the prophecy of the Anointed One has been fulfilled, in Jewish lunar years, by Jesus of Nazareth.

* "The Approaching End of the Age."

A PLEA FOR RAILWAY MEN.—Mrs. Cambie, 32, York-road, Hove, Brighton, writes pleading with Christians to think of their responsibility toward railway servants, to whom we are so much indebted for safety each time we journey. She has been enabled to do good service among the men at Leeds, and adds:—"Workers are needed to reach these many precious souls. We pray that more hearts may be stirred to 'arise' and help. Those unable for active engagements in the Lord's vineyard would find it a happy and fruit-bearing service to write kindly to our railway men, and give them our Master's invitation, 'Come,' and tell them of Himself, the sinner's 'Rest.' A penny paper with a few tracts once a month to each man would help, also a letter when convenient." Any friend wishing to receive any number of names for correspondence, or kindly willing to help in the work may address Mrs. Cambie as above.

OPEN-AIR MISSION.—The thirtieth annual report of this Mission, illustrated, is full of deeply-interesting matter. At the close of the third decade, the past is reviewed, and a hopeful tone is indulged in. During that period nearly 16 millions of tracts have been put in circulation; more than a thousand preachers have been associated together, and have spread the Gospel in the principal towns in the land; the preachers have been to some extent trained by conferences, lectures, and classes, and so have been better fitted to carry out the work. Thousands of races, fairs, and other special gatherings have been visited with the Gospel, and a multitude of sinners converted from the error of their ways. During the past year no less than 459 towns and villages in 34 counties have been visited by the members, and 271 special gatherings attended for Gospel purposes. All this is recorded in the report under review, with a dozen cases "Found by the Good Shepherd," and other interesting matters. Copies may be had on application to the secretary, Mr. Gawin Kirkham, 14, Duke-street, Adelphi, London, W.C.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS' SERVICE.

THE weak and despised things of this world are still permitted to confound those which are mighty, wise, and learned. Twenty-five years ago a middle-aged man, who, as a metropolitan letter-carrier, delivered letters at my door, consulted me as to his future. His health was evidently breaking, and he felt that the labour and exposure of his calling was shortening his life. He had been a wild youth, the son of a drunken father, but he had many years since been converted under the ministry of the Primitive Methodists—Ranters, as they were then called—had adopted teetotal principles, and had been devoting his spare time to showing to others the way of salvation as it had been revealed to himself. His object in consulting me was to ascertain if it were possible for him to withdraw from his exhausting employment in order that he might, according to his strength and for what remained of his life, devote himself more directly to evangelistic work. I will only add that, like the apostles, he was unlettered, and that, excepting in Divine things, was unlearned.

I advised him to consult a medical friend and school-fellow of mine, who examined him, and reported his lungs affected, and certified him a fit object for retiring from the postal service. I then introduced him to the head of the Inland Department of that service, and John Wilson—for that was his name—was permitted to retire on a trifling pension, which he settled on his wife and four children, believing that his days were numbered, and resolving to throw himself on the Lord for support as a lay missionary. That there was good work to which he was called soon become evident. After a brief rest and residence in his native air of Staffordshire, his health improved, and a benevolent Quaker, moved by his manifest earnestness, offered him a modest salary as town missionary at Leighton Buzzard, leaving him free to work in connection with the denomination which he naturally preferred. A revival of religion speedily resulted in that town and neighbourhood, and after thrice enlarging the Primitive Methodist place of meeting, it was resolved to erect a new and larger chapel, with school-room, in the opening services of which I took part.

The influence of this revival extended into the surrounding districts, and as converts were gathered by street-preaching, singing, and domicilliary visitation, churches were formed, and chapels and school-rooms erected in the following places, viz., Linslade, Billington, Hockliffe, Heath and Reach, Woburn Sands, Crawley, Brickhill, Fenny Stratford, Stantonbury, Newport Pagnell, and Liddington. These churches were gathered into the Leighton Buzzard Circuit, in accordance with Methodist polity. The cost of the chapels and schools so erected was £5,058, towards which £3000 was at once raised, chiefly by Wilson's instrumentality, and to a great extent was contributed by friends outside his denomination, out of respect to his character, and confidence in his work. I may mention, that being called upon to vouch for the bona fides of the work, I devoted a long summer's day and a pair of good horses to visiting each of these chapels, the commemoration stones of some of which I had been invited to lay.

Mr. Wilson, having lost by death one of his principal pecuniary supporters, he offered his services to the General Missionary Committee of the denomination, who appointed him to the Kingston-on-Thames Mission, at that time in a weak and depressed condition. The room at Surbiton, however, soon became too small for the attendance; and a Baptist Chapel being offered for sale Wilson had faith to purchase it, and to devote it to his Mission. The work extended here in Surrey as it had done in Bedfordshire. A new chapel was erected at Kingston, and others in succession at Worcester Park and Long Ditton. Wilson then felt himself strongly moved to mission the large pleasure town of Richmond, where he noticed a large amount of Sabbath-breaking and indifference. He commenced, as before, by open-air work, and then rented for twelve months a vacant hall. A church being gathered, he set to work to erect a commodious chapel and school, which cost about £2,600, one half of which sum he personally collected. He then crossed the Thames and missioned Hounslow, pursuing the same course with the same success, and provided a home for those gathered at a cost of about £2000.

He was then removed by the Committee to North Bow, where he commenced without a single associated member, and where his health broke down. He succeeded, however, in raising £800 towards the object, which has been carried to a successful issue by the Rev. J. Porter and others, who entered into his labours. Leaving London, he next missioned the town of Staines, where a church was gathered, and a chapel and school were erected at a cost of £800, all of which has been collected. He then visited Chertsey, which he did not leave until a substantial chapel and school had been erected at a cost of about £1000; also a Mission Hall in connection at Shepperton-green, at a cost of £270. He then crossed again into Middlesex, and laboured among a population of brick-makers at Southall, where many were gathered into fellowship, and a chapel and school were erected. At all these places he raised or sustained the Temperance standard in connection with Gospel work. Wilson, after this period of twenty-five years' work as lay missionary, and forty-eight years' work in all, has been retired as a missionary at the recent Primitive Methodist Conference at Hull, when a lengthened record of his work was read, and testimony was given by the leaders of the Conference to the blessing which had accompanied his labours.

He receives on retiring a pension of £24 a year, which I need hardly say is quite inadequate to support himself and afflicted wife, and which I trust may be supplemented by those still living, who have noticed his work, who respect his character, and value his acquaintance.

I will only add that though retired officially, and free to serve his Master as opportunity shall offer, Wilson will not rest from labour, being one of those who

"Their labour with their lives lay down."

I have submitted the foregoing brief sketch of a life greatly blessed by the Great Head of the Church, thinking that while it may promote the Divine glory, it may tend to the encouragement of others to labour and to trust, in the conviction that believing work will not be in vain in the Lord.

London, July 2. BENJAMIN SCOTT.

CHRISTIAN CONVENTION IN NORWICH.—We are pleased to hear that these gatherings were very successful, and distinctly marked with the impress of Divine approval. We are compelled to postpone further notice.

THE CONTAGIOUS DISEASES ACTS. — Dr. Temple, the Bishop of Exeter, has, with other local persons of influence and position, signed a memorial to the Home Secretary, as follows:—"Your memorialists understand that a wish has been expressed to you by several of the Exeter magistrates that the Contagious Diseases Acts should be applied to this city. We do not share this wish, and our hope is that the Acts will be repealed instead of being extended to new districts."

DAMNATION AND SALVATION.

[Having seen a MS. called "MIRACLES OF MERCY," by the author of "CLEAR SHINING LIGHT" (memoir of the author of "GOD'S TENTH"), we print this incident from amongst others full of interest, with the hope that our readers may wish to see more, and send sufficien, orders to Miss Leakey, 26, East Southernhayt Exeter, AT ONCE, so that she may be encouraged to publish the book this coming season. Price 3s. 6d.]

LATE one dark winter's night a violent ringing was heard at our front door, and on opening it a middle-aged man, in a most excited manner, inquired for "Miss Leakey, the lady that saves poor women." "I must see her, and at once." My sister descended and asked the man in, who dragged into the dining-room, as well, a poor, cowering female.

"Ma'am," he said, "I've been preaching damnation to this 'ere woman, poor thing, for the last hour or two—yes, eternal damnation, as I wants to save her."

"My good man," said my sister, "surely you are wrong to preach that; why don't you preach about Christ, who saves all who come to Him? 'Come unto Me,' says the Lord Jesus, 'and I will give you rest.' Poor woman, come to Jesus."

"Well, ma'am, damnation first, then point them to Christ. However, I've saved her! I was walking up the canal banks, when I sees the poor thing a-running to drown herself. I seized hold on her, and told her "damnation would be sure to follow drowning." I've shook her that there over hell, as has so frightened her, as have made her give in, and here she be, 'a-willing' to go to your home. Will you take her in?"

"Certainly we will."

I forget whether my sister accompanied the well-meaning man and his scared protégée, but housed she was, and carefully taught, not condemnation, but salvation through Christ. "Repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ." She became very ill from that night's exposure to the fury of the winter's blast, and our kind and devoted chaplain visited her constantly, and uplifted the Crucified One before her.

She was inconsolable, on account of "my sin, my guilt," and at last, poor thing, she went raving mad, and had to be removed to the Pauper Lunatic Asylum, where she died two years afterwards. But who shall say that in the ages to come Sarah Prider may not welcome that godly Wesleyan who rescued her from suicide, and my sister, who welcomed her home, and the good chaplain, who so constantly repeated in her ear, "Behold the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world."

"Owning her weakness,
Her evil behaviour,
And leaving with meekness
Her sins to her Saviour."

AN OPEN-AIR PREACHERS' HOLIDAY.—On Wednesday, the 11th inst., about 250 members of the Open-air Mission went for their annual excursion to Leggatt's, Potter's Bar, by invitation of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Gurney Sheppard. Probably it was the largest gathering of open-air preachers in our time, because it must be remembered that members of the Open-air Mission are not the subscribers, but the preachers of the Mission. Dinner and tea were served in a tent, and the day was spent in recreative games, though two deeply-interesting prayer-meetings were held, one in a wood and one in a tent. The group was photographed after dinner by Mr. Eason, of Dalston. After tea short addresses were given by Mr. John MacGregor, the honorary secretary, Mr. Sheppard, the Rev. G. S. Batty, and Rev. G. H. Watkins, neighbouring clergymen. Among other things it was announced that the Secretary, Mr. Gawin Kirkham, was going to Canada and the United States for three months, sailing on August 30, in the Circassian, from Liverpool to Quebec.

THE DAY OF REST.—2.

THE CHRISTIAN ELEMENT.

IN the previous remarks the seventh day is regarded with reference to God as the Creator, and to mankind as his creatures. Let us now observe what is recorded in the New Testament with reference to the first day of the week.

In Mark xvi. 9 we read: "Now when He was risen early on the first day of the week." Mark xvi. 12, and Luke xxiv. 13: On the same day the Lord Jesus joined two disciples as they went to Emmaus, and afterwards was known of them in the breaking of the bread. John xx. 19: "The same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, Jesus came and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, 'Peace be unto you.'" John xx. 26: "And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them. Jesus cometh, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst and said, 'Peace be unto you.'"

Acts ii.: The Holy Spirit was given on the day of Pentecost, which was on the first day of the week. Acts xx. 7: "Upon the first day of the week we were gathered together to break bread," that is to say, such was the leading though not the only object, for Paul discoursed with them, as well as broke the bread, and afterwards he talked with them a long while ere he departed on his journey. 1 Corinthians xvi. 1, 2: Concerning the collection for the saints at Jerusalem, Paul gave order that upon the first day of the week each one of the disciples at Corinth should lay by him in store as he may prosper, that collections might not be made when the Apostle came. And Revelation i. 10: The Apostle John "became in spirit on the Lord's day." "Lordly day" are the actual words used, and seem to distinguish the day from the extended period of time meant by the expressions "that day" and "the day of the Lord," as in Zechariah xii., xiii., and xiv., and 2 Peter iii. 10.

The day which tells of rest, and the day which tells of the Lord's resurrection, have for many centuries been put together as one day, now called Sunday. As the day of rest, it retains its original ideas of rest, blessing, and sanctification to God; and as the Lord's day it has connected with it the additional truth that Christ is risen, and the truths resulting from that glorious fact.

Christ is risen: There was worship before; now we can say (1 Peter i. 3), "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who according to his great mercy begat us again unto a living hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead."

Christ is risen. Therefore (1 Cor. xv. 17) believers are not in their sins; for He, as typified by the goat that was slain, has died for them, and, as typified by the scapegoat, has made an atonement and put away their sins for ever.

Christ is risen, and his people (Eph. ii. 6) are raised up with Him; and (Col. iii. 1) should seek the things that are above where Christ is, seated on the right hand of God. We wait for the redemption of the body, but Christ is risen (1 Cor. xv. 20), the first-fruits of them that are asleep, and therefore they that are Christ's will be raised at his coming.

Christ is risen. The Lord's Supper was instituted on Thursday evening, but was never partaken of in particular on that day. Disciples came together (though there is no rule in Scripture as to days or frequency) on the first day of the week to remember Him who died for us and rose again, and thus proclaim the Lord's death till He come.

Christ is risen, and to Him all authority has been given in heaven and on earth; and we on the first day of the week especially, though not exclusively, spread the glad tidings of God's salvation which He hath prepared before the face of all people, a light for revelation to the Gentiles and the glory of his people Israel. The promise made, God hath fulfilled in that He hath raised up Jesus again.

These truths should indeed dwell in our minds and hearts every day. Let them also give the special tone to our life on Sunday, as an addition to the truths before remarked upon, of rest, blessing, and sanctification to God. Let us individually live in harmony therewith. But, more than that, let us also be increasingly concerned that our neighbour may participate in the comfort and the good with us. If anyone repeats the question, "And who is my neighbour?" well, they are those who dwell in our homes—who live in our neighbourhood—who are employed in our railways—who work our omnibuses—who drive our cabs—printers, copyists, postmen, boatmen, servants at hotels and public-houses, tradesmen, tradesmen's boys, &c.

How greatly toiling man needs the advantages which God in his considerateness designed! What a loss if he does not possess them! How serious if we ourselves should be a hindrance to Him! True principles spread in connection with the lives of those who profess to hold them. Others expect to see a personal consistency between principles and practice.

Let it also be seen that regard to God in this matter is not only a right but a good thing; that there is a comfort in the day of rest, a special happiness to be found during its hours, a joy in using it after a godly sort and for Christian purposes, also remembering that the Son of Man is Lord even of the Sabbath. There may be need for personal reform in many of us in this matter. I will only point out one instance, namely, the habit, increasing in extent, of God's servants travelling to their service on Sunday. Is not the soul of a cabman who takes a preacher to address an assembly as precious as the souls of those assembled? Shall one be endangered that others may be saved? Are the eternal interests of railway men of little account? As a matter of influence, if it were known that the preacher had come to a friend's house, or even to a lodging, near the place of service the day before specially to avoid forming one with others in employing men on Sunday, would it not be for God's glory? and perhaps the speaker's own spirit would be in greater harmony with the intense solemnity of the work of addressing fellow men on subjects so momentous as their eternal condition than, possibly, it is after forming one with a body travelling for their own gratification.

Apart from this particular application of the subject, let us all consider that he is a true neighbour to another who with inward feeling considers his need, and shows mercy to him by doing his best for his relief and for his moral and spiritual health; and let us avoid doing any acts which may be a hindrance to his respite from toil here, or to his soul's eternal welfare hereafter.

Let us also as a nation acknowledge God, from whom cometh every good and perfect gift, as having designed that for a certain period of time man should refrain from the ordinary pursuits of life, and should use it specially for God. Therefore let our laws be such as harmonise with God's will, and give effect to his loving desire for the special good to our race on that day. By contrasting the families and individuals who do, or do not, regard the seventh day according to its original ideas, with the superadded Christian element through the resurrection of Christ, it will be seen, though in varying degree, that there is in general a different tone, a more reverential spirit, less restlessness, and a deeper sense of God, about the former than about the latter. But I exempt from all remarks any one who, seeking to please God, and to live with a good conscience according to his understanding of the truth, sees differently to what has been expressed. To his own Lord the servant stands or falls.

AGED PILGRIMS' FRIEND SOCIETY.

THE Aged Pilgrims' Asylum, Hornsey-rise, was visited on the 6th inst. by a number of its friends and supporters, on the occasion of the anniversary meeting of the institution. The society was instituted in 1807 for giving life pensions, ranging from five to ten guineas a year, to the aged Christian poor of both sexes, and of every Protestant Evangelical denomination. In addition, there are special funds in connection with the asylums for the purpose of supplying coals to the aged inmates, and providing nurses, medical attendance, and other comforts to the sick and infirm. In the afternoon the visitors and pensioners assembled at service in the chapel, conducted by Rev. G. Hazlerigg, of Leicester. At five o'clock the visitors sat down to tea, and at half-past six a public meeting was commenced in the lecture-hall. After singing and prayer, the annual report was read by the secretary, Mr. J. E. Hazleton. It stated that the institution, while all the pensioners were Christians, was undenominational, and thus had a claim upon all the denominations. At present there were 1009 pensioners on the books. For the year £6156 was distributed in pensions alone, the recipients being destitute aged Christians in all parts of the United Kingdom. Of the pensioners, 170 were in the three asylums, 43 at Camberwell, 7 at Brighton, and 120 at Hornsey-rise. Among the inmates there had been 12 deaths during the year; their average age was 75, the oldest being 88; of their number 31 were in receipt of 10 guineas, 50 of 7 guineas, and 38 of 5 guineas.

The Chairman, referring to the growth of the institution, said the little one had become a thousand, the number of pensioners in 1807 having been only five. Appealing for funds for the local asylums, he said that the expenses of the past year had been £744, of which £300 had been spent in repairs and the maintenance of the building, while the committee had less than £200 a year to depend upon.

Addresses followed from several ministers present, and the meeting closed.

OPEN-AIR MISSION.—Now that the open-air preaching season is at its height, it is very important that funds should be supplied to this recognised organisation for promoting, regulating, and improving such preaching. Contributions may be sent to the secretary, Mr. Gawin Kirkham, at the office, 14, Duke-street, Adelphi, W.C.; to the bankers, Ransom & Co., 2, Pall Mall East, S.W.; or to the office of this paper.

RAGGED SCHOOLS. — The Quarterly Record (July) of the Ragged School Union gives an account of the conference held at Exeter Hall on April 11, and a report of the 39th annual meeting held at the same place on May 7 last, as well as interesting details connected with different schools in the Union. It is published by Messrs. Kent & Co., Paternoster-row. Price twopence. The printed annual report of the Union is replete with interesting work in the various branches carried on. Such a work, which truly aims at the spiritual and moral well-being of the children, deserves the support of Christian philanthropists.

OUR SOCIAL CONDITION.

THE Daily Telegraph of the 11th inst. comments on a plea urged by the Archbishop of Canterbury in favour of State-aided emigration. The Primate, at a recent meeting on behalf of the Rochester Diocesan Society, held at his palace at Lambeth, said that the degraded condition of vast areas of the Metropolis was such as to make them worse than they were in the old Alsatia, "for now there were whole districts of Alsatias in London, and the evil was multiplied twenty times over in this and other great towns." The Telegraph thinks his Grace to be out of his reckoning in such a statement as this, and asks "where these whole districts of Alsatias are." The actual condition of things is probably somewhat overstated in the metaphor employed, the Alsatian régime having long since passed away. We certainly have no communities now where crime and violence are protected by law, and where the vicious classes of society are free to do as they please. But, spite of our modern improvements and effective police supervision, there is still a wide margin left for further remedial action, and the Archbishop does well in calling special attention to the wretched condition of the South and other metropolitan districts.

Until measures are adopted to ameliorate the social condition of hundreds of thousands of people in our cities and large towns, it is hopeless to effect any great work of spiritual Evangelisation among them. Abject poverty, filth, compulsory immorality through close herding together of large families night and day in rooms scarcely large enough to hold two persons in anything like comfort, are facts which shut out Gospel influence, and harden hearts against all attempts to raise the moral tone apart from physical relief. As the Telegraph says:—"There remain, to our shame and sorrow, acres upon acres of buildings demanding improvement—ill-built, ill-ventilated, ill-sanitated, overcrowded neighbourhoods, the bulk of whose inhabitants are miserably poor, and whose lamentable condition might be amended had they commonly decent lodgings to dwell in."

The Daily Chronicle in a recent article also urges closer attention to sanitary education and reform in connection with Mission work. This social problem we are persuaded is one of those the nation is most urgently required to deal with. Let there be no diminution of direct and definite Gospel work; but in order to make it tell where we see deepest need of its sanctifying and elevating power, there must be stricter attention given to the laws which govern health and control the moral and social relations of men. Much more might be done in this direction by district visitors and others who go from house to house among the poor. The inculcation of cleanliness and self-respect upon the women of such neighbourhoods as are visited doubtless requires tact, and is a somewhat delicate task, but it has a foundation in Bible teaching as well as in the practical philosophy of life, and may well go hand in hand with evangelistic effort.

The strong arm of the law might also be more freely employed to compel the demolition of houses unfit for human habitation, and the enforcement of the use of air and water where at present the essential need and value of both are utterly ignored and neglected. Such subjects call for immediate consideration and action by our members of Parliament, philanthropists, house-owners, ratepayers, Christian workers of every kind, and, indeed, by all who have any influence whatever to exert. Emigration must not be looked to to rectify home evils of this sort; it is useless to remove the industrious and skilled members of our poorer classes, and leave the residuum of the squalid, untrained, and unkempt. The social problem has doubtless grave difficulties in the way of its solution, but they are not as yet faced or even recognised except by the few; and what is wanted is a general awakening of the public mind to the pressing need of attention being paid to the matter on a widely extended scale. Our foreign policy claims our regard, but home should stand first with us all; and all honour to men of high position who, like the Archbishop of Canterbury, will go down and see for themselves the real need which exists.

REVIVAL IN SOUTH AFRICA.

THE village of Clumber, and surrounding hamlets, forming the Bathurst Circuit of the Grahamstown district, has been visited with a most gracious revival of religion. A low state of spirituality had for a long time prevailed; the deadness of the Church was quite distressing to those who prayed constantly for the prosperity of Zion. Still, however, there had been earnest seedsowing all this while by the various Wesleyan ministers who had from time to time laboured in the circuit. We often marvel at these things, but "One soweth and another reapeth," is often the Master's plan. In March a young man lately from England, Rev. T. H. Wainman, was sent from Grahamstown as a temporary supply. He brought with him the reputation of a "revivalist," as he had conducted some successful meetings in one of the Grahamstown chapels. Consequently numbers flocked to hear him. While preaching in Clumber Chapel on Sunday, March 18, from the words, "It is appointed unto men once to die," a young man came forward and knelt down, calling aloud for mercy; others quickly followed, until the rail was surrounded with weeping penitents. That night many souls found Christ. Special services were held during that and the following weeks, and on every occasion numbers of souls were saved.

Mr. Wainman subsequently found opportunity to visit the villages of Shaw Park and Bathurst, and the other preaching places in the circuit; the good work extended, and in all instances there has been a gracious ingathering into the Church. The result of these services may roughly be estimated at two hundred and fifty souls. About Clumber, the whole population, with very few exceptions, have been converted, including the majority of the scholars and young persons belonging to the Sunday-school. Even to the natives this awakening has extended, and several conversions have taken place among them, and the good work is still going on. As indications of the genuineness of the work, we would note a spirit of prayer prevails among the people; prayer and experience meetings are well attended; inveterate enemies have lost their hatred, and become firm friends, and among the new converts a strong desire exists to work for Christ in winning souls. Thus God has graciously answered the prayers of his people by pouring out his Spirit on this portion of his vineyard. To Him be all the praise.

GOSPORT.—A very successful Mission has just been conducted by Messrs. Mateer and Parker, from Mr. Spurgeon's College, in Vernon-hall, Stoke-road, Gosport, Hants. June 24, at 5.30 a.m., a prayer-meeting commenced the Mission. At this early hour from 60 to 140 met to ask God's blessing on the special effort. The evening meetings grew in interest and power daily. On July 1, the building was crowded in every corner, gallery and platform packed; people sat outside on forms and listened through the open windows to the Word sung and preached by the evangelists. The Holy Spirit's power was truly manifest, and many souls were brought to Christ. May we ask Christians to pray for our two brethren, and if any should think of inviting them to visit their towns with the hope of obtaining "such a blessing" as we have had, let them fall to very earnest prayer, and soon "such a blessing" will be given.

HOW TO DEAL WITH THE ANXIOUS.

AN ADDRESS BY PASTOR FRANK WHITE AT MILDMAY CONFERENCE.

I HAVE been dealing with anxious souls for nearly twenty-seven years, ever since it pleased God to bring me to the knowledge of Himself, and have long since come to the conclusion that it does not do to lay down any minute rules as to the treatment of such. But may I be allowed to stir up your pure minds as to some of the things which are essential to success if we would be used of God in this work of leading others to the Saviour?

Meeting a lady recently who has been greatly blessed to seekers after salvation, I asked her this question, "How do you begin with an anxious soul?" She paused for some time, and then said, "The first thing I do is to lift up my heart in prayer to God, and ask Him to teach me how to deal with the particular person before me; for I feel it is such a delicate thing to lead, or to attempt to lead, an anxious one to Christ." I think we must take for our motto at the very outset the blessed Scripture which Jonah learnt the truth of, in the place where figuratively every one of us must sooner or later be brought if we are to be really useful in winning souls: "Salvation is of the Lord." When the Apostle Paul was setting forth his relation to a lost world (2 Cor. v. 18) as the servant of Christ, and declaring his message to such, he used this expression, "All things are of God." Now remember, God is first and God is last, and God is all along the path of an anxious soul and the great fear is, lest in our dealing with such we should leave no room for the Divine dealing, and forget that it is not only of God that anxiety is aroused in the soul of a sinner, but that it is of God also that this anxiety can give place to true rest of conscience. It is of God that the prisoner is set free, and He it is who opens the eyes of the blind. It is said of Jesus that "He took the blind man by the hand and led him out of the town." We must honour God if we would win souls; "He that winneth souls is wise." But have we not seen a wisdom which has tended rather to magnify man than God; to emphasise the instrument rather than the Divine hand by which it is held?

Remembering this, then, how should we go to our work? Certainly not in a light and careless way. I have often been shocked in hearing the apparent flippancy with which some have addressed the anxious. There has been an easy, off-handed style as if the whole matter were like two and two making four, forgetting the frightened, confused state of mind of those in whom God's Holy Spirit has revealed perhaps but a glimpse of their true state. I remember the remark of an old Scotch minister, "If you saw a person lying asleep on the edge of a precipice, you would not go up and shout if you wanted to warn him of his danger; you would go up gently, and, speaking tenderly, seek to draw him away from his perilous position." I am aware that we should not lay too much stress on the tone and manner in which to deal with the anxious, but I am quite sure that we should cultivate a reverent and tender spirit when we are seeking to help them to God.

Then, I think, we should seek to avoid a rapid, hurried style. Of course we must be guided very much by circumstances, but I think it is a bad plan to hasten from person to person in a meeting where the Gospel preached has produced an awakening. Some of the longest addresses of the Lord Jesus were given to individuals; see his interview with Nicodemus, as also his talk with the woman of Samaria by Jacob's well.

There is an official and formal style of which I think we ought to beware. I cannot help feeling that what is true when one speaks to a number of people is also true when we are speaking to an individual.

It is a great thing at the first to gain the confidence of those to whom we address ourselves—to make them feel whether they will or not that we are really their friend—to come down, well I will not say to their "level"—I do not like that word; still there is a sense in which we may do so. They can say nothing that we cannot say. If they enlarge upon their sinfulness, we can do so on ours. If they say, "But we are so vile," we can add, "So am I." We should not talk to them as if we were up in the clouds far above them, but as those who have been just where they are—in a pit quite as deep and horrible. Of course we need to adapt our style of speech very much to the station and even sex of the person we speak to, and anything like familiarity or undue freedom cannot be too strongly condemned.

Then there is the verbose, wordy style, lading the inquirer with text after text, argument after argument, talking incessantly oneself, which is often sheer waste of time; for without some knowledge of the exact whereabouts of an anxious soul we only beat the air, and perhaps do more harm than good. Oh, what knowledge of the human heart, what acquaintance with the Word of God, what appreciation of the grace of the Gospel, what discernment, what skill, what patience, what fidelity to God, what faithfulness to man, are needful in dealing with anxious souls! I am afraid lest, in speaking as I do to-day on this subject, some may be discouraged from pursuing this blessed work, and think it requires so much to be successful in it; but they need not be. In using a gift for God it becomes perfected, and we go from strength to strength. I remember one whom Mr. Spurgeon was pleased to call a "Professor of button-hole theology." Why should we not graduate in this school as well as in others?

To deal successfully with anxious souls we must have close dealings with God ourselves. I do not think we can talk well of the Cross of Christ, either to large numbers or to individuals, unless we are often found there ourselves. "I was never fit," says Payson, "to say a word to a sinner except when I had a broken heart myself, and felt as though I had just received pardon to my own soul." "You must have a present sense of God's salvation if you are to be used by Him to others," or, as M'Cheyne said, "you will be like Balaam speaking of a Saviour he did not know; or like Caiaphas, who spoke of the atoning blood of Christ but who had never felt its power." It is by having close communion with Christ yourself that you will be best qualified to win others to Him. You must not only be in Christ, but Christ must be in you. Considering the many stumbling-blocks which arise in the way of an anxious soul, with Satan very near to suggest this and that, we need also that the Word of Christ should dwell in us richly in all wisdom.

In addition to having much communion with God, and strong faith of heart, we should study more than we do to have clear views and thoughts of the Gospel we present. This is as needful when we are dealing with one anxious soul, as when speaking to thousands. Clear words come from clear thoughts, and clear thoughts can only be had by a clear and accurate knowledge of the way of salvation as revealed to us in the Word. There is all the difference in the world between freely using God's Word and the free use of it. We may no more take liberties with texts in dealing with one anxious soul than with a multitude. Text and context must be observed.

Still there are many precious words of Old Testament Scripture which, though referring first to Israel, are applicable also to us. God's way of salvation is not one for the Jew and another for the Gentile. The law was never given for salvation. Thus we shall find beautiful words of help from the Old Testament in speaking to inquirers. In all truly anxious souls, from Adam downwards, the anxiety has arisen from a realisation that they have gone away from God, accompanied by a desire to return if they only knew the way. Here lies the beginning and end of an awakened sinner's anxiety. Let us realise where an anxious soul needs to be brought for true peace. What troubled Adam after his fall? There was a barrier between his soul and God. Thus it is now. Wherefore the Scripture saith, "For Christ hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that He might bring us to God (1 Pet. iii. 8).

A soul that is truly awakened will not be satisfied until it is brought back to God. And God alone brings back to Himself. If we do not realise that "Salvation is of God," with God, and by God, the truly anxious do. I believe immense injury is done in dealing with anxious souls by our endeavouring to take God's place, and trying in our way to bring them to peace and happiness, instead of seeking in God's way to bring them to Himself. Something like this has been said: "If you will only believe this, you will be saved." Only believe what? Well, perhaps the text quoted was from the 53rd of Isaiah, ver. 6, and it was said, "You see, it is written, 'the Lord hath laid on Him the iniquity of us all; and if it was laid on Him, of course it cannot be on you; you believe that, do you not? If you do you are saved" And you keep on persuading him, and imploring him to believe that, and perhaps you succeed; but, what is this but saying, "Only believe you are saved, and you are saved"? We are not called upon to make souls believe this and that, but we are called upon to point them to Christ.

Of course, there is no salvation apart from the substitutionary work of the Lord Jesus. But to point this out to an anxious soul is a very different thing from telling such that all his sins were laid on Christ eighteen hundred years ago (for saying which I find no warrant in Scripture). For in this case every one is surely saved, if only he knew it. Our responsibility is to direct every sinner we meet to the Lord Jesus Christ as to an all-sufficient Saviour, able and willing to save ALL who come to God by Him—to urge immediate faith in Him—declaring on Divine authority that "Whosoever believeth on Him shall not perish but have everlasting life." We are warranted to assert that the moment a sinner relies on Him, who died for the ungodly, the just for the unjust, that moment he is regarded by God as covered with all the value of Christ's perfect obedience unto death. He then is entitled to say, "He bore my sins in his own body on the tree. His death is my death, his life my life."

It is the Spirit of God which gives assurance. When we assure souls they will soon become unassured. The assurance you or I can impart is not worth much. Do we not often fail in dealing with the misery of sin rather than with its guilt? I know in my own case my first thought was, "I am wretched and miserable." I found in Christ that which gave me peace and rest. But great darkness followed, and I had to learn the guilt view of sin, and to see my relation as a sinner to the holy law of God which I had broken. Oh, let us aim to bring souls to Christ as a righteous Saviour from the guilt of sin!

I was told by my dear friend, Mr. Mathieson, that it was probable there would be some anxious souls here this afternoon. I will close with a word to them. If you are anxious you are miserable, but if you are truly anxious you will see that to be happy is not all that you need. You do not want merely pardon, but justification; you want to stand accepted before God; you have an apprehension not only of your being a sinner, but of the inevitable consequences of your sin. You see that God's Word is true, and that you cannot be saved except in a way consistent with his holiness, truth, and faithfulness. Now, we preach Christ to you as an anxious soul. Take the preaching in Scripture; it is full of objective truth. It is objective truth that produces subjective experience. I remember a little girl asking me the way back to her grandmother's. There were so many turnings she could not recollect them all. When I undertook to take her back, she felt that there was something real in having a personal conductor. Do not forget that Christ is a real personal way. Often we have to ask the way to a place, and we are told to go in such and such a direction; but in the Gospel Christ comes to us, Himself the way. "Say not in thine heart, who shall ascend into heaven, or who shall descend into the deep? The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart, that is the word of faith which we preach, that if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead, thou shalt be saved" (Rom. xi. 8, 9).

I have found it helpful not only to read the Word of God to the anxious, but to get them to read it also. Thus they often become ministers of blessing to themselves. It is a good thing, if you can, to get them to go down on their knees and pray aloud. Not as if God were not willing to save, but that they may learn that "it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God, that sheweth mercy." In past years the sinner was left to grope his way back to God, and told that God would do all; but now the tendency is to shut out God altogether. It is said that when President Edwards preached that wonderful sermon entitled, "Sinners in the hands of an angry God," a sermon by which 500 people were said to have been converted, his deacons went up into the pulpit and entreated him to give some comfort. But he went on cutting away every shred of hope for them, after which he poured the oil of the Gospel into their wounded souls. Confession of Christ with the lip has often brought peace to souls. It is not within my province this afternoon to deal with other ways of confessing Christ. Our missionary brethren abroad have to press upon those who believe the necessity of showing forth their faith by being baptized. I do not wish to strike one discordant note here if I can help it, but anxious souls will ask you, what about the Lord's Supper? What about baptism? May God give every one of us grace and boldness to answer such questions as his Word alone directs.

One word more. Questions are being raised in various quarters whether faith alone justifies. So far as I read the Scriptures, the aim of the Holy Spirit is to direct the eye of an anxious soul away from everything else to a Crucified Saviour. "Look and live" is the substance of his teaching. I was struck with this in the Communion Service to-day; when our brethren went round with the bread. What was done? We took the bread, we put it into our mouths, and it became incorporated with us. Now, anxious souls! Behold the plate is held out to you, not the symbol but the reality, not the Gospel Message but Christ Himself. Take Christ as you have seen Christians take the bread at the Lord's Supper. But while faith alone justifies, the faith which justifies is not alone, but will surely show itself in real fruit to God.

ORKNEY.—Brethren in Christ in Orkney, with heartfelt gratitude, return their thanks to their brethren of the Noon Prayer-meetings throughout the United Kingdom, for their united prayer on their behalf during the month of June, and for the many blessings received in answer thereto. Souls have been awakened and led to Christ, and backsliders restored. Would our brethren still remember us in Orkney? S.W.

LIVERPOOL.—Help is earnestly asked for the continued monthly free circulation of Gospel magazines among the Liverpool police force, which includes 800 Protestants, 300 of whom now receive a magazine, and fresh applications are constantly made; but as the expense is borne by a few friends only, it is feared that the work which has been carried on for four years must be given up, unless friends kindly help us. Donations will be thankfully acknowledged by Mrs. Banks, 31, Clifton-road, Birkenhead.

ESSEX.—Barn services have been held three successive summers at Mark's Tey, and have been addressed each year by Mr. John Harris, of the Evangelisation Society. They have always been well attended; but this year they have been signally blessed. On the last Sunday the barn was crowded with some 400 people from several miles around. A good work commenced amongst the unconverted, and this has continued throughout the meeting held for the first time at Feering, when some fourteen came out on the Lord's side, including Sunday-school children, and a woman over 80 years.

THE DOOR.

NOTES ON AN ADDRESS TO CHILDREN AT SUNDERLAND.

I WANT to speak to you, dear children, about a Door. You know the sad results of the door of Victoria Hall not being opened. Some of you were present. That door would not open, but Christ is the Door of salvation that is ever open. Now can you tell me the first time a door is mentioned in the Bible? "Door of the ark." Quite right. And it was wide open. God instructed Noah to build the ark. Tell me about the door of the ark. Who stood at the door? "The Lord." Well, and what did He say? "Come thou and all thy house into the ark." Exactly so, and so God says to-day to each of us, Come! "Come unto Me."

Then remember He stood at the door, and shut it. I suppose it was quite fast; don't you think so? So Noah and his family were safe inside when the rain came. Just so, the child that trusts Jesus for salvation is safe in his keeping.

But now I want you to tell me of another door. Will you find Ex. xii. 23. Some boy will read that verse.

You see this is a very different door; it is sprinkled with blood. The father of the family did not put the blood on the doorstep. Oh no! it was not to be trampled upon. This also sets forth the place of safety from judgment; that is why this feast was called "The Passover." Do you not think how very safe those children were from the destroying angel? They were protected by the blood. Those who believe are protected by better blood, you know: the blood of Jesus.

You have got your Bible open; turn to Prov. xxvi. 14. Read it, please, "As the door turneth upon his hinges, so doth the slothful man upon his bed." That is like a good many people who only go backwards and forwards like the door, and are content with that. Oh, do you not be satisfied with being religious—be out and out for Christ; and my dear children, if you know any of your companions who are like this door, just try and awaken them out of sleep, and God will bless them and you.

Now read James v. 9, "The Judge is at the door." Who is the Judge? The Lord. Yes, and you know if He is not the Saviour He will be the Judge. What is the meaning of this? It means He is close at hand, ready to judge; and so it will be soon. He will judge the world, and then, oh, how many will be glad to escape when it will be too late for them!

One more Scripture, John x. 9. Who is the Door? Jesus. Ah, yes, dear children; He is open to receive you, the least touch of faith and the door opens—opens to salvation and peace. You know what hindered the door of the Hall close by being opened; it was the bolt, and that is like sin and the world, a little thing perhaps, but yet enough to keep you from Christ. But He can take every difficulty out of the way. I seem to see a big door wide open, and as I look inside I see written Pardon, Peace, Heaven, Home, and then on the doorstep, in firm, large letters, COME.

Will you come then to Jesus and find Him to be your Saviour, and all will be well.

NATIONAL TEMPERANCE FETE.

THE National Temperance Fete at the Crystal Palace, on the 10th inst., was one of the grandest successes Temperance mustering has ever had. No less than 66,800 persons crossed the threshold of the Palace on that occasion. The visitors were active during the day in the various sports provided for them.

Such a demonstration as was there witnessed is an evident token of the rapid advance total abstinence is making on every hand. Such an expression must have a beneficial effect upon the general public. It is a matter for much thankfulness that many thousands of drink-slaves have been set free, and many hundreds, if not thousands, of Christians have adopted total abstinence as an example to others, and as an obligation they owe to their neighbour in carrying out the commands of God towards those around them.

Whatever mistakes may be seen in the glorious movement that has been sweeping over our land during the last few years, the most prejudiced person must acknowledge the good that has accrued to thousands of homes by the aid of the temperance pledge and the "little bit of blue;" nay, more, by the glorious Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, which has been the basis of the greater part of the temperance work of late.

The addresses delivered by prominent advocates of the movement were enthusiastic, and well appreciated. The singing of the choirs, as well as the general behaviour, were all that could be desired. Much credit is due to Mr. Frederick Smith, Secretary of the Band of Hope Union, for the admirable manner in which he performed his arduous task.

MILDMAY MISSION TO THE JEWS.

OF all the blessed meetings recently held at Mildmay, that of Thursday, July 5, was one of the most interesting. It was the annual tea and Gospel meeting of the above Mission, now seven years and one month old. The tea was arranged and superintended by the deaconesses and friends of the Mission, and was held in the large room, No. 4, on the basement, in which the happy seven o'clock conference morning prayer-meetings had been held. Tea was ordered for 350 Jews, including the night-school for children, and 50 Christian workers and friends—400 in all. It was feared by some that our number of Jews would fall short, it being in the middle of the week, when many could not leave their work. Early in the afternoon, however, we learnt that the Leman-street Station had been completely blocked by Jews and their children, crowding the booking-office and the stairs, and we had, including a few babies in arms, 460 Jews, Jewesses, and their children. All had a seat at tea, and all had enough. Much prayer had been offered for fine weather, and the Lord gave a lovely day. Grace was sung before and after tea, and it was wonderfully impressive to hear from Jewish lips,

> "We thank the Lord for this our food,
> But more because of Jesu's blood."

From seven to eight o'clock a meeting was held in the grounds. Mr. Wilkinson opened the meeting by reading in Hebrew the 1st and 2nd Psalms, and preached Christ from them. Mr. Adler also gave a brief Gospel address in German. The children of the night-school recited portions of Scripture from both Old and New Testaments, and these recitations were interspersed with prayers in English and in German, offered by friends who were present.

We have to thank the Lord that all reached home in safety. Will friends of Israel pray that the Lord may bless this meeting to the conversion of many souls?

PALESTINE: EXCLUSION OF MOSES AND AARON FROM THE PROMISED LAND, is a sermon in pamphlet form by Rev. G. F. Braine, and is published simply with a hope of calling the attention of God's people to what is now going on in Palestine in connection with Mr. Friedlaender's work. Nisbet & Co., Berner's-street, W. Sixpence.

"TOGETHER."

NO. II.

"Our Lord Jesus Christ, who died for us, that whether we wake or sleep, we should live together, with Him."

"TOGETHER!" How this hallows Christian friendship!
"Together" we shall with our Lord abide;
"Together" we shall gaze upon his beauty,
And in his likeness shall be satisfied.

"Together!" Oh the restfulness of thinking
That parting then for us shall be unknown!
No cold, dull pain, with dreading that the morrow
May find some loved one from our presence flown.

"Together" we shall meet those friends who left us,
For whom we sorrowed in the days gone by;
How hand will then clasp hand! what words be
What light illumine every joyous eye! [spoken!

"Together" we shall live with them for ever,
Our Lord Himself the centre of our band: [fort
Could any thought bring morning hearts more com-
Than this "together" of the heavenly land?

Together, then, oh! let us thank our Saviour,
That He doth whisper it to hearts deprest,
And ask for grace to realise its fulness
Whilst yet we linger in this world's unrest.

GENOA HARBOUR MISSION.

THE tenth report of the Genoa Harbour Mission, which is fourteen years old, was lately issued by its founder and director, the Rev. D. Miller, giving an outline of the work done during the previous twelve months. The Italian Colporteur's visits to ships were 2567, and the approximate number of emigrants to whom he offered the Scriptures was 28,635, besides a very large number of seamen, boatmen, labourers, and passengers, impossible to estimate with any precision. The English missionary's figures are given thus:—Meetings on board, 171, meetings on shore, 41, attendances, 5213; visits to ships, 2292, and to sailors in hospitals, 45. These figures would have been much greater but for the unusually boisterous weather we had last winter and spring, which often prevented officers and men leaving their ships to attend meetings, and interfered not a little with Mr. Jones' going about the harbour to visit them. Owing to the same cause there was a diminution in the donations from our seafaring friends, and this, along with some extra unavoidable expenditure, explains why we have our balance on the wrong side. I hope kind friends will be found to help us in clearing off our debt of about £60 and in prosecuting the good work.

The responsibilities of those who have charge of this important Mission increase with the rapid development of trade at this port since the opening of the St. Gothard railway; and now that the Anglo-Italian treaty of commerce has been signed, we may expect a further extension of trade, and consequently far more British tonnage to Genoa than we have yet had.

The diaries of our Italian and English Evangelists, of which Mr. Miller gives a few extracts in his report, are extremely interesting. While telling of drawbacks and disappointments, they also show abundant evidence that the Spirit has made the Word, printed and preached, powerful in some cases to conviction and conversion, and in many others to impressions which God grant may prove lasting. While the salvation of souls is the great aim and effort of this Mission, the much-needed reformation of sailors from intemperance has also had attention, and the weekly meeting for this object has borne a large amount of fruit. Mr. Miller recently commenced to preach regularly on Sunday evenings on board the Bethel—an additional boon to our seafaring visitors, and an undoubted means of strengthening the hands of Mr. Jones in his daily labours.

July 9. J. R. YOUNG.

FROM NATAL TO UPPER ZAMBESI.

TWELVE months ago, a young man of the name of Frederick S. Arnot, left the shores of Great Britain, en route for Africa, as a missionary. On the way, and since his arrival there, he has written a series of letters, which are published in book form and carefully arranged. It appears from the introduction that "he was early brought to the knowledge of the Lord under the influence of godly parents, and frequently expressed a wish that he might go to Africa at some future time as a missionary to the heathen, and that desire never ceased and never altered. By his family at the first it was thought to be but a boyish fancy that would soon pass away, but as he grew in years the desire grew in intensity till it became the fixed purpose of his life."

Writing from Maritzburg, he says:—

"There has been an open ear among the Lord's people, and an old Episcopalian church has been taken for Gospel meetings, which begin next Lord's-day; and what with learning Kaffir, and visiting a few sick folk with my medicine, my time has been very much taken up.

"I am just beginning to realise that his promises are not mere words, written for the instruction of our minds, or merely for repeating with our lips, but certainties to go by, and the assurance of one of them is better than the presence of an army.

From Potchefstroom, Dec. 28, he writes:—

"The journey from Maritzburg to this place has occupied thirty-four days; though long it was pleasant. I found such a refreshing budget of letters awaiting me. I walked ten miles in the burning sun in advance of the waggons. I have come thus far, I do trust, in obedience to the call of the Lord. I left Maritzburg not lightly—it cost me much.

"My desire was to get among the Sechuana speaking people, as both in custom and language they much resemble those tribes in the interior, in fact their language is almost identical.

"I thought of Shoshong in Bamangwato, and accordingly shaped my course in that direction, but at the same time I was, and am, willing to take up the work wherever the door seemed opened by the Lord. I arrived in Potchefstroom on the 23rd, and pitched my little tent in the Market Square, with the intention of remaining there until the Lord made the next step plain. I got some information about Bamangwato from several who had been there and knew the country well."

He then goes on to Kirkdrop, Limpofo, and Shoshong, staying at the latter place from March 18 to June 8. His letters are full of interesting details of his doings at this place as well as descriptions of the country. On the eve of starting for Zambesi he writes:—

"I earnestly desire the prayers of all God's people, that my going may be in the power of the Gospel of Christ. My heart fills as I think of this country, of the long, long time it has waited for the Gospel which was 'for all people,' of its great need of that Gospel, and withal of the willingness of the people to listen to it. I have now learned enough of the Sechuana language to enable me to get on comfortably. So long as I can tell my own story in Sechuana, I can always get an interpreter to translate my words into the different Zambesi dialects.

"If the Lord does not give me a fellow-labourer from my own country, He may be pleased to give me a Christian native willing to remain and travel with me as a fellow-witness to the power of the Gospel. I rejoice to think that it is not mine to choose my lot, but it is mine to follow with a willing heart, and for this God giveth 'more grace,' which is in all cases sufficient."

Mr. Arnot at length arrives at Shesheke, having journeyed amid many difficulties and dangers. On October 30 he started for Lea-lui. He writes kindly of those who had afforded him any information on the way, and says:—"I am sure you cannot but recognise with me the hand of God in ordering all things." A gentleman, the name of Mr. Westbeech, writes him to say he had made arrangements with the king, who sent boats and men for his conveyance. The letters of this young servant of Christ manifest a spirit of humility and dependence on God with thankfulness, which are in themselves earnests of future usefulness if grace only keeps him where God designs he should be. We commend him to the prayers of our readers.

The little book we refer to is published by Mr. J. E. Hawkins, 36, Baker-street, London, W., price 4d.

RICHARD WEAVER IN SWANSEA.

OUR brother, Richard Weaver, has continued his labours in this town and God has given great success. He came here a total stranger to all, having never visited Swansea before, but as he said playfully in his opening services, "you will love me better before I leave you." So it has come true, for hundreds will remember him here and thank God for him as long as they live. To say that he has had good meetings gives no adequate idea of the thrilling power with which he has stirred the multitudes now to smiles, then to tears, and anon to hearty shouts of "Amen," "Glory," and "Praise the Lord." Not a night has passed without many going into the inquiry-room to be dealt with by the workers, in fact at no Mission held in Swansea has there ever been anything like the number of anxious souls as this Mission has produced.

Our brother has laboured hard, preaching three times each Sunday, and often twice a day during the week. He has also spoken at the Gospel Temperance meetings (for he wears the blue ribbon), and given an address in the beautiful home of a Christian gentleman, who had gathered between sixty and seventy of the rich and poor from his village to hear "plain, honest Richard," tell the story of free grace and dying love. At the close Mr. Weaver said: "I must be as faithful here as in any other place; those who are unsaved and desire our prayers hold up your hands." Hands were held up, prayer was offered, and seekers pointed to Jesus. As conducing to his usefulness, I notice his prayerfulness and his faith—he pleads for souls and believes for souls; in the directness of his appeals he is "not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ.' Heaven and hell are to him intense realities. Jesus is an ever-present Saviour. To these are added strong common sense, ready wit, and a marvellous experience of the ways of God with men. He goes from here to Bleananon. May God use him more and more.

July 12. OSCAR T. SNELLING.

TRACT DISTRIBUTION.—Mr. T. R. Fothergill wishes to recommend the illustrated tracts supplied by the Religious Tract Society, or by Messrs. Spittler, No. 4, Stapfelberg, Basel, or at the Depôt Central, No. 4, Place Théâtre Français, Paris. He says, "The cards I get from the Drummond Tract Depôt, Stirling, who are most liberal in the supply they send, as they pay all postage, and charge only 5d. the packet of 50 beautifully executed coloured text cards. I may add that the porters and employés at the railway stations, as well as the soldiers and sailors, are most ready to receive Gospels or tracts, and always behave politely to the giver."

HOLIDAY WORKERS IN FRANCE.—A Christian lady writes thus from Dunkirk to a friend:—"If you meet with any idle ladies in England, do tell them there is lots to be done here, which no one attempts. A fine hall all ready for anyone to have Mothers' Meetings, Girls' Sewing Classes, &c.; barracks full of soldiers ready to receive tracts, and hundreds of sailors at this large sea-port, where fifty-four vessels (from Bombay alone) came in this month! There is an English chaplain here, besides a French pastor, whose wife is English, and these gladly welcome Christian workers. The communication with London is easy and cheap (ten shillings), by steamers bi-weekly."

THE SCRIPTURE READERS' SOCIETY FOR IRELAND.

THE annual report of this excellent society has just been issued. In this interesting statement the committee thank God for the large measure of success which He has graciously granted during a year of great trouble and disquietude. Old friends have most liberally stood by them, and many new subscribers from England, Scotland, America, and the Continent have aided its funds, believing that the only remedy for Ireland's woes is through the diffusion of the Word of God amongst the masses.

Thus encouraged in the past, the Society will, with God's help, continue to carry on the great and glorious work which the Lord in his own good pleasure has been pleased to own for upwards of sixty years; and it is most gratifying to the Committee to know that, in the districts where their agents are located, and reading the Word of God from house to house, crime and awessness, with all their attending evils, are on the decrease, and that there are hopes of better days for this ignorant and poverty-stricken country. The opening up is reported of many new districts where there are signs of increased desire and willingness to hear the Word of God read and expounded; and the Committee appeal to friends to enable them by increased support to respond promptly to this call, and give them the means to send forth more labourers. During the past year it has been laid on the heart of many of the Lord's servants, that the Society should send some of their most experienced Readers to itinerate through various districts of Ireland much in need of such help, and unable from many causes to contribute towards the support of permanent agents. In many places thus visited by these faithful agents much good has been accomplished, as these missions have been made a subject of special and earnest prayer, and the Committee still looks to God to bless his own work.

Amongst the places visited may be mentioned the counties of Meath, Westmeath, Kerry, Galway, and the blood-stained districts of Maamtrasna and Lough Mask. From the two last-named places some of their agents have just returned with the cheerful and encouraging report that in no single instance did they meet with an unkind word from any of the poor people in the Maamtrasna and Lough Mask districts. In nearly all the cabins visited they were permitted to read God's Word and to pray. On one occasion sixteen knelt in prayer in a wretched hovel in the Maamtrasna district. Surely the Lord's hand is in this work, and it only needs the Spirit of Christ working by love to bring home "the word which maketh wise unto salvation" to these poor people, who are sunk in superstition and ignorance as deep as the heathen who know not God. An effectual door is opening in many new districts by means of the circulation of God's Word at the hands of the society's readers, who are periodically supplied with packages of Bibles, Testaments, and portions which find a ready acceptance amongst the people.

The total income of the Society for the past year amounts to £3631 7s. 8d., including balance carried forward from the previous year, thus leaving a balance in hand for current expenses of £317 10s. 5d. The Committee commend this deeply important work to all who have a zeal for the glory of the Lord, and have the welfare of Ireland at heart, seeking their continued kind co-operation to enable the committee still to "go forward," and their earnest prayer that an abundant blessing may descend upon the labours of the society. Captain Kearney White, 27, Lower Pembroke-street, is the Secretary.

Notes and Comments.

READERS of Livingstone and Stanley's famous travels in Central Africa, and similar works, will be interested in the news just received of the death of King M'tesa, Sovereign of Uganda, to whom such frequent reference has been made.

Referring to ministers, and also to all who attempt to teach others the knowledge of Christ, the following advice, given by the Rev. Dr. Samuel Wilson, of Alleghany Theological Seminary, to the students is eminently worthy of consideration:—

"Young gentlemen, study Hebrew roots, pore over Greek verbs, read Latin, and, if you have time and desire, translate ancient hieroglyphics; but I charge you, when you go into the pulpit to preach the Gospel, to use the plain Anglo-Saxon."

We cannot be too plain and simple in our method of presenting the Gospel, and should carefully guard against making it of no effect by mere wisdom of words. Great show of learning and rhetorical display will only weaken the force of the means employed for reaching the heart and conscience.

The following words by Dr. Samuel Green, of the Religious Tract Society, will commend themselves to the leaders of Bible-classes as well worthy of consideration:—

"The deepest and most lasting of all religious impressions, as we believe, is that which comes by accurate and comprehensive knowledge of divine truth. To this, therefore, we must bend all our efforts. Hence, we do not call that a Bible-class in which the teacher employs all his strength in reiterated appeals to the feelings, satisfied if he can touch, or appear to touch, the heart. The hour so spent is often an hour of excitement, but little comes of it, and the constant stream of pathetic exhortation by and by loses all its power. There are Bible-classes, so called, which are rather singing-meetings, prayer-meetings, seasons for exhortation, for anything but solid instruction. The young people may like these best for the time; excitement and sensation have their charms, but, nevertheless, a great opportunity has been lost. Connect prayer and praise with the Bible-class by all means—nay, never meet without these exercises of devotion, but remember that if, as has been said, the Bible-class is not a congregation, so its choir is not a pulpit, and its leader is not there to preach."

Members of such classes as well as leaders do well to ponder these words, for sometimes the latter find their efforts checked by indisposition on the part of some to give "earnest heed" to the subjects introduced, thoroughly Scriptural and important as they may be. Dr. Whyte, of Edinburgh, recently gave a testitimony on this matter. He says:—

"Hard work and exact study will not always tend to fill up the ranks of a class. At the same time, and when speaking on this subject, I must, on the other hand, bear my own testimony, and give the contribution of my own experience. And my experience, over a good many years now, is this, that the harder I have made myself work for my Bible-classes, and the harder I have made them work for me, the more my classes have filled up, and that not only from the young men and women of my own congregation, but from those of other congregations—and even other denominations in this city."

Two distinguished men connected with the Evangelical section of the Church of England have died very recently: Dr. Boyd, Dean of Exeter, and Dr. Baylee, vicar of Shapscombe, Gloucester. Both were educated at Trinity College, Dublin, and are well known as authors of various theological works and as champions of Protestant truth. Dr. Baylee was for many years Principal of St. Aidan's College, Birkenhead.

The present year being the jubilee of the Oxford Tract Movement, it has been resolved to open, in connection with the Church Congress at Reading, an exhibition of autographs, books, portraits, &c., commemorative of those who were associated in any way with it. The famous "Tracts for the Times" were started in 1833. The results of the movement have been too disastrous to the cause of truth, we should think, to make any commemoration of it desirable, save in the eyes of those who favour its spirit. Tractarianism has served to weaken in every way the influence of Protestantism and spiritual religion in the land, and its influence during the fifty years of its history calls for nothing but warning and earnest deprecation as to any revival of its work.

The Romish Church has made such great strides in America of late years that it is no longer to be regarded as a missionary organisation, but is to assume a national and canonical position and status. The American Archbishops, it appears, are summoned to Rome for consultation, and to arrange for holding an American Plenary Council, having for its object the organising of plans for securing the unity and consolidation of the various dioceses. The effects of this when secured cannot be other than to invest Popery with greater power and influence in the land. The Catholic Standard speaks of the diversity of sentiment and modes of action to which the present missionary system of working gives rise, as very injurious to the interests of the Holy See, and says that the need of more compact organisation has become so obvious as to be universally conceded and desired. "Unity is strength" in relation to error as well as truth; it is to be regretted that too often the advocates of the former are quicker to discern the fact and to profit by its adoption than the friends of the latter.

The Southerners in America seem very slow to arrive at a correct idea as to what human brotherhood really is. The Richmond State has just had the following utterances on the relations to be maintained with the coloured part of the population:—

"Here in Virginia we have never, and never will, place the white race on the same level with the negro, save in matters of common humanity. Socially and politically we do not admit his equality, but insist upon his inferiority and the superiority of the white race. We do not hate him, nor have we any prejudice against him. We only demand that he shall keep his place and not intrude where he does not belong; that he remain where nature intends him to remain, and fulfil the purposes of his creation. This is all, and this is the logic of the situation: that the North must recognise and govern itself by it if it would have peace between the two sections of our common country. It must leave us alone, to determine for ourselves the solution of the negro question, or that question will assume very threatening proportions, and may be the cause of more trouble in the future than it has been in the past."

It is gratifying to know that such institutions for raising the mental and moral status of the negro race as the Miller Manual Labour Schools at Batesville, Virginia, the Normal Schools at Hampton, and notably the Fisk University at Nashville, are prospering abundantly and proving eminently successful in elevating the coloured people above the low standard of social and educational life to which slavery had reduced them. Competent judges who report progress on the matter speak of the results of such efforts as widely manifest, and state that everywhere in the South proofs are to be found of the advance among them of principles and habits of industry, self-reliance, and moral virtue.

On the occasion of the National French Fête, 60,000 affiches (tracts) bills, large enough to be stuck up on walls, were freely circulated, and 25,000 more are being disseminated. On each was a suitable picture, and stirring words bringing a clear ringing Gospel to bear on the topics of present public interest. So far as was observed in Paris, they were taken eagerly, and immediately read by the right parties, workingmen. They are the newest issue from the Dépot Central, 4, Place du Théâtre Français, and constitute a fresh and acceptable mode of evangelising the people.

The petitions that have been sent to the House of Commons this session from Maidstone show that there is a strong feeling in that town, as well as in other "subjected districts," against the abominable system of State-regulated vice. Notwithstanding that a petition bearing 1500 names was presented a short time since, a further petition has been sent within the past few days, including among its signatories clergymen and ministers of various denominations in that town, and leading merchants and tradesmen of both political parties. The petition ends with the prayer, "that any further legislation on the subject of the social evil may proceed upon the principle that vice should be suppressed, and not regulated." The audacious and oft-repeated statement made in Parliament that the respectable inhabitants of the districts where the vice-regulating laws operate are favourable to their continuance is not borne out by the facts.

Some time ago we intimated that it was proposed and purposed to erect new premises which are essential for the accommodation of the highly-useful and successful Camden and Kentish Town branch of the Y.M.C.A., hitherto carrying on operations at Iona Rooms. This branch has existed for many years, and has pursued its efforts for the moral and spiritual welfare of young men with remarkable blessing and success. Upon the secretary of every such institution very much of its power and usefulness must always depend; and Mr. T. Smith, who fills this office at Camden-town, has proved himself eminently qualified for his important post. We are, therefore, delighted to know that while, by the aid of local residents and employers and the efforts of its members, the Association at Camden Town has hitherto met its annual working expenses, the liberality of others has justified the immediate commencement of new premises.

The lease of an eligible site in the Camden-road has been secured, and the building, with fittings, furniture, &c., is estimated to cost £3,500. Towards this amount £1,000 has been already contributed, of which George Williams, Esq, the Right. Hon. W. H. Smith, M.P., and an anonymous friend stand for £250 each, and a like sum has been collected and contributed by the Committee. The foundation-stone is to be laid early in August, and the building operations will proceed without delay. We trust that as it advances fresh subscriptions will flow in, that when it is completed there may be no debt. Considering the increasing importance of these suburban branches, as young men so generally live outside the city, there is abundant reason why all who are interested in young men, whether as sons or assistants, should strenuously support the Y.M.C.A.

The sanctification of the body, and the consecration of all its members, to the service of Christ, is a subject much overlooked. The following extract from the Bombay Guardian contains truth many need to be confronted with :—

"Few, indeed, are the churches in Christendom so free from the curse of strong drink, wine, beer, tobacco, opium, indulgence of the mere pleasure of the palate, the animalism and carnality of the sexes participating in the dance, and the vain ornamentation of the person, as to need no enforcement of this Apostolic command, 'Glorify God in your body' (1 Cor. vi. 20). Many a professed Christian is polite enough to ask his fellow passenger in a coach, before he lights his cigar, whether the smoke is offensive, who has never yet asked the Holy Spirit dwelling within him whether He is not disgusted with such a defilement of his temple."

The habit of smoking needs to be dealt with more firmly than it has hitherto been. We cannot but think every temperance pledge should embrace abstinence from, and opposition to, this practice, as well as that of drinking intoxicating liquors. It certainly is one of the most pernicious habits the young can cultivate, and its increasing prevalence calls for earnest action in reference to its overthrow. Christian men, on the ground of example and consideration of others, as well as the glory of God, should surely examine carefully their duty in relation to it.

The returns for last May show that there are upwards of 11,000 abstainers in the British Army in India. It is admitted that the abstaining men are better soldiers than their drinking comrades: they are not so frequently in hospital, they are not so often in the guard-room, and they are always ready when they are wanted for duty.

The following incident, taken from The Friend of Missions for the current month, points its own moral. It is passing strange that any Christian mind can be in doubt as to the position each and all should take in reference to a traffic condemned alike by God and man.

"A native missionary doctor was one day preaching to a crowd of passengers on a Chinese river-boat. Almost all were interested; some were touched, till a man asked angrily, 'We are to think that the missionaries are our very good friends, are we?' 'Indeed they are,' said the doctor; 'they have come thousands of miles on purpose to benefit us, and to tell us that Christ died for sinners.' 'And to bring us the opium!' said the man with intense scorn; 'and to bring us the opium!' The company of interested listeners slunk away like men ashamed of themselves, and the English missionary sitting by was silenced through his country's sin."

It is satisfactory to know that all possible means are being employed by Government to prevent the epidemic raging in Egypt entering our own land. The Local Government Board have issued regulations which appear to be as complete as modern science and past experience can make them. The appointment of Surgeon-General Hunter to superintend the precautions adopted to prevent the spread of the disease in Egypt is also a cause for congratulation. Much, humanly speaking, depends upon attention being paid to the sanitary condition of our crowded courts and alleys. The value of cleanliness cannot be over-estimated in its bearing upon the prevention of disease. As Professor Humphry, M.D., said on Thursday last: "The best precaution to take was for every country of Europe, every town, and every individual, to see to it that their houses were set in order."

While, however, all is done that can be in the adoption of human means, it must be borne in mind that our hope in all times of danger is in God. Prayer is the great power after all, and there is much just now calling us to its exercise on our own and others' behalf. It is pitiable to think of the state of our fellow-creatures who are shut up in plague-stricken districts like Damietta, forbidden to escape; and even if free from cholera, famishing for lack of food, and filled with dread. Be it ours to plead for them with God, as well as to praise Him for our own preservation, and to ask for our own nation to be still preserved.

In a speech the other day, delivered at an Anti-Slavery meeting held at Ilford, Mr. Arthur Pease, M.P., said :—

"It was supposed by some that slavery was abolished, but that was far from being the fact. There was still a very large exportation from the East Coast of Africa, and there was a great deal of slavery on the Continent of Africa itself. Another field of slavery was Brazil, and the President of the Anti-Slavery Society, with some colleagues, was working in order to redeem the country from the taint of slavery. Slavery existed, too, in Egypt, the slaves being used in the household. The Anti-Slavery Society hoped that the position of England in that country was such that her influence could be used to do away with all slavery there. The society had been cordially supported by Lord Granville, and they had the entire sympathy of Lord Dufferin. Arrangements had been made for Mr. Baker to go to the Soudan to represent the Government in that portion of Egypt."

The proposed withdrawal of the Irish Sunday Closing Bill has produced a wide-spread feeling of disappointment and vexation throughout Ireland. This was clearly shown by the large and influential deputation which waited upon Earl Spencer last week, to induce his action on behalf of a reconsideration of the question. All friends of Temperance will share the deep regret occasioned by this postponement of a reform, upon the desirableness of which a remarkable degree of unanimity in public sentiment and desire had been obtained. It is a most gratifying fact that such a measure should be so regarded as that its delay is a source of so much concern to the Irish people, and their representatives.

The recent visit of the Earl of Shaftesbury to Manchester calls for special note in our columns. It is not often given to men to live to see the fruit of their labours as it is given to his Lordship, who can recall the struggles of more than half a century in the cause of philanthropy and social progress. Manchester was the scene of some of his earliest endeavours, and the many thousands of operatives engaged in that busy centre of manufacture owe a large debt of gratitude to the noble Earl for his devotion to their interests at a time when but few could be found to take up their cause. The enthusiastic reception given to him by the populace, and the manifest results of his work in the vastly improved condition of the class he has striven to benefit, were gratifying in the highest degree.

His Lordship's addresses to the operatives in the Free Trade Hall, to the railway company's men, and to the children of various schools and refuges in Manchester, were of a specially interesting and important character; they breathe the spirit of purest Christianity and noblest patriotism, and should be read by all who are concerned for the social and moral welfare of our land. The Earl is sometimes spoken of as taking a too pessimistic view of things as they are. But his words on this occasion indicate that this is not a fair charge. With a cheerfulness of heart begotten of true faith he said :

"Though there was an enormous amount of infidelity, scepticism, inroads on the Christian faith, organised efforts to deprive people of their only hope and to introduce the kingdom of Satan to the subversion of the kingdom of God, there never was a time in the history of England, and he believed in the history of the world, when there was so much determination to advance the kingdom of Christ, so much respect for the human race, so much desire to look upon the very poorest sort and lift them from their misery solely and simply upon the ground that they were created by the same God and destined to the same immortality, as there was now."

It is with a degree of sadness we read the frequent references in the course of the proceedings to Lord Shaftesbury's age and nearing removal from us. His own and the Mayor's allusions to this were very touching and solemn. Hundreds of thousands of hearts still breathe the prayer that a life so valuable may be spared yet longer, and that ever increasing blessing and blessedness may attend its advance. It is said of servants of God, and we see in this case a proof of it, "They shall still bring forth fruit in old age; they shall be fat and flourishing."

Rev. Jacob Freshman, the missionary referred to in our columns last week as having undertaken to labour among his Jewish brethren in New York, writes us to say that he expects two Jewish missionaries will return to labour with him in the work of bringing the Gospel to the Jews. We bespeak the prayers of Christians on behalf of these, as well as practical fellowship in the establishment of an aggressive effort in the direction Mr. Freshman proposes.

Very much is said about the destitution and vice which abound in East London, and doubtless it would be hard to exaggerate the facts of the case. But it seems that South London bids fair to rival the East in the sad social and moral condition of large masses of its population. The Archbishop of Canterbury, presiding the other day at the fifth annual meeting of the Rochester Diocesan Society, dwelt much upon the needs of the wide-spreading districts of the southern part of the Metropolis, and said that he had himself been round the houses of many of the poor, and he found that the difficulties in the way of their evangelisation were terribly increased by their social condition.

"He had found whole families at work in making match-boxes, working assiduously in wretched homes, payment being at the rate of 2½d. for a gross of boxes, and the workers had to supply their own paste in the making of these 144 boxes for 2½d. There was not much civilisation in work like that, nor in the making of an ulster for 4d., or the making of a suit of boys' clothes for 3d. He hoped earnestly for some amelioration of those social difficulties, for which, it must be remembered, employers were not to blame. These people were not to be regarded so much as lost sheep as sheep who were pushed from the door, and the work of evangelising them was a duty which could not be overlooked."

The resolution moved at the same meeting by Mr. Francis Peek calls for the earnest attention not only of those belonging to the Church he represented, but of all Christian communities and individuals connected with the Southern district. It was to this effect :—

"That the enormous increase in the population of South London, as shown by the census returns of 1881, demands the most serious attention of all persons, whether clergy or laity, who feel the responsibility of supplying the means of grace for those who are unable to provide for their own spiritual wants."

GIVING UP EVERYTHING.

AN INCIDENT AT THE FLORENCE NIGHT MISSION, NEW YORK.

QUITE a number of the girls from the street came into this Mission, and one evening when Rev. Dr. Mingins spoke to the young women who were assembled there of the dreadful end that awaited them, a beautiful girl of nineteen, who had hitherto shown no emotion whatever, became deeply convicted of her sins. She went out and wandered round the streets and dance-halls till Sunday evening, when she came back, and brought a young girl with her. This last one mentioned was sixteen years old the day this article was written. As she sat in the meeting she became seriously awakened about her soul, and after the meeting she asked Mr. Allen and others present to remain and pray with her. Oh, how she did pray and agonise! It seemed as though her heart would break. Mr. Allen said, "Now, will you give up everything?" "I thought," said she, "it would be so easy to get forgiven, but it is so hard, oh, so very hard."

There were quite a number of girls from the street in the room, who had been attracted by the scene, and were looking on with apparent sympathy on this one of their number who was in such distress about her sins. There was not a dry eye among them. At last, long after midnight, she said, "I will give up everything," and as she had reached this determination such a blessing poured into her soul she could scarcely find words to tell it. She arose from her knees and threw her arms around the necks of those poor Magdalenes who were looking on, and said repeatedly, "Oh, blessed Jesus, my sins are all forgiven; I am so happy."

The history of this girl is briefly this. She had come from home to New York with a pretext which entirely deceived her parents, and had dated her letters home from a hotel where she said she was employed. She had made the acquaintance of a smart thief who was going to meet her in Mat Grace's saloon on Sunday evening, and take her on a shop-lifting trip up through the Eastern States. She was met in this very saloon by the other girl and brought to the Florence Night Mission. The next morning after she was converted she wrote to her father, who lives in a neighbouring State. "Oh, my dear, darling father and mother," said she, "Jesus has saved me, and I am so happy. Dear father, I have been so sinful and wicked in not obeying you, and now the dear Saviour has forgiven all my sins, and has saved me and blessed me so, won't you forgive me and come and take me home? If you will I'll be a good, loving girl. I am at a dear, good place: I am at a Mission where they have the picture of a dear little girl on the wall called Florence, and the Mission is named after her. Now, dear father, I have never been baptized, but now, as I am a Christian, I want to be, and I want to be christened Florence."

The following evening this young girl was playing at the organ during the services. A gentleman came in, and she immediately sprang up and throwing her arms around his neck said, "Oh, my dear, darling father, I am so glad to see you." It was a sight not soon to be forgotten, and the girls present broke down and left the room crying as if their hearts would break. This is one of the scenes happening at this Mission almost daily, and its fruits are being shown constantly by others coming in and asking what they must do to be saved.—The Perpetual Revival.

CHURCH PAROCHIAL MISSION SOCIETY.—A Mission will be held at Westbourne Hall, Westbourne-grove, W., conducted by Mr. W. Spencer Walton and others, commencing on Monday, July 2. Afternoon meetings for consecration on Tuesday, July 3, and each succeeding afternoon at 3 o'clock, excepting Wednesdays and Saturdays, when there will be Children's Services at 4.30 o'clock. Gospel addresses each evening at 8 o'clock, and on Sunday at 7 o'clock.

CONTINENTAL NOTES.

FRANCE.

THE missionary boat, which last year visited many parts of the coast, under the direction of the Rev. W. Gibson, is making another voyage during this month. In August it will be at the service of the McAll work.

A new paper, called the Bonne Nouvelle, has just appeared in connexion with Mr. Gibson's many good works.

A short time ago, an International Congress, for the protection and education of abandoned and criminal children, was held at the Trocadéro, Paris. The soul of this Congress was M. Georges Bonjean, who is a son of the President Bonjean, who was massacred by the Commune at the same time as the Archbishop of Paris, Monseigneur Darboy. He has two brothers, who are equally devoted to the philanthropic work they have undertaken. In the last letter which their father wrote to them before his death, he said, "Never seek to be revenged on my murderers." His sons have, indeed, taken a noble vengeance! In presence of the physical and moral misery left by the Commune in the most populous quarters of Paris, the three brothers conceived the idea of receiving and helping the neglected children of those who had probably applauded or taken part in the assassination of their father, and have organised a work of education and moral training, the most considerable that has ever been made in Paris by private enterprise.

GERMANY.

On Midsummer Day a very bright and happy day was spent at Weiszensee, near Berlin, in dedicating a house to rescue work. The work was begun in 1878, and has gone on increasing since then, so that a new and enlarged house became a necessity. Thus a helping hand is held out to the fallen, and many have been restored to respectability, and more have been brought back to the Father's love and care.

SCIENCE AND FAITH.

M. de Quatrefages, one of the first savants of our day, who has spent his life in the study of anthropology and zoology, the natural science considered most opposed to religion and faith, has recently written an article in the "Magasin Pittoresque," in which he shows that the study of the natural sciences does not tend to remove religious ideas. "On the contrary, it is," he says, "rare that the student does not meet with a crowd of concatenations and general facts which must lead to the thought of a Lawgiver and of a Creator." He also quotes as follows from Lamarck, the most decided precursor of Darwin:—"It has been thought that nature was God. Strange that the watch should be confounded with the watchmaker, the work with its author! Assuredly this idea is inconsistent. Nature is only a sort of intermediary between God and the physical universe for the execution of the Divine will."

BLACKPOOL.—Messrs. Weaver and Wharton are holding services daily on the sands at this place, with tokens of blessing. They would be glad of the fellowship of the Lord's people in the circulation of the Scriptures among the crowds of visitors. Letters may be addressed to the care of Y.M.C.A., Church-street, Blackpool.

THE BLUE RIBBON IN SOUTH AFRICA.—A meeting was held in the Temperance Hall, Harrismith, South Africa, in May last, to inaugurate a blue-ribbon movement, the motto of which is to help all existing Temperance organisations:—"With malice towards none, and with charity toward all." Various speakers spoke warmly on the subject, expressing the hope that many thousands would adopt the badge who were already abstainers, and that the various Temperance agencies would joyfully work together in seeking to rescue the slaves of drink, especially by the means the Gospel Temperance movement had used—viz., the preaching of the Gospel as well as the advocacy of total abstinence. At the conclusion of the meeting a number donned the ribbon and arranged to hold fortnightly meetings.

MR. DALE ON M. RENAN.

THE Congregationalist contains a valuable paper by Mr. Dale, of Birmingham, on M. Renan's recently-published "Recollections of Childhood and Youth." While giving large credit to M. Renan's varied learning and great literary power, Dr. Dale shows, from his own autobiography that the eloquent Frenchman does not feel the sacredness of facts, and that as his own personal recollections are a romance, founded on fact, so his "Life of Jesus" is of the same character. "Even to himself," says Mr. Dale, "his own personal history is becoming a legend. He manipulates it for the purpose of expresing more perfectly his 'theory of the universe.' It is no wonder that he treated the life of Christ as legendary. But the original friends and disciples of Christ were disciplined to a severe and exact truthfulness. The awful greatness which they recognised in Christ would have made it sacrilege in them to foist imaginary incidents into his life, or consciously to modify the incidents which actually took place. They were witnesses to facts, not speculative philosophers. Their doctrines grew out of their facts, not their facts out of their doctrines. M. Renan would not stake a franc on the truthfulness of his story. He warns us that there is a poetical element in it, and that he has treated the facts freely. The disciples of Christ suffered martyrdom to confirm their testimony."

But not only is there in M. Renan's mind "an incapacity to recognise the severe obligations of truth," he is vain to a degree, effeminate, dainty, and conceited. Quoting one of his passages Mr. Dale says, "That is the most audacious piece of vanity I ever met with, either in books or in conversation with living men." And quoting M. Renan's assertion, "I am the only man of my time who has understood the characters of Jesus and of Francis of Assisi," Mr. Dale remarks, "About M. Renan's understanding of St. Francis I will say nothing; but consider the boundless presumption of the other claim. There are millions of men and women to whom Jesus Christ is the object of unfettered devotion. His words, his acts, are the subject of their incessant and most earnest meditation. They have in their hands the four Gospels, which are the principal documents on which M. Renan's own judgment is founded. Yet M. Renan is "the only man" of his time that has understood the character of our Lord! It does not strike one that he was qualified, by exceptional modesty and humility, for this exceptional clearness of perception."

M. Renan tells us that he "preferred from a very early age the society of girls to boys;" the latter did not like him, and called him "Mademoiselle." Whereupon Mr. Dale observes, "A womanly woman is charming; but manly women and womanly men are equally intolerable. M. Renan has remained Mademoiselle to the last." His Galilean Christ has the charm and tenderness and grace, the sweetness and joyousness, of a bright, affectionate girl; but had Jesus of Nazareth been the Jesus of M. Renan, no one could have dreamt (as his disciples said some supposed) that He might, perhaps, be John, the stern preacher of repentance, or Elijah, the grandest and most heroic figure in the line of Jewish prophets. We are much indebted to Mr. Dale for his able exposé of M. Renan's innate inability to be the historian of Jesus the Christ.

SURREY CHAPEL.—We are requested to state that a "Holiness Meeting" is held at Surrey Chapel, Blackfriars-road, every Saturday at 7.30, conducted by Rev. B. Senior. It has existed for three years, and was never better attended than at present. The evangelistic work at Surrey Chapel is also very encouraging. Souls are gathered in week by week.

EVANGELISATION IN FRANCE.—Miss Reeves, of Kenmare, Douglas, Cork, appeals for help for a French pastor in his work in Charente. There are many open doors for the Gospel, and Roman Catholics at a distance frequently send for him to come and preach to them. Rev. Canon Hayman, The Rectory, Douglas, Cork, will gratefully receive any contributions.

MR. PASCOE IN MEXICO.

IN his latest issue of Mexico, Mr. Pascoe writes as follows: — Loving helpers in England have provided ample means for all present needs of the Mission: thus enabling us to enlarge the place of our tent, stretch forth the curtains of our habitations, lengthen the cords and strengthen our stakes (Is. liv. 2), in both senses of the word, literally and spiritually.

The progress of the Gospel in many ways has been most encouraging. Our preaching services have been well attended, even crowded, and that too on ordinary occasions. During what is called "Holy Week," although I issued no notices, nor invitations, we were thronged. Several came from afar: one group of six females, four men and two boys, came from Las Llaves, and remained five days with us. On the Sunday, the day of the Lord's resurrection, we brake bread in memory of the salvation He wrought for us, and of the promise He gave to take us to be where He dwells in glory.

The continual and increasing eagerness of the people here to receive the glad tidings is very cheering.

The Word of God is making rapid inroads among our Catholic neighbours. In Ixtapan tracts and periodicals are distributed in the open streets, and are eagerly sought after; a few months ago not one would receive a tract, but scowls and threats met us on every hand.

No less than thirteen Catholics (three Indians and ten Mexicans) have come here during the past few weeks. Two of the Indians are now earnest converts; four of the Mexicans now read the Bible and attend our services with evident relish. Yesterday I was surprised and rejoiced to see five of the others attend the preaching, the first time in their lives. One of them, the head man, is a mason from Ixtapan. Until recently he was a staunch Catholic, and in their last religious feast he was wounded by a fellow Catholic in a drunken fight, taken to prison, thence to the hospital in the town of El Valle.

It is impossible not to rejoice in the prospect of being in labours more abundant for the Master; but equally impossible is it to ignore that the presence of our Gospel Mission, now firmly established here, will, at the beginning, provoke the wild fanaticism of the miners; so that we must expect troublous times along with increased opportunities for spreading the glad tidings of salvation.

Why do not Christian capitalists band together and employ their money in similar enterprises on Christian principles, with the object of extending God's kingdom on earth? No doubt many such capitalists do spend large sums in such schemes as railways, mines, commerce, &c., but only as a means of making money, and their capital goes to foment a sad amount of vice and ungodliness. Christian men join with worldly men in all such enterprises, but their influence for good is wholly swallowed up and destroyed. If such capitalists would unite, forming companies of Christ serving-men, what a revolution would soon be effected in the world? Only imagine a mine, or a railway carried on thus, every official employed being a sincere servant of God, all vice and ungodliness prohibited in all parts of the company's jurisdiction, preaching, schools, libraries, and other similar agencies actively used for the conversion and improvement of all employed! And it being clearly understood that the profits of the concern shall be devoted to the spread of the Gospel.

Surely God will bless such enterprises; and the evangelisation of the world be facilitated a hundred-fold. But as things are now, every new enterprise, in this land at least, means for us a new torrent of vice and ungodliness to be be met and stemmed.

MRS. EVERED POOLE has very recently written three series of charming little books, attractive in every way, and recording incidents that have come under her own observation. Those before us are entitled "Tempted and Tried," and "A Flower's sweet Message." They are interesting stories of conversion, and as good as they are attractive. They are published by Messrs. Nisbett & Co., 21, Berners-street, W., price 1s. per packet of six.

CAMPING OUT.

IT is a common saying that man made the town, but God made the country, and I suppose it is because the one is only artificial and the other is natural that the change from crowded town to open country gives a peculiar pleasure that they can never know who are glad sometimes to exchange rural quiet for city bustle, where the mind and eye may be interested by novelty and variety, but din and dust must stun and jade. Let those who have delightful memories of boyhood's holiday-glee, and still year by year enjoy a time of recreation away from suburban houses on heathery mountains or towering sea-cliffs, just imagine the ecstacy of nearly 200 young hearts leaving the centre of the great city for ten days' liberty and frolic by the glorious sea, which many of them had never seen, but had often tried to picture and measure in their minds by widening the old Thames or multiplying the familiar Serpentine.

A most kind friend of our boys, who through staying here with me occasionally is able to take an interest in many of them individually, generously undertook all the cost of the outing, and himself made one of the happy party which started on Saturday morning from Liverpool-street Station for Walton-on-the-Naze, where two large barns had been prepared for the boys' accommodation, with an abundance of clean straw and a warm rug to sleep in. How they bathed, paddled, played cricket, caught crabs, explored the country round, &c., I need not describe; but our general ménage may be of practical interest to some readers of THE CHRISTIAN.

The breakfast was generally milk from the farm, bread and butter; dinner consisted of meat, baked with potatoes under it, corned beef, cold, hard-boiled eggs, bread and cheese, with plenty of lettuce, spring onions, &c., given by folks around; and tea was supplemented with shrimps, contributed by the fishermen, watercress, &c. Each day's arrangements were, as far as possible, settled by rote amongst the boys. They rose at 6.30, breakfasted at 7.30, dined at 1, and had tea at 5. Not unnaturally our visit was rather dreaded at first by those who knew we were coming; but the inhabitants seemed to fall in love with our boys at first sight, and loaded them with kindness up till the last.

A dinner was given to them at one of the hotels by public subscription, with athletic sports, and a plentiful tea as a specific acknowledgment of their excellent conduct. The employés of the iron foundry made up several pounds for prizes to those who excelled in athletic competitions on another occasion and had gained the best characters in the institutions. The pier authorities gave them free admission during their stay; the proprietors and crews of the pleasure-yachts and the boatmen gave them trips on the sea; and nearly every tradesman's cart had several boys in it going for a ride on the business rounds, besides which the visitors and residents asked out little parties of the boys to dinner, tea, &c., day by day. In the local papers there was repeated testimony to the admirable behaviour of the boys, and the worthy vicar assured me that the unanimous voice of the town was that no boys could have behaved better.

Having trusted my boys out in the Metropolis for several hours every day, and once a week for a half-holiday, without any supervision, and without a single complaint in twelve months from neighbour, passer-by, or anyone else, I knew I could depend upon them; and I am glad to say, even under the excitement of such a holiday, they did not, in even a trifling matter, tarnish their reputation. When we left, the town turned out to bid us farewell en masse, and we had scores of invitations to come again next year. When we reached Southwark again the streets were full of our good neighbours, young and old, gathered to welcome us back with hearty cheers, and all delighted to see the bronzed faces of our sturdy lads.

The best remains to be told. Every evening our boys, after tea, gathered for a march, with the band at their head, through the town up to the cliffs, where we had a harmonium, round which they sat in a semi-circle on the grass. Hundreds stood round every night listening to the singing and the preaching of the Gospel with rapt attention. On the second Sunday evening it was computed that we had more than 2000 persons present throughout the service. The impression was so manifest, that for the last five nights we hired a public hall, to which we adjourned about 9 p.m., and held another service. We believe that in eternity we shall meet many who were saved at these services; and, indeed, we have heard of several who embraced Christ as a present, personal, and eternal Saviour.

Will you unite with us in thanksgiving for the mercies of a safe journey to and fro, fine weather, immunity from all accidents, unbounded kindness, the listening spirit of the people, and the souls saved during our happy sojourn at Walton-on-the-Naze? Will you pray for us in all our work amongst the needy and erring here, at Greenwich and Ramsgate—especially at this most anxious time of the year, when daily wants often sadly perplex us? J. W. C. FEGAN.

PROTESTANTS IN TUSCANY.

THE first and only existing Protestant church at Sienna, erected lately by Dr. Comandi, well known by his work of faith in Florence, which has for its centre the Industrial Home for Boys, was opened on the 24th of May for public worship. A house for the use of the daily schools, and as a dwelling for the pastor, is being erected on the same plot of ground.

The day of the opening, the church was full to overflowing; more than a third of the congregation was obliged to remain standing.

Dr. Comandi preached from, "Repent ye, and believe the Gospel" (Mark i. 15). He spoke briefly and with simplicity, but with the power of the Spirit, to a congregation almost entirely composed of Roman Catholics, who perhaps heard the Gospel for the first time. Signor Geymonat, Prof. of Theology in Florence, spoke on the same text and was listened to with much attention.

Since the opening of the church service has been held there by Dr. Comandi or Signor Luzzi. The crowded church and the eager attention of the hearers during these services show that when a resident pastor is appointed he will have a wide field ready for his labours, and that the words spoken so many hundreds of years ago in the isle of Patmos will, through the power of the Spirit, be warmly responded to, and many who are athirst, and scarcely know what their need is, will be able to rejoice in answering that call.

It is a remarkable fact that two movements which appeared at Sienna in the 16th century, the one evangelical, headed by Aonio Paleario, author of "Il Benefirgio della Morte di Cristo," a book which for its spirituality stands next to the inspired writings; the other Socinian, founded by the brothers Socini, both of which movements disappeared more than three centuries ago, have again risen side by side. For three days after the opening of the church a monument was inaugurated to the memory of the brothers Socini, showing us that where the work of the Lord begins there the evil one starts up to try and destroy it, but we know that a work begun in faith and for the glory of God will be blest by Him. K.A.

[A little tract has been published at Florence which gives a fuller account of Dr. Comandi's work, and may be had of Mdlle. A. de Weling, Beethovenstrasse 1, Bonn., on receipt of envelope, addres. ed and stamped.]

SECOND COMING PRAYER UNION.—This Union now numbers nearly four hundred, and has members in India, China, Africa, United States, Canada, Turkey, Russia, and almost all European countries. Rev. C. Melville Pym, Cherry Burton, Hull, is the Secretary.

THE SANDGATE SAMARITAN SANATORIUM.

IN this world of sin and sorrow, of penury and pain, it is pleasant to find so many who are wearing the mantle of the Good Samaritan. In that immortal story our Lord furnishes us with a high example of that neighbourly kindness which is one of the cardinal principles and outcomes of the Christian religion. The disciples of the Saviour are never following more closely in his benign footsteps than when they are raising up such as have been bowed down in body and in spirit, whether by the stress of circumstances or the ruthless hand of disease. To help a poor brother or sister back to their allotted posts of duty, and give them some store of strength in which to fight the stern battle of life—this is Samaritan work indeed.

To this gracious task the London Samaritan Society, under the energetic guidance of Mr. Jones, has for the past few years been addressing itself, while its winter work is chiefly among the poverty-stricken of the East-end courts and alleys. These important labours are fitly supplemented during the summer season by the agency of the Sea-side Convalescent Home. For three years the Home in Dover did most excellent service. Many live to bless the day when they entered its cheerful portals, and the willing testimonies they have borne to benefits derived during their short stay are the best proofs that the Dover Home amply fulfilled the designs of its thoughtful founder. In process of time it became too strait for the increasing demands upon its help, and a larger house had to be looked for.

It must have been a special providence that directed the attention of Mr. Jones last autumn to the pretty little Kentish town of Sandgate, where a house, with grounds abutting on the beach, was for disposal. Good fortune attended the negotiations, and "Beach Rocks," once the desirable marine residence of a city magnate, is now the Convalescent Home of the London Samaritan Society.

For situation it is perfect. What convalescents need are rest, pure and bracing air, cheerful society, and pleasant surroundings. All these and more they get in the fullest measure at "Beach Rocks." Sandgate is a quiet spot, and yet within an easy walk of the town of Folkestone, where life circulates with a larger and quicker pulse.

This Sandgate Home has one vast advantage over its Dover predecessor, in that it faces the waters of the English Channel, with nothing to obstruct the view. From the esplanade a child could almost throw a pebble into the ocean at low tide. This is an unpriced boon, especially to those who are unequal to much walking exercise. Here they may sit, in one of the spacious rooms, or under the verandah, and gaze on the beautiful broad expanse of blue, watching the ships go by and listening to the music of the waves as they send up to heaven their sweet and everlasting psalm. We pity the man who can look upon the sea without having his heart turned to a reverential adoration of Him who made it and all that is therein. To feast the eyes on its wide and heaving bosom, thickly dotted with ships whose white sails gleam in the noonday sun; to follow the moving tints of emerald and blue and gold, as the shadows of the clouds slowly creep across the glassy plain; to listen to "the murmur of the shell" as the flowing tide gently kisses the shingly beach; to experience all this on such a day as that on which these lines are penned is to have a thrilling joy, in the possession of life and sense, that no wealth of words can approximately describe. There is a wonderful charm, too, about the ocean in its fierce and duller moods when they can be witnessed from the safe and sheltered retreat of terra firma. The sojourn at Beach Rocks will never lack for profitable occupation to his mind, be the weather fair or foul, and all this will healthfully react on the body that has been enfeebled by toil or pain.

As to the internal arrangements of the Home, much might well be said if space permitted. Let it suffice to state that in this respect also there is nothing left to be desired. The comfort, and pleasure, and well-being of those who are to live under its roof have been the primary considerations throughout. Brightness and beauty pervade the house in all its departments. It was with no feeling of surprise that we heard from Mrs. Gorten, the matron, that many a rough man is moved to tears at the thought of bidding good-bye to this right goodly spot, and returning to the dull and depressing conditions of daily life in a poor and unlovely London street.

For let it be remembered that it is a Home for the convalescent poor. For all the advantages we have briefly glanced at, and many others we have not mentioned, such as the absence of irksome "rules," the happy blending of order and propriety with the fullest freedom, the terms of admission are so liberal that the institution could not be carried on without the generous help of those who have regard to the sorrows and sufferings of the poor. To render such help is a privilege that any one might envy. We know of one large London firm who subscribe handsomely to the Home in order that they may send to it such of their employés as are recovering from sickness and whose means are but scanty. This is an example that might well be imitated by hundreds of business houses and by charitably disposed individuals, whether in the metropolis or elsewhere. Fuller information as to the terms and the arrangements for the reception of patients will be freely rendered by Mr. H. H. Board, the Secretary of the London Samaritan Society, 98, High-street, Homerton, London, E. We would add that if any of our readers have poor acquaintances, for whom they desire the benefits of such an institution, they will not regret if they avail themselves of its aid. We feel inclined also to add that the present of a piano and a good telescope for the use of the patients would materially forward the objects for which the Home at Beach Rocks, Sandgate, has been established.

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY IN RUSSIA.

THERE is great joy in Russia among the Separatists as the orthodox party call them, or old-believers as they prefer to call themselves, on account of the toleration just accorded to them by the Czar Alexander III. These dissenters from the Russo-Greek Church number from twelve to fifteen millions, according to those Russians who are well-informed as to the state of the country. Their separation from the State Church dates from 1666. It is interesting to see in what this liberty consists. The Journal de Saint Petersbourgh gives the decree, which is composed of twelve articles. Passports for travelling in the interior of the empire may be granted to the dissidents; they may engage in trade and commerce; they are authorised to pray together, to celebrate religious services in private houses or in buildings specially set apart for this purpose, if they do not disturb public order; they are at liberty to repair their chapels or other buildings used for worship, but on condition that they make no change in the building, and that they obtain an authorisation from the Governor of the province in which the building stands. Where no chapel exists, by permission of the Minister of the Interior, they may transform an already existing house into a chapel, but care must be taken that the exterior does not assume the aspect of an orthodox church, and that no bell is placed outside. All persons celebrating the rites of the dissidents may do so without fear of prosecution, provided they are not known to have been guilty of propagating their heresies among the orthodox population, or to have been guilty of any other criminal act. Under certain conditions and limitations, they may, too, fulfil some public civil functions. From this we may see that the Russian Government has yet many steps to take to pass from toleration to liberty, and from liberty to equality.

EVANGELISM IN FRANCE.

WILL you kindly allow me to bring to the notice of the friends of our Lord Jesus Christ the important work to which He has called us, and which is, by his mighty power, extending on every side? The work of evangelisation in this part of France began at Agen, the chief town of the Lot and Garonne, and the first meetings were opened in August, 1880. Last year another meeting was commenced at Furnel, chef lieu de Canton, in the same department, and this year the work has extended to Auch, capital of the department of the Gers, and embraces also three other towns of that department, Lectoure, Fleurance, and Sainte-Bazeilles, so that the good news of the Gospel is now being proclaimed to many thousands. Several families have left the Church of Rome, and we have already been able to place some children in Protestant schools.

Every year we distribute in the various fairs and elsewhere at least a hundred thousand tracts, and we sell thousands of copies of the Word of God. There is a great spirit of inquiry among the people who have lived so long in utter ignorance of the Gospel, and in careless indifference for the things of eternity. We feel sure the Spirit of the Lord is working among them, and we long to press forward and answer the calls we have received from other towns. Our work has been carried on in simple trust in the Lord and He has never abandoned us. Heavy expenses are of course incurred, and at this moment it has become an absolute necessity for us owing to the impossibility of finding suitable places for preaching the Gospel, to build Missions Halls in the towns of Agen, Auch, and Sante-Bazeilles. The ground for these halls has been freely offered us, and we need only sufficient means for building. Four hundred pounds would suffice to build a hall, with rooms for the preachers of the Gospel. Twelve hundred pounds would therefore suffice for erecting a hall in each of the above mentioned towns.

Were we allowed to hold meetings in the open air it would be needless to incur so much expense, but unfortunately the laws of the land do not permit open-air gatherings, though we have in every other respect perfect liberty for preaching the Gospel. We believe it is the Lord's will we should bring our need before the Christian public of England, trusting that He will put it into the hearts of his children to come to the help of his work in this land. We know not how long we may enjoy such entire liberty, or find open doors and open hearts wherever we carry the good tidings of great joy, and we desire to work while it is day, and to use the precious opportunities given us, to the glory of his name, and the salvation of poor perishing souls. Will the Christians of England help us by their prayers and sympathy, and, as far as they can, with their worldly means, that the knowledge of the Lord may cover this land, and that France may have a share in the rich blessings which England has so long enjoyed. Emile Halbout.

FREE ITALIAN CHURCH.—The Court of this church in Rome has done good work during last session. Four young men have finished their studies and entered on the work of the ministry: Signori Allegra, Frizziero, Maggio, and Faraone. Frizzero has gone to Rome to assist in the work of Signor Conti, and Allegra has gone to Venice to assist in the work of Signor Beruatto, both of whom are in this country on deputation work. The others have gone to occupy important positions in their native country.

SEAMEN'S HOSPITAL.—A Court of the Governors of the Seamen's Hospital (late Dreadnought) was held at 2 p.m., on the 13th inst., at 39, Fenchurch-street. The Secretary reported that he had, in accordance with instructions, negociated a loan of £1000 from the Society's bankers, Messrs. Williams, Deacon & Co., in order to meet the accounts of the past quarter. This hospital is doing good work, and the number of both in-patients at Greenwich, and out-patients at the dispensary, Well-street, London Docks, is steadily increasing. Several life-governors were elected, and the meeting adjourned.

AMONG NORTH-SEA FISHERMEN.

THAMES CHURCH MISSION.

OUR readers whose sympathy and prayers have been evoked on behalf of the Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen, will be gratified to learn that on Sunday, the 8th inst., a deeply-interesting and altogether unique religious service took place on the Fish Dock, Grimsby, under the presidency of the Mayor (Councillor W. Jackson). The occasion was the dedication of the smack Salem, a nearly new vessel of the first-class, of 81 tons register, purchased by several gentlemen connected with the Thames Church Mission, and fitted out under the direction of Mr. E. J. Mather, the Secretary of the Mission, for the religious service of the Humber fleets.

A congregation of many hundreds of people crowded the decks of the Salem and adjacent smacks on this occasion, and the Mayor opened the proceedings by giving out the hymn, "Come, thou Fount of every blessing," and reading a portion of Luke viii.

Mr. MATHER described how he was led to embark on this new enterprise, and the state in which he found other as well as Grimsby fishermen. There was a lack of medicine and necessary surgical appliances that was truly distressing. It was felt that if anything could be done to alleviate such suffering it ought to be done; that the Londoners, who benefited by these hauls of fish in the North Sea, should do something to help the fishermen spiritually. It was not only a question of bruises or illness, but of counteracting the baneful influence and effects of the Dutch grog-ships, the "copers," where the men went to get their tobacco, but where they very often became senselessly intoxicated with the vile spirits sold to them. When he saw these Dutch vessels plying their hurtful trade, he thought thus: "If the devil can afford to have a ship out here, why cannot there be one for God and his Christ?" From that thought came the resolution that there should be a Gospel ship. If, however, a vessel went out simply to carry the Gospel, the crews of the other smacks would not come to her; but if a poor fellow had a smashed hand, or was suffering from any disease or ailment, and knew there was a medicine-chest aboard of her at his service; if with plenty of time on their hands men knew there was a good library and plenty of useful reading for the asking, then such a vessel would be an attraction, and a special blessing would follow in her wake.

On the representations of Mr. Harrison Mudd to him (Mr. Mather) regarding the promising sphere for missionary work amongst the Humber fleets, so powerful a case was made out to the liberal-minded gentlemen who had already given largely of their means, that he was at once instructed to purchase a vessel for equipment in the interests of Grimsby and Hull, and for service with the fishing fleets of those ports alternately or conjointly. The smack Salem was thereupon purchased, and speedily converted into a well-appointed missionary ship. He earnesty asked the prayers of those around for a blessing on the vessel, and said this was not a question of building up a society or a cause, save Christ's cause, and anybody who loved the Lord Jesus Christ would be welcome to go out if a good sailor and feeling that he could be useful.

The MAYOR said he desired, as chief magistrate of the borough, to mark by his presence there that day his full approval of the object for which they were met, and his thanks to the Thames Church Mission for the liberality which had prompted the furnishing of this vessel for Christian work amongst the poor fishermen of the North Sea. He knew of no movement which had given more gladness to his heart than the setting apart of this vessel for the spiritual benefit of those who "go down to the sea in ships, and do business on the great waters." He hoped they would rally round their captain, for through the instrumentality of such men, homes in Grimsby, once dens of infamy, were turned into Christian habitations, and might the time speedily arrive when hundreds more of our fishermen would give their hearts to God! He was certain that every true-hearted man of Grimsby would wish the Salem every success, and would be glad to do all that lay in their power to promote the prosperity of her mission.

Mr. Councillor MUDD said Mr. Mather, Mr. Dashwood, and other friends of the Thames Church Mission were most anxious to know how the Grimsby people would receive this Mission ship, and in order to answer that question he had made it his duty to institute inquiries during the last few days. He was proud to say that one and all looked upon the setting apart of the Salem for this work as a blessing to the trade of the port. One of the largest of the smack-owners said, "I look upon it as a blessing to the port, and I earnestly hope and pray that not merely will the vessel be successful in the spiritual ministrations aboard of her, but that she will also be a financial success, in order to requite the liberal-minded gentlemen who have furnished her."

Since writing the above, we have received the following from the master of the mission smack Ensign:—"A most blessed day last Lord's day. Thirteen at the early prayer-meeting, and eighty-one men and boys at the morning service; 108 in the afternoon; and all through the day we had the presence of the Master. Several have come over on the Lord's side since Mr. Mather was with us (about three weeks since)—five skippers, besides men. Praise the Lord!

"I do feel especially thankful for the turning of Captain —— to God; and he is very bold too, telling all his old mates he has walked in the dark long enough, and now, by God's grace, he means to walk with Him.

"Captain ——, too, has publicly confessed Christ. He remarked yesterday, 'When first the Ensign came out I said to my crew, "What do they think they are going to do with her? What's the use of her?" But now I thank God that her coming has been a blessing to me.'"

HAYTI, WEST INDIES.

I BEG to inform you that I have received seven copies of THE CHRISTIAN, which appear to me the gift of some unknown but withal kind Christian friend. I am desirous of making that friend know how very thankfully I regard this act of kindness.

With this grateful acknowledgment I cannot refrain from saying that apart from the valuable instructions which the paper furnishes, I am greatly benefited and encouraged by the account of the labours and successes of Christian workers in various parts of the field. Labouring as I do among a people sunken in Pagan superstitions and Papal errors, it would be a source of encouragement and strength to know that in the prayers and supplications of God's people throughout Christendom a place may be claimed in behalf of the Haytian Mission. I am engaged in missionary work here under the influence and control of the Jamaican Baptist Missionary Society for over four years.

We have to encounter from time to time much interruption in our work; even now the country is in a very unsettled state. But there is no doubt that all these events may be overruled so as to produce a glorious future which shall see the people won over from error and superstition, accept the Gospel, and rejoice, being "delivered from . . . bondage . . . into the glorious liberty of the children of God." Brethren, pray for us. French Bibles, Testaments, and tracts, with a few copies of the same in English to meet the wants of a small number of British subjects, would be very acceptable from any Christian friend who would kindly send them to my address.

D. N. M. KITCHEN, Baptist Missionary.
Port de Paix, Hayti, West Indies.

[We have many missionaries, &c on our free list., We shall be happy to give the names of others to friends who wish to send them their copies when read; or to send copies on their account to any whose names may be sent us for that purpose.]

FIRST RIPE FRUIT FROM CORSICA.

IT is only for a short time that anything has been done for this corner of the Lord's vineyard. M. Comte, a colporteur, has been labouring in Corsica for a few years. Last year he was joined by M. Malan, an evangelist, who is stationed at Bastia, and is in charge of a "Salle des Conferences" opened by M. Salliens, of Marseilles.

At the beginning of this year, Mrs. Whitby, the widow of an English officer, joined the little Mission party, and is devoting herself to visiting and teaching among women and children.

A young woman who was brought to a knowledge of the Lord Jesus, has lately passed away; her death was triumphant, though her sufferings were great. She assured all who came near her, ere she departed, of her safety in Christ, and sought to impress upon them all the necessity, as well as the joy, of knowing Jesus as their Saviour. C. A. H.

TAUNTON MISSION.

MAJOR and Mrs. Poole have had a most successful Mission at Taunton. A large marquee, holding 1600 persons, was nightly crowded to excess, hundreds standing outside, and a large number of new pledges were taken. The mid-day prayer-meetings were largely attended, and Christians of all denominations united in the movement, and witnessed to the fact that Taunton was never so deeply stirred before. The most glorious and remarkable work was seen at the after-meetings, which were attended nightly by over seven hundred people, and an earnest inquiry as to salvation arose in many hearts. The Lord's people in this town have for many years been pleading for a revival of his work in their midst. They have recognised with joy and thankfulness his gracious answer in the visit of these dear servants of his, which is being followed with such ample showers of blessing. On Thursday, July 19, the Major and his wife revisit Tiverton, the scene of their labours last August, where great preparations are being made for a series of meetings to be conducted by them.

SCRIPTURAL TEXTS ASSOCIATION.

UNDER this name an association has just been formed, having for its object the spread of the glorious Gospel of Christ, by placing texts of Scripture in tram-cars, omnibuses, &c. Hundreds of travellers daily use these vehicles, and this affords an opportunity of putting the Word of God before many who perhaps never read it. We know who has said, "My Word shall not return unto Me void," and this work is begun with the earnest prayer that He will own and bless that Word, in "turning many from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God."

Some time ago a gentleman who was anxious about his soul was passing down the Strand, and was arrested by this text in a shop-window, "Ye must be born again." God blessed those words to his conversion. Those who thus sowed the good seed by the way-side will rejoice in the great Harvest Home. The number of the London Tramway Company's cars exceeds 200, and the passenger traffic, which is steadily increasing, exceeds forty millions annually.

The cost of space for one text in a tram-car is ten shillings a year.

Who will help us thus to "sow the seed"? Any subscriptions will be gladly received and acknowledged by Mrs. Wood, 191, South Lambeth-road, S.W.; or the Hon. Treasurer, Mrs. Dorin, 344, Clapham-road, S.W.

TEMPERANCE—WATFORD.—The first anniversary of the Blue Ribbon movement in this town was held last week. A large audience assembled in the Agricultural Hall. Mr. W. Forbes, who commenced the work here last year, gave an address. About 3500 have put on the blue ribbon during the year. Mr. Forbes is now at Otley, in Yorkshire.

CARING FOR THE POOR.

IN 1835, when the minds of many thoughtful men were exercised by subtle theological questions, Gustave Werner, a young curate, near Reutlingen, Würtemberg, solved many knotty points by living out that pure and undefiled religion which consists in visiting the fatherless and widows in their affliction.

Touched by the desolation of six children, whose last remaining parent had just died, he took some of the youngest to live with him. Shortly after he received some others, and when he had ten he felt the necessity of building a suitable home for them. At this time he could carry all he was worth in his waistcoat-pocket, but his preaching was always concluded by a collection for the poor.

In 1840, when he had thirty children to care or, several young girls consecrated themselves to this rapidly increasing family. He now gave his whole time to the work, being efficiently helped by a house-mother and his wife. In addition to the ordinary education given, many methods were devised by which money was earned, such as knitting; then a little farm was added; the work still growing, and some skilled artisans having joined the little community, a corn-mill was taken, then a paper-mill, a baking business, a tannery, shoe-making, carpentering, bookbinding, weaving, &c., were added. This large family of associates bore their share of the cares, and contributed to the common gain.

By continuous work and the severest economy, the association was self-supporting. Gifts and the capital gained were employed in further extension of the work; a woollen spinning factory, a cutlery, and more land were bought, in all of which neglected or abandoned boys and girls were employed. All the works, many of which were miles apart, were visited every fortnight by Herr Werner, who, in order to do this, had long and difficult walks to take, often in the night, over deep snow. All is under the control of this one noble man, but if any important decisions are to be made the director takes counsel with some experienced and intelligent friends.

A few years ago, there were some difficulties through the building of a large paper-mill, but Herr Werner did not lose the confidence of any, and since then this work has gone on so well, under the skilful and prudent administration of its director, Herr Sauter, that it obtained a diploma of honour at the Stuttgart Exhibition. Herr Gustave Werner is now seventy-three years of age; may the evening of his life be cheered by the Sun of Righteousness, and by the remembrance of the large band of children who arise and call him blessed.

ARMY SCRIPTURE-READERS' SOCIETY.—Mrs. Evered Poole has issued a report of her "Juvenile Association" in aid of this Society. The number has increased to 1800 during the past year. The children belonging to this association now support two Scripture-readers, one in Egypt and the other at Gibraltar. The report of this very interesting work may be obtained from Mrs. Evered Poole, Enfield House, Southampton.

A THREEFOLD TESTIMONY.—Mr. C. R. Hurditch has issued the speeches made by Earl Shaftesbury, S. Morley, Esq., M.P., and R. Radcliffe, Esq., at his annual Convention at the Town Hall, Kensington, on June 14 last, in pamphlet form. At the close of the same is an appeal by Mr. Hurditch, in which he says:—"To meet the exigencies of the work already established, and provide for room urgently required, we stated that £10,000 would be the lowest sum with which we could hope to carry out these objects during the present year. But will not some of the Lord's people "arise" and place far more than this in the exhausted exchequer, and enable us to carry the battle more to the gate, with the old and tried weapons—not carnal, but spiritual—of a simple, earnest proclamation of the GLORIOUS GOSPEL of THE GOOD OLD BOOK, accompanied also by all the efforts that the Lord has so sanctioned, in children's services, mothers' meetings, colportage work, rescue work among the fallen, and many such? so that the year on which we have entered shall witness greater victories for Christ, in the ingathering of souls from among the masses.

MY BABY'S SERMON.*

By MRS. G. S. REANEY.

(Mrs. Harcourt, in one of the neatest of neat little cottages, talking to a neighbour who had brought her work, and come in to sit an hour.)

"MAYBE you have heard it said that every Christian woman is a living sermon; her life preaching a discourse, not easily forgotten, to her husband, and children, and neighbours. I've thought many a time how wide-awake a 'living sermon' keeps one. The best of us take a nap sometimes on Sunday; we've been working hard all the week, and we are a bit drowsy, and can't help a nod or two by the time the minister gets to his 'Fourthly, brethren'; but there's no napping under one of these 'living sermons;' they seem to come knocking up against our hearts, and tapping our consciences with a 'There I have you,' that is sure to drive the sleep away. There's a power in a life that you don't get in mere words! It's very comforting to me sometimes, for it explains a bit how hard-working women, with home duties and cares occupying every minute of their time, are able to live and work for the Lord Jesus Christ. Just to think that instead of our neglecting religion and working a bit for the good of others because we've such a busy life of it, the very busy-ness of our lives is to be our religion; our home-duties and cares are the means whereby we can show forth God's glory. When you think of this, doesn't it make you feel you have a grand motive for keeping the floors clean, and polishing the chairs till they are that bright you can see your face in them? Does it not make it worth while trying to bear with the unkind tongues of your neighbours, and to be patient and tender with the children, though one's head splits with aching, and the chimney will smoke on washing days?

"But talking of 'living sermons,' who would think a babe could preach one? You listen now, and I will tell you what my little Timothy preached me when he was about three months old. It was a Sunday morning in June, and they had all gone to chapel, leaving me at home. I could not help fretting a bit when I saw them start, for I did so enjoy my Sundays before baby came, and now I should have no more until he was turned at least six months; for our minister, being a bachelor, is over-fidgety about the children—the faintest cry seems to disturb him—and if it should be that the little darling will not be hushed off all in a moment, he'll stop, maybe, and say, not unkindly, but for all that it makes one go hot all over, 'Please remove that child.' Eh! my John would be in a state of mind if ever that was said to our baby! I was thinking about this until baby began to cry, because I expect I had gone quiet all at once, and he liked me to talk to him, and move backwards and forwards. Well, when baby began to cry, of course I began to hush the little darling, and to do my best to comfort it, when, like a flash of light, that verse came into my mind, 'As one whom his mother comforteth, so will I comfort you.' Oh, how it thrilled me! I never knew before what it really meant. Was I not fondling my babe, and trying my best to soothe it, dear little lamb? Didn't I put my face to his face, and whisper sweet loving words to him? Could it be that God did all this to me? Was He really so mindful of us that He heard our wailings, and soothed us in our heart-cries? I pressed my little darling more closely to me, for the thought was so sweet, that like as I wanted to comfort him, so God wanted to comfort me; when in an instant other words rushed into my mind, 'The eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms' (Deut. xxxiii. 27). Ah! how tightly I held my boy; he could not slip or fall; he need have no fear, but just trust himself to my keeping, and I—yes, it was just the same—his arms were underneath me, why should I tremble or fear? I surely could not fall or come to harm while He held me closely to Him. How often, when trials and temptations came, I felt tottering and ready to despair. I would try and remember the 'Eternal God' was my 'Refuge,' then I should never feel lonely, or tired, or uncared for again.

"There was my boy smiling as I drew him to me; why shouldn't I smile, and trust my heavenly Father just as simply and as fully? But baby was such a baby; yes, but that was just it, 'Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven.'

"The more Christ-like, the more trusting. We are to be converted first, then to become like little children. As we grow in grace, so we learn to take God at his word. Oh! my babe seemed to be so perfectly happy and free from care, nestling up to my breast, with his head pillowed on my arm, and his eyes fixed upon my face. My own eyes filled with tears as I thought of the cruel treatment many little innocent darlings meet with from cruel mothers. Then I remembered these words: 'Can a woman forget her sucking child, that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? yea, they may forget, yet will I not forget thee. Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands,' (Isa. xlix. 15, 16). And I began to ponder a bit over that 'never being forgotten.' It did seem very marvellous that we should be always in God's thoughts.

What a comfort to know it! We mothers know what it means to be always thinking about anyone. It comes to us when we have little helpless babes always depending upon us. We must be mindful of them, precious little ones, because they cannot take care of themselves; and isn't it a pleasure to do things for them? Who ever wearied of making the baby its pretty frocks and coats? Ah! there again. 'If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts to your children, how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask Him?' How much more? Right above and beyond anything we can possibly imagine, that's what it means, I suppose,—a right down settled thing, that if we are only willing to receive it, God has the good gift of his Holy Spirit to bestow upon us. Oh! what a great deal you are teaching me, Timothy! What! are you going to sleep? Then mother will put you down, little darling; but she won't be far away when you waken. Dear me, how frightened I used to be when I first got into the way of leaving baby by himself, for fear he should wake up and I not hear him! How I used to go about the house on tip-toe, listening for his cry! Oh, yes; and that's what it means: 'The Lord is my helper,' 'the Lord owns to my cry'; for that's the literal meaning, the minister told us once. How I run when baby cries! and does not our heavenly Father listen for our wakening up, and does He not run to help us when we cry?

"I have only told you a very little bit of my baby's sermon. Like all good sermons, it made me long to be better, and it drove me to my knees. I thought if God loved me as I loved baby, it was hard and cruel of me to think so little about Him,—as I seemed to have done up to that time,—and ever since that Sunday I have been so much happier. When my John speaks a bit sharp to me (as he does sometimes, though he is one of the best husbands that ever breathed) I just press my cheek to baby's, and the angry words that rise to my lips die away without being spoken. And when I get out of heart and patience sometimes, and feel everything to be going wrong, I give baby a good big hug, and think, as I feel my heart swell with love for my little son, 'Casting all your care upon Him, for He careth for you.'"

MERSEY MISSION TO SEAMEN.—This Mission promotes the spiritual, moral, and social well-being of the seamen who frequent the port of Liverpool. It has seven Mission-rooms, including Liverpool, Birkenhead, Runcorn, and Ellesmere port, all of which are centres for steady work. The office is 8, Price-street, Liverpool.

Y.M.C.A. FOR BLACKBURN.—A meeting was held at Blackburn on the 8th inst. for the purpose of forming a Y.M.C. Association. There was a large attendance of young men, and several addresses were given by different ministers and others in advocacy of the same, and a committee was appointed.

Letters to the Editor.

SYRIAN COLONISATION FUND.

Sir,—Will you allow us to state, in your columns, that no society or committee for aiding Jewish refugees at Jerusalem or elsewhere is under the presidency of the Earl of Shaftesbury, excepting the "Syrian Colonisation Fund." Further, that all funds contributed to this fund over and above the sum required by Her Majesty's Government for maintenance of the Jews, to whom a free grant of land is assigned in Cyprus, will be devoted to relief of Jewish refugees at Jerusalem and elsewhere in the Land of Promise, by helping them to settle in honest industry. This in token of Christian sympathy with suffering Jews. No one is authorised to collect for this fund except our own bankers,—On behalf of the Committee,

July 13. E. A. Finn, Secretary.

GAMBLING AT HOME AND ABROAD.

Sir,—The leading article in your last week's paper draws attention to the rapidly growing evil of gambling on the Continent, and The Times of the same date mentions that in Berlin private gambling is becoming as bad as at Monaco. I regret to say that the thin edge of the wedge is being tried here at the Casino, where gambling on a mild scale has been begun, but at which stage it will most certainly not stop, if the public voice of God's people is not raised against it.

On Sundays as well as weekdays this hateful vice, accompanied by attractive music, is busy at work, and I regret to find that many of the supporters of the table (even on Sundays) are English, who, if at home, would be ashamed to be found on the Lord's day at such an occupation. It behoves all sincere Christian people to avoid even entering the grounds of the Casino, or such like places where gambling is allowed, and thus by silent protest to show their abhorrence of this detestable vice, which must sooner or later attract around it the many other sins which belong to it.

At Pau and at Biarritz, gambling has taken deep root in the English clubs, and is doing immense harm amongst our young men who visit those places.

Hoping you will again and again draw the attention of Christians to their duty in this matter, Interlaken, July 6. A Swiss Tourist.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

Sir,—Your correspondent "G. H. P." has made a lengthy indictment against the Salvation Army, but, on analysis, the sole argument appears to be that its principles and organisation are the same as those of the Jesuits. The only resemblance is that the operations of the Salvation Army are directed by one man instead of a committee, as with most of our evangelising societies, and that its organisation is of a very perfect description and adapted to the ends sought.

Both the means used and the ends to be gained are totally different from those of the Jesuits. The statement that the Salvation Army uses secret means and orders is almost too glaringly untrue to need refutation, and not one of the numerous attacks made on it has brought forward as secret anything which has not been open to the public for years.

The end sought by the Jesuits was to uphold the Papacy by any and every means; that sought by the Salvation Army is the salvation of sinners by the simple preaching of the Gospel, the setting right of the lives of those who are wrong, and the uniting of families (not disuniting) in one bond of love to the Saviour, and I may add that their ends have been secured in thousands of cases. I should like your correspondent to point to the secret confessional of the Salvation Army.

Every aggressive (and indeed every) work to be successful must have a head in whom the followers have confidence. How many good works have been scattered by this same principle of voting and discussion!

I contend that Mr. Booth allows more freedom of action to his officers than any religious body, and recognises also (perhaps more than any) the power of the Holy Spirit to work through any truly saved person, even the humblest; anyone who doubts this should read the reports from his agents in India, Australia, New Zealand, and elsewhere.

The bond uniting the officers and General of the Salvation Army is one of Christian love and zeal for the salvation of souls, and those who do not feel confidence are under no vow or obligation to remain in a relation which is entirely a voluntary one for the good of others.

I have yet to learn (as "G. H. P." implies) that persecution is any proof of a work not being of God, indeed, quite the contrary, or our Lord Jesus Christ Himself is entirely wrong.

"G. H. P." assumes that "pioneers or rough forces" are not wanted in Protestant countries. I imagine a residence in many localities visited by the Salvation Army would teach him the contrary. Perhaps he thinks that the slums of our large cities are happy hunting-grounds of our Protestant pastors—their special preserves, in which they are not to be disturbed. That godly men and women, however, have been working for years I have never heard the Booths deny, but that the means used have been hitherto quite inadequate to the end is only too palpable. That many even amongst the poor are reached better by other means than the Salvation Army I know, but surely there is enough work left yet for Christians to do, without this fearful spirit of bitterness, whilst they hold the same grand doctrines of the faith.

I must protest against the base and Jesuitical manner in which an anonymous writer endeavours to attach the stigma of "bereaved parents," "helpless victims," and "the hidden things of darkness," to an organisation which has benefited incalculably tens of thousands of our English working-classes, and which is conducted in a manner courting the fullest investigation.

I am at present personally unacquainted with Mr. Booth and his family, but my sympathy was first drawn to the Army by the grand testimony of leading Christian men belonging to the Church of England, Baptist, and other denominations, as to the good it was doing, and, in the words of "G. H. P.," I would "entreat Christians not to continue to believe the testimony the Army bears of itself" without seeing and hearing for themselves. W. B. Habeershon.

Ealing.

P.S.—I should like to refer to almost every point in "G. H. P.'s" letter in detail, but am unwilling to take up more of your space.

Requests for Praise and Prayer.

PRAYER.—For a son abroad who has fallen into sin.——For special services being held at Fraserburgh amongst the fishermen, by Messrs. Paterson, Smith, Stuart, and Mitchell.——For God's blessing upon a lengthened series of Tent Services, commencing Sunday, July 1, in the grounds of the Y.M.C., North End, Croydon.——That a Baptist minister may be restored to health.——For blessing on seventeen days' special services in a tent at Abingdon, Berkshire.——For Deacon Abraham's work in Oroomiah.——For a great shower of blessing on the wicked town of Merthyr Tydvil.——For a young man who once professed to be saved, but has gone back into worldliness and scepticism.——For the speedy recovery of Mrs. E. J. Carr from rheumatic fever.

Mission and other Appeals.

Toulon.—We invite the attention of the Christian Church to the work of M. Massis at Toulon, which is prospering spiritually, but which is just now much in need of financial help. Contributions may be sent to our care.

Books Wanted.—Mr. George Wingfield (33, Union-street, Borough), superintendent of St. Michael's Mission Schools, Lant-street, Borough, S.E., will be glad to receive any soiled or old books to form a library for the children who attend his Mission. Mrs. E. M. Dimsdale, 15, Liverpool-street, Walworth-road, London, will also be glad of suitable books for girls, which will be gratefully acknowledged if address of sender is given.

Books for Shipping.—Many thousands of books, &c., were destroyed at sea in the long-continued heavy weather of last winter, as 5546 ships sailed last year from thirty seaports with libraries or large bags of reading, and 918 other ships with packets of literature from the Missions to Seamen. Upwards of half a million of disused Bibles, Prayer-books, hymn-books, library books, magazines, periodicals, and tracts, all free gifts to the Missions to Seamen (11, Buckingham-street, Strand, London, W.C.), were placed on board ships, barges, or fishing vessels during the year 1882. Further supplies are much needed at the 46 seaports we occupy, especially for the Missions to Seamen at Southampton, Cardiff, Penarth, Swansea, Ipswich, South Shields, Portland, Plymouth, Falmouth, Belfast, and Malta. They can be sent, carriage paid, to those addresses, or to Commander Wm. Dawson, 11, Buckingham-street, Strand, London, W.C.

Notices of Books, &c.

The very able discourse delivered at the City Temple, last May, by Rev. E. E. Jenkins, on behalf of the London Missionary Society, has been published in pamphlet form by Mr T. Woolmer, 2, Castle-street, City-road, E.C. The title of the sermon is, "To Whom shall we go?"

Daniel's Last Vision; an attempted Explanation. By the Rev. G. L. Gibbs, M.A. Is. Hatchards. Students of prophecy will find here an interesting argument intended to show that "the king," referred to in Daniel xi, who "shall exalt himself and magnify himself above every god," is the Moslem Empire, viewed as a political and religious force. The author's views may certainly lay claim to originality, and deserve consideration by those who have opportunity to investigate the theory he upholds.

Lilies and Shamrocks. By C. W. A. and Frances Ridley Havergal. Nisbet. Another monument of the sanctified genius and thorough consecration which the sainted authoress possessed and evinced. It will be useful in awakening and increasing sympathy with the needs of Ireland, in the interests of which its varied pages were written. It contains practical hints and counsels which Christian workers will find very helpful. Mrs. Ashby's little allegory of the Lilies forms a charming introduction to Miss Havergal's letters.

First Steps to Temperance. By the Author of "Miss Margaret's Stories," &c. National Temperance Publication Depôt. Intended for young children in schools, families, or Bands of Hope. It is crowded with facts and arguments simply stated, and carefully selected. The questions placed at the end of each chapter add greatly to its usefulness, which must be very great in the service of Temperance principles. Total abstainers cannot do better than place it in the hands of their children. It will not only make them teetotallers, but enable them to say why they are so.

Life and Labours of George Muller, of Bristol. By Mrs. Muller. J. Nisbet & Co. This is a condensed account of facts recorded in the well-known volumes entitled "A Narrative of some of the Lord's Dealings with George Muller," and will be greatly valued by many who cannot obtain the larger work. Anything more calculated to encourage the actings of faith on the promises of God, or to guide those who are inquiring into the true nature and province of faith, can scarcely be found in all the annals of Christian life and labour. It is shortly to be followed by a similar volume, recounting Mr. Muller's missionary travels.

Universalism; or, The Witness of Reason and Scripture Concerning Future Punishment. A lecture, by T. M. Macdonald, M.A., Prebendary of Lincoln. 6d. Hatchards. We regard this treatise as a really valuable contribution to the solemn subject to which it refers. Its plea for the authority of Revelation over human speculations is strong and convincing. As the author says, "nineteenth-century thought cannot overtake the wisdom of God." Whether we regard the fairness of its criticism, its reverent faith in Holy Scripture, or its thoroughly Evangelical spirit, the book is to be highly commended, and cannot fail to do good service to the cause of truth.

Life's Eventide; or, Loving Words to Aged Pilgrims. By William Frith, of Gunnersbury. Partridge & Co. Mr. Frith has produced in this little volume a very useful and eminently suitable companion for those who are far advanced on the journey of life. The tone of the book is bright and cheerful, while its matter abounds with clear expositions of Scripture, and is rich in spiritual and experimental teaching concerning the things which make for the peace and prosperity of the soul. There are numerous extracts from the best-known poets of the Church of Christ, which are well chosen and sure to be appreciated by the devout reader. We cordially commend the book, and bid it God-speed.

The Wonders of Redeeming Grace. By Rev. John Hammond. Wesleyan Conference Office, 2, Castle-street, City-road, London. This is an interesting account of the conversion, and subsequent life and labours of Mr. John Wooldridge, a devoted Evangelist in the Primitive Methodist body. It is indeed a record of "redeeming grace." The early life of John Wooldridge presents a very black picture indeed; he was "a brand plucked from the fire." His devotion to the Lord in service after conversion is a beautiful example of what grace can do. It deserves circulation especially among the working classes. The implicit confidence in God concerning temporal necessities displayed in this book is worthy of imitation by all Christians. The binding is good, but the typography is faulty.

MESSRS. CASSELL & Co.'s SERIALS. — We have so often commended this valuable budget of educational and instructive works that we can do little more than repeat in varying phraseology what we have frequently said before. The generally attractive and finished style of publication, as well as the profuse and artistic illustrations, have largely helped to give these issues the high place they occupy in public estimation. Archdeacon Farrar's Life and Work of St. Paul (part 18, 7d.), deals with the Epistles to the Galatians and Romans, and is profoundly interesting to the student of the Sacred Volume. The Magazine of Art (1s.) is beyond all praise in its special department—the exposition and illustration of the beautiful. The same may truthfully be said of Familiar Garden Flowers (7d.). Those works dealing with varied aspects of physical nature each possesses a special attraction: The World of Wonders (part 9, 6d.), Our Own Country (part 57, 7d.), Old and New London (part 46, including an extra number, 8½d.), and Greater London (part 9, 7d.). All these four will be found good holiday reading, as the mind will be in tune with the beautiful ministries of nature. In The Peoples of the World (part 23, 7d.) we have much curious information about the Ashantis and the people of Dahomey. Cassell's Concise Cyclopædia (part 17, 6d.) has reached the letter M, and furnishes a great body of varied and useful knowledge. Our Homes, and How to Make them Healthy (part 17, 7d.) expatiates learnedly and exhaustively on the very important topic of the uses of water in connection with the household. Bishop Ellicot's New Testament Commentary (part 40, 7d.), commencing the pastoral epistles of Paul, throws much genuine expository light on the 1st Epistle to Timothy. Doré's Illustrated Bible (part 39, 7d.) gives four engravings purporting to represent tragic scenes in connection with the trial, death, and resurrection of our Lord. Gleanings from Popular Authors (part 22, 7d.) is at once descriptive, amusing, pathetic, and tragical.

THE CHILDREN IN THE CONGREGATION.

THERE is no more beautiful sight than a congregation assembled in families—father, mother, and children seated together, and united in divine worship. That this is a sight less common than it used to be or than it ought to be, few persons will deny. It is not infrequently the case that the young people of a household attend one place while the older members of the same group go by themselves to another. As to the little ones in the nursery, many parents think it hardly less than cruel to take them to church, where they will be obliged to sit still, where they can understand only a small portion of the sermon, and where they shall be wearied by the irksome confinement. It is urged, too, that if children are compelled while little to go to church, they will acquire for it so great a dislike (not to say hatred) that as soon as they reach maturity they will cease to go at all, and, rushing to the opposite extreme, will spend the Sunday in rioting, feasting, and unhallowed pleasures. We question very much whether the children, and even the very little ones, have the disagreeable associations with church-going which are ascribed to them. Probably they enjoy it more than their mistaken elders suppose. At least, that is the uniform testimony to be obtained from tripping feet and beaming eyes and merry looks as they run to get ready. Very few children are not glad, and do not feel honoured, when taken to the house of God.—Christian Intelligencer.

MISSION WORK IN NORWICH.—The report of this Mission states that the object of the promoters is to provide continuous evangelistic services of such a thoroughly undenominational character as to make the Mission useful to the churches and helpful to ministers; the promotion and extension of Godly union and concord, and the manifestation of brotherly love. The quarterly United Communion Service is conducted by ministers of different denominations, and the number attending it has more than doubled in two years. If the division of the Church into sections be inevitable (and it seems that such is the case), it follows that, in order "to keep the unity of the Spirit," co-operation among Christians is an imperative duty as well as a great privilege. There are many encouraging indications of an increasing desire for such fellowship in worship and service, and the undenominational worker is an important factor in aggressive efforts. R. A.

An Open Door of Serbice among Christ's Little Ones.

THE VILLAGE HOME FOR GIRLS, AT ILFORD,

Is now quite full, while every day urgent applications are received on behalf of needy Candidates for admission.

But, three and a half additional acres of Land have been obtained close to the Village, on which to erect Fifteen Fresh Cottages, and needful School Buildings.

A Lady near Newcastle has just given £600 to supply one of the first of these.

It is thought that there are some readers of THE CHRISTIAN who, knowing the need, may wish to contribute a small House to hold 20 Little Girls, to be snatched by Christ's servants from positions of danger or suffering, and trained in Christian ways.

If promises enough were received soon, the work could be begun during this fine weather; and next summer would, if God wills, see the Fifteen Houses taken possession of for their holy purpose.

Communications are invited, and may be addressed to

SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS

NOT

SINLESS PERFECTION.

By CHARLES GRAHAM.

The Sword and Trowel says:—"So far as we can see, this is a sound book. If this is all that the Holiness people have meant, we cannot make out why there has been so much noise over the matter. To us these new revelations are nothing but the common-places of experimental divinity. With considerable skill and sagacity Mr. GRAHAM has proved his title, and wheeled away much fanatical rubbish. Anything which will promote true holiness has all our heart."

BOOKS FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

GEORGE WHITEFIELD: HIS LIFE AND TIMES.

By J. R. ANDREWS. Cheap Edition, 6d.; with Portrait, Cloth limp, 1s.; Cloth board, 1s. 6d.; with Engraved Portrait, Cloth neat, 5s. (post-free).

"Whitefield was not a framer of discipline, not a leader of a sect, not a founder of societies, not a ruler of men, but pre-eminently a winner of souls. Would that such preachers were multiplied in the present day! We thank Mr. Andrews for this seasonable addition to our religious biography. No young preacher or student should be without it. But it possesses an interest far beyond any special class, and deserves a wide and general circulation."—Methodist Recorder.

BY ANNA SHIPTON.

"TELL JESUS."

Recollections of Emily Gosse. Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.; Cloth elegant, Gilt edges, 2s. Also a Cheap Edition for general distribution, price 6d.

"Presents us with notices of a life spent in loving, intimate, and uninterrupted communion with a personal Lord. . . . We have read the book with deep interest. We would that indolent professors might read it and be quickened, and that suffering saints might read it and be comforted."—Christian Times.

WHISPERS IN THE PALMS.

A Volume of Hymns and Poetic Meditations. Printed on Toned Paper, and attractively bound, Gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"A truly pious and Christian mind alone could have uttered these 'Whispers.' They breathe a spirit so pure, and in the richest harmony. . . . The extremely tasteful and elegant style in which this edition has been produced reflects the highest credit upon the publishers."—British Workwoman.

THE BROOK IN THE WAY.

Hymns and Poems Illustrative of the Christian Life. Printed on Toned Paper, and elegantly bound, Gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"A collection of sacred songs, which, as rippling murmurs, are intended to guide the pilgrim to refreshing streams. . . . The waters to which it allures us are evangelically sweet and pure. Whoever listens to these murmurs and tastes these waters cannot fail to be refreshed."—Sword and Trowel.

Books for Children.

"NETTIE'S MISSION" SERIES OF SMALL BOOKS.

Cheap Edition, 6d.; Cloth neat, 1s. each.

"Without exception, among the very best books for children ever published. Nothing better as gift-books for the young can be desired."—Hive.

NETTIE'S MISSION; or, "Hallowed be thy Name."
LITTLE MARGERY; or, "Thy Kingdom come."
MARGERY'S HOME; or, "Thy Will be done."
MAGGIE RILEY; or, "Give us this Day our Daily Bread."
ROSY CONROY; or, "Forgive us our Debts."
NED DOLAN; or, "Lead us not into Temptation."

ALICE; or, The Early Crown.

By Rev. H. BURTON, B.A. Tinted Covers, 6d.; Cloth, 1s.

"A beautiful story of a Christian early sainted. It would be an admirable reward-book for thoughtful Sunday scholars."—Methodist Family.

LITTLE BUTTERCUP AND JENNY WREN.

Gilt Edges, with Frontispiece, price 2s. 6d.

By means of this attractive little story the authoress conveys to her youthful readers most impressive and precious lessons of contentment and thankfulness. From the histories of a Bird and a Flower, teachings of deep importance are educed and imparted to the minds of the young.

JOE WITLESS. A Book for Boys.

With Seven Illustrations. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.; Gilt edges, 2s. 6d.

"It is certainly an enjoyable thing to meet with a work professedly for children, written in language and style not only adapted to their capacities, but containing the important truths of the Gospel in a form sure to be acceptable to them."
Liverpool Daily Courier.

Tinted Covers, 6d.; Cloth, bevelled boards, 1s.

THE CHILD MINISTER. Records of a Young Life.

By ANNA SHIPTON.

"A tender narrative of the life and death of a pious child; calculated to benefit greatly, and to interest little children."—Sword and Trowel.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF JOHN B. GOUGH.

REVISED BY HIMSELF.

Cloth, Bevelled Boards, with Four Illustrations, 3s. 6d.; Cheap Edition, with Portrait, 1s.; Limp cloth, 1s. 6d.

"What need be said of the 'AUTOBIOGRAPHY' itself? It should be read and re-read. It is the record of a life as strange and eventful as it is impressive and instructive. . . . A more perfect knowledge of such a life cannot fail to strengthen the faith of some, and to inspire the zeal of others."—Temperance Record.

BY REV. J. MACPHERSON.

LIFE OF DUNCAN MATHESON, The Scottish Evangelist.

Thirty-sixth Thousand. With Engraved Portrait. Tinted Covers, 1s. 6d.; Cloth neat, 2s. 6d.

"The life of a noble, heroic, and self-denying man! It is the book for all who are engaged in evangelistic work—who wish to know how hearts are won, and Christ served."—The Freeman.

THE CHRISTIAN HERO.

A Memoir of Robert Annan, the zealous Evangelist. Large-Type Edition, Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d. Cheap Edition, Tinted Covers, 6d.

"We heartily thank the Rev. J. Macpherson for his well-written, graphic, and telling life of this 'Christian Hero.' It is a book to be read by all."—Baptist Messenger.

HENRY MOORHOUSE, The English Evangelist.

With Portrait. Handsomely Bound in Cloth, Bevelled Boards, 2s. 6d.

"The record is full of interesting incidents from which counsel and encouragement may be gathered; and we heartily commend it to the attention of those who would know what may be done by workers somewhat off the ordinary recognised lines."—The Rock.

BY REV. DR. CULROSS.

JOHN, WHOM JESUS LOVED.

Sketch of the Character, Writings, Theology, and Influence of the Beloved Disciple. New and Enlarged Edition. With Chromo-Lithographic Views of the "Sea of Galilee" and the "Isle of Patmos." Cloth, Bevelled Boards, 3s. 6d.

"This is not a book to be taken up lightly, read hurriedly, and carelessly dismissed. It merits, and will reward, a quiet, thoughtful perusal."—The Record.

"THY FIRST LOVE."

Christ's Message to Ephesus. With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece. Cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

"A clear and thoughtful exposition. Dr. Culross writes in an easy, interesting manner; sometimes quaintly, always pointedly. Many a laggard in the heavenly race would be stirred to activity by reading Dr. Culross' exposition."—Penuel.

"BEHOLD, I STAND AT THE DOOR, AND KNOCK."

Christ's Message to Laodicea. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; Cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

"A most opportune book. Would that every professing Christian would thoughtfully and prayerfully peruse it! Sunday-school teachers also would find it immensely stimulating and reviving."—Hive.

MARY LYON.

Recollections of a Noble Woman. By FIDELIA FISKE. Eleventh Thousand. Cheap Edition, Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth, 1s. 6d.

"Miss Lyon established, and for many years superintended, the Mount Holyoke Seminary, from whence a large number of devoted and earnest women have gone forth to do good service in the Master's cause. The author of the 'Recollections' was herself a pupil of Miss Lyon, and after labouring with much success in Persia, returned to South Hadley to succeed her former instructress."
Sunday-school Teacher.

FIDELIA FISKE.

The Story of a Consecrated Life. Edited by Rev. W. GUEST. Tenth Thousand. Superior Edition, with Engraved Portrait, 3s. 6d. (post-free). Cheap Edition, Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth, 1s. 6d.

"This charming memoir. . . . It is difficult to conceive of a more entire devotedness to the glory of God and the well-being of man than that which was the life-spring of this remarkable woman."—British Quarterly Review.

FIFTH SERIES OF WEEKLY CASES.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"

WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK

CASE of REV. A. K. DAVIDSON, of CHIPPING-SODBURY.

A little more than two years ago this patient was thoroughly prostrated and unfit to preach. The throat, the bronchial tubes, and lungs were all seriously affected.

He was ordered to lay aside all pastoral duties, to go to the seaside under special personal care, and commence at once with my balsam three times a day, the use of a gargle, lotion for sponging, a liniment, &c.

At the close of the same year a tonic was also ordered, composed of quinine, the aromatic sulphuric acid, &c.

Improvement shortly took place, which gradually continued to recovery. In a letter just received (April 5), writing me for medicine at reduced price for a poor friend, he says: "I have derived such benefit from your medicine that I strongly recommend it to all with whom I come in contact who suffer from any pulmonary disease."

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

ORIGINATED BY THE LATE DUNCAN MATHESON.

Twenty-fourth Year of Publication.

NEW AND IMPROVED SERIES

The Herald of Mercy consisting of Eight Quarto Pages, issued Monthly, commencing with January 1883,

PRICE ONE HALFPENNY.

and several smaller Engravings.

The pages of The Herald of Mercy are devoted to Articles and Poems which present the Gospel in an attractive manner, the burden of each number being the glorious truth proclaimed by Christ in John iii. 16:—"FOR GOD SO LOVED THE WORLD, THAT HE GAVE HIS ONLY-BEGOTTEN SON, THAT WHOSOEVER BELIEVETH IN HIM SHOULD NOT PERISH, BUT HAVE EVERLASTING LIFE."

The Herald of Mercy

CONTAINS

Stirring Narratives,
Pointed Appeals,
Earnest Exhortations,
Tender Warnings, &c., &c.,

both in Prose and Poetry, written expressly for the unconverted.

Each number contains a page

FOR THE YOUNG,

which consists of short Articles and interesting Anecdotes in simple language, with at least one Engraving.

TO TRACT DISTRIBUTORS.

Tract Distributors and District Visitors will find The Herald of Mercy very acceptable and attractive, both to young and old, and many who would refuse an ordinary tract gladly take this paper. It is printed in a good clear type, so as to be easily read, and is suitable alike for House-to-House Visitation; for a Loan Tract; for giving away; for circulation in Hospitals, Infirmaries, and Workhouses; for distributing to Soldiers in Barracks, Sailors in Port, Agricultural Labourers, Mechanics, Factory Workers, and others; and, in fact, for circulation in any and all the channels for which Tracts are usually required.

☞ The matter is so arranged that each number may be cut up into two 4-page or four 2-page Illustrated Tracts.

The Herald of Mercy

will be forwarded to any address in Great Britain, or to any country in the Postal Union, i.e., U.S.A., Canada, France, Spain, Italy, &c., as follows:—

BOOKS FOR ENQUIRERS AND CONVERTS.

Young Converts;

Or, Beginners in Zion's Ways. By Rev. R. BOYD, D.D. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.

I have been continually asked by young converts where they could get a book in which they might find advice that would be helpful to them. This book seemed just the thing needed at this time. I have known the author, Rev. Dr. Boyd, for many years as a dear father in Israel. I have read his work carefully, and recommend it to all young Christians for prayerful meditation." D. L. Moody

The Way of Life.

A Book for Enquirers. By Rev. ROBERT BOYD, D.D. Tinted Covers, 6d.; Cloth Boards, 1s.

"About fifteen years ago this little book attracted my notice. I read it with interest, and felt so much profited that I re-read it several times, and then circulated hundreds of copies among the soldiers during the American war. The number that then seemed blessed through reading the book has induced me to ask Messrs. Morgan & Scott to republish it, hoping that it may be the means of good in this country, as it has been in America." D. L. Moody

All About Jesus.

Thoughts and Reflections on the Person and Work of Christ. By ALEXANDER DICKSON. This book was printed at the express desire of Mr. D. L. MOODY. Tinted Covers, 1s. 6d.; Cloth, 2s. 6d.

"The volume sets forth Jesus very much in Scriptural language, for we have counted over 1340 passages of Holy Writ, chastely and lovingly interwoven in the discourses. Throughout, Jesus is the subject of delightful meditation, affection, and adoration."
The Methodist.

Addresses to Young Men.

By Rev. DANIEL BAKER. With Preface by D. L. MOODY. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.

"These discourses were designed to be of an awakening character. They were preached (in substance) in numerous revivals, and were blessed to the hopeful conversion of many precious souls, of whom some fifty or more have become ministers of the Gospel. May He who was pleased to bless these discourses when they came from the pulpit, bless them also now." AUTHOR'S PREFACE.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings;
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

BY THE AUTHOR OF "OH TO BE NOTHING!"

LAYS OF LOWLY SERVICE.

By GEORGIANA M. TAYLOR.

Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; Cloth Boards, 2s. Handsomely bound in Morocco, gilt edges, 4s. 6d.

Rev. C. H. SPURGEON says:—"Gladly we give a word of warm praise to this lady's efforts; her verses are true 'heart-breathings,' and so are sure to find an echo in many a loving, listening heart."

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings;
And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

Songs of The Gospel.

FRIENDLESS & FALLEN.

Will those readers about to leave home for a time, and who have not contributed, kindly do so, that the work may be maintained. EDWARD W. THOMAS.

Since my first appeal, on the 21st ult., I have received many contributions from kind friends interested in the work of the HOMES on behalf of FRIENDLESS and FALLEN YOUNG WOMEN and GIRLS. These I desire now VERY GRATEFULLY to acknowledge; also the many expressions of kind sympathy sent therewith.

"PRAISE THE LORD."

"Pray for us," that very many poor girls and young women may be saved both for TIME and ETERNITY.

Messrs. MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings, E.C., will receive contributions; the Bankers, Messrs. BOSANQUET SALT & Co., 73, Lombard-street, E.C.; FRANCIS NICHOLLS, Esq. (of the Committee), 14, Old Jewry-chambers, E.C.; or

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST. By D. L. MOODY. 13th THOUSAND. Tinted Covers, 4d.; Cloth Limp, 6d.

"The moment a man takes hold of the truth that Jesus is coming back again to receive his followers to Himself, this world loses its hold upon him. Gas stocks, and water stocks, and stocks in banks and railroads, are of very much less consequence to him then. His heart is free, and he looks for the blessed appearing of his Lord, who, at his coming, will take him into his blessed Kingdom."—Extract.

SCRIPTURE READERS' SOCIETY FOR IRELAND.
Supported by Voluntary Contributions.
President—

The Right Hon. the Earl of Shaftesbury, K.G. Established 1822, for the purpose of employing humble Christian men, well versed in the Scriptures, to visit from house to house throughout the country, and visit all denominations. Irish-speaking Readers are sent to Irish-speaking districts when required. The work is carried on in a spirit of love.

Subscriptions or Donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary, Capt. Kearney White, 27, Lower Pembroke-street, Dublin; or at 9, Paternoster-row, London.

The Earl of Shaftesbury says in his last letter to the Secretary:—Many thanks for your kind letter, and many thanks to Almighty God for the good intelligence you give me about your Scripture Readers in Ireland. I wish I could more effectively assist you. Your letter is the best thing that I have seen or heard from Ireland.

I enclose my donation, and only wish it was more.—Yours, Shaftesbury.

N.B.—Friends will please notice the exact title, "Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland," and not as "Irish Scripture Readers' Society."

MRS. WILKES proposes to be at home every Wednesday from Two till Five o'clock, for the purpose of seeing friends of Rescue Work. Trains from Liverpool-street to St. James-street Station, Walthamstow, every half-hour. "The Elms" is within five minutes' walk of the station. Elms, Coppermill-lane, Walthamstow, Essex.

THE HOPELESSLY INCURABLE.

The Unsuccessful Candidates.—The Committee of the Ladies' Samaritan Society of the National Hospital for the Paralysed and Epileptic, 23, Queen-square, Bloomsbury, earnestly plead for Contributions in aid of a collection they are making for the unsuccessful candidates at the recent election of pensioners. There were 44 candidates and only 5 pensions to bestow; 39 poor sufferers were consequently disappointed. To each of these the Committee desire to send a gift of money and they confidently appeal to the sympathy of the kind friends who have assisted at previous elections, and to the public generally. The smallest donations will be thankfully acknowledged by the Committee.

A DAY IN THE COUNTRY would greatly rejoice the poor of the Gee-street Christian Mission, Goswell-road. Please send subscriptions towards it, and for rent of Chapel, addressed to Henry Rudgley, Hon. Secretary, 82, Wood-street, Cheapside; or to Robert Baxter, Esq., Treasurer, 6, Victoria-street, Westminster; or Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, Tritton & Co., Bankers.

THE REV. JOHN H. HASLAM, Vicar of St. Matthias, Birmingham, and Mission Preacher, requires at once £400 to carry out certain necessary alterations, repairs, and improvements, in his Church and Schools, as his parish consists entirely of poor he asks the help of those who have benefited by or been interested in his work outside his parish. Any contributions will be gratefully acknowledged by him, if sent to 36, South-road, Handsworth, Birmingham.

Educational.

TO GODLY PARENTS.—The undermentioned (who is in no way connected with the school) is desirous of recommending an old-established YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S BOARDING SCHOOL, DELIGHTFULLY SITUATED FACING THE SEA on the South Coast, a short run from London, in which a thorough and first-class Education is given, based upon the teaching of the Holy Scriptures.

It is one of the few remaining schools in which the power of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ influences the hearts and conduct of the pupils.

The success, happiness, and training of the Boys have been so remarkable in this School that a BOOK OF TESTIMONIALS GIVEN BY THE PARENTS should be read to appreciate results so unusual. Two Vice-Chancellors have placed their wards as pupils in the school. Reference kindly permitted to Dr. Thorn, Paddington, London.

BRIGHTON.—EDUCATION.—Mr. Alfred Clark, B.A. (Lond.) receives about 30 Sons of Gentlemen, from seven to fourteen years of age. Terms from 40 to 55 Guineas. Pupils are thoroughly grounded in English subjects, Latin, Greek, French, German, and Mathematics. Personal care, Christian influence, and a healthy, happy home.—85, Buckingham-road, Brighton.—Referees: Rev. W. Poole Balfern Brighton; Rev. F. Cruse, Christ Church Vicarage, Worthing; Rev. J. B. Pigou, Brighton; Rev. W. Haslam, [illegible] Summerland-park, N.

CAPTAIN MORETON has great pleasure in recommending Mr. Foster's School to Christian parents, who value the judicious training of their sons. Mr. Foster personally superintends.—Eldon Park School, South Norwood.

THE OLD HALL SCHOOL, Wellington, Salop. Principal, Dr. Cranage, M.A. The next term will begin (D.V.) Thursday, September 20. Full particulars on application.

PREPARATORY SCHOOL for Little Boys, conducted by a Lady of many years' experience. Terms moderate. Delicate boys carefully attended. The next term commences Aug. 1. Principal, Essex House, Cecil-street, Margate.

25 GUINEAS (inclusive).—A Lady is anxious to recommend a School where her two daughters are placed. Thorough teaching, preparation for Local Examinations, happy home for Indian children. References to parents. Mrs. Barney, Victoria-street, Ipswich.

EDUCATION.—A Clergyman strongly recommends a first-class Christian home for twelve girls. Terms moderate. Pupils have successfully passed Local Exams. and R.A.M. Indian children received.—Rev. J. Johnson, Britwell Rectory, Watlington, Oxon; or Principal, 5, Sussex-place, Southsea.

PARIS.—Protestant Boarding School for Young Ladies. Mademoiselle Vignon, 18, Rue Demours, Près du Bois de Boulogne. Pupils prepared for examinations. Moderate terms. Prospectus and references to parents on application.

For Delicate or Backward Youths.

PRIVATE TUITION

must always be far preferable to ordinary school life, where such boys are usually left to the care and tuition of inexperienced and often uninterested Assistant Masters, and to the rough treatment of hardier Schoolmates.

MR. WILLIAM PENN

devotes his personal attention, care, and tuition to such Pupils, of whom he takes only a few, as he desires to preserve the strictly family tone of his home. In the fear and love of God it is sought to train this family, great attention being given to the development of a manly Christian character, and moral training is regarded as more important than mere intellectual acquirements. The House is admirably situated on one of the loveliest spots of the Northern Suburbs of London, and commanding an uninterrupted view of many miles. Abundant opportunity for BOATING, BATHING, CRICKETING, NATURALISING, &c., close by. A Carpenter's Shop is fitted up on the Premises, and Pupils are taught Carpentry and Joinery by a competent Tutor. Drawing, Painting, and Shorthand are included in the curriculum. Full particulars on application with References, to parents of Pupils.

SURREY HOUSE, 52, CLAPTON COMMON, LONDON, N.E.
Entrance at any date, Fees in proportion.

Parents who value Christian influence and training for their Daughters are invited to consider

THE GREEN HILL LADIES' SCHOOL, DERBY.

The Principal brings large experience to bear on the training of her Pupils, desiring to combine the influence and comfort of the Christian home with a thorough English education, music, drawing, modern languages, &c. House large and airy. Competent resident English and Foreign Teachers. Terms moderate.—Prospectuses and references on application to the Principal, Miss Whitmore, Green Hill, Derby.

BRAMFIELD, Cavendish-road, Clapham-common.—Miss Rabett receives a limited number of young ladies as Resident Pupils, to whom she devotes her personal supervision. Refined and Christian influences. Careful mental culture. Special advantages for modern languages and accomplishments. High-class professors attend. Preparation for Cambridge Local and Higher Examinations. Prospectus on application.

EDUCATIONAL HOME for the children of Christian Parents residing abroad.—Miss Arnold, 30, Victoria-road, Clapham-common, S.W.

BRUSSELS.—104 rue Les-brous-sart. The Misses Cooke offer every advantage to Ladies desirous of studying French and German. Careful Christian training. Reference permitted to Miss Bamber, Marlborough College, Exeter.

VEVEY, Switzerland.—First-class Educational Establishment for young Ladies. Special facilities for acquiring foreign languages; careful Christian training; special attention to health; domestic arrangements as in the best English schools. The Lady Principal will be in England at the beginning of August.
H. E., Librairie, B. Caille, Vevey, Switzerland.

BELMONT COLLEGIATE SCHOOL for Girls, 13 and 14, Belmont, Bath.—A thorough, English education, with Latin, mathematics French, German, &c., on inclusive and moderate terms. The School is arranged on the best modern lines, and the utmost care taken that the whole tone and atmosphere be decidedly Christian. A few boarders received in the house of the Principals.

ERFURT HOUSE, Truro, Ladies' Boarding and Day School. Mrs. and the Misses Ferris, assisted by Resident Governesses and Visiting Professors. Pupils successfully prepared for the Oxford and Cambridge Local Examinations.

EDUCATION.—A Lady can speak most highly of a superior school, where two of her daughters are being educated, in which the highest culture is blended with truly Christian training, loving and kindly interest taken in their pursuits, and recreations and home-like pleasures furnished at seasonable times. Particulars will be gladly given by Mrs. B., 30, Downshire-hill, Hampstead.

MARLBOROUGH COLLEGE for Young Ladies, Larkbeare, Exeter, in connection with Seaside Educational Home (for juniors and others requiring sea air), at Clifton House, Topsham. Under the personal supervision of the Misses Bamber, Miss Churton, the Misses Pope, assisted by Professors and English and Foreign Governesses of acknowledged merit. A high moral tone is ensured by careful Christian training. University examinations. Numerous references to Clergymen, Ministers, and Parents in England, Wales, Scotland, Ireland, and abroad.

EDUCATION.—Unrivalled advantages. The Institution for Young Ladies, at Hilden, near Düsseldorf, founded by the late Dr. Fliedner, of Kaisersworth, is conducted by Deaconesses. Winter term commences middle of October. Particular attention is paid to the pupils' religious and moral training, based on Evangelical principles. Foreigners are afforded every opportunity of acquiring French and German thoroughly; also every other branch of education, including music, singing, and drawing. References: Rev. Dr. Rosedale, 54, St. German's-road, Forest-hill, S.E.; and Rev. C. McArthur, Burlingham Rectory, Norwich.—Prospectuses, and address of the Sister, to be had from the Directress, L. Korten, Hilden, near Düsseldorf; or from the Direction in Kaisersworth.

Nervous Affections:

ARE THEY CURABLE?

We are thankful that we can say yes, with a degree of confidence which facts alone could give. A few days since, we were rejoiced to receive a third letter from a grateful mother whose daughter had permanently recovered from St. Vitus' dance.

The communication is as follows:—

Mrs. STOREY, Post Office, Little Hallingbury.

June 23, 1883.

"Dear Sir,—I am sure the following intelligence will be very gratifying to you. The magnetic garment I had of you two years ago, I lent to a young girl at Woodside Green, Great Hallingbury. Her name is Sapsford, and she was suffering severely with St. Vitus' Dance. She had not worn it a month before she felt herself much better, and after wearing it about five months, she was perfectly restored, and has now gone to service again. Her mother brought me back the garment last evening, and expressed her heartfelt thanks for my kindness in lending it, as medical aid had failed to help her. You can make what use you think proper of this statement as it is perfectly correct, and numbers of persons in our village can testify to the same."

The gentleman whose experience is recorded in "Uniform Efficacy of Magnetic Treatment" (page 24), has not had a single epileptic seizure since he applied to us some years ago. On the contrary, he enjoys life increasingly, and having now a family of five boys, it is an incalculable advantage to have such established health.

Two friends of Epileptics have reported similar benefit this week, but we await confirmatory experience, and permission from the patients, before publishing the facts.

It must be evident that many persons object to the use of their names in public prints. Their position in society, and the character of their sufferings, prevent our using a tithe of the experience communicated to us. We are, therefore, the more obliged to those whose grateful appreciation of the services rendered has overcome this justifiable delicacy.

Mrs. ASTRIDGE, Frant Rectory, Tunbridge Wells.

"Dear Sir,—It is with much pleasure I write to thank you for the Odo-Magnetic Treatment, and to bear my testimony to its value. In my case it truly did wonders. In three days, my friends said the change in me was quite a miracle. I shall always say that under God's blessing it saved my life. All that saw me thought I could not live long. I was so prostrated, and the nerves so weak, that I could scarcely walk alone or feed myself; yet, when I had worn the apparel only three weeks, I undertook a journey of twenty miles from home, and had four miles to walk to the nearest station, and in six weeks from the time of taking to them, I resumed my full duties; and after three months' wear, I was well enough to leave it off. I found no ill effects from doing so, neither did I take cold. I took no medicine after commencing to wear them, although I had been unable to do anything, and under doctor's care, for some months before. I am still gaining strength."

A lady, whose experience of Rheumatism and Sciatica was such as to cripple the energies and deform the body, twelve months ago, has had perfect freedom from this painful affliction for some months past, and was able recently to walk a distance of 16 miles after three o'clock in the day.

On receipt of particulars of any case in which advice is sought, the fullest information will be forwarded, and the required treatment suggested by Mr. B. Copson Garratt, Medical Electrician, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS.—Owing to the Bank Holiday (August 6), it is necessary that all Advertisements intended for insertion in the number for August 9 should reach this Office not later than the morning of Friday, the 3rd.

HOMES OF HOPE,

4, 5, & 6, Regent Square, Gray's Inn Road, London, W.C.

Special efforts are made on behalf of Mothers with their first infants, who are really the most hopeful class of the fallen, and are generally greatly to be pitied.

A Home has been opened for the reception of such young women, before they become mothers, as are unfitted, from their previous good character and position, to associate with a lower class.

The applications for admission are painfully urgent.

Funds are greatly Needed.

SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS

NOT

By CHARLES GRAHAM.

The Sword and Trowel says:—"So far as we can see, this is a sound book. If this is all that the Holiness people have meant, we cannot make out why there has been so much noise over the matter. To us these new revelations are nothing but the common-places of experimental divinity. With considerable skill and sagacity Mr. Graham has proved his title, and wheeled away much fanatical rubbish. Anything which will promote true holiness has all our heart."

Bible Studies

at NORTHFIELD.

By D. L. MOODY, and others.

"The Conference of Christian workers at Northfield, Mass., during the month of August, 1881, was a gathering of more than transient interest. The large experience in Gospel activities of those who presented the various topics, gave a peculiar competency to their words and specially adapted them to the instruction and upbuilding of all engaged in Gospel work."

The Christian.

CHRIST-LIKE CHRISTIANITY.

DR. CHALMERS once said to Dr. Guthrie, as they stood together looking over the George IV. Bridge, Edinburgh: "A beautiful field, sir; a beautiful field." The reference was to the opportunity afforded by the necessitous condition of the district they surveyed for Christian and philanthropic work. It needed, however, an eye and a heart like those with which Christ looked in compassion upon the lost, for any beauty or attractiveness to be seen there. The result of his own investigation proved that of 411 families resident in that quarter, forty-five were attached to some Protestant Church, seventy were Roman Catholics, and 296 had no church connection whatever. One-fourth of the number comprised in those families were paupers, receiving out-door relief, and one-fourth were thieves, professional beggars, and riff-raff.

Among these people the learned and truly great Dr. Chalmers might often have been seen in years gone by, preaching to them in an old tan-loft the Gospel of Christ. To him such a sphere of work was a beautiful field. And when, after two years' toil, he was permitted to administer the Lord's Supper to 100 persons who had been gathered out of that field into the garner of Christ, he said it was "the most joyful event of his life." "God has indeed heard my prayer, and I could now lay down my head in peace and die."

Such fields may be found in abundance in the cities and towns of our own land; what is wanted is more eyes to look upon them and hearts to feel for them, as Dr. Chalmers did for the West Port. Many—may we not say most?—of our church and chapel-going Christians either wholly overlook such districts, or, if they see them, look at them askance, and, like the priest and the Levite of old, "pass by on the other side." The Christianity of thousands and tens of thousands of professing Christians is far too respectable to go down into the streets, alleys, and courts, where pauperism, vice, and misery reign supreme. Their ears are too polite to bear to hear the tale of sin and woe which those can tell, who, like the Samaritan filled with compassion, go where these suffering and sinning ones are. Their religion includes no sense of personal duty to the lost and erring outside their own class, no consciousness of responsibility in reference to the seething masses of moral corruption and social distress which may be found festering and pining for relief within easy reach of the Christlike compassion and sympathy they should be ready to show.

What is Christianity and who are in the true sense of the word Christians? Christianity is not a mere system of ethics, or formal creed of doctrines to be endorsed and controversially maintained; it is Christ translated into human language, and reproduced in daily human life. Orthodoxy demands a practical exhibition of Christ in the life, as well as doctrinal assertion of Him in the creed. A Christian is a Christlike man, one who in his measure sees things as Christ saw them, feels as Christ felt, does as Christ did, and loves as Christ loved. Is not this too much forgotten? Has there not sprung up a Christianity which, falling far below the standard of truth, permits men to call themselves Christians, while yet they fail utterly to represent the Christ whose name they bear? "Either change your name, or honour it," said Alexander the Great to one of his soldiers who bore his name, and was charged before him with cowardice and neglect of duty. Surely no misrepresentation of Christ can be greater than to live in the midst of sorrow and fail to sympathise with it; to see sin, and not reprove it; to behold sinners, and not weep over them; to know of perishing multitudes, and not seek to save them.

"Come," was not more the keyword of his ministry to the weary, worn, and sad whom He saw wandering in the paths of sin and want, than "Go" was the keyword of his ministry to those who had become his disciples, and were numbered among his servants and friends. "Go to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." "Go thou, and preach the kingdom of God." "Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city." "Go into the highways and hedges." "Go into all the world, and preach the Gospel to all creation." Such are his commands, and may any who bear his name ignore them? Are we his witnesses if we fail to fulfil them, or leave the work they indicate to others? The ragged and the squalid ones who are to be found by thousands in our midst, are among those for whom Christ died. Those wretched victims of vice, whose characters we may blush to describe, are our neighbours in the sense of the word as used by our Lord in his parable of the Good Samaritan. We cannot rid ourselves of the relationship, or of the responsibility it implies.

What is required is for the Church of Christ to prove to the world, on a far wider scale than is yet being done, that she is possessed by the self-denying, self-sacrificing spirit which dwelt in her Lord. Fashionable professors, velvet-slippered Christians, are common enough; the ranks which need to be recruited are those of the earnest, devoted, self-renouncing labourers for Christ, who, bold to contend against the evils which exist, are also meek and lowly in heart, ready to stretch out the helping hand, and lovingly raise the fallen, and support the weak. "The love of Christ constraineth us," said the Apostle; and under this constraint he went forth, conscious that he was not his own, and ready to die at any time for the Lord Jesus. That same constraining love embraces all believers, and should so move all hearts conscious of its influence as that they are surrendered to its claims, and impelled by its example. May we all be led to look on the fields which call to-day for this holy toil, and so to look as that we may enter into Doddridge's experience:—

> "See human nature sunk in shame:
> See scandals poured on Jesus' name:
> The Father wounded through the Son:
> The world abused; the soul undone!
> My God! I feel the mournful scene;
> My soul doth yearn o'er dying men;
> And fain my pity would reclaim,
> And snatch the firebrand from the flame."

"ENTERED INTO REST."

ON the 16th inst., at Laurel Lodge, Barnet, Charlotte Amelia Trotter, widow of the late Captain Trotter, of Dyrham Park, after a few days' illness.

On Friday, the 20th inst., at Earlham-grove, Wood-green, Thomas Bywater Smithies, Esq., the originator and editor of The British Workman, &c. See page 14.

On Monday last, the 23rd inst., at 9 a.m., Rev. Thomas Dundas Harford Battersby, M.A. (Surrogate), Hon. Canon of Carlisle, Rural Dean, Vicar of St. John's, Keswick, Cumberland. It is remarkable that this beloved and devoted minister of Christ should have been called home on the first day of the annual Keswick Convention, the invitation to which bore his signature, as in former years.

BROTHERLY KINDNESS.

THE roots of this, as of every other subject worthy of consideration, lie in the book of Genesis. From outside the gate of Eden the blood of Abel continually cries from the ground, "Let brotherly love continue." Adam's fall, and Cain's crime, teach us that if we get out of harmony with God, we shall surely become at variance with our brother, and bitterness against brethren is infallibly traceable to broken fellowship with God. "Am I my brother's keeper"? asked by Cain in defence of the murderous negative he had already given it, has been answered by God's First-born with an almighty "Yes," written in his atoning blood.

God's very blessings may lead to strife. Lot is blessed for Abram's sake; he also has flocks and herds and tents, and their substance was so great that they could not dwell together. They do not quarrel, but their herdmen do. Very often jealousies and strifes arise, not between the chiefs but between their followers; not between the heads of Missions (if there be heads, which sometimes there are not), but between the workers. The beginning of strife is as when one letteth out water; therefore a wise husbandman will leave off contention before it be meddled with (Prov. xvii. 14).

Abram's method is always available; to give way—to take the lower place. There are two reasons for this course. (1) "We be brethren." How unseemly is strife between those who should "love as brethren." And (2) the Canaanite and the Perizzite are in the land. Shall the enemies see brethren, whom God has called to be his people, and to be the channels of blessing to the world, at strife with one another? "Is not the whole land before thee? Take your choice, and I will be content with what you leave." Gracious, wise, successful, blessed Abram! The one who is nearer God will always be the readier to yield. "Let your moderation [let your yieldingness, forbearance, gentleness] be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand." "Grudge not one against another, brethren, that ye be not judged. Behold the Judge standeth before the doors" (Phil. iv. 5; Jas. v. 9). Why should you take your cause out of his hand?

Abram's example was followed by Isaac. When his servants digged wells and the Philistines strove for them he gave them up. Jesus adopted the same method. "When the Lord knew how that the Pharisees had heard that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John he left Judea and departed again into Galilee" (John iv. 1—3). God's blessing always rests upon this course. When Lot had journeyed east, and gone to the well-watered plain, the Lord said unto Abram, "Northward, southward, eastward, and westward, all the land thou seest, to thee will I give it and to thy seed for ever." Isaac digged other wells; for the last they strove not, and he called it Rehoboth, "for now the Lord hath made room for us, and we shall be fruitful in the land." Jesus, leaving Judea, went through Samaria, and won the woman by the well; the men of her city heard for themselves and knew that this was indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world; and when He was come into Galilee the Galileans received Him. They who give up for love's sake will surely find that "the God of love and peace will be with them," and give them far greater things than they have yielded.

What a lesson, again, we may learn from Jacob and Esau on the one hand, and Joseph and his brethren on the other! Jacob takes his case into his own hands, and by selfishness and fraud supplants his brother, snatching the birthright and the blessing which God would have given in his own time and way; and reaping the fruit of his doings in long years of exile, and in life-long estrangement from his brother.

Joseph, on the other hand, suffers wrongfully; God pleads his cause, makes his brethren bow down at the soles of his feet, and sends them home to tell his father of all his glory in Egypt. Moreover, he kissed all his brethren, and wept upon them, and after that his brethren talked with him. In all this he had the high honour of fellowship with God, and of being a type of Christ, for "God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto Himself, not imputing their trespasses unto them." "Now, therefore, be not grieved nor angry with yourselves that ye sold me hither; for God did send me before you to preserve life" (Gen. xxxvii.—xlv.; 2 Cor. v. 19).

The growth of painful and embittered feeling between brethren may be prevented by the soft answer which turneth away wrath, or fomented by grievous words which stir up anger. When the men of Ephraim chode sharply with Gideon because he called them not when he went to fight with the Midianites, their anger was abated when he asked, "What have I now done in comparison of you? Is not the gleaning of Ephraim better than the vintage of Abiezer?" But when Ephraim still more fiercely resented a similar omission on the part of Jephthah, instead of returning a soft answer the latter threw back the blame on them, and slew forty-two thousand Ephraimites. How foolish as well as wrong to slay our own brethren, instead of uniting against the common foe!

One great need in those who are fighting the Lord's battles is that, sinking every personal motive, we fear God and love the brotherhood. This spirit was eminently manifested in Jonathan, when, with his armour-bearer, he went against the Philistine garrison. First he would assure himself that God was with them, and, when this was ascertained, he said, "Come up after me; for the Lord hath delivered them into the hand of Israel" (1 Sam. xiv.)—not into our hands, that we two should have the glory, nor into the hands of Saul's family, nor of the tribe of Benjamin, but of Israel. When we are thus at harmony with God, and thus recognise our oneness with all the Israel of God, the power of the Almighty will be on our side, and one will chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight.

The one thing which made all Israel one was their purpose to make David king. It is said with repetition that they could keep rank, they could walk in unison, because they were not of double heart, they came with a perfect heart to Hebron (communion, confederation) to make David king over all Israel. And all the rest of Israel also were of one heart to make David king. Moreover their brethren prepared for them abundantly; for there was joy in Israel (1 Chron. xii.) God has one purpose—to make Jesus King. The goal to which we are travelling is his coronation with many crowns, in the day of his espousals, and in the day of the gladness of his heart, when the kingdoms of this world shall become the Kingdom of our God and of his Christ. Just as each Christian soldier is possessed by this purpose, and is able to keep rank with a perfect heart, in this Divine enterprise, there will be joy in Israel, and their brethren will prepare for them. There will be no difficulty about funds when there is unity about this one purpose, for out of their overflowing joy the brethren will give abundantly.

This united joy on earth, as it has its source in heaven, so it ascends to swell the joy of heaven. For when the trumpeters and singers were as one to make one sound in praising and thanking the Lord, then the priests could not stand to minister, for the glory of the Lord filled the house of God. (2 Chron. v.) Heaven cannot hold the joy when God's people are united to make Jesus King, and, as at Pentecost, the Spirit rushes in as a mighty wind and fills the house, and sits in tongues of fire upon each praising soul.

But oh, how weak we are, and oh, how foolish! How soon self and pride divided Israel; and Ephraim envied Judah, and Judah vexed Ephraim! How soon was the early Church divided into sects and factions! How, even with their Lord among them, the disciples disputed who should be the greatest, and tried to put down as heretics those who followed not with them. But let him that would be really great be least of all and servant of all. And forbid not him who casts out devils in My name, though he follow not with us: for there is no man that shall do a miracle in My name who can lightly speak evil of Me. Do not bring a breach upon Israel by putting out your hand to save the ark of God because the oxen stumble or shake it.

The Divine curriculum for Christian workers is 1 Corinthians xiii. Only in proportion as those sacred principles have entered into and taken possession of us are we qualified to be servants in the Lord's house, soldiers in the battlefield, labourers in his vineyard.

LOVE

suffereth long and is kind; envieth not, vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly; seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but in the truth; beareth, believeth, hopeth, endureth, all things. Love never faileth. No wonder that even unrenewed man should discover that "it is love, love, love, that makes the world go round." No wonder that the highest and deepest revelation of the invisible God is "God is Love." "Be ye therefore imitators of God as dear children."

SHOP ASSISTANTS' BIBLE-CLASS.

IT is not generally known that nearly a quarter of a million of shop assistants in London alone are totally debarred by their late hours of labour from participating in any of the week-night religious, social, and educational meetings. Thousands of them who desecrate the Lord's Day use this as an excuse for so doing. A Bible-class was instituted over eighteen months ago. Last summer it nearly collapsed, the fine evenings tempting customers to promenade, and leave their shopping until very late. Providentially, as a last resource, an early-closing meeting was held, which inaugurated the present growing movement for closing shops by five o'clock on Thursdays. The need of this will be seen when it is known that more than 1000 assistants die yearly from the effects of long hours. With the object of increasing the numbers, a quarterly social meeting is held, and many of the local clergy of all denominations attend.

In connection with the class, monthly lectures are arranged for, and during the summer the Thursday holiday is utilised by excursions into the country. It is very desirable that similar classes should be formed all over London, as a counter attraction to the music-halls and public-houses. Statistics and all information gladly given by the hon. sec., A. A. Clarke, 421, Commercial-road, E.

"SECULAR" VERSUS "CHRISTIAN" EDUCATION.

By F. C. K. W.

"SECULAR" education, that is, the teaching of every branch of knowledge by itself, without any reference to its bearing on the spiritual element in the pupil, is one of the great party cries of the present day. The world has seized on this idea as the grand solution of a thousand vexed questions. It believes this is the one royal road to true progress, perfect civilisation, genuine morality, and the realisation of all Utopias, political and social!

But the world leaves out of its reckoning one great factor, which never can be absent in the affairs of men, and which is powerful enough to upset all its calculations, when not taken account of and provided against, and this is, the natural depravity of human nature. By teaching depraved human nature all branches of human knowledge, in the most approved fashion, by the most approved plans, with the most approved appliances, simply from the human side, we are building up the whole fabric of education with no better basis than the natural man, a sin-tainted and death-doomed nature, bearing within itself the seeds of a hopeless corruption and ultimate destruction. It is a generally-accepted axiom in mechanical construction "that the whole is no stronger than its weakest point." What, then, of a system building its educational palaces, and adorning and beautifying them with the researches and experiences of centuries of patient toil, on nothing better than the rotten foundation of FALLEN HUMAN NATURE!

As Christians, as lovers of and believers in the religion of the Bible, it is our duty to protest unceasingly against this modern doctrine of secular education. As Christians, too, in arguing this question, we must not let ourselves be beguiled into looking at it from any but the Christian's point of view. We must go boldly to the Bible for our arguments and authorities. In this, if in anything, we must "do all to the glory of God." We ought not to be able, even if we would, to discuss the question on "purely secular grounds," for there can be none such to the real Christian; and the habit of looking for God's help and guidance about everything ought to be too strong for us, even if we wished to set St. Paul's injunction on one side.

Then, as Christians, let us now look the question carefully and prayerfully in the face, and with God's Word as our guide see what ought to be the attitude of Christians in this important matter of the education of the masses.

Will it be granted that the words wisdom and knowledge cover the whole of "education," as now understood and enforced? For does not knowledge mean the acquirement of all sorts of learning, and wisdom the right using of knowledge? Both these are included in the modern word "education," which always implies both the acquirement and the using of all that the education teaches and trains in, whether it be "technical," "artistic," "scientific," "classical," or "elementary." Instead of saying "scientific education," we could say "scientific wisdom and knowledge;" or instead of "elementary education" we could say "elementary wisdom and knowledge;" and the one expression in either case is certainly equal to the other, and conveys the same ideas to our minds. Therefore, "wisdom and knowledge" are to be taken as the Bible equivalent for the modern word "education," and it must be our business now to see what is there said about them, and how Christians are to deal with them as expressed by the synonym of every-day life, "education."

To start with, we must make two quotations from God's Word: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom" (Ps. iii. 10); "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge" (Prov. i. 7). Readers of the Bible know that these are not by any means the only verses which teach the same truth. But these two, in their plain positiveness, are enough for our purpose. If we once admit that "wisdom and knowledge" equal education as understood now-a-days, what becomes of such an idea as "secular" or worldly education, in the face of these two distinct assertions, that the "fear of the Lord is the beginning" of both "wisdom" and "knowledge"? God says that that is essential, the only foundation and groundwork of the whole, which man maintains can be set aside at will, and is not necessarily a part of education at all. Are the men of this generation wiser than their Maker? Are modern ideas of more value than God's revealed Word?

Dear Christian friends, we know how we must answer these queries. We know that both in point of time and importance the fear of God must be truly first in every scheme of education, however elementary, if it is to do its rightful work, to really raise man to a higher level, to be a help and not a hindrance in his progress towards that goal of his being, his restoration to his forfeited privileges as God's child, and the complete renewal of that image of God within him which, lost at Adam's fall, can only be regained in God's own way, the religion of the Bible, the blessed Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

But there seem to be many amongst us who allow themselves to be led away by the specious arguments of the worldly-wise, and so, by their non-action in this and other kindred questions, are strengthening the hands of those who believe in unsanctified education as the great regenerator of the world. It may be well, therefore, to give some careful thought and study to the subject of education by the light of God's Word, and see how far it can give us help and guidance in dealing with the various branches of education as classified by modern thought and language.

This cannot fail to encourage us, who believe in the fear of God as the only true regenerator for the world, and as the one rightful foundation for every branch of education, and may rouse others to clearer views, and more definite action, in this most important matter.

THE NEW PARCELS POST.

THE New Inland Parcel Post arrangements will commence August 1.

Every post-office in the united kingdom will be open to the public for parcels post business on week days during the same hours as general postal business, but not on Sundays, Christmas Day, and Good Friday.

Each parcel must bear the words, "Parcels Post," clearly written in the left-hand top corner, and must not exceed 3ft. 6in. in length, 6ft. length and girth combined, or 7lb. in weight.

The rates of postage, which must be prepaid by ordinary postage stamps, are:—1lb., 3d.; 3lb., 6d.; 5lb., 9d.; 7lb., 1s.

Parcels must be taken into a post-office and handed over the counter—not posted in a letter-box; and if addressed to a post-office "to be called for," will be subject to 1d. per day detention charge after the first day, but will not be kept more than three weeks.

Parcels found to contain dangerous or offensive matter will be detained.

THOUGHTS ON HOLINESS.—17.

By Rev. MARK GUY PEARSE.

THREE WAYS INTO CANAAN.—I.

THE land of Canaan is the chosen and constant type of the matured religious life—a life of rest, and peace, and triumph; a land where God's favour shines upon us steadfastly, and where the fruits of the Spirit can grow in rich abundance. It is the contrast, not only with the bondage of Egypt, but with the wanderings in the wilderness. There are two or three points in the type that it will be well for us to dwell upon.

Canaan was the end and purpose of all God's dealings with Israel in Egypt. From the first this was set clearly before them. The promise to Abraham was, that after his seed had served as strangers in a land that was not theirs, "in the fourth generation they shall come hither again." Tradition would, doubtless, hand down this prophecy to the people of Israel during their sojourn in Egypt, keeping alive some faint hope in their deepest gloom. When God comes to help his people, He speaks to Moses as if this were the one purpose which He was about to accomplish. "I have surely seen the affliction of my people which are in Egypt, and have heard their cry by reason of their taskmasters, for I know their sorrows, and I am come down to deliver them out of the hand of the Egyptians, and to bring them out of that land unto a good land and a large, unto a land flowing with milk and honey." (Ex. iii. 7, 8.)

God recognised this in the covenant which He had made with their fathers: "I will bring you in unto the land concerning the which I did swear to give to Abraham, to Isaac, and to Jacob; and I will give it you for an heritage." (Ex. vi. 8.)

So then Israel marched out of Egypt, with all their hope and expectation set on Canaan. They were delivered from Egypt that they might be led up to the goodly land. How clearly this was understood, and how fully expected, is plain from their language on the very shores of the Red Sea, in which they already claim it exultingly as their own. "The people shall hear, and shall be afraid: sorrow shall take hold on the inhabitants of Palestina. Then the dukes of Edom shall be amazed; the mighty men of Moab, trembling shall take hold upon them; all the inhabitants of Canaan shall melt away. . . . Thou shalt bring thy people in and plant them in the mountain of thine inheritance, in the place, O Lord, which Thou hast made for Thee to dwell in, in the Sanctuary, O Lord, which thy hands have established." (Ex. xv. 14—17.)

Thus they started, convinced that the land of Canaan was the only end of their journey; and never dreaming that they were going to stop short of it.

And note further, that Canaan was meant for every one of them. It was not intended to be the high privilege of a few brave and adventurous spirits. It was not a reward for the more eminent and saintly amongst them. The arrangements were all such that every man and woman and child was to go straight up into the land and settle there.

Then, again, everything along the way impressed upon them the fact that there was no resting-place short of Canaan. The tent life; the manna from heaven; the water from the rock; the moving pillar of fire and cloud; the dreary discomforts of the wilderness itself; the daily wanderings: all told them that this was not their rest. Moreover, many of the very commandments of God were such as could be fulfilled only in a settled land, and frequently this explanation was added, "Thus shall ye do when ye are come into the land whither ye go."

Now we stand as Israel stood, heirs of one great promise, with one great purpose, waiting its fulfilment for our sakes. The Scriptures set before us only one idea of religion, and that is Holiness. We are forgiven that we may be holy. We, like Israel, are "delivered out of the hand of our enemies, that we might serve Him without fear, in holiness and righteousness before Him, all the days of our life." Our faith in Christ is to lead us up into a land this side of heaven, in which we are to rejoice evermore; to pray without ceasing, and in everything to give thanks. A land in which we are to rise with Christ into a newness of life, and to sit in heavenly places with Him. We are to get to a place of victory over sin, and where we are to be careful for nothing. Christ, the glorious and ever present, is to be our heart's satisfaction. In Him we are to find a King whose rule in everything is our delight; a Friend whose presence is our strength and joy; a Saviour whose power to save is proved to the uttermost, an uttermost that reaches downward and upward, as well as onward for ever and ever.

Let us set this before us very plainly. All the love of God to me in Christ; all that the Lord has done for me by his life and death and resurrection and ascension; all that the Holy Spirit has wrought within me, is for this one thing—my being made holy. This religion that I have is to lead me up to dwell in a land that the Lord careth for, a land where I may find his favour compassing me about as with a shield; where I shall prove myself more than conqueror through Him that loved me, and where I am to observe and do all the law of the Lord my God. Do not think about holiness as a strange and exceptional thing. It is meant for every one of us, and it is the direct end and meaning of all that God has done for us and in us.

And there is no rest for us this side of holiness. Our experience will have in it a strain of disappointment; it is not up to the New Testament sample; doubts find many a lodging-place in us, for there is more of the wilderness than the land flowing with milk and honey; more of fear than triumph. The heart is distracted between alternate lustings after the old life and timid desires for the better. We can find no dwelling-place, no home for our souls, wandering without any progress; going on and yet as far off as ever; a parched earth and a brazen sky, with unbelief muttering at the elbow and tugging at the heart-strings—religion is a melancholy failure this side of the Canaan life of holiness. The glowing promises and pictures of blessedness point further on. Christ's purpose concerning me is not forgiveness only. Forgiveness is to lead up to a life of rest, a life of power, a life of victory in Him. There seems to be a kind of religion that takes away nothing but the sting of sin. No words are strong enough to expose the delusion of those who are content with a religion which is anything other than a deliverance from sin. Beware of putting emotions, creeds, modes of worship, religious exercises of any kind in place of this. Such a religion is a delusion of the arch-deceiver himself, to us a peril and to God an insult. I can never have known any true communion with God if it have not left within me a deepened hatred of that which is evil, and a greater longing for that which is good. How can I ever have seen the crucified Lord if the sight have not made me detest and dread that which has slain the King of Glory? Let us doubt everything sooner than believe in a religion which does not make sin a more foul and loathsome thing to us than ever it was before. It is nothing, and worse than nothing, if it does not give us a new spiritual consciousness, a new standard of duty, a new light revealing the blackness and curse of sin. Religion means first of all righteousness—that first, not escape from hell, not getting to heaven, not being happy, but being saved from sinning. We cannot afford to have any other thoughts of religion than this.

Again, Canaan is the place of Israel's development. All the glorious promises of their prosperity and greatness could only begin when Israel was settled in Canaan. There they must claim the land and appoint judges and administer the law, and lay the foundation of an importance that was to be felt by all nations. The wilderness state was the transfer of the vine that could have its root only in Canaan. "Thou hast brought a vine out of Egypt: thou hast cast out the heathen and planted it. Thou preparedst room before it, and didst cause it to take deep root, and it filled the land. The hills were covered with the shadow of it, and the boughs thereof were like the goodly cedars. She sent out her boughs unto the sea; and her branches unto the river" (Ps. lxxx.)

Do not think of holiness as the far-off top and crown of the Christian life. Holiness is its true starting-point. Some almost resent the thought of seeking holiness. It is to them something far up on the last step from earth heavenward, and only to be reached by a growth which we can neither hinder nor help, and which is imperilled by convulsive efforts to obtain it. But our place is not to grow into grace; we are to grow in it. The grace of God is to be the rich deep soil in which we are to grow. The settled abiding in Christ is not the fruit of our growth; it is the only condition of our growth and fruit-bearing. "As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine, no more can ye except ye abide in me. I am the vine; ye are the branches. He that abideth in me and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit, for without me ye can do nothing. If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered." Holiness is only that life of abiding in Christ.

THE WAY FROM EGYPT TO CANAAN.

The map is the expositor here. As Canaan is the type of our triumph in Christ, so Egypt is the type of the world—the place where they looked down for their supply. "The land which thou waterest with thy foot" (see the contrast in Deut. xi. 10, 11, 12), the land which knew not God. Canaan was the vineyard fenced about, cut off from all nations, though lying in the very midst of them all. Shut in from Assyria by that strange formation of the Jordan valley; cut off from Egypt by the desert; cut off from Phœnicia by the ranges of the Lebanon mountains; cut off from Greece and Rome by a seaboard without a harbour; a land that God had shut in for his own people; "a land that drinketh water of the rain of heaven: a land that the Lord thy God careth for. The eyes of the Lord are always upon it from the beginning of the year even unto the ending of the year."

Now from Egypt to Canaan there are at least three ways, perhaps many more. There certainly are three marked and typical ways from the land that knows not God to the land of triumph in Him—three well-trodden and sharply defined. Because they have thought only of one way, and that the furthest round, very many earnest souls have been perplexed and troubled in this matter of Holiness.

"The Christian" Pulpit.

AN ASSIZE SERMON.*

"The Son of Man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."—Luke xix. 10.

IT is of very great practical importance to the Church and to the world that Christians should ever bear in mind the view given in Holy Scripture of the heart of the Lord Jesus towards "the lost." The more this is known and believed, the more will efforts to seek after the lost that they may be saved be multiplied in number, and increased in love, earnestness, perseverance, and success. May the Holy Spirit shed abroad in our hearts to-day a fuller sense of the love of Christ towards the lost!

We see from the verses before the text that the Saviour manifested his heart's desire to save the lost by saving Zacchæus, a very difficult man to save from the sin of covetousness, and the other sins which proceed from it. Zacchæus was chief among the publicans, and he was rich. In the preceding chapter it is recorded that our Lord said, "How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God."

Zacchæus was not only rich, but he was also unprincipled. He had taken money from the helpless by false accusation. There is no uncertainty expressed by the "if" in the eighth verse; the words are equivalent to "Whatever I have unfairly exacted from anyone I restore fourfold." Zacchæus, before his conversion, had in him the heart of the thief, the liar, and the oppressor; he was as much a lost man as any prisoner tried anywhere at Assizes. Our Lord, in the words of the text, implies that he was one of "the lost" He came to save. It was possibly curiosity alone which led him to climb up into the sycamore tree to see Jesus. But the love in the heart of the Lord Jesus towards the lost led Him to speak graciously to the unprincipled extortioner who was idly gazing at Him. He said to him, "Zacchæus, make haste and come down, for to-day I must abide at thy house." Our Lord here teaches us to show kindness to those whose conversion we seek.

Repentance is the great saving change of mind which the Lord has power to give to whom He will. In his great love to the lost, He gave it at once to Zacchæus. Grace opened the heart of the publican to receive Jesus in faith. Zacchæus "made haste and came down, and received Him joyfully." The grace of the Lord Jesus can convert the most dishonest and the most profligate. John Newton, one of the best clergymen of his day, to attend whose ministry William Wilberforce used to walk four miles on a Sunday morning, was once a profligate captain of a slave-ship. John Bunyan, the author of "The Pilgrim's Progress," was a blaspheming tinker.

The servants of a Saviour who has such a gracious heart towards the lost should not despair of anyone. Faith and hope stimulate the efforts of love in seeking after the lost. Unbelief contemptuously regards such efforts as useless.

Zacchæus was so notorious in his extortion that when the Saviour of the lost went into his house the Jews "murmured, saying that He was gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner." They knew the character of Zacchæus, but they knew not the heart of the Saviour.

The repentance which the Lord Jesus Christ is at once able and willing to give is the change of mind which leads a man to forsake his sins; and first of all the sin of unbelief in Christ, which keeps him in guilty weakness apart from the source of power to forsake all sins. Zacchæus by grace forsook the sin of unbelief, or he would not have received the Lord Jesus joyfully. He forsook the sin of covetousness when he made up his mind to give half his goods to feed the poor. He forsook the sin of dishonesty when he decided to restore fourfold whatever he had gained by extortion. When Zacchæus proved the sincerity of his repentance in this practical manner, the Lord said, "This day is salvation come to this house." Zacchæus was an unsaved man before that day.

The Lord Jesus Christ is "the same yesterday, and to-day, and for ever." He is able to change the heart of the worst criminal in our jails. Those who thoroughly believe this are moved by faith, and hope, and love, in the name and strength and with the heart of the Lord Jesus, to seek the salvation of lost ones, who are despaired of and neglected by unbelief.

There is nothing more powerful to move to self-denying action with respect to the lost, those who gratefully trust the Saviour for their own salvation, than his example of love and self-sacrifice. The Holy Ghost says to us to-day as much as when St. Paul wrote the Epistle to the Philippians, "Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others. Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus, who being in the form of God thought it not a thing to be grasped (and clung to) to be on an equality with God, but emptied Himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man He humbled Himself, becoming obedient even unto death, yea, the death of the cross."

We must measure the intense love of the Lord Jesus for the lost by the glory of which He for a time emptied Himself, as well as by the depth of shame and suffering to which He descended. If we would have a clear view of the heart of Christ towards the lost, we must, by means of the faith which the Holy Spirit creates in those who ask Him, behold Him bearing our sins in his own body on the tree, as our substitute and surety, and bearing the penalty due to our sins, when He was "wounded for our transgressions and bruised for our iniquities," and died, "the Just for the unjust, to bring us unto God." We must by faith behold "the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world," and say with the Apostle, "In Him we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of his grace." St. Paul knew the heart of his Master towards the lost when he wrote (Rom. v. 6—8), "When we were yet without strength, in due time Christ died for the ungodly. For scarcely for a righteous man will one die: yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die. But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us."

A few verses after the text, the heart of Christ towards the lost is further revealed by his tears and lamentations over the lost city Jerusalem, full of unbelievers, and about to raise the cruel cry, "Crucify Him, crucify Him." The Lord pitied his bitter enemies, and was ready to die for them, to reconcile them unto God by his blood; and on the day of Pentecost He poured out his Holy Spirit upon his friends and upon his enemies, and converted three thousand Jerusalem sinners who had consented unto his death.

The heart of the Saviour towards the lost was shown by his conversion of Saul of

* Preached at Oxford, on Friday, the 13th inst., by Rev. A. M. W. Christopher, M.A.

Tarsus, the cruel, energetic persecutor of his people. Hear the thanksgiving of this lost one saved by grace (1 Tim. i. 12—15): "I thank Christ Jesus our Lord, who hath enabled me, for that He counted me faithful, putting me into the ministry; who was before a blasphemer, and a persecutor, and injurious: but I obtained mercy, because I did it ignorantly in unbelief. And the grace of our Lord was exceeding abundant with faith and love which is in Christ Jesus. This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners; of whom I am chief."

The heart of the Lord Jesus towards the lost is shown by his making the mode of application of his great salvation so simple: this is by faith—by trust in Himself. He caused his Apostle Paul to preach to the unconverted thus simply: "By this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins: and by Him all that believe are justified from all things" (Acts xiii. 38, 39).

The perfect freeness of the Gospel reveals the heart of Christ towards the lost. He commanded that it should be preached to "every creature." He declared once for all, "Him that cometh unto me, I will in no wise cast out." We see the heart of the Lord in St. Paul's description of his ministry: "Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech men by us: we pray men in Christ's stead, Be ye reconciled to God. For He hath made Him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him." The heart of the Saviour towards the lost is shown by his causing the Gospel to come not in word only, but in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance to many who hear it.

Bishop Ryle, of Liverpool, was converted, when an undergraduate in Oxford, by the 8th verse of the 2nd chapter of Ephesians, which was read in his hearing in church in the second Lesson, with a pause between each clause, by a stranger whose name he never knew. The verse is this: "By grace ye are saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God."

Cowper, the poet, was brought to better health and peace in a lunatic asylum, to which his friends had sent him because he was spiritually depressed. The doctor was a Christian. He saw that the medicine that poor Cowper needed was the Gospel. And when his patient was out for a walk with his keeper he placed a Bible on the table of his sitting-room, open at Romans iii., having marked the 25th verse, "Christ Jesus, whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood." Cowper when he came in saw the open Bible, and the marked verse, pondered upon it, believed it, and was brought to peace and wrote the beautiful Gospel hymns we sing. Toplady, the writer of the hymn "Rock of Ages, cleft for me," was converted through hearing a working man preach in a barn from Eph. ii. 13, "But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometime were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ."

The heart of the Lord Jesus towards the lost is shown by his saving them not only from the guilt and condemnation of their sins, but also from the dominion of sin, from the love and practice of sin. He gives them a faith which worketh by love.

Our Lord, in his great love to the lost, not only shows them that the free forgiveness of all their sins through faith, trust, confidence, in his atoning death, lies at the very threshhold of the Christian life, but He also shows that fruitfulness in good works is produced through union with Himself by faith, a union as close as that of fruitful branches with the fruit-producing vine.

He encourages the lost sinner, conscious of a will weak to resist temptation, by showing him that if he be united to Himself by faith in his death, He, the Saviour, will dwell in the believer by his Spirit, and enable him to live a life of holiness, fruitfulness, and power. He sets before the man conscious of weakness—yet looking to Himself, the Saviour, for strength—the example of St. Paul who wrote, "I have been crucified with Christ: yet I live; and yet no longer I, but Christ liveth in me: and that life which I now live in the flesh I live in faith, the faith which is in the Son of God, who loved me, and gave Himself up for me."

May I not believe that the prayer of all sincere Christians in this congregation is that some measure of Christ's heart towards the lost, with its self-denying, persevering, loving action, may be given to us and to all true Christians? It will be an encouragement to us in seeking this precious gift, to bear in mind that the heart of the Lord Jesus towards the lost reveals to us the heart of God the Father towards the lost, and we are encouraged to go to Him for the gift of this self-denying love and pity by the strong argument of St. Paul, "He that spareth not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not with Him also freely give us all things?"

The Holy Spirit alone can create this heart in us, and the love of the Spirit is not less than the love of the Father and the love of the Son. Our great need, and the great need of the whole Church of true believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, is that we be baptized with the Holy Ghost, and so be filled with the heart of the Lord Jesus towards the lost.

The heart which God has created in some of his people He can create in others; He can create it in us.

As an encouragement to us in earnestly exercising the heart of the Lord Jesus towards the lost, let us remember that whilst true believers in Christ are justified by faith apart from works of law, we are taught by the parable of the Pounds, in the chapter from which the text is taken, that there is a reward of grace according to our work. "They that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars for ever and ever." They that for God "sow bountifully shall reap also bountifully, and they that sow sparingly shall reap also sparingly." Our Lord said, "Whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward." It is a certainty that all true believers, who, justified freely by God's grace, exercise in grateful love the heart of the Lord Jesus toward the lost, will be rewarded according to their work: not according to their success, but according to their loving, self-denying work.

Our Lord said, "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth Me: and he that loveth Me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him" (John xiv. 21). Our Lord's last command binds all his believing people to do all they can to make the Gospel known to "every creature." This work is not for ministers only. St. Paul in his Epistle to the Philippians describes all the Christians at Philippi as "holding forth the Word of life," and not merely the bishops and deacons.

Let us, then, have a hearty sympathy with all who are earnestly seeking to save "the lost" by teaching them the free and precious Gospel of the grace of God. If we cannot have unity in all respects, let us be united in seeking to have, and to exercise, the heart of the Lord Jesus towards the lost.

And let us remember that the lost include not only the criminal class, and those likely to fall into crime, but all who are not saved through faith in Christ. It is written (John iii. 36), "He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life: he that believeth not the Son shall not see life; but the wrath of God abideth on him."

And it is written again, "Without holiness no man shall see the Lord." May the great love of Christ constrain us henceforth to live not unto ourselves, but unto Him that died for us and rose again, in earnestly seeking after the lost around us, that they may be encouraged to come at once to the Redeemer, who will mercifully save all who truly believe in Him both from the punishment and from the dominion of sin.

BESSBOROUGH MISSION HALL.

THE Gospel Temperance meetings conducted at this place, situated in Grosvenor-road, Pimlico, have lately recommenced. Mr. and Mrs. De Selincourt gave a tea to their work-people and others, numbering about five hundred, on June 4, and arranged for a series of meetings to be conducted by prominent Gospel Temperance advocates, viz., Mr. J. Hilton, Dr. Anderson, Revs. G. Murphy, J. Beverly, Dawson Burns, and Messrs. F. and T. E. Murphy. Prayer-meetings are held by the persons in the employ of Mr. de Selincourt, when earnest supplication is made for blessing on the work, resulting in direct answers thereto. Personal dealing is also a marked feature of this effort. Some of the most enslaved have been set free from the power of the drink by being pleaded with to give themselves wholly to the Lord, sign the pledge, and put on the blue ribbon. One man who had not been sober for years, and who again and again had made an effort to free himself, was lately compelled to give up the conflict, and trust to the Lord to keep him. Four or five of his companions, who had not gone so far as he had, pleaded with him to give it up. This, with Mr. de Selincourt's kindly taking him by the hand, led to a surrender, and it is hoped, with the Lord's blessing, he will be preserved.

NORMAL COLLEGE FOR THE BLIND.

WEDNESDAY, the 18th inst., was a high day at the Royal Normal College for the Blind at Upper Norwood. The distribution of prizes and diplomas to the successful students by the Right Hon. John Bright drew together a very large assembly of friends of the institution. The Duke of Westminster presided over the meeting, and, in introducing Mr. Bright, spoke of the college in terms of highest commendation, and earnest entreaty for greater aid in sustaining its funds. Mr. Bright, in the course of his address, referred to the indefatigable labours of Dr. Campbell, the Principal, whose life he characterised as "truly great and truly heroic." He also spoke of the claims of the college upon public sympathy as great and irresistible, urgently pressing them upon all whom his words might reach. A letter was read from Mr. Fawcett, the Postmaster-General, regretting his absence, and pleading the worth of the work as a ground for liberal support. The sight of the students, and the air of comfort and consciousness of mental, as well as physical power, which evidently possessed them, was highly gratifying to behold.

FRIENDLY LETTERS.—Miss V. M. Skinner, of Bath, has just issued a "Friendly Letter to Barmaids," which is equal to those issued by that lady on other subjects. Our readers might do good service by obtaining the same for distribution. They are published by Jarrold & Sons, 3, Paternoster-buildings, E.C. Price 6d. per dozen.

For the Young.

HAVE YOU SEEN GOD?

MANY pious children have preached excellent sermons to men and women; such were Samuel and Josiah in Bible times. And many poor children in ragged schools have taught their wicked parents in these our days that they have souls which must spend eternity either in joy or misery—and that Jesus alone holds the key to the gateway of glory.

Amongst the children who have preached the Gospel on their death-beds was George Phillips. He attended the Ragged day school in Amicable Row, Kent-street, Southwark. He was always weak and sickly; and the foul air which he had to breathe in this haunt of crime and misery was to him so much poison. Few paid so much attention to the daily Bible lessons of his teacher, and he never appeared so happy as when anyone spoke to him about the love of Jesus for little ones. His simple faith in God led all who knew him to believe that he had (Mark x. 15) "received the kingdom of heaven as a little child"—the only way you or I can reach it. Thus ripe for glory, the Lord "had need of him" in the brighter world. Struck down by fever, he found that Jesus is ever ready to walk even with little ones through the dark valley of death. For He will not leave any who really love Him till they reach the city of the "shining ones."

A short time before George died, seeing his mother in tears, he asked, "Why are you crying, mother?" She replied, as she dried her eyes with her apron, "Because I do not like parting with you." To this the dying boy answered, "I shall be more happy, for I am going to heaven." The weeping mother then said, "Yes, my child; I know you are going to heaven—you will be with the angels, and then you can look down upon your poor unhappy mother." To this George replied, with all the earnest look of the dying, "I shall look down upon you and see you in the burning, if you do not leave off your bad ways and swearing!"

Having thus warned his wicked mother of "the wrath to come," he then thought of his father. The day before George died, and whilst his father was holding his hand, he startled him by asking, "Father, have you seen God?" His father replied, "No." The dying child then said, "I have seen Him, and I am going to be with Him!" Thus died George Phillips, at seven years of age; but not before he had told his father and mother that they must SEE God in this world if they are to see Him as a Friend at the Judgment Day.

Yet this poor boy—or rather, rich as he was in faith, this really wealthy child—would probably never have known that God may be SEEN in Jesus even in this world of sin, if the doors of this ragged school had never been unlocked.

But the question for you is not what George said of God and heaven—but what do you seek? Have you seen God? or rather, have you seen Jesus, his Messenger to a sinful world? If not, seek to see Him at once, for to-morrow may be a day too late! Do not forget, dear children, that God's word is "to-day;" Satan's favourite word, "to-morrow." Pharaoh used that word (Exod. viii. 8) when he asked Moses to pray for him; but when the "to-morrow" came, his heart was harder than ever. And so this enemy of God and the Jews, in a few days more, found his grave in the Red Sea. Nor is Pharaoh the only one who has found that hell is paved with "to-morrows." Take care that you are not of that number; for you MUST see God either now or at the Judgment Day, since it is written that "every eye shall see Him," with joy or shame!

EVANGELISATION IN CHINA.

THE China's Millions for July contains a deeply-interesting report, to be continued in the August number, of the labours of the missionaries connected with the China Inland Mission.

The provinces are described in their geographical order, and extracts of letters from the missionaries are inserted, a few of which, we think, will interest our readers. Mr. Parker, of Ts'in-Chau, writes:—

"August 5.—At many places the Mahommedans asked, 'When is Jesus coming to reign at Sha-mu—Salem?' They say that their books tell them that Jesus is to reign forty years, and that all religions are to become one.

"September 18, Min-chau.—A Mahommedan, who had bought a New Testament in July, came for a copy of the Old Testament. He was a poor man, and used two days' profit to scrape together sufficient for the purchase.

"September 26.—Reached home, finishing a journey of seventy-eight days, having traversed a distance of 1000 miles."

In an account from Mr. Easton, we read of three elders being set apart for service in different places, each of whom were brought to the Lord—one through reading the Gospel of Matthew; another through reading Mark; and the third through John. He further says:—

"A fortnight ago I took advantage of Mr. King's being here to spend Saturday to Monday at Pah-koh-shan, thirty miles off. Four other persons have professed faith in Christ there. Last Sunday I went to our other out-station, Shih-pah-li-p'u—seven miles off. We have only one member there, but eleven others have been in the habit of walking to the city to attend our services every Sunday. One of the candidates for baptism having placed a room at our disposal, we collected about forty persons for worship, and that on a wet, muddy day. Several of these have been interested for some time; and some others became very interested for the first time. After the meeting, I mentioned that one person present was to be baptized next week, and that any others who believed their sins forgiven, and wished for baptism, might mention it. Seven, who have been inquirers for some time past, gave in their names as candidates for baptism."

Dr. Schofield, writing from T'ai-Yuen, reports well of the Medical Mission, and says:—

"I have daily prayers with the men, and my dear wife teaches the women all she can. Mr. Pigott helps in speaking to the men, and latterly Tung has helped. One young man from Ho-nan has been several months with us, and I think God's grace is working in his heart. He spends a good part of the day, of his own free will, teaching other patients to read the New Testament.

"February 12, 1883.—We have had four baptisms this week, and our hearts are full of thankfulness. I think there is no doubt that all are really Christians. Kao, one of the four, is a young man who has been in the hospital for fully a year. He can read well, and write very fairly. I really believe the Lord has given him to me to work among the other patients in the hospital. Pray that he may be enabled to win many to Christ.

"Another in-patient will very likely soon be baptized. The Lord is, I believe, going to do great things for us this year. It is, indeed, an unspeakable joy to see these poor souls turned from such gross darkness and brought into God's marvellous light. If Christians at home only knew of it, I am sure many would come out to share it."

Miss Lancaster tells of the case of an elderly woman who wished to be baptized. She says:—

"One evening she asked me to her room, and told me all her doubts and fears. She said: 'I do love the Lord Jesus, and I am trusting in Him alone for my soul's salvation. I am not the least bit afraid to confess Him before men; but you know, Jesus said his disciples were to go into all the world and preach the Gospel, and I cannot do that, for I am nearly sixty years of age, and my eyes are nearly useless: I am almost blind. I am quite willing and pleased to tell my son, and his wife, and all my neighbours, and everyone that comes to see me, about the love of Jesus, and I could perhaps go to one or two villages; but oh, I cannot go to foreign countries and preach.' And then, with an earnestness which I shall never forget, she said: 'Tell me, may I be baptized, and will Jesus not expect me to go to foreign countries?'"

Mr. Landale writes, April 15th, 1882:—"I spent a most pleasant fortnight at P'ing-yang. I was much delighted with the spirit of the native brethren. I saw Hi, Fan, Sung, Li, and Chü-hwe, who are, I suppose, all known to you by name. Hi is the graduate and doctor, the head of his village, a most intelligent man, with a firm will of his own. He seems very independent of the opinions of the foreigner, and fortunately he seems to put the Bible where it should be. He told us he did not believe that tobacco-smoking was scriptural. His cash-box is thoroughly converted, and he usually has four or five men about, being cured of opium-smoking or the like, whom of course he instructs.

"Fan is a farmer: he is red-hot; indeed, his health will suffer if he keeps on as he is. We came in upon him suddenly one day, and found him and five or six others studying the Acts of the Apostles. We had some reading and prayer with those who were present; and when I had spoken for a few moments he caught my idea, and almost took the words out of my mouth, in his eagerness to send it home to his friends."

At Che-Fu a school for the children of missionaries and others has been opened, and which proves a very successful operation. The situation is healthy, and will prove a great boon to those who have children, as it will save the sending them home.

A medical school also is in contemplation, where missionaries will be able to obtain the necessary instructions for use in the inland stations.

BLACKDOWN HILLS MISSION.

DEAR SIR,—In the midst of much encouragement from the Lord on our tent services, I write a line for the readers of THE CHRISTIAN for their fellowship in praise and thanksgiving to God for much blessing bestowed during the past six weeks among the Militia on the Blackdown Hills, and in the second tent on the borders of Dorsetshire. In both places God has given signal blessing, and many men have confessed to salvation through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Some of the incidents are deeply interesting and thrilling, as they describe their past lives of sin with all the horror, and trouble, and dreadful fear they were in from this course of evil; now they are rejoicing in the Lord whom they dreaded before. We are constantly discovering the fruits of former years' work among the Militia. While many of the converts have bought themselves out of the service others have served their full time. Yet there are many now on the hills who are the fruit of former years' work, who form a goodly company, and are not ashamed to confess Christ before their comrades, and take part in the tent services every night, though they have to suffer for it from some of the more openly ungodly.

We purpose pitching one of the tents to-morrow in Broadwindsor, Dorset. This is a place for which much prayer has been offered for years by a devoted saint now in heaven (Major Malan). Will beloved praying readers of THE CHRISTIAN join with us in earnest believing prayer for much blessing on these tent services.

We have another fortnight among the Militia, and then we hope to remove that tent to another needy district. G. W. BEALEY.

MR. D. L. MOODY AT HOME.

BOSTON.

DEAR SIR,—Mr. Moody has broken his summer's rest at Northfield by holding a special service last Sunday at the music-hall, Boston, the first of a series under the auspices of the Boston Y.M.C.A., to be continued during the months of July and August while the pastors are from home, and the remainder to be addressed by Mr. E. W. Bliss. After tea at the Tremont House, where we are staying, I went with Mr. Moody to the music-hall, and as we drew nigh to the building I was reminded of the happy days of the Mission in Manchester last March, for we met many people coming away who said it was impossible to get in, the hall, which holds 3000 people, being crowded long before the advertised time. When we entered, the old familiar sight met our gaze, every spot occupied, and the platform filled with a good choir. The congregation joined in the hymns, "I will sing of my Redeemer," "Must I go empty-handed?" and "I love to tell the story." Mr. Bliss sang, "Are your windows open towards Jerusalem?" The Rev. Dr. Gordon, Baptist minister, author of "The Ministry of Healing," &c., offered prayer.

Mr. MOODY spoke with his usual power from Titus ii. 11. He said: The text shows us grace is threefold: grace for salvation, for living, for service. (1.) Salvation is offered to all men, God's universal gift. We must work from the Cross. When the Pharisees came to Jesus and asked, "What must we do to inherit eternal life?" the answer He gave was, "Believe on Him whom He has sent." No apostle says so much against works before coming to the Cross as Paul, and none so much commends works after starting at the Cross. There is grace to cover all sins if we confess our sins and sue for pardon.

(2) There is grace for living. Paul's desire was, "that I may know Him and the power of his resurrection," his longing being that he might know Him intimately, that he might live to Him. Many Christians are living on stale manna, talking of the good meetings they attended twenty years ago, and are dwarfed and crippled because they live in the past. Romans v. 1, 2, reminds us that there is peace for the past, grace for the present, and glory for the future. Everything before true believers is glorious—glorious rest, glorious garments, and a glorified body. True believers have nothing to fear. It is only the valley of the shadow of death. Where there is a shadow there must be light, and people are not afraid of a shadow, they can walk through it.

(3) There is grace for service. If you are fretful and peevish, don't work for God until you have got grace enough for yourself—and an overflow. You say you haven't got much ability, much strength. Do you believe God can work by you? You answer, Yes. Then do you believe God will work by you? I hope the choir will have grace to come nightly to help at these meetings, and that the laity will work for them while the pastors are away. Some people say they have only one talent—use it. If the "Pilgrim's Progress" had to be written now, some people would get a professor from Oxford or Cambridge to do it, with the chance that nobody would read it; but God passed by the philosophers, and, taking the swearing, blaspheming tinker, emptied him of self, and filled him with his grace.

Mr. Moody then made an earnest appeal for the funds necessary to carry on the Mission, which he had suggested, and come to Boston so willingly to commence.

After the Benediction was pronounced, Mr. Moody was occupied for an hour in shaking hands with old friends who crowded to the platform, many of them converts of the Mission in Boston in 1876, and one of whom last week gave Mr. Moody fifty thousand dollars for his Seminary for training female teachers at this place.

NORTHFIELD.

The next day, Monday, Mr. Moody showed me how I could take his home, "Northfield," on my way to New York, so I came here with him that evening, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Boyd, of Manchester, who had just returned from "Northfield," seeing us off at the station.

The situation of Mr. Moody's farm is very lovely. On the slopes of hills on both sides of the Connecticut River, which can be seen for a long distance gliding through a beautiful valley, surrounded by the tree-covered hills of Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and Vermont, which three States have juncture near to Mr. Moody's house. This morning, after breakfast and family worship, he drove me to the house a little higher up the hill, behind his home, to the house where he was born, and introduced me to his mother, who has lived as a widow there for forty-two years. Thence to the seminary near by, a handsome brick building which he has erected, so that about fifty young ladies from different parts of the country may there receive a thoroughly Christian educational and domestic training to fit them for taking charge of schools. When one thinks of the influence these ladies, thus qualified, will exert on the rising generation, it is impossible to estimate the good they may do. The lady principal of the seminary will be united in marriage this evening with the Congregational minister of Northfield.

One of the students, a Canadian, asked me if there was any truth in the statement someone had made to her, that Queen Victoria was about to abdicate in favour of the Prince of Wales and was immensely relieved (with the usual strong Canadian loyalty, which I was delighted to find so universal with all Canadians) when I told her there was no truth whatever in the statement, aud that someone had been chaffing her.

From thence we drove through the one long tree-lined street of Northfield, its churches and houses made of wood, white-painted, green-shuttered, like all American villages. The two churches of Northfield are Congregational and Unitarian; in the latter Mr. Moody's father worshipped when alive, and in the former Mr. Moody when at home. From thence we drove down the hill, on to the ferry-boat worked, by a wire rope, so crossed the river, and drove up the hill on the opposite side to the five

COTTAGE HOMES PREPARED FOR BOYS.

The first one was named last week by Mr. Dan Boyd "The Manchester Home," because in it are located the sixteen Manchester boys who were brought here a fortnight ago by Mr. and Mrs. L. K. Shaw, of the Manchester and Salford Street Children's Refuges. It is in charge of two ladies, Nova Scotians, gentle and refined, who have been trained in the seminary. The boys were busy making hay, after having milked the cows, and seemed thoroughly happy, with their bright, sun-burnt faces. Most of them knew me by my going to the Central Refuge, Strangeways, Manchester, occasionally to take the evening service; and when I asked them if they would like to return home with me, they laughed and said they would much rather stay there. Mr. Moody told the boys he had brought a great quantity of fireworks from Boston to help in to-morrow's celebration (July 4), and they evidently looked forward to having a big time; but when the boys were asked to give three cheers for Independence, the Manchester boys, true to Queen and country, remained silent.

In one of these homes there are two lads, brothers, whose story is a very touching one. Their father was a London barrister, whose circumstances became reduced, and he died leaving his family very badly off. His widow soon after died in Liverpool, her death-bed greatly saddened, although trying to trust, by fears as to what would become of the children when left orphans. One, a girl, was taken by a friend, and when Mr. Moody was holding his Mission in Liverpool he heard of the case, and at once said he would take the two lads into one of his homes at Northfield. Here they now are, very happy and contented, and having been well trained at home, are exercising a good influence on the other inmates of the home.

Another lad to whom I spoke is a tall, gentlemanly youth, son of a minister working in a poor, densely-crowded district of a large city, on a small salary, and it must be a great relief to the father's mind to know that his son is receiving plenty of good food for mind and body, in a healthy neighbourhood, surrounded by such good influences. All this is a Christ-like work, and deserves the practical sympathy and prayers of Christian people.

Northfield, July 3. W. H. HEWETT.

THE HOME OF INDUSTRY.

AT the monthly gathering of Christian workers at the Home of Industry, last Wednesday, Mr. HIND SMITH, who has just returned from a nine weeks' tour in the United States, gave a deeply interesting address. He began by telling of his voyage across the Atlantic in the Alaska. His first act was to retire to his cabin and cry, "Lord, use me." That prayer was answered; services were held on board the vessel, and it pleased God, amid much opposition from the Irish in the steerage, to save souls. A young man with a fine voice, who had been foremost in trying to upset the meetings, was won over by being invited to help with the singing. "There are always some," said Mr. Smith, "who dare to come to the front: seek to win those." On one occasion one of this young man's "chums" pinned a paper to his back, with the words, "Salvation, Saved." Mr. Smith took it off, and this insult was turned to account by speaking to his companions of the necessity of having salvation, and the joy of being saved. On the last day before landing, when Mr. Moody was well enough to preach in the steerage, and was illustrating the free gift of salvation by offering a little book to any who would receive it, this young man stepped forward, and, taking the book, told how he had accepted the gift of salvation through Jesus, and was rejoicing in the pardon of his sins.

Mr. Smith then gave an account of the Convention of the Y.M.C.A. at Milwaukee, where 500 delegates met in the Presbyterian Church, to consider, "How to influence young men for good." At the close of the Convention the President said the cries of "Amen," and "Praise the Lord," had emanated from a man sitting far away at the end of the church. "But," said he, "if that man shouts 'Amen' till he is hoarse I would not stop him. Do you know who he is? He is one of those who survived the eighteen months' imprisonment at Andersonville, at the time of the war between North and South. When a pardon was offered him, he would not accept it, but pleaded that a companion who was a married man with a family might be liberated in his stead. A second time he refused his liberty that a husband and father might return to his family, saying that he could hold out against the slow starvation process a little longer. And yet again, a third time, he chose to stay in that prison, which was now the abode of living skeletons, because he was nursing one who had succumbed to the starvation which was staring him in the face." At the close the delegates joined hands to sing—

> "Blest be the tie that binds
> Our hearts in Christian love,"

when this noble man shouted, "Mr. President, let me join hands with Captain Loveless, who helped to capture and put me in prison!"

Mr. Smith continued: There is a possibility of our being engrossed in serving an institution, or a committee, or an individual, or even ourselves, in the service we render. It is most important for us to realise that our service is for Christ, not to please an institution or a Church, but to please Him.

Mr. R. FARIE gave an interesting account of one of the boys who had gone to Canada with Miss Macpherson's first party this year, his conversion whilst in the Hackney Home, &c.; and asked prayer for the various branches of Mission work carried on, the services in Bird Fair, the Sunday-schools, work in lodging-houses, &c.

CARDIFF STRANGERS' REST.—Miss Tilly begs to thank those friends who have kindly sent her donations in books, tracts, and money.

Notes and Comments.

THE Young Men's Christian Association of Chicago have set aside apart of their library as a "Mission Reference Library," their object being to concentrate interest on Missionary subjects. This is calculated to prove successful in stimulating many to feel deeper concern in the great work of evangelising the world, and is worthy of imitation in all our lending libraries. There is a great lack of information as to the character and extent of our various Missionary fields, and this accounts in great measure for lack of wider interest in the various efforts made to cultivate and extend them.

The Mission Church in Shanghai connected with the Presbyterian Board appears to be specially successful, and presents two or three features of great interest. The Church consists of 100 members, has a native pastor, is entirely self-supporting, and raises money enough to keep one member at work in the interior as an Evangelist. It has a Sunday-school of 368 scholars, said to be the largest in the Empire. Last year seventeen scholars took prizes for perfect attendance, and twenty-five others only missed one day. There is a printing office also in connection with it, and schools for general education. Dr. Farnham, who has been connected with Mission work in China many years, has also succeeded in establishing in Shanghai a Chinese Religious Tract Society, which has thirty-two depositories in different parts of the Empire, one in San Francisco, and one in the Sandwich Islands. Such facts are full of future promise, as well as indications of present good; and in a city like Shanghai, with its 500,000 inhabitants, and great commercial importance and influence, such progress is a cause for general thankfulness.

The Bishop of Truro has recently given the following personal testimony to the power of prayer:—

"One Saturday night in his parish in London—on the following Thursday they were to set apart a church for the glory of God in a poor district of the parish—they held a prayer-meeting. Both laity and clergy felt it would be a crying disgrace, in a rich parish like theirs, that the church should be consecrated whilst still in debt. They were a mere handful of people, twenty at the most, gathered at that prayer-meeting, and they wanted £3000 to complete the church. Their ordinary collection was about £80 or £90, or at the most £200 for a special purpose. He read that passage which speaks of the silver and gold belonging to God, and then they all knelt down, and he asked them to be silent on their knees for two minutes, and pray to God, to whom the silver and gold belonged, to put it into the hearts of those who had money to give; and he could trace the answer to their prayers, for the next morning there came to the church one who was very seldom there, who owned some property in the neighbourhood. Before the service began his heart was touched, his eye fell upon the papers placed in the seats giving the simple statement of the case, and asking for generous help to clear the debt; whereupon he wrote a cheque for £2000, and God so stirred the congregation that they gave the other £1000, thus enabling them to open their church free from debt."

The following incident was narrated by the Rev. A. M. W. Christopher, M.A., in a recent sermon preached by him at Oxford. It not only bears testimony to the power and fulness of Divine grace, but also furnishes an example of magisterial rejoicing in the truth well worthy of imitation:—

"While the Salvation Army in a seaport town on the East coast of England were holding their usual open-air meeting, and when one of their converts was speaking with sorrow of his past wicked life, and of the Saviour's great love in changing his heart, the Mayor of the town pressed through the crowd to the middle of the ring, and taking the man by the hand said, 'I am glad to see you in the ranks of the Salvation Army; I hope you will have grace given you to avoid your old associations, and that you will keep with these people. Never mind the jeers of anyone.' The crowd seemed deeply impressed by the sight, because many of them knew that this mayor had sent the man to prison many times for wife beating, for drunkenness, for poaching, and other things. He had been a trouble to the police authorities for years, and now the chief magistrate of the town, before a crowd of people in the open air, expressed his gladness at the man's conversion, which, in the goodness of God, was brought about by the procession singing a hymn when passing the public-house in which the man was drinking. He followed them, became by the grace of God converted, and has steadily lived a good life ever since."

The Bishop of Durham has done good service in the cause of social morality by the enunciation of such truths as are contained in the extracts given below from a letter written by him to a Newcastle paper. They are alike creditable to his manhood and his position as a servant of Christ:—

"A more wholesome and righteous public opinion must be created in the matter of social purity. Not until it is generally recognised that the man who has wrought a woman's degradation is at least as great an offender against society as the man who has robbed a till or the man who has forged a cheque—nay, a much greater; for he has done a far more irreparable wrong—not until society is prepared to visit such an offender with the severest social penalties, will there be any real change for the better. So long as the violation of purity is condoned in the one sex and visited with shame in the other, our unrighteousness and unmanliness must continue to work out its own terrible retribution."

An American paper contains the following statistics as to New York, and its fearful position in reference to the drink traffic. It is bad indeed, but we fear London would go far towards rivalling it; in some parts of the city, certainly so. The number of drink-shops and public-houses is an appalling sight, and one demanding vigorous action for prohibitive legislation:—

"The most recent census of places of worship in New York gives the total number as 489; and alongside of this is placed the estimated number of drinking-places in the city. There are believed to be 9083 licensed houses, and of licensed and unlicensed together it is reckoned that there must be about 12,000. This means, as our contemporary remarks, one church to every 2466 of the population, and one public-house of some sort to every 100."

In an address recently delivered and published by the Rev. Dr. Stanford, he thus defines preaching, and urges the duty of all Christians to engage in it in some way, very truly asserting that the vast amount of power in service in this direction is unused:—

"Preaching Christ is a word of wide significance. In its first meaning it is any verbal circulation of knowledge about Christ. You may preach in the nursery; you may preach to a circle of pupils in a school; you may preach one to one; you may preach one to ten thousand; you may preach from a 'tower of wood,' like Ezra; you may preach from a low platform; you may preach, as Robert Hall complained he once had to do, from 'a pulpit high as Haman's gallows.' 'Christ's goodly pulpit,' says Bishop Latimer, 'was an old boat, and well I wot that a man may preach riding on an horse or sitting in a tree.' All must preach in some way. This is the explicit and implicit will of Christ."

Among the practical suggestions made by the Doctor for developing and employing the latent talents of the Church in this work, the following are worthy of attention:—

"For the unused preaching power in the churches let there be 'great searchings of heart.' Let us all make this the subject of much secret and much social prayer. Let all the different organised societies of Christians, through the medium of their elders, look out men of good report and trusted qualifications, then invite them to take a share in this work. Let those who are willing be set apart by solemn vote and united intercession at a church meeting specially convened, so that they may go forth sealed and accredited as 'messengers of the churches, and the glory of Christ.' In connection with the enlistment of preachers, let each church, with increased method and energy, take means to know, with a view to cultivate, the Missionary districts within its own radius. Allow me to say, with great respect, that building small chapels in such districts, and forming small churches in them, each with its own pastor, with the prospect, both in temporal matters and in spiritual matters, of only a cataleptic struggle between life and death, is not, as a rule, the best way of spreading the Gospel or honouring the Gospel ministry. If we engaged rooms for cottage meetings, or built halls, in which schools might be held in the earlier hours of Sunday, and social services in the evening, supplied by a central church in the way suggested—I think this would be a 'more excellent way.'"

A practical illustration of the ideas expressed in the above extracts is afforded by a report we have received from Guildford, of an extensive evangelistic work carried on in connection with the Congregational Church of that town. The general statement of the work is thus given:—

"The Congregational Church worshipping in North-street, Guildford, through a committee of its members, conducts religious services on Sundays and at other times, at Normandy, Ryde's Hill, Tangley, Shamley Green, Compton, Blackheath, The Mount, Woking, Merrow, Perry Hill, Sutton, Cobham, &c., of a purely evangelistic character. The design of this scheme is to supply elementary Christian teaching in a colloquial form, more within the reach of the less-informed in rural districts than the more elaborate style of official ministerial instruction, and so to furnish an auxiliary to existing church organisations. The Sunday services are conducted by twenty-five laymen—members of the Congregational Church and otherwise—who receive no pecuniary remuneration whatever. Evangelists are also wholly employed and paid, especially for purposes of family visitation, also to render aid on Sundays, and conduct cottage and other meetings on week-day evenings. The committee consists of the pastor and deacons (ex-officio members), the preaching brethren, superintendents of stations, and others elected by them. While the committee are willing to administer the affairs of the evangelistic scheme, they respectfully invite the co-operation of all who may concur in its purely Christian, rather than strictly denominational, purpose."

The result of these efforts is that on an average some 1500 persons are brought under the sound of the Gospel every Lord's Day at the various stations, in addition to numerous week-evening services, lectures, cottage, temperance, band of hope, and mothers' meetings, held at regular intervals. The pastor, the Rev. J. Hart, in testifying, from personal knowledge of the stations, to the good results which attend the movement, justly says:—

"So far as a large proportion of the young are concerned, the good results do not remain in our village populations; but our towns and cities, whence a large proportion of rural youth must migrate, realise the good harvest."

Notes of an address appear in the current number of Home Tidings, the organ of the Polytechnic Young Men's Christian Institute, on the words, "Now mine eye seeth thee," to which our attention has been called. The author refers to the Athanasian Creed as among dogmas and creeds which are but "parcels of nonsensical words strung together." The scripturalness of that Creed as to its teaching on the divinity of Christ and the personality of the Holy Ghost, claims for it more respectful recognition than is thus bestowed; and it is open to serious question whether it is well, in these days of unsettled belief, to place in the hands of young men statements concerning Christian doctrine, such as the Creed in question asserts, which are calculated to increase the prevailing laxity and unconcern about theological certainties.

True, creeds are but human compositions, and are always more or less marred by human imperfection; but the tendency to ignore them scarcely requires any assistance, while the necessity for maintaining old waymarks rather than removing them becomes stronger day by day. Doubtless some clauses of the Athanasian Creed might be well amended in their language, but it is altogether too flippant a style to employ to speak of it as "nonsensical."

A well-known character in connection with Methodism has been removed from the sphere of earthly ministry during the last few days. The Rev. W. Griffith, of Derby, was one of the three ministers expelled from the Wesleyan body in 1849. He has just died, at the age of seventy-seven years. He was deservedly esteemed by a wide circle of friends, and possessed qualities which eminently fitted him for usefulness. The Methodist Free Churches will long cherish his memory, and that with loving regret.

The appointment of Mr. W. Carruthers, of Upper Norwood, and of the Botanical Department of the South Kensington Museum, as Lecturer on Natural Science in Aberdeen College, is an event upon which not only the College, but friends of truth generally, may be congratulated. The agreement between Christian faith and true science is sure to be maintained in Mr. Carruthers' treatment of his theme. He is not less known as a man of God than as a scientific teacher.

Student life in German Universities, even among theological students, is at a low moral ebb, if we may trust the following extract from an article which appears in the Christian World of the 19th inst. on the German theology of to-day:—

"In the class-rooms the German students (I refer especially to the theological, but the remark holds good of all) are a quiet, orderly set, comparing favourably with the noisy throng that sometimes fill Scotch lecture-rooms; but very different is their behaviour when gathered together for their weekly club meeting. An hour or two is passed in reading and criticising a paper on some special topic, and then the night is given up to revelry, beer-drinking, and song-shouting, going on without intermission into the small hours of the morning. The sober Briton may feel amused by such a scene at first, but it will soon pall on his taste, and he will naturally feel surprised that many whom he knows to be most excellent students, pious, as well as thoughtful, can frequent these orgies from week to week. But 'Gospel Temperance' is to the German mind by no means synonymous with sound theology, and the blue ribbon would be a greater barrier to admission into a club even of theological students than the badge of a fighting corps, for while the phenomenon of total abstinence is here almost unheard of, the anomaly of an aspirant to the Christian ministry engaging in a contemptible university duel is unhappily to be met with now and then."

German theology is so devoid of the spiritual element, and so reduces Christian truth to the level of mere criticism and philosophical discussion, that there is not much room to marvel if its influence over those who study in its school shows little sign of spiritual life, or even high moral tone. It is just here that any theology other than that which is based simply on the plenary inspiration of the Word of God breaks down. Human systems can never regenerate or sanctify the soul. The old axiom of Christ's divinity remains essentially true and unalterably fixed, "Ye must be born again."

The Society of Friends have just issued their Epistle from the Yearly Meeting held in London in May, and addressed to the various meetings throughout Great Britain, Ireland, and elsewhere. It calls attention to the pressing need there is for fuller development of true spiritual life in order to the maintenance of a consistent Christian walk, such as shall lift above the influence of earthly thought and care, as also of worldly pleasures and desires. Deeper experience of the love of Christ, and of the power of prayer, are pointed out as the best and most efficient correctives of our natural tendencies to these evils. The duty of prayer in the household, and in the social assembly, as well as in secret, is enforced. It also refers to the prevalence of the spirit of war, and specially mentions Madagascar as calling for earnest remembrance before God. Altogether, the Epistle shows that this section of the one Church of Christ is in no way falling behind its long-continued reputation for devotion to the interests of spiritual religion and philanthropic labour.

An Indian officer sends us the following paragraph, which appears in a leading Indian paper, The Civil and Military Gazette, and which he rightly thinks should be of interest to all who advocate the Temperance cause, and are glad to hear some good of the British soldier:—

"TEMPERANCE IN THE INDIAN ARMY.—The Temperance cause appears to be making headway in the Indian army. A statement was circulated the other day to the effect that in a battery of artillery at Bangalore, two-thirds of the men were total abstainers. A correspondent, writing to a Madras paper, states that at St. Thomas's Mount there is a battery, the greater part of the members of which are either members of the I. O. G. T. organisation or the Soldiers' Total Abstinence Society. The consumption of rum for a week in the canteen was nil, the men for the most part contenting themselves with ginger beer or tonic."

We are glad to see amongst other contributions to Mr. Jacob Freshman's Hebrew Christian work in New York, Mr. Samuel Morley, M.P., has given £100.

We have inserted the papers by Dr. Alder Smith on the Seventieth Week of Daniel as a contribution containing some fresh thoughts on this deeply-important prophecy. We have received several communications pro and con, but the limits of our space do not admit of the discussion of the subject in our columns. Letters received have been given to the writer of the articles.

A gentleman writing from the Hotel des Alpes, Murren, Switzerland, says:—

"This hotel is one of the twelve which you send your paper to, at my request. I think it may be satisfactory to you to hear that I find the copy here placed on a newspaper stretcher, and certainly, judging by the number of people in whose hands I see it daily (not only on Sundays), and the time they devote to reading it, is a sure proof of its being highly appreciated, and, with God's blessing, must do good. I wish you could insert a letter suggesting that others should also pay for copies being sent to different hotels, and so extend the good work."

An important meeting was held on Friday last, at the rooms of the Society for the Suppression of the Opium Trade, Queen Anne's Gate, Westminster. The object was to hear a statement on the subject from Mr. Tong Kingsing, of Shanghai, general managing director of the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company, the Chinese Engineering and Mining Company, &c. The Earl of Shaftesbury presided, and was supported by Mr. H. Richard, M.P., Mr. Donald Matheson, Sir Jos. Pease, M.P., Sir J. Risdon Bennett, M.D., and others. Mr. Tong Kingsing expressed his delight at finding himself in the midst of a society of Englishmen who loved morality more than money, and gave facts concerning the awful results of the traffic in opium which had come under his own observation during forty years past. He emphasised the fact that the Chinese Government, so far from being, as it was alleged, insincere in combating the vice of opium-smoking, had appointed zealous provincial governors to stamp it out.

Rev. Dr. Lee, Secretary of the Church Defence Association, died on the 19th inst., aged fifty-four. He was well known as an author, and a vigorous worker in the cause of Church defence, and was for some time preacher to the Honourable Society of Gray's Inn.

Mr. John B. Gough has declared himself strongly against the Blue Ribbon movement, stating that it is in his opinion useless, and that he will not revisit England until the excitement of it has passed away. We think, if our old friend were here, and made himself conversant with the fruits of the Blue Ribbon movement in this country, he would probably modify his opinion on the matter. Unquestionably it has been a powerful agent for good in Temperance directions.

At a general meeting of the members of University College, held on Wednesday, the 18th inst., under the presidency of the Earl of Kimberley, a resolution was carried, with only nine dissentients, to the effect that the Council had acted with wise discretion in refusing admission to Mrs. Besant and Miss Alice Bradlaugh to one of the science classes. This decision, as opposed to Dr. Aveling's attempt to upset the action of the council, will give satisfaction to all who desire to see the University maintained in accordance with the best interests of its students, and its proper prestige in the eyes of the nation.

There has been organised at Paris, under the direction of the learned Abbé Moigno, the founder of the Cosmos, a society having for its object the dragging of the Red Sea and the Bitter Lakes to find the chariots and treasures of Pharaoh's army supposed to be at the bottom of these waters, covered by saline deposits. A sum of 750,000 francs has been subscribed for the expenses, and divers will be employed to search for whatever relics may remain.

A society called "The Jewish Refugees' Aid Society," has just been formed, under the presidency of the Earl of Aberdeen. The object of the Society is to assist immigrants to the Holy Land to earn a living as tillers of the soil, by the purchase of land, and the erection of suitable dwellings upon it, and the provision of seed, stock, and implements. This will require at starting £7020, of which £4380 would bring interest in the shape of rent, calculated at five per cent. on the outlay, whilst £2640 would be lent to the refugees to be paid in twenty-one annual instalments. Full particulars of the work contemplated may be learned from our advertisement columns, page 21.

The influx of Jewish refugees to the Holy Land is exerting a powerful influence on Jews who have been long resident there, as well as forming a strong claim on Gentile liberality and Christian concern. The newly-formed colonies of refugees are being industriously worked, and native Jews are awaking from their long sloth and indolence to a desire to obtain for themselves an honourable independence. The help rendered by Christian societies to the poor and distressed Israelites who come from afar is exciting the ire of the Jewish communities, who are jealous of the influence Christianity gains by it over their fellow-countrymen. A finer opportunity for proving that the Church of Christ regards the seed of Abraham with kindly regard and grateful love has never been afforded than in these modern times, and a wise and beneficent course of conduct now cannot fail to make a deep impression upon the Jewish mind in favour of Christianity. Mr. Friedlaender's appeal for 2500 donors for £10 each to endow a self-supporting colonisation scheme appears to be a very worthy one. On all sides we seem to be reminded that God has not lost sight of his chosen race, and we cannot forget the inspired direction, "Pray for the peace of Jerusalem; they shall prosper that love thee."

"An Old Tripper" writes that, in former years he has taken a novel to read when journeying to give an annual address adapted especially for the young. We are not surprised to learn that his discourses were sadly wanting in warmth, depth, and earnestness. This year he replaced the novel by Dr. Mackay's "Grace and Truth," praying for more of the Spirit of truth, and had much blessing, both in public addresses and individual conversion. The facts stated need no comment.

Parliamentary papers show that 14,979 petitions, bearing more than two and a half millions of signatures (2,528,300), have been presented to Parliament praying for the repeal of the special Acts which regulate vice, while only 81 petitions with 3690 signatures have been presented in favour of their continuance or extension. Of those 3690 signatures, 1112 were those of women engaged in the trade of immorality.

To some people such efforts as that of the Society for Promoting Window-Gardening among the Working-classes in districts like Westminster would seem to be very unpractical and fanciful. But those who attended the 18th Annual Flower Show in connection with that institution the other day, when one hundred and forty prizes were offered for competition, would come to a different conclusion. The elevating influence of devoting leisure time to such pursuits is abundantly proved by the results attained. The Duke of Albany, with Lord Shaftesbury, Lord Aberdeen, and others took part in the distribution of the prizes. Many of the poor lack objects of interest on which to concentrate attention, and so fall an easy prey, when the work of the day is done, to the devices of him who "finds some mischief still for idle hands to do." Such societies are barriers in the adversary's way, and serve to lead many out of paths where evils abound. It is a truly good mission to stimulate home-keeping and self-respect among those who lack incentives to these things. Flowers have other missions than simply to please the eye, and may be made subservient to the highest ends.

The Promotion of Purity occupied the special attention of the recent session of the Convocation of Canterbury. The Archbishop urged the increased support and wider organisation of a Church Society, having for its ends the promoting educational and legislative effort, the legal action taking the course of preventive and curative work in various forms. We are glad to see the vigorous spirit in which the subject was approached, and may hope for much from its results. The whole Church of Christ needs to awake to vigilance and diligence in relation to the matter.

Our "Day in the Country" Fund is not receiving as much help as usual. There are about a hundred Missions on our books, representing many thousands of children. Will not our readers send their contributions at once?

IN MEMORIAM—MR. T. B. SMITHIES.

It pleased the Lord on Friday evening the 20th inst. to take to Himself our greatly beloved brother, Thomas Bywater Smithies, of Earlham Grove, Wood Green, N., after an illness of nearly a year and a half. This dear servant of Christ was well known in connection with his labours as Editor of the British Workman, Band of Hope Review, and other publications of equal merit. Many of our readers will, with us, mourn his loss, but rejoice also that he is with the Lord, "which is far better."

During his illness Mr. Smithies was never heard to utter a single murmur. In this prolonged period of much weakness and suffering he bowed beneath the afflictive hand of his Heavenly Father with patient, and even cheerful resignation.

From some notes kindly given us by Miss Smithies we take the following:—

"After a rather restless night, whilst I was making his pillow comfortable, he said, 'I think, unless there is some relief given, this shortness of breath cannot continue long.' I replied, 'It would be a sad parting, dear Tom.' 'Yes, it would, but it would not be for long.' 'We have no doubt about our meeting place, have we?' I said. 'Oh, no; no doubt; blessed Lord God! the title is sealed, signed, and delivered.'

"After a slight breakfast he desired that I should send to the Noonday Prayer-meeting for prayer to be offered, but said, 'We will not make any special request, but leave it to the Lord. All will be for the best.'

"At the hour of the meeting he said, 'We must remember that they are just now, perhaps, reading the requests at the Central Noonday Prayer-meeting.' And then those in the chamber bowing their knees, he prayed, 'If it please Thee, O Lord, give thy blessing to the means used for the prolonging of life; but if not, give thy servant grace, O Lord, to say from his heart, "Thy will be done." Thy will, O Lord, be done, whether for health or sickness, for life or death, "thy will be done"!'

"Afterward, he remarked, 'I think I can say, "Thy will be done." Oh, why have we so little faith in God's giving answer to prayer?' When bidding Good night, he said, '"There remaineth a Rest to the people of God," rest, rest, blessed rest, sweet rest.'

"On his sixty-seventh birthday, he said, when I went to see him early in the morning, 'I thought it doubtful whether I should live to see my birthday. I can say, more than these forty years the Lord hath led me.' He seemed so pleased with a chair I had got him for a birthday gift, and passed much of the day in it. In the morning and afternoon he enjoyed reading the Word, and at family prayer, in the evening, he selected John xiv., and read his verse in turn as usual, joining also in the singing of 'Hallelujah! what a Saviour!' and 'All the way my Saviour leads me.'

"He slept that night until nearly two o'clock, and then awoke to praise God for his goodness in giving him such a sweet and long sleep, and told me to go and lie down.

"The hours of the night brought much weariness and were frequently passed in vain endeavours to get any refreshing rest till near the dawn of day, when the wearied frame would sink into a short sleep from sheer exhaustion. And it was during these trying times that some of his happiest remarks were spoken. In one of these intervals he said, 'If it should please our HeavenlyFather to bring my life to a close, I have not a single care left as to myself; but I am concerned for my dear sister: may the Lord comfort her! Oh yes, if my arm is withdrawn, his strong arm will support and protect her. I can leave it all with the Lord.'

"On the Tuesday before his death, while quietly resting, and apparently asleep, he broke the silence of the chamber by repeating in a joyous tone the lines—

> "'Father of mercies, in thy Word
> What endless glory shines!
> For ever be thy Name adored,
> For these celestial lines.'

"Suffering much that day, and when still conscious, one near to him said: 'There will be no more pain there.' To which he at once responded, 'No, no sighing nor crying there. We shall meet the loved ones that have gone before. What a welcome our dear mother will give us there! No more sighing nor crying!'

"On the last evening prior to being deprived of consciousness, he asked that the fifth chapter of Romans should be read to him, and subsequently listened with much enjoyment to the repetition of some verses of Scripture, finishing more than one himself.

"After a severe fit of coughing he said, 'Praise the Lord for all his goodness to me: it has been great.' Nearly one of his last utterances was, 'I have often said that I would not change places with any one in the world, and I would not change places even now.'

"On my saying to him, 'Do you think that the Lord is going to take you?' he replied, 'I do not know; but all will be well, whatever be the issue.'

"Painlessly and quietly, on the evening of July 20th, he exchanged the weakness and suffering incident to his prolonged illness for the rest and joy of his Saviour's presence, where there 'is fulness of joy, and pleasures for evermore.'"

Thus passed away one of the most devoted of the Lord's servants: "Absent from the body, present with the Lord."

The funeral will take place at Abney-park Cemetery on Thursday (this day), at one o'clock.

AN EVANGELIST AT PORT SAID.

Now, after five years' waiting upon God, He has, through his providential care and tender mercy, brought me safely to this place, for which I have cause to praise his holy name.

The town is teeming with people of all nations, a real "Babel," and in my poor judgment enough work for half-a-dozen missionaries, instead of me alone, a poor insignificant being. However, with God's help and gracious presence, I will have work to do, although temporarily a hindrance is laid in the way of visiting the ships passing into and out of the Canal, owing to quarantine laid upon the town and neighbourhood, which causes a great deal of inconvenience in various ways, chiefly as to the supply of food, which is drawn from long distances, as well as from Europe.

At Damietta, a short distance from here, cholera is hastening many souls into eternity. But I have nothing to fear. Isaiah xxxii. 2 is quite enough.

Through kind introduction to the chief medical man in the hospital, an open and efficient door is made to visit the sick and dying. A great number is there at the present time (74), of whom 14 are English. The same opportunity will be given to the prison.

So far as I can judge, I may be able to return to England in a month hence to fetch my dear wife and family, so that we have time before the equinoctial gales set in, which generally we have to expect at the beginning of October. Dear friends, kindly have me in remembrance in your prayers.

Here is a soul-starving place, and one has to keep close to the Cross to be kept from the evil and wickedness around.

CORRECTION.—The brief note in our issue of June 28, relative to Swedenborgianism, should have stated that the annual meeting referred to was that of "The Swedenborg Publishing Society, British and Foreign." The letter from Mr. James Spiers, calling attention to this, has been received with thanks.

EMIGRATION FOR WOMEN.

THE interest your readers take in all schemes for the welfare of women tempts me to make a short statement about the work of the East-end Branch of the Emigration Society.

The demand for girls and young women in Canada seems practically without limit. All who have taken out parties of such emigrants are unanimous in saying that they could easily have placed hundreds in comfortable situations. When we consider how many women there are in England—good, virtuous women—struggling in a hopeless competition for employment, working at occupations which are not remunerative, and how many more there are—weaker souls—driven by hunger and homelessness into a shameful life, we may well feel that the subject of the emigration of women is a very important one for Christian workers. I need not, therefore, further apologise to you for requesting you to make known through THE CHRISTIAN the progress our work has made, and the points where help is now most urgently needed. We have come to the conclusion that it is far wiser to send out parties of twenty to thirty young women, under a matron, who will supervise them from the moment of their departure until they are comfortably placed in situations. Although the stewardesses on board the steamers are most carefully selected by the different companies, yet this is not enough.

Miss Blake, 178, Fulham-road, hon. sec. to the Wesleyan Branch of the W. E. S., makes it her special work to organise such parties. Her matron, who has just sailed, will return, and a third party will be sent out on the 30th of August. She works especially in connection with Miss Richardson, who has been appointed by the Canadian Government to found a general Reception Home at Point Lewis, Quebec, where young women and girls can be received, at no expense to themselves, on first landing in Canada, and where they can rest for a few days before they are suitably placed in the many households clamouring for their services.

But for our East-end work another worker has arisen. Madame van der Bruggen, an Englishwoman by birth, went to Toronto on a preliminary trip, some six weeks ago, and resolved, on her return, to undertake the furtherance of the emigration of young women, as the most useful work she could possibly undertake. She is a high-minded Christian worker, a lady of intelligence and knowledge of the world. Her address is the Brunswick Emigration Home, Blackwall, where she now is, and where letters will find her.

This valuable Emigration Home, managed by a committee of Christian ladies and gentlemen, has recently been re-opened, and well repays a visit from those who love to see thoroughly organised work. It is conducted on the principles of total abstinence. For £3 15s. Madame van der Bruggen undertakes every expense—passage, kit, provisions—on the journey to Canada, and engages to house the traveller until she is settled in a situation. Workers in emigration are thus saved all trouble beyond that of sending their young people with suitable simple outfit, and paying the £3 15s.

There is, at Toronto, a great need for a small Reception Home, managed on Christian principles, with a few dormitories, and a large room in which ladies can hire servants; for though the Government sheds are well managed and carefully provisioned, they are unsuited for the class of young women who now so eagerly embrace the openings placed before them. Fifty pounds are needed to start this good work, but it is intended that in a short time it should be self-supporting. There is already a Home of a similar character at Montreal. If those who have money but who cannot work, would like to help one who can work but who has not much money, I am sure they will not regret that they have thus "cast their bread upon the waters." Or if they like to assist the many workers who long to help out the homeless orphan girl to a country where she has bright, cheerful, prospects before her, may I beg of them to send contributions to the loan fund of the East End Emigration Society, of which I have the honour to be the secretary. We try to get back these loans by letting the mistress who engages the girl know of her liability. We are not always successful, but the principle is a sound one, and at the present moment, with earnest applications pouring in on us, we are reluctantly obliged to refuse all further help.

ADELAIDE ROSS, Hon. Sec.

DR. VAUGHAN AND WORKING LADS.

DR. VAUGHAN, Dean of Llandaff, and Master of the Temple, preached an eloquent sermon at St. Sepulchre's, Snow-hill, on Sunday evening, the 15th inst., on behalf of the building fund of the Whitechapel Working Lads' Institute. The Dean took for his text 2 Chron. i. 7, also St. Mark's Gospel x. 5, 6, and, in the course of his sermon, stated that it was difficult to imagine a more perilous position for a lad than when he first sets foot in a London workshop or manufactory, where he finds himself amongst strangers all busy on their own business, and heedless of the difficulties and temptations that beset the lads of the metropolis. There are certain hours in which these young workers in the hive of human life have to find employment for themselves, hours when they are neither required upon their employers' premises nor in their own not too comfortable homes or lodgings. It was then that these Institutes were so useful, proving indeed homes of love, of self-help, and self-improvement, where they were able to economise powers that would otherwise run to waste, if not to ruin. The Dean concluded by appealing for aid for the establishment of a commodious building in Whitechapel, in place of a small house which has hitherto served for an Institute for the working lads of the East of London.

We may mention that the committee have purchased a suitable plot of land adjoining Whitechapel Station, and propose erecting thereon a structure containing class-rooms, reading-rooms, &c., for a thousand boys.

For this purpose a further sum of £5000 is required. Contributions in aid of the fund are received by Mr. Henry Hill, Jun., 38, Bow-lane, or by the Secretary of the Institute, 1, Finsbury-circus, E.C.

[We have more than once referred to this movement, and again would very earnestly commend Mr. Hill's persevering, self-denying, and beneficent endeavours to the sympathy of those who understand how deeply the well-being of society is interwoven with the welfare of the working lads who will soon be working men.—ED.]

HOP-PICKERS AT ALTON.

THE time will soon be here for us to work for our Master in this part of his vineyard. If the Lord will, we hope to erect five tents this year for the preaching of his Gospel, &c. To show the interest awakened in the minds of some of the poor people we give the following: Two travelling women called on me; the first said: "Sir, be we a goin' to have that there tent this year? I have heard not; but we be all in the medder (meadow), and we all hope you will put up the tent for us;" and with tears she said, "I have not forgotten that there 'ology" (doxology). The second woman said: "Do put up the tent." Two boys, with men's clothes cut short, accosted me, and said, "Master, be we a goin' to have that there tent?" "Yes," I replied; "I will teach you some nice hymns." These boys came with others, and soon learned "Come to the Saviour, make no delay," &c. They became a great help to us in our meetings, and were the means of bringing others. There is a prospect of a good crop of hops this year, when many thousands of poor people will be in the neighbourhood. Any help towards this work will be thankfully acknowledged by

Alton, Hants. SAMUEL CHINN.

HAMILTON, ONTARIO.

SINCE my last letter respecting the Lord's work in "this Canada of ours," winter has come and gone, and those who were passing from place to place in sleighs, and giving the preference to the warmest farmhouses or rooms for their Gospel meetings, are now quite content with barns, outhouses, or, forsooth, nothing more than a quiet corner in the fields or by the road-side.

Though all said in former communications respecting the dearth of unsectarian Gospel effort in this country still holds good, there are indications of growth and development in this most necessary department of Christian testimony, not only in Canada, but also in the States. In the latter country there are, to my knowledge, four tents pitched in or around Illinois, whereas there were not more than two last year. Here in Canada there is but one as yet, which has been pitched at Guelph, not many miles from Galt, which is probably better known to your readers on account of the Home for Boys located there.

In Hamilton the Gospel Temperance folk have again pitched a tent right in the centre of the city, where ministers and laymen of all denominations, and no denomination, continue to uplift Christ as the One who is alone able to keep from falling. The Salvation Army are still to the front in Toronto, Hamilton, London, Kingston, and some other cities in Ontario, the interest in their meetings being still sustained, though the novelty has mostly worn off. It will be long ere the public will excuse their obtrusiveness in parading the streets and "thrusting religion down men's throats," as it is sometimes called; but they do well to treat such observations with the unconcern of Peter and John, in Acts iv. 19, for in every place their labours are bringing forth "fruit unto God." Would to God their example led their captious critics in softly-cushioned seats and handsome churches to follow in the Master's steps, who not only sent forth his disciples into the highways and hedges to constrain men to come to his feast, but Himself led the way.

Thank God there have been for years in this and several other Canadian cities a few individual Christians whose voices have been lifted up on the public thoroughfares in the name of the Lord summer and winter, even during the past severe season; but until believers at large recognise the binding obligation of the Lord's word, "Preach the Gospel to every creature," how can we look for anything like a general resurrection of the dry bones? Only one other remark before closing, for your over-crowded space makes brevity needful, and that is a good word for the Y.M.C.A., whose "labours in the Lord" are both abundant and fruitful. Just now the Canadian Militia are encamped at Niagara and London in this province, and at St. John's, in Quebec province, at each of which camps the Association has pitched a tent and holds daily meetings. Such efforts are most commendable, and cannot fail to be of lasting benefit to the many thousands of volunteers and civilians who attend the services. At Niagara the meetings have been most encouraging. The camp lasts twelve days. ED. SOPER.

MR. W. FORBES IN YORKSHIRE.—On the opening day of the Mission at Otley upwards of 500 persons of all ages put on the blue ribbon. Two meetings were held daily. Mr. Forbes, who is this week in the Isle of Man, purposes to visit America shortly.

OUR BLUE-JACKETS.—The readers of THE CHRISTIAN will be pleased to hear that a free tea was given to fifty blue-jackets from H.M.S. Canada at the "Sailors' Rest," Madeira, on Sunday, the 1st July; about fifty others also partook of tea at the "Rest." A lieutenant on board afterwards gave the pleasing testimony "that good was done by the tea and service, inasmuch as out of 114 men who put down their names to go on shore only three returned the worse for liquor." The Canada will be remembered as having on board Prince George of Wales as a midshipman.

THE CONDITION OF THE PEOPLE.

SPECIAL RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

A DRAWING-ROOM meeting in aid of the Special Religious Services in Theatres, Halls, and Mission-rooms was held on Saturday, at the residence of Mr. Arthur Pease, M.P., South Kensington.

Mr. Pease, who presided, said it would be strange if Christians could turn their thoughts to the condition of the masses of the people in London without intense desire that something more should be done to bring before them the knowledge of the Gospel. They were very thankful for the various organisations that existed for that purpose, but it was quite clear that they could not compete with all that lay before them. The arrangements connected with their organised churches for the benefit of those who had been taught the truths of Holy Scripture and brought under the Church's influence, were not those best adapted for the masses of the degraded and ignorant, with no knowledge of the Scriptures, and it was evident that those services were quite unsuitable to their capacities. There were other organisations with which they had more or less sympathy, which were working amongst the lowest strata of society in London. They had there a society with which it seemed to him they could all unite as Christian believers belonging to different denominations. Many knew well the work of the London City Mission, and although the Special Services were not a part of that Mission, they were conducted by those who had so successfully worked it. They knew the catholicity of that society, and the character of its agents stood without reproach, and therefore they had confidence that they were the men who knew what the wants of the people were, and how they were to be reached. Much of the disregard of the people towards religion no doubt arose from the daily struggle of every-day life. Those people required someone to go to them in their own homes, and to enter into sympathy with them. That was done to some extent by voluntary societies, but beyond that there was this need of congregational worship and teaching. They rejoiced that there was an organisation in which all Christians could fully unite to carry out those purposes, and in endeavouring to reach that stratum of society which was not reached by ordinary religious organisations.

Rev. T. C. Udall, one of the secretaries to the committee, said that movement arose from a conference of the friends of the London City Mission held twenty-five years ago, at which the committee was formed which had carried on the work during all those years. They were simply evangelists seeking to influence men's hearts by proclaiming the Gospel, and then urging them to unite with some section of the Christian Church. There was a large and increasing number of persons in London who would not attend ordinary places of worship, and there could be no sadder thing than the alienation, not only of the poor, but of the better classes, from places of worship. They were, therefore, going outside those places to preach the Gospel, and they believed that in doing so they were following the commands of their Divine Lord. Some thirteen or fourteen places had been opened for that purpose, and 180 mission-rooms received aid from their funds. Those buildings were in poor neighbourhoods, and they had to come to better neighbourhoods to ask for sympathy for the poorer ones.

Mr. Pursell (City missionary) and Mr. Geo. Nokes (lay preacher at the Pavilion Theatre, &c.) then spoke of the good done by those special services.

Mr. Henry Richard, M.P., expressed his entire approval and cordial sympathy with the objects and purposes of the society. The evidence that came to them from all sides as to the extent to which the people of this country, and especially the working people, lay outside the influence of their religious organisations, was simply appalling. The Bishop of Winchester, in a letter to The Times eighteen months ago, said that the working-men of this country had ceased to attend church or chapel except in the small proportion of one in fifty. He (Mr. Richard) believed that there was some exaggeration in that as it affected some parts of the country, especially Wales, where a large number of working men did constantly attend public worship. But he feared that in London, and the large towns of England, there was no great misstatement made by the Bishop of Winchester. Two years ago there was a kind of effort on the part of the conductors of their newspapers to take a voluntary religious census. They sent out people on a particular Sunday to count all those in attendance at morning and evening service at all the churches and chapels in the area of their town or borough. And the result of that inquiry was certainly not reassuring and satisfactory to a Christian nation. In ten of those towns, each containing 100,000 inhabitants, the total number present at the most numerously-attended service in all the churches and chapels did not amount to more than 40,000, or 19 per cent. of the population. It seemed to him that if they were to overtake the spiritual necessities of the great mass of practical heathens living around them, they must be content to modify their methods. He was afraid that they had all—both Churchmen and Dissenters—been too much wedded to tradition, and were unwilling to get out of the ruts, and to be sticklers for order, and while they had been standing upon their dignity the great masses of the people had been perishing for lack of knowledge.

They must get rid of that. He was often reminded of an expression made by a clergyman of the Church of England, a popular minister in London, the Rev. Wm. Howell, of Long Acre, whose name and memory were still fragrant to many. He began his ministry in Wales, and he used to go and preach wherever he could find a number of people to come and hear him, in churches, in school-rooms, or in the open air. Some great stickler complained to the Bishop of the irregularity, and the Bishop sent for him, and told him that he had been given to understand that he was accustomed to preach in unconsecrated places of worship. "No, my lord," he replied, "you are mistaken. When the Son of God planted his feet upon this earth, He consecrated every inch of it for the purposes of his kingdom." The Bishop dismissed him, and allowed him to go on his way.

If the people would not come to religious worship we must go to them. He did not know who first suggested their going to theatres, but it was a very happy thought. The excellent Bishop of Liverpool had published a pamphlet entitled "Cannot they be brought in?" written in a strain of great and passionate earnestness, calling attention to those facts, to the extent to which the people lie outside their ordinary ecclesiastical organisations. He mentioned one singular fact in that pamphlet. In one part of Liverpool, a house-to-house inquiry was made as to the denomination to which the people belonged. In part of the district there were found to be 57,000 people who, when they were asked, professed to be members of the Church of England. The Bishop gave the enumeration of the attendance on a particular Sunday at fifteen churches in that district, in order to ascertain how many attended morning and evening service, and he said there remained the broad fact that on a given Sunday only 3500, out of 57,000 professed Church-people, were found at any one of those services. That showed that people would not go to their churches or chapels, and therefore they must go to them.

He remembered that movement twenty-five years ago. He had himself conducted religious services at Shoreditch Theatre, and he remembered standing on the stage, and not knowing the kind of audience he should have. They were rather rough in their mode of entrance, but he never addressed a more orderly or attentive congregation. He hoped they would go on in that great work, and that God would abundantly bless them in the future, as in the past.

Rev. H. W. Webb-Peploe, M.A., said the London Diocesan Conference had appointed a committee to inquire as to the best means of evangelising the masses. He was a member of that committee, and there were deeply solemn facts coming before them. They invited a large deputation of working-men to meet them, by Canon Barry's invitation, at King's College. Thirty came, and each of them was a working-man engaged in doing something among the poor. They did not scruple to hit the clergymen, and told them that they were neglecting their duty, and that they must have halls, or even sheds, where the working-men could preach to their fellows, or they would be lost. They told the clergy that they had utterly neglected their duty in that respect, and one of them said, "How can I sit still and allow my brother-workmen to perish? I must preach the Gospel to them." It had come to the point, that many of those working-men felt that they must work for the salvation of their fellow-workmen.

In 30 parishes in London, with a population of 245,000, 67,000 of whom were exceedingly poor and 109,000 mechanics, there were 112 places of worship altogether, including Church of England, Nonconformist, and six Roman Catholic. On the 16th of April, 1883, the number of persons attending a place of worship in those parishes was only 26,000—that was only one in nine. If they took the remainder they would see the awful deficiency. As a comparative piece of evidence, they took five parishes in Shoreditch and five in Hackney. In the former there were 38,000 people of the abject poor, and in those five parishes there was not one single place of worship belonging to any Dissenting body, and only nine churches, with sittings for 5500, and in those sittings there were only found 2100 persons at one service in April, 1883. In the five parishes referred to in Hackney there were 58,000 persons, 11 churches belonging to the Church of England, and 28 Dissenting places of worship. In the churches there were sittings for 9200, and in Dissenting places of worship 15,000. Statistics were taken for the Church of England, and the attendance on one Sunday was 8200. They did not obtain statistics of the attendance at the Dissenting places of worship. They found from that state of things that wherever there was abject poverty, Free Churches could not live. It was only by such efforts as that, that the abject poor could be reached. He had lived forty years in country places where it would have been absolutely impossible for any church to have existed at all if not by taxes on land; where it would not have been possible to pay a man £10 a year. In London people could pay, but in those poor places it was a painful fact for them to face, that charity must step in; and the best kind of charity was to open those halls for the preaching of the Gospel, and send forth godly laymen to lead them in, in God's name. They would never have thriving churches until they had pushing churches. They wished to lay upon their friends the sense of privilege and honour it was to do what they could to help those who were making those special efforts. The Gospel could only be preached to others in the measure in which they realised their responsibility to God.

Rev. Dr. Verner White said it was by the preaching of the Word that the Master intended souls should be saved. The work of the Church of God, and its commission, was to preach the Gospel. He was, he believed, the first minister of the Gospel in Liverpool that preached in a theatre, and he had very crowded audiences. In the Amphitheatre he had 5000 people, and their character might be known by the fact that after the sermon, when the hymn, "Rock of Ages," was given out, they sang it to all sorts of tunes, showing that they were not accustomed to go to any place of worship. For some four summers he preached every Sunday in the streets of Liverpool with the entire sanction of the police, and never had the slightest disturbance. Having an intimate acquaintance with the late Major Graham, the head of the police, he had visited every department of the field of vice and crime in Liverpool. He had visited nine theatres in one night. At the Coliseum Theatre, where religious services were now conducted through Mr. Samuel Smith's liberality, nine-tenths of the audience was composed of children who paid threepence each to see the performance. What was to become of those boys and girls? He was not prepared to say that all the irreligion of the community was to be found among the lower classes. He believed that was a great work. The Master had given them a field to work in, and the means to overcome the evil; souls were perishing for lack of knowledge, and those that had the Master's Word should speak that Word.

LITTLE BOYS' HOMES, SWANLEY.

THE ceremony on occasion of opening the new Orphan Homes at Swanley, in connection with those already established at Farningham, by their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, took place on Friday last. The arrangements made were on a most complete and extensive scale, and reflected great credit on all concerned in their origination and execution. Punctually at five p.m. their Royal Highnesses appeared on the scene, which was of the brightest and most animated description. The orphan boys connected with the Farningham Homes sang a hymn commencing, "Lord of heaven, and earth, and ocean, hear us from thy bright abode," after which the Earl of Aberdeen read an address to the Prince and Princess acknowledging the indebtedness of the institution to them for past patronage and support, and detailing the grounds of the extension of plan which the new buildings denoted. A gold key was then presented to the Prince, who proceeded to open the School Block, and to unveil a marble tablet, which had been erected to commemorate the occasion. The Archbishop of Canterbury then offered prayer, His Royal Highness declaring the Homes open, and dedicated for ever to the benefit of Orphan and Homeless Boys. After the Princess had received purses in aid of the funds from the many who had come to bring them, she graciously distributed prizes to the successful scholars who had made proficiency in various studies. The new Homes are designed to provide for 200 orphan boys; the plans also including houses for the head and assistant masters.

The Committee are erecting the Head Master's House; Mr. Sidney Hill, of Langford, near Bristol, has built and furnished one of the Dames' Houses; and another, already erected, is to be subscribed for by the Mothers of England. Miss Leicester has just given the money for the third of the Dames' Houses, and the last is still wanted. But the greatest need is for the two Assistant Masters' Houses, for thirty boys each. These are essential for the proper working of the scheme. The contract price is £1579 each. Is there any company, or public body, or firm, or family, or congregation, or individual that would provide for the erection of one of these Assistant Masters' Houses? Any communications on the subject will be very thankfully received by the Secretary, Mr. A. O. Charles, at the offices, Ludgate-circus.

CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE AT JEDBURGH.—A Christian Conference of the Border towns Home Missions was held in the Mission Hall, Jedburgh, on Saturday, the 14th inst. Mr. Richard Hill, evangelist, presided. The subjects for conference were, first, "Christians, followers of Christ;" and second, "Christians, fellow-workers with Christ." The first subject was opened by the Rev. D. Stewart, Hawick, and the second by the Rev. Dr. Bonar, Glasgow. The Rev. Mr. Cameron, Jedburgh; Mr. M'Cance, missionary, Denholm; and Mr. Brown, Edinburgh, also spoke on the subjects. After tea, reports of Home Mission work were given by the delegates from other missions. The testimony of all was that a very interesting and profitable time was spent.

HOUSE OF REST.—Our object is to offer change and rest to over-worked women in business, at a small cost. Three hundred and twenty-five visitors availed themselves of it in 1882, the number having steadily increased since it was opened five years ago. The terms are 12s. a week, or 5s. with a subscriber's ticket, and the numbers received at one time are limited to thirty, as the committee particularly desire that the House of Rest should be a home, not an institution. Miss Skinner, Bayfield, Babbacombe, will gladly give any further information which visitors may desire. M. R.

INTOLERANCE IN SWITZERLAND.

SIR—Allow me a word in reply to your correspondent, G. H. P. I think it quite unnecessary to answer the assertions—already sufficiently controverted—as to whether the Salvation Army is a revival of Jesuitism, or whether one of its main objects is money-making.

But I should like to point out to English readers the terribly serious principles involved in this conflict in Switzerland, principles which are scarcely understood as yet by many of the persons who have been providentially drawn or permitted to take a part in it. Evidently the members of the Salvation Army who visited Switzerland were ignorant of what has been passing here for many years, and of the present political and religious condition of the country. They do not even yet see perhaps that their advent was merely the occasion of the breaking forth of a conflict, the elements of which had long been preparing for a severe encounter.

Your correspondent appears to think that the resolution of the Council of State of Neuchâtel will have no other effect than to expel the Salvationists, and that it has no significance beyond this, its immediate application. In this he is greatly mistaken. I have conversed—not this year only, but in many past years—with thoughtful politicians and Christians of this country, and to them it is evident that these recent events are but a culmination of a movement proving the immense advance of irreligion and radicalisme autoritaire in this country. The constitution has been set aside, not for the first time in this recent attack on religious liberty. The law has been disregarded or been violated by those in power previously to this last violation of justice. Respect for personal rights and the love of freedom have been long and silently undermined; and there can be little doubt that unless a strong and united effort can be made in defence of religious and civil liberty, there is something like a reign of anarchy at hand for Switzerland.

The space allotted to me in your pages will not allow of my drawing out this subject by reference to historical facts, and to the past and present condition of the country. It would be a deeply interesting study. No doubt it will at some future time be laid before the world; and it will then be seen that that which surprised many persons so much in England, i.e. the absence of religious toleration in Switzerland at this time and the violation of constitutional principles, affords no matter for surprise at all when all is known; but that these are the logical development of a political condition forcibly described by De Tocqueville when he prophesies the approaching tyranny of modern times, the tyranny of a democracy which denies God, which lives for the present only, and which, as a consequence, despises the rights of the individual.

I quote a few words from the Report of the Council of State, a copy of which lies before me; they will prove, I think, what I have said, that the coming of the Salvation Army here was only the setting of a light, so to speak, to the train which was already prepared for explosion. The report says:—

"We may add that the Salvation Army worked in Neuchatel upon ground well prepared for it. For several years meetings of various kinds had prepared the way. Moreover, for some time past certain pastors of our churches had vied with each other in their zeal in organising religious meetings of every kind, outside the regular services of the churches. They seemed to think that religion consisted mainly in the frequenting of these irregular meetings, and those who took part in them appeared to proclaim themselves as the only true Christians. 'Oh! he is a good man; he attends the prayer-meetings,' was an expression often heard. . . . At last the Salvation Army came, exaggerating so much these practices that some of the frequenters of meetings even thought they went too far. . . . Let us hope that the example which has been given will cause those who encourage religious exaggerations to reflect seriously. Let us hope that they may see that nothing can harm the cause they defend more than the setting aside of a simple and dignified public worship, a worship where all may find themselves at their ease, for conventicles frequented by those who make a profession of being more religious than others, and who often, by their conduct, prove that their religion has not moralised them. The Salvation Army was simply the last drop which fell into the already full cup of popular anger, increasing every day against those who by their religious exaggerations bring trouble into families."

The significance of these words will be understood by some, at least, of your readers; and possibly they may remind them of passages in our own past history, in which infidelity found it convenient to side with orthodoxy and the instituted religion of the day, against an intrusion which, however questionable or faulty in its outward garb and expression, disturbed, because it had life in it.

There is hope for Switzerland. This very conflict has aroused many Christians to reflection, inquiry, and prayer. "Is there not life enough in our churches to stem this tide of irreligion?" Doubtless many of the good pastors have had this question painfully forced on them. Many are praying. There may be, however, troubled times to pass through. Do not let us English express crude and hasty judgments, but rather ask of God that He will bring good out of this troubling of the waters.

Neuchâtel, Switzerland, July 14.

MONTE CARLO GAMING TABLES.

A PRIVATE letter from Marseilles to The Times, dated July 18, 1883, says: "It is announced that the Prince of Monaco is negotiating with the French Government for the sale of his Principality for 10,000,000f., subject to a recognition of the gaming tables concession till 1910." It seems incredible that France should agree to such a condition. The German gambling establishments were put down before their leases had expired, compensation being refused on the ground of the immorality and suffering which they had caused. The past and present relations of the Principality to France give her a perfect right to do away with the nuisance, whether she buys up the Principality or not. The Italian, German, and English Governments wish to have the tables suppressed, and public opinion throughout Europe has condemned their existence as a blot on the civilisation of the 19th century. Along the Riviera people are complaining that property is rapidly decreasing in value, and many are ruined in consequence. There is consequently every reason why the International Association should persevere in its laudable crusade against Monte Carlo.

The International Association, founded three years ago by Mr. Henry Thompson, of Mincing-lane, is to be congratulated on the success which has attended its efforts, and we sincerely hope the time is near when this last refuge of public gaming in Europe will be abolished. All States are equally interested in taking measures against those who outrage public morality. Public opinion is stronger than any imaginary right to do evil. The Prince of Monaco openly obtains his revenue from sources of sin, ruin, and suicide. His persistent disregard of representations from all quarters as to the misery entailed by the gaming tables, places him beyond the pale of respect, and we are glad to find the action of the Association is altogether independent and irrespective of what the Prince of Monaco may think or do. We again commend this movement to our readers and wish it God-speed.

Contributions may be paid to the credit of Henry Thompson, Esq., Treasurer, the envelope addressed, "The Chief Cashier, Bank of England, London, E.C.—Monte Carlo Account," and will be thankfully received by Mr. R. Stewart Clough, Secretary, 8, Adam-street, Adelphi, London, W.C.

EARL SHAFTESBURY AT THE TALBOT TABERNACLE.

THE foundation-stone of a new lecture hall and schools in connection with Mr. Frank White's congregation at the Talbot Tabernacle was laid on Thursday afternoon, by the Earl of Shaftesbury. There was a large company present, including many well-known Christian workers. Amongst others, Revs. Charles Graham, C. A. Fox, W. Fuller Gooch, Dr. Paterson, J. A. Jacob, Dr. Spencer, J. Bennett, J. Tuckwell, J. Topping, Mr. T. A. Denny, Mr. R. Paton, Mr. C. R. Hurditch, Mr. W. G. Habershon, Colonel Elphinstone, &c.

After a hymn of praise and prayer, led by Mr. Charles Graham, Mr. White, on handing his lordship a plain ordinary trowel, addressed a few simple but heartfelt words to the venerable and truly noble man who stood by his side as erect and bright as the youngest around him. Alluding to the fact that he trowel was neither of gold, nor silver, nor precious stones, Mr. White truly said, that none of these sufficiently represented the worth of such services as through a long and valuable life the good Earl had rendered in the cause of truth and righteousness. Ever the friend of the artisan and labourer, he believed to receive such a trowel would be most consonant with the feelings of his lordship, who would thus be brought the closer to a class for whose highest and best welfare he had spent so much of his time and strength. Moreover, the trowel represented a principle upon which he (Mr. White) and his people had commenced, and hoped to continue and end the work. Their desire was that the money committed to their stewardship should be spent in strict accord with the purpose for which it was given. In closing, Mr. White said he believed he was speaking the language of every heart present, as well as of tens and hundreds of thousands throughout the land, when he expressed the fervent desire that his lordship may be spared yet for many years to continue to prove his readiness to further work for Christ, apart from mere ecclesiastical or denominational considerations.

The Earl then proceeded to lay the stone, after which he gave a short but stirring address.

After the stone was laid, the company adjourned to the Tabernacle, to listen to addresses from some of the many brethren who had assembled to show their sympathy with Mr. White's effort. Mr. Denny was called to the chair. It must have been most cheering to the pastor and his people to have listened to the words of genuine, unaffected brotherly kindness which made up the several five minute speeches which followed the genial, hearty address of the Chairman. The speakers were Mr. Bennett of Chelsea, Mr. Fox of Eaton Chapel, Dr. Paterson, Mr. Hurditch, Mr. J. A. Jacob, Mr. Habershon, and Dr. Spencer.

The evening meeting was presided over by George Williams, Esq., who in his opening remarks referred to the conversion of Mr. Gordon Forlong, Mr. White's predecessor in the pastorate of the Talbot Tabernacle, as having taken place through the instrumentality of his (Mr. Williams') father-in-law, Mr. Hitchcock, who gave Mr. F., then an atheist, a little book on infidelity which led him, through the mercy of God, to a knowledge of the truth, and to his becoming so eminent and successful a preacher of the Gospel which he once bitterly opposed.

The speakers who followed were Rev. W. Page of Chelsea, Mr. Lydall, Dr. Badenoch, Rev. W. Fuller Gooch, Mr. Leite Rozas, and Captain Baring.

We are glad to learn that about £340 was subscribed through the day, making a total of £2000, which will enable Mr. White and his friends to build their lecture hall and schools without one shilling of debt. Some £300 will be needed for heating and furniture, &c. The chapel is to follow as God shall provide the means. This will cost £4000. May we again commend our brother's effort to the generous consideration of our readers. Subscriptions will be received by us, or by the pastor, Mr. Frank White, 164, Westbourne-terrace, W.

DR. SOMERVILLE AT LOVEDALE, SOUTH AFRICA.

I FEEL assured that many dear friends in our beloved Fatherland have been thinking of, and praying for, us in connection with Dr. Somerville's visit.

He and his companion, Mr. Cumming, arrived at Lovedale on Saturday, May 12. On the previous Wednesday our usual weekly meeting celebrated the opening of our new hall, a great event in the history of our Lovedale Mission. Dr. Stewart presided, and the first word which he read from the old and sacred Book was, "Except the Lord build the house they labour in vain that build it." Our first note of praise was the 100th Psalm. It was a very solemn service, and hearts there rose up in prayer to God that this might be the birthplace of many souls, and that it might be said of many, "They were born here."

On May 13, we had a most powerful discourse from Dr. Somerville, from the words, "Whom having not seen ye love." Much as we enjoyed it, however, a greater interest seemed to attach itself to the evening gathering. The Ethiopian Eunuch was the theme of his discourse, and I think I shall never forget the wonderful picture so exquisitely drawn of the interview between Philip and "that dear, nice, black African gentleman." It was delightful to listen to the hopes held out for the future of this Dark Continent, and faith's eye could almost see the promise realised, "They shall come from the north and from the south, from the east and from the west, and shall sit down in the kingdom of God."

On Monday evening Dr. Somerville addressed "Christian workers" in the library, choosing as his text 1 Cor. i. 27—29. He spoke very solemnly and earnestly, quoting twelve of God's "All things" as promises and supports to his people. One could only feel humbled at the thought of God using man as his instrument for the in-gathering of his people and the spread of his Gospel. He impressed very forcibly the necessity of "keeping a low level," for whenever man exalts the creature God ceases to work.

On Tuesday, at noon, a meeting was held in the Hall, for the benefit of those attending the native church, and after they were all seated, the Lovedale public were admitted. The address on this occasion was from Luke ii. 8—20. What a thrilling description he gave of that wonderful scene in the heavens; first, the single angel making the announcement to the shepherds of the birth of a Saviour, and then the choral host singing with one voice "Glory to God in the Highest." But nothing could surpass in vividness the description of the massacre at Bethlehem. I thought the many mothers present would sob aloud at the account of the soldiers' house-to-house visit, knocking at the door and asking, "Any babies here?" and the murderous result when the answer would be in the affirmative. Mr. Mzimba acted as interpreter, and so pleased was Dr. Somerville with his renderings, that at every meeting for natives there he had to do the same.

The same evening we had another meeting, subject, Isaiah lx. 8. The description of the poor dove fluttering about, finding no rest until within the ark, was one that only Dr. Somerville could give. The next day he went to Macfarlane, to hold a meeting with Mr. Makiwane's congregation. Then next day a party of us drove to Beaufort, and at 2.30 Dr. Somerville held a meeting there for natives, preaching Christ crucified to these black men and women. I shall never forget the picture of Barabbas watching Jesus on the Cross. In the evening, service was held in the Beaufort Hall, Dr. Somerville always avoiding a church when a hall can be procured, as he thinks many would come to the latter who would not go to the former. We drove back to Lovedale by moonlight, and reached it about 1 a.m. Next day, Friday, Dr. Stewart drove our honoured guests to Burnshill, where I understand they had a most interesting meeting in Mr. Stewart's church. Saturday saw them at Pirie, and then at King William's Town to be ready for work on Sunday.

Probably we shall never again meet, but he has left a sweet savour behind him, and we can only thank God for his wonderful providence that led him here. And such is all I can take time to say of this long-looked for visit of Dr. Somerville. And you ask now, But has there been real work done? Ah, who can tell? It is afterwards that the results will be manifested. Nineteen girls profess to have been aroused, and have given in their names as "anxious inquirers."

Dr. Somerville with Mr. Cumming bade us farewell on June 5. But before going away he asked: "Where are the nineteen who professed to have been aroused at the meetings?" These were seen gathered together in my sitting-room, and he prayed with them, and then pressed home the truth. Were these souls in reality passing from death unto life at that time? was all I could say to myself; and as each said separately, and alone, "I believe in the Lord Jesus Christ for salvation," I could utter nothing save "Amen." He again prayed with them, and this was Dr. Somerville's first and last visit to the Girls' School at Lovedale.

The next day a "Christian Convention" was advertised to be held in our hall. It would have been delightful could the idea have been carried out, and Christian workers all round brought together at the Lovedale centre. But the notice given was too short, and so many strangers were already in our midst we seemed unable to accommodate more. However, the meeting which took the place of the Convention was a success every way. The large hall was full, and the address most stirring and impressive, the subject chosen being 2 Kings iv. 1 and 7. The point dwelt upon was the prophet's question, "Tell me what hast thou in thy house?" Dr. Somerville showed what the poor widow made of the pot of oil, and what we could do, even if we had nothing but a text of Scripture in our hearts.

At eleven o'clock we all assembled in front of Dr. Stewart's house and bade our two friends farewell, singing as they drove off, "Wonderful Words of Life." Dr. S. had specially won the girls' hearts, and they were very sad indeed to think that they should see his face no more. The sermon on the Dove had gone home to their hearts, and they will never forget it.

One girl said to me, "For four years I was seeking Christ, and when Dr. Somerville spoke of the little bird fluttering about and finding no rest, I felt it was just like myself; and when Noah put out his hand and took the dove in, it seemed like Jesus taking me to his bosom."

CHILDREN'S SEA-SIDE SERVICES.

IN a few days August will be here, and families will be flocking to the sea-side. The schools are breaking-up this week, and for the next five or six weeks at the numerous watering-places round our coast the beach will be covered with children. The fact that nearly everybody now goes to the sea in August tends to crowd not only the larger seaside resorts, but many small ones, which a few years ago were hardly known.

Last summer, the members of the Children's Special Service Mission, and other friends who were supplied by us with hymn-sheets and tracts, held services for the children for longer or shorter periods at about forty different watering-places, while various lady workers, most of them th local secretaries of the Childrens' Scripture Union, distributed our "Picture Leaflets" and "Loving Messages" at no less than one hundred and fifty place.

Your list of forthcoming meetings this week shows the places where, as arranged up to the present, the services are to be held during the coming month. But there is room for many more labourers. So far as our funds allow, we will willingly supply any accredited Christian workers with hymn-sheets and picture leaflets to hold services in unoccupied places. We will also gladly make grants of tracts to lady workers.

Some ladies went last summer to a small seaside place with a supply of tracts, hoping to do something amongst the children. They found that a conjuror was getting the children day by day, teaching them foolish songs, &c., and exercising a considerable power for evil. They were discouraged at first, but afer a day or two, meeting with some other ladies, who also had our leaflets, they determined to start some singing meetings. In a very short time the children flocked to this new attraction, and the conjuror, discomfited, left the town. The ladies obtained the help of a minister and some other Christian workers staying at the place, and the meetings were kept on for some weeks.

One of the visitors offered prizes of books to the children who could best repeat portions of Scripture. One little boy of ten years old, the child of rich parents, was most anxious to compete, but he had no Bible, he could not get one at home, and he had never read the sacred volume. He was delighted when a Testament with Psalms was lent to him. He stayed up at night poring over it, and said he had never read anything so beautiful as the chapters in St. John's Gospel. One day he repeated six psalms perfectly, and was overjoyed at receiving as his prize a beautiful Bible.

These are facts that need no comment. The workers in the Children's Mission could give you many more like these about the children of what have been very truly called "the neglected upper classes." There are many such children utterly ignorant of the Gospel, and yet hungering for it. We have often proved it. There is no place where such children can so easily be met with as at the seaside in August and September.

Of course it needs suitable speakers for such a class of children. I am thankful to say that quite a number of Oxford and Cambridge men are working with us this year, especially with Mr. Arrowsmith at Scarborough, with Mr. Banaster at Llandudno, and with Rev. W. G. Steinden at Eastbourne. I am thankful also that there are now a good many boys from the large public schools in our "Public Schools Scripture Union," and we hope to meet many of these at the seaside.

But there is a great work to be done; there are at least fifty watering-places which will, during most of the summer, be unoccupied, unless new labourers come forward; and at all of them something could be done amongst the children. Where there are no gentlemen to hold regular services, I would strongly advise our lady friends to sit on the shore and gather a few little ones round them, if only to sing a few hymns and to read together the daily portions of the "Children's Scripture Union."

I ask all the readers of The Christian not to forget the seaside work amongst the children in their prayers. T. B. Bishop.

THE SOUL AND THE SAVIOUR.

I AM lonely—very lonely,
With a longing restless heart;
In earth's joy and lovelit beauty
I find neither hope nor part;
Clouding doubts wreathe round my spirit,
Fettering chains my soul enthral,
Demon-sins in fearful vision
Mark and mock me in my fall!

THE SAVIOUR'S VOICE.

"He is able to save to the uttermost ALL that come unto God by Him."—Heb. vii. 25.

THE SOUL.

I am crying out for freedom,
Chafing at my bitter chain;
Surely life is not a Hades,
Not an endless, hopeless pain?
Power to vanquish strong temptation,
Grace to stand erect and free,
Must wait somewhere for my spirit,
If I only could but see!

THE SAVIOUR.

"He that committeth sin is the servant of sin: if the Son, therefore, shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."—John viii. 34—36.

THE SOUL.

I have heard of Thee, O Jesus,
God-like in thy power and love;
Yet so human, that thy Spirit
Human griefs can melt and move!
I am told that joy and freedom
Waits the comer to thy feet,
And that in thy words of welcome
Blended love and pity meet.

THE SAVIOUR.

"Come unto Me all ye that labour and are heavy-laden, and I will give you rest."—Matt. xi. 28.

THE SOUL.

Yet how can I seek thy presence?
Nothing in myself I see
That could warrant me in hoping
Thou would'st cleanse and pardon me.
Love and faith lie dead and shrouded,
Doubt and sin watch o'er their grave;
Hope's short life is just expiring—
Canst Thou pity, canst Thou save?

THE SAVIOUR.

"I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance."—Matt. ix. 13.

"God, who is rich in mercy, for his great love wherewith He loved us, even when we were dead in trespasses and sins."—Eph. ii. 4, 5.

THE SOUL.

Surely I must wail for sorrow
For my wasted, selfish past?
Try to break the earth-wove fetters
That have bound my spirit fast?
Surely I must learn to love Thee,
Ere I can thy favour win,
And must fit me for thy presence,
By self-purging from all sin?

THE SAVIOUR.

"Him hath God exalted to be a Prince and a Saviour, to give repentance."—Acts v. 31.

"We love Him, because He first loved us."—John iv. 19.

"The blood of Jesus Christ, his Son, cleanseth us from all sin."—1 John i. 7.

THE SOUL.

May I come without delaying—
Nestle at Thy bleeding side;
With no plea, no hope, no fitness,
Save that Thou hast loved and died?
Take from Thee the faith to trust Thee?
Learn from Thee the sin of sin?
In thy blood find perfect pardon,
And the power for triumphing?

THE SAVIOUR.

"Him that cometh unto Me I will in no wise cast out."—John vi. 37.

"Christ Jesus, of God, is made unto us wisdom, righteousness, sanctification, and redemption."—1 Cor. i. 30, 31.

THE SOUL.

Jesus, see! I come. I trust Thee!
Take Thee for my Life, my Lord!
At thy hand all gifts receiving,
Resting in thy royal Word.
All my life-long heart-resistance
Melts before thy matchless power;
Soul and self in sweet surrender
Yield to Thee this very hour!

THE SAVIOUR.

"Fear not! thou art Mine."—Isa. xliii. 1.

Letters to the Editor.

JEWISH REFUGEES IN PALESTINE.

Sir,—If I am right in supposing that among the advertisements in The Christian of this week there is one in the shape of an appeal on the part of the "Jewish Refugees' Aid Society," I hope you will allow me to draw your readers' attention to some facts connected with that society, which may remove false impressions, and awaken active sympathy for it in the hearts of all who love the Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity.

One of the principal objects of my coming to England, rather more than two months ago, was the formation of this new Society. For this many Christian friends have laboured and prayed with us, and to God I desire to give the praise for the accomplishment of our object.

(1) This "Jewish Refugees' Aid Society" wishes to help Jewish Refugees in Palestine to become self-supporting, and in placing this desirable object before the Christian public it does not encroach upon the labours of any society, organisation, or agency, Christian or Jewish.

The people to be helped have fled from Russia to Palestine, in order to labour for their daily bread. Coming there as strangers and penniless, they hoped naturally to be helped by their co-religionists, and when these failed them, they were in actual danger of dying in the streets of Jerusalem (see the Jewish Chronicle, of August 22, 1882, an unwilling and, therefore, all the more powerful witness).

To avert that danger, the agents of the London Jews' Society in Jerusalem stepped forward, and in the name of the Lord Jesus, and as representatives of his Church in a Mahometan country, came to the help of these people. We did not seek this work, it was forced on us, and if we had failed to undertake it we should have been unworthy of the posts we were called upon to fill—viz., of witnesses for the Lord Jesus to his brethren according to the flesh.

(2) The "Jewish Refugees' Aid Society" does not hold out any material advantage in connection with religious profession.

In desiring to change the work of charity begun by the Jerusalem missionaries, under the unsought circumstances described above, into one of helping the Refugees to help themselves, they write liberty of conscience on their flag, just as the missionaries themselves have strictly observed that principle all along.

The help to be given will be decided upon, not according to the religious belief, but according to the wants and capacities of the people under our care.

But the Refugees themselves desire to be ruled and guided by Hebrew Christians, and in desiring this they accept missionary influence, for they know that we cease not to make it clear to them that all material help will be no real help to them, except they receive the Lord Jesus into their hearts.

Let those who think that we offer help that Jews may become Christians, consider a little.

(a) Whether to live as a peasant, working for his daily bread in the hot climate of Palestine, is really a temptation for Jews to come and make, for the sake of it, a hypocritical confession of faith in Jesus; and

(b) Why just these refugees should be willing to come under our tutelage, when many thousands of Jews in Palestine, as poor as these refugees, would scorn the very idea of following our guidance? No, whatever help we desire to give, and have hitherto given, would not attract to us the meanest Jewish beggar, if the Spirit of God did not lead him. This leading of the Spirit will, we hope, end in the salvation of their souls; and it is because people are slow to believe in such triumphs of the Gospel, that they impute to us all kinds of motives, instead of giving glory to God.

(3) The "Jewish Refugees' Aid Society" does not try to force the hand of God, for it has done nothing and will do nothing to bring about the promised restoration of Israel. It does not send Jews to Palestine, nor encourage Jews who have asked for advice to go there. It merely desires to do its Christian duty towards such Jews as have gone to Palestine and are ready to accept the guidance of the Hebrew Christians on the spot.

It is not this Society's doing that these poor exiles can find no true friends in Palestine but the Hebrew Christians. God has thus, by the labour of the London Jews' Society in Palestine, during more than fifty years, prepared the land for receiving the people, and the "Jewish Refugees' Aid Society" wants to do only what the Hebrew Christians in Palestine are too poor to do, viz., buy land on which the Refugees may be tenants.

(4) The "Jewish Refugees' Aid Society" accepts all moneys entrusted to it as an endowment to be invested reproductively, and not to be given away in charity.

Hence, the care for the temporal wants of the refugees remain still upon the shoulders of the Jewish missionaries in Jerusalem, and will remain so until the land is purchased and our protégées can move to it; and I should like, in conclusion, to point out one thing which your readers, I hope, will keep in mind.

The sooner the "Jewish Refugees' Aid Society" is enabled to purchase the land the better, for only then the present work of charity, which costs £10 a day, as more than 400 persons have to be maintained, will cease; and I earnestly hope that till then our friends will not slacken their contributions towards the "Refugee Fund," which has to bridge over the time when the objects of this charity will work for their maintenance on their own plot of land.—Yours faithfully,

7, Crossfield-road, H. Friedlaender.

MR. AITKEN AT SCARBOROUGH.

THIS valued servant of God has during the past three weeks been conducting a Mission in our lively watering place. It has been a season of much blessing to very many.

Holy Trinity Church has been well filled night after night, while on Sundays it has been crowded almost beyond its utmost capacity, and many have been unable to gain entrance. The vicar has had the joy of seeing the blessed tidings of present salvation received and rejoiced in, and many have indeed entered on a new life. Scarborough is just now filling with visitors from all parts of the country, and many of them have also found an unexpected blessing. They came in search of health or pleasure, and have found health for their souls.

Night by night there has been a happy harvest of souls gathered in, and so evident was it that, in answer to much prayer, God was working mightily in human hearts that Mr. Aitken most unselfishly agreed to give up a week of his much-needed holiday, in order to continue the work a third week. Never have we heard more powerful warning given to sinners to "flee from the wrath to come," or more earnest and thorough teaching to God's children, among whom there has been a great blessing, fresh consecration, and new power apprehended.

Mr. Stephens labours among the children, especially those in boarding-schools, and has been largely owned of God in leading many to the Saviour.

Requests for Praise and Prayer.

PRAYER.—That a room for prayer may be obtained in a workhouse where 1600 souls are under Ritualistic influence. —— For two aged worldly cousins.——For a governess seeking a situation.——For "one in darkness" at Dundee who wishes to become a child of God.——For a widow lady and her daughter, in delicate health, who desire means of earning a livelihood.——That there may be showers of blessing during Richard Weaver's visit to Blaenafon.——For a blessing on Mr. W. H. Broad's Mission at Gilford Hall, Sandymount, July 22—August 5.

Mission and other Appeals.

PRIMITIVE METHODIST BUILDING FUND. — Mr. F. PENROSE, 28, Orts-road, Reading, appeals for help for the Metropolitan Building Fund. During the last eighteen years fifty-nine chapels and schools have been built, with the result of the conversion of over 3000 souls. Particulars on application to the above.

CHELSEA HOSPITAL FOR WOMEN.—A Chaplain's Fund has been opened in connection with this hospital. Hitherto the religious services have been supplied by the Rev. Canon Fleming, but our new building having been declared opened by H.R.H. the Duchess of Albany, we shall shortly be prepared to receive 65 patients, and we cannot longer depend upon a voluntary system of religious ministration. The Board of Management is anxious that £2,000 should be quickly collected for the endowment of this fund, and I feel sure that many will gladly subscribe to this special object if they know of it. I shall be pleased to send copy for the "Story of the Hospital" to anyone writing for it.—J. S. WOOD, Secretary.

SPECIAL APPEAL.—Will some friends help us in Deptford by sending tracts or books for free distribution among the people here, as the circulation of secular literature in this town is on the increase. Therefore, the need of counteracting this evil is very great. Parcels of tracts and books will be gratefully received by H. PUNNETT, 7, Crossfield-lane, High-street, Deptford.

MADEIRA.—Mr. W. SMART, Depository of the British and Foreign Bible Society at Madeira, makes an appeal on behalf of giving a "Day in the Country" to eighty Portuguese Protestant school children. He proposes taking them to a seaside village nine miles from town. Ten pounds are required to cover expenses. Any sums sent to Mrs. W. Smart for her "Soup Fund," started with the object of giving one meal a day to the poorest Portuguese Protestant children in her Mission school, will be thankfully acknowledged. The Jesuits by doing this have a very large school, and Mrs. Smart hopes to increase her school, and to teach them the Bible, of which they know nothing before entering.

Notices.

Will the Correspondent who sent us the note in reference to Mr. Duncan's meetings in Manitoba, a few weeks since, kindly send his address?

Mr. T. Rawlinson, of Wakefield, has removed to 19, Kenmont-gardens, Harrow-road, Kensal-green, London, W., and hopes to devote himself to evangelistic work, as at Wakefield and Halifax.

APPLICANTS FOR TRACTS.—W. Alison, 48, Union-street, Hamilton; J. Lovejoy, 107, St. George's-road, Southwark; H. Holmes, 130, Princes-road, Liverpool; T. F. Litten, 34, Raglan-road, Bishopston, Bristol; M. A. Gaze, High-street, Bagshot; M. Wood, 45, Carwood-road, Sheffield.

THE friends of Israel have long watched for indications that GOD'S ancient people were beginning to turn their eyes towards the land of their fathers; and the records of Missionary Societies and the public utterances of their prominent supporters for many years past furnish testimony to the desire in devout hearts that the opportunity might arise to show kindness to Israel when returning from their protracted exile.

No such movement was, however, visible. Earthly prosperity and religious toleration combined to give a home-like character to the lands of their dispersion. London, Paris, and Berlin gave promise of greater plenty and security than Jerusalem. But GOD, moving in His mysterious way, began to stir the nests of many Jews living at ease in Eastern and Central Europe; and a persecution which, several years ago, would have been deemed incredible, has driven from their homes thousands (perhaps tens of thousands) of Jews; and some of these, refusing to put a greater distance than ever between themselves and the Land of Promise, have voluntarily, with difficulty and amid much privation, found their way to Palestine; upwards of a thousand of them have realised what was once to them a vague expectation—"our feet shall stand within thy gates, O Jerusalem."

They came there in the hope of being helped by their co-religionists to settle in the land of their fathers; but, utterly disappointed in this, they appealed to the Jewish Missionaries for help. Their immediate wants were supplied, and whilst two-thirds of them have been rendered self-supporting, the rest are still at the charge of the Missionaries.

Whatever voice may be in these trials for His ancient people we need not at present pause to enquire; nor need we stop to speculate whether this migration of Jews to their ancient home is the beginning of a great movement of a people in whom there is once more stirring the pulse of national life; the question for the lovers of Israel is: What plain duty is laid upon us in circumstances so novel and interesting? Are we to stand by and leave these people to sink into pauperism under the bondage of the Jerusalem Rabbis, and into deeper distance from God and from Christ; or is there a providential call for practical and timely material help and spiritual oversight? To offer temporary help without the Gospel is within the range of the philanthropist, but cannot deeply engage the sympathy of Christian hearts; to offer the Gospel unaccompanied by a helping hand would be a mockery. In what way can help be tendered so as to elevate its recipients and gradually render them self-supporting?

The Rev. H. Friedlander of Jerusalem, whose experience of twenty years as representative of the London Society for Promoting Christianity among the Jews entitles him to speak with knowledge of the subject, gives us the answer: "Furnish these immigrants with the means of earning their living as tillers of the ground." The Land has enjoyed her Sabbaths, and awaits the efforts of the plowman and the vine dresser; poverty impels unaccustomed hands to attempt untried forms of labour. The kindness received at the hands of Christian Missionaries in Jerusalem makes these people willing to follow the counsels and plans of their well-wishers; and if the Christian Church recognises the occasion as one given by GOD to call forth her prayers and her liberality, difficulties will vanish, and an example will be furnished which may find eager imitators, that the Jew can betake himself to agriculture and make it profitable.

If the LORD'S stewards encourage this new Society to proceed to the purchase of land, in quantity sufficient to make the experiment on a fair scale, and to secure the erection of dwellings suitable to the circumstances of the cultivators, the first step for the Committee must be to acquire a tract of land already offered and surveyed and proportionate with the money placed at their disposal, or such other land as may be judged most suitable. Meanwhile will you, as one who counts the Jew "beloved for the Father's sake," beloved for Christ's sake, intimate to the Committee whether, and to what extent, you are disposed to assist a well-considered scheme on the lines herein suggested?

No time ought to be lost in purchasing the first plot of land and building houses on it. The rent of the houses in which the Refugees are now living has been paid up to the 1st of November, 1883. According to the custom in Palestine, rent has to be paid for 12 months in advance, and it is, therefore, of considerable importance, to have houses ready before the 1st of November, which is only possible if we can begin them early in August. These circumstances make it imperative that immediate action should be taken; and our friends will see that in this instance it is emphatically true that he gives twice who gives quickly.

"Yea, I will rejoice over them to do them good, and I will plant them in this land assuredly with my whole heart and with my whole soul. For thus saith the LORD; Like as I have brought all this great evil upon this people, so will I bring upon them all the good that I have promised them."—Jeremiah xxxii. 41-42.

Two estates can be bought—

The smaller of the two, containing an area of about 1,200 acres, can be bought for, say	£1,500
Allowing, on an average, 25 acres for a family, 48 families could be settled here.
To build 48 houses at the rate of £60 each would absorb ..	£2,880
And to buy the necessary stock and implements we want £25 per family, or	£1,200
Seed for the first year, and maintenance of the people till the first crop comes in, £30 per family, or	£1,440

Altogether we require then, for land, houses, stock and implements, seed and maintenance £7,020, of which £4,380 would bring interest in the shape of rent, calculated at 5 per cent. on the outlay, whilst £2640 would be lent to the Refugees to be repaid in 21 annual instalments. The interest coming in would be required for the salary of an efficient Hebrew Christian Manager, who would be responsible for the proper carrying out of the intentions of the "Refugees' Aid Society," as may be laid down in the Bye-Laws.

The larger estate has an area of 2,500 acres and costs £10,000. A block of buildings erected on it would cost £4,000. This sum of £14,000 would have to be paid within two years. Twice the number of families can be settled there, and the income to be derived from this property, based upon the average of tithe payments during the last ten years, would secure not only the stipend of a Manager, but at least 5 per cent. interest on the capital, in addition.

Whatever property is acquired would be held by the British Consul in Jerusalem in trust for the "Jewish Refugees' Aid Society."

BOOKS FOR THE HOLIDAYS.

GEORGE WHITEFIELD: HIS LIFE AND TIMES.

By J. R. ANDREWS. Cheap Edition, 6d.; with Portrait, Cloth limp, 1s.; Cloth board, 1s. 6d.; with Engraved Portrait, Cloth neat, 5s. (post-free).

"Whitefield was not a framer of discipline, not a leader of a sect, not a founder of societies, not a ruler of men, but pre-eminently a winner of souls. Would that such preachers were multiplied in the present day! We thank Mr. Andrews for this seasonable addition to our religious biography. No young preacher or student should be without it. But it possesses an interest far beyond any special class, and deserves a wide and general circulation."—Methodist Recorder.

BY ANNA SHIPTON.

"TELL JESUS."

Recollections of Emily Gosse. Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.; Cloth elegant, Gilt edges, 2s. Also a Cheap Edition for general distribution, price 6d.

"Presents us with notices of a life spent in loving, intimate, and uninterrupted communion with a personal Lord. . . . We have read the book with deep interest. We would that indolent professors might read it and be quickened, and that suffering saints might read it and be comforted."—Christian Times.

WHISPERS IN THE PALMS.

A Volume of Hymns and Poetic Meditations. Printed on Toned Paper, and attractively bound, Gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"A truly pious and Christian mind alone could have uttered these 'Whispers.' They breathe a spirit so pure, and in the richest harmony. . . . The extremely tasteful and elegant style in which this edition has been produced reflects the highest credit upon the publishers."—British Workwoman.

THE BROOK IN THE WAY.

Hymns and Poems Illustrative of the Christian Life. Printed on Toned Paper, and elegantly bound, Gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"A collection of sacred songs, which, as rippling murmurs, are intended to guide the pilgrim to refreshing streams. . . . The waters to which it allures us are evangelically sweet and pure. Whoever listens to these murmurs and tastes these waters cannot fail to be refreshed."—Sword and Trowel.

Books for Children.

"NETTIE'S MISSION" SERIES OF SMALL BOOKS.

Cheap Edition, 6d.; Cloth neat, 1s. each.

"Without exception, among the very best books for children ever published. Nothing better as gift-books for the young can be desired."—Hive.

NED DOLAN; or, "Lead us not into Temptation."

ALICE; or, The Early Crown.

By Rev. H. BURTON, B.A. Tinted Covers, 6d.; Cloth, 1s.

"A beautiful story of a Christian early sainted. It would be an admirable reward-book for thoughtful Sunday scholars."—Methodist Family.

LITTLE BUTTERCUP AND JENNY WREN.

Gilt Edges, with Frontispiece, price 2s. 6d.

By means of this attractive little story the authoress conveys to her youthful readers most impressive and precious lessons of contentment and thankfulness. From the histories of a Bird and a Flower, teachings of deep importance are educed and imparted to the minds of the young.

JOE WITLESS. A Book for Boys.

With Seven Illustrations. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.; Gilt edges, 2s. 6d.

"It is certainly an enjoyable thing to meet with a work professedly for children, written in language and style not only adapted to their capacities, but containing the important truths of the Gospel in a form sure to be acceptable to them."

Liverpool Daily Courier.

Tinted Covers, 6d.; Cloth, bevelled boards, 1s.

THE CHILD MINISTER. Records of a Young Life.

By ANNA SHIPTON.

"A tender narrative of the life and death of a pious child; calculated to benefit greatly, and to interest little children."—Sword and Trowel.

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF JOHN B. GOUGH.

REVISED BY HIMSELF.

Cloth, Bevelled Boards, with Four Illustrations, 3s. 6d.; Cheap Edition, with Portrait, 1s.; Limp cloth, 1s. 6d.

"What need be said of the 'AUTOBIOGRAPHY' itself? It should be read and re-read. It is the record of a life as strange and eventful as it is impressive and instructive. . . . A more perfect knowledge of such a life cannot fail to strengthen the faith of some, and to inspire the zeal of others."—Temperance Record.

BY REV. J. MACPHERSON.

LIFE OF DUNCAN MATHESON, The Scottish Evangelist.

Thirty-sixth Thousand. With Engraved Portrait. Tinted Covers, 1s. 6d.; Cloth neat, 2s. 6d.

"The life of a noble, heroic, and self-denying man! It is the book for all who are engaged in evangelistic work—who wish to know how hearts are won, and Christ served."—The Freeman.

THE CHRISTIAN HERO.

A Memoir of Robert Annan, the zealous Evangelist. Large-Type Edition, Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth Boards, 1s. 6d. Cheap Edition, Tinted Covers, 6d.

"We heartily thank the Rev. J. Macpherson for his well-written, graphic, and telling life of this 'Christian Hero.' It is a book to be read by all."—Baptist Messenger.

HENRY MOORHOUSE, The English Evangelist.

With Portrait. Handsomely Bound in Cloth, Bevelled Boards, 2s. 6d.

"The record is full of interesting incidents from which counsel and encouragement may be gathered; and we heartily commend it to the attention of those who would know what may be done by workers somewhat off the ordinary recognised lines."—The Rock.

BY REV. DR. CULROSS.

JOHN, WHOM JESUS LOVED.

Sketch of the Character, Writings, Theology, and Influence of the Beloved Disciple. New and Enlarged Edition. With Chromo-Lithographic Views of the "Sea of Galilee" and the "Isle of Patmos." Cloth, Bevelled Boards, 3s. 6d.

"This is not a book to be taken up lightly, read hurriedly, and carelessly dismissed. It merits, and will reward, a quiet, thoughtful perusal."—The Record.

"THY FIRST LOVE."

Christ's Message to Ephesus. With Chromo-Lithographic Frontispiece. Cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

"A clear and thoughtful exposition. Dr. Culross writes in an easy, interesting manner; sometimes quaintly, always pointedly. Many a laggard in the heavenly race would be stirred to activity by reading Dr. Culross' exposition."—Penuel.

"BEHOLD, I STAND AT THE DOOR, AND KNOCK."

Christ's Message to Laodicea. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth limp, 1s. 6d.; Cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

"A most opportune book. Would that every professing Christian would thoughtfully and prayerfully peruse it! Sunday-school teachers also would find it immensely stimulating and reviving."—Hive.

MARY LYON.

Recollections of a Noble Woman. By FIDELIA FISKE. Eleventh Thousand. Cheap Edition, Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth, 1s. 6d.

"Miss Lyon established, and for many years superintended, the Mount Holyoke Seminary, from whence a large number of devoted and earnest women have gone forth to do good service in the Master's cause. The author of the 'Recollections' was herself a pupil of Miss Lyon, and after labouring with much success in Persia, returned to South Hadley to succeed her former instructress."

Sunday-school Teacher.

FIDELIA FISKE.

The Story of a Consecrated Life. Edited by Rev. W. GUEST. Tenth Thousand. Superior Edition, with Engraved Portrait, 3s. 6d. (post-free). Cheap Edition, Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth, 1s. 6d.

"This charming memoir. . . . It is difficult to conceive of a more entire devotedness to the glory of God and the well-being of man than that which was the life-spring of this remarkable woman."—British Quarterly Review.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"

WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK

CASE of ADVANCED PHTHISIS at KIDDERMINSTER.

Mr. T., who, while asking me to accept his testimonial and to publish his case, requests me, for special reasons, not to publish his name,* was a patient of mine in '80,'81, and '82.

When he first applied to me his condition was pitiable indeed. The worst symptoms of consumption prevailed in their worst form. The correspondence continued through all the period named (43 letters altogether from me), the result of which is that there has been steady gradual amendments throughout, and he has been "raised from a mere shadow to new life."

Some time since he writes me, "My doctor on stethoscopic examination has reported with amazement, 'That the disease has been arrested, and both lungs are quiet now.'"

In a letter dated Feb. 20 last, he says, "Considering my former sad state, the effects of your medicine have been most wonderful. My doctor reported that portions of both lungs were gone. I am most grateful to you, and shall recommend your medicine to all sufferers."

 I can furnish the name and address of this patient privately, though not in print.*

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days

J. THEOBALD & COMPANY'S SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

THE ACME FIELD GLASS.

THERE are no glasses so highly recommended for power and cheapness as those sold by us. Why is this? Simply because we lay ourselves out specially for this line of business: we determine that we will get glasses of a quality so high and a price so low as to defy competition. The consequence is, we sell thousands where an ordinary optician would sell 10 or 20. Any person calling at our establishment can have over 3,000 glasses to select from, while to keep a stock like this would ruin half-a-dozen ordinary shopkeepers.

Travellers, tourists, and sailors alike speak loud in their praise. They are taken out by enterprising ship captains, and sold for double and treble our prices to passengers on board and travellers across the water.

The ACME FIELD-GLASS will give a splendid view of twenty miles, will show clearly the moving of birds that are but mere specks of dirt against the sky to the naked eye, the flags of a ship when only its topmasts can be seen on the horizon, a church clock three to four miles distant, and, in fact, for tourists, pleasure parties, sea voyagers, &c., it is an indispensable instrument; one which they cannot afford to be without. The object-glasses measure over 1¾ inch across, and these, together with the other lenses, are of the clearest definition and great power. To persons who cannot stand the fatigue of holding a telescope, we especially recommend it. In a neat black leather case, silk-lined, spring-snap, and strap, so that it can be slung across the shoulders. This wonderfully powerful instrument we offer for 15s. 6d., carriage free.

THE MINIATURE ACME

is a much smaller Field Glass, but far more powerful, having twelve best intensely clear lenses (double the number of the 15s. 6d.). The object glasses measure 1⅞ inches across, and the entire instrument is only 2¾ inches high when closed, combining the greatest power in the smallest compass. This glass is sold by opticians at 50s., but is offered at the wholesale price of 29s. carriage free, each in silk and velvet-lined case, with strap, &c., as above. This is an opportunity never before offered to the public. The reason we can sell them so ridiculously cheap is because where an ordinary optician disposes of one we sell 500.

THE MINIATURE ACME No. 2.

Specially made in answer to many inquiries. The same size as the 15s. 6d. glass, but with twelve lenses. Gives a much larger view and far greater magnifying power than the 29s. size. An intensely powerful and clear glass. Price 37s., carriage free. Carriage to India on any of these glasses 2s. extra; all other foreign places, 5s. Only an immense sale for these Glasses will pay us at these prices.

All orders to be sent within 28 days, except from abroad, and to be accompanied by coupon.

The HERALD of MERCY.

An Illustrated Messenger for Humble Homes.

ORIGINATED BY THE LATE DUNCAN MATHESON.

Twenty-fourth Year of Publication.

NEW AND IMPROVED SERIES OF

The Herald of Mercy consisting of Eight Quarto Pages, issued Monthly, commencing with January 1883,

PRICE ONE HALFPENNY.

and several smaller Engravings.

The pages of The Herald of Mercy are devoted to Articles and Poems which present the Gospel in an attractive manner, the burden of each number being the glorious truth proclaimed by Christ in John iii. 16:—"FOR GOD SO LOVED THE WORLD, THAT HE GAVE HIS ONLY-BEGOTTEN SON, THAT WHOSOEVER BELIEVETH IN HIM SHOULD NOT PERISH, BUT HAVE EVERLASTING LIFE."

The Herald of Mercy

CONTAINS

Stirring Narratives,
Pointed Appeals,
Earnest Exhortations,
Tender Warnings, &c., &c.,

both in Prose and Poetry, written expressly for the unconverted.

Each number contains a page

FOR THE YOUNG,

which consists of short Articles and interesting Anecdotes in simple language, with at least one Engraving.

TO TRACT DISTRIBUTORS.

Tract Distributors and District Visitors will find The Herald of Mercy very acceptable and attractive, both to young and old, and many who would refuse an ordinary tract gladly take this paper. It is printed in a good clear type, so as to be easily read, and is suitable alike for House-to-House Visitation; for a Loan Tract; for giving away; for circulation in Hospitals, Infirmaries, and Workhouses; for distributing to Soldiers in Barracks, Sailors in Port, Agricultural Labourers, Mechanics, Factory Workers, and others; and, in fact, for circulation in any and all the channels for which Tracts are usually required.

☞ The matter is so arranged that each number may be cut up into two 4-page or four 2-page Illustrated Tracts.

The Herald of Mercy

will be forwarded to any address in Great Britain, or to any country in the Postal Union, i.e., U.S.A., Canada, France, Spain, Italy, &c., as follows:—

By D. L. MOODY. 13th THOUSAND. Tinted Covers, 4d.; Cloth Limp, 6d.

"The moment a man takes hold of the truth that Jesus is coming back again to receive his followers to Himself, this world loses its hold upon him. Gas stocks, and water stocks, and stocks in banks and railroads, are of very much less consequence to him then. His heart is free, and he looks for the blessed appearing of his Lord, who, at his coming, will take him into his blessed Kingdom."—Extract.

NORWOOD EARLE FUND.

Committee: Rev. W. T. Adeney, M.A., Acton, W.; J. Burn, Esq., Park-road, Acton, W.; C. F. Dowsett, Esq., 70, Lincoln's Inn Fields, W.C.; G. D. Edis, Esq., 9, Paternoster-row, E.C.; C. Higginson, Esq., Hanwell, W.; T. Lewis, Esq., Castle-street, Dover; Rev. W. Page, Upper Mall, Hammersmith, W.; E. J. Physick, Esq., 136, Marylebone road, N.W.; M. C. L. Rozas, Esq., 17, Arundel-gardens, Notting-hill, W.; C. K. Worsfold, Esq., Dover. (With power to add to their number.)

At a meeting of the above Committee, held at 21, Surrey-street, Strand, July 23rd, it was decided to endeavour to enlist sympathy on behalf of the widow and nine children (the youngest of whom is eleven months old) of the late Mr. Norwood Earle, of Acton. The family is left absolutely without means, a small Life Insurance policy having been the only provision Mr. Earle was able to make, and it is found that this sum is more than absorbed by business liabilities.

Nominations to Christ's Hospital or to any similar Institution are also greatly desired.

All contributions will be thankfully acknowledged by the Treasurer, Mr. John Wood, of Mayfield, Ealing-common, W.; or by any member of the Committee.

The "One Tun" Ragged School Mission (Old Pye Street).

Men's Sunday afternoon Bible Class, and Free Tea. Mission Services and Prayer Meeting, &c. A Bible-woman, who visits all connected with the Mission, and a blind Bible-reader, who reads the Scriptures in the courts and lanes of neglected districts. After 25 years of blessing, we earnestly desire to extend and increase the Mission, for the praise and glory of God. We should like for this purpose £500, if the Lord is pleased to send it by His dear people. Received with grateful thanks from J. N., £20; A. J. B., £5 5s.; A Friend, £3.—Mrs. A. Barker Harrison, 78, Coleshill-street, Eaton-square, S.W., Hon. Sec.; Mr. A. J. Woodhouse, 1, Hanover-square, W., Treasurer.

SCRIPTURE READERS' SOCIETY FOR IRELAND.

Supported by Voluntary Contributions.

President—

The Right Hon. the Earl of Shaftesbury, K.G.

Established 1822, for the purpose of employing humble Christian men, well versed in the Scriptures, to visit from house to house throughout the country, and visit all denominations. Irish-speaking Readers are sent to Irish-speaking districts when required. The work is carried on in a spirit of love.

Subscriptions or Donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary, Capt. Kearney White, 27, Lower Pembroke-street, Dublin; or at 9, Paternoster-row, London.

The Earl of Shaftesbury says in his last letter to the Secretary:—Many thanks for your kind letter, and many thanks to Almighty God for the good intelligence you give me about your Scripture Readers in Ireland. I wish I could more effectively assist you. Your letter is the best thing that I have seen or heard from Ireland.

I enclose my donation, and only wish it was more.—Yours, Shaftesbury

N.B.—Friends will please notice the exact title, "Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland," and not as "Irish Scripture Readers' Society."

MRS. WILKES proposes to be at home every Wednesday from Two till Five o'clock, for the purpose of seeing friends of Rescue Work, Trains from Liverpool-street to St. James-street Station, Walthamstow, every half-hour. "The Elms" is within five minutes' walk of the station. Elms, Coppermill-lane, Walthamstow, Essex.

A DAY IN THE COUNTRY would greatly rejoice the poor of the Gee-street Christian Mission, Goswell-road. Please send subscriptions towards it, and for rent of Chapel, addressed to Henry Rudolf, Hon. Secretary, 82, Wood-street, Cheapside; or to Robert Baxter, Esq., Treasurer, 6, Victoria-street, Westminster; or Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, Tritton & Co., Bankers.

THE HOPELESSLY INCURABLE.

The Unsuccessful Candidates.—The Committee of the Ladies' Samaritan Society of the National Hospital for the Paralysed and Epileptic, 25, Queen-square, Bloomsbury, earnestly plead for Contributions in aid of a collection they are making for the unsuccessful candidates at the recent election of pensioners. There were 44 candidates and only 5 pensions to bestow; 39 poor sufferers were consequently disappointed. To each of these the Committee desire to send a gift of money and they confidently appeal to the sympathy of the kind friends who have assisted at previous elections, and to the public generally. The smallest donations will be thankfully acknowledged by the Committee.

THE REV. JOHN H. HASLAM,

Vicar of St. Matthias, Birmingham, and Mission Preacher, requires at once £400 to carry out certain necessary alterations, repairs, and improvements, in his Church and Schools, as his parish consists entirely of poor he asks the help of those who have benefited by or been interested in his work outside his parish. Any contributions will be gratefully acknowledged by him, if sent to 36, South-road, Handsworth, Birmingham.

Educational.

TO GODLY PARENTS.—The undermentioned (who is in no way connected with the school) is desirous of recommending an old-established YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S BOARDING SCHOOL, DELIGHTFULLY SITUATED FACING THE SEA on the South Coast, a short run from London, in which a thorough and first-class Education is given, based upon the teaching of the Holy Scriptures.

It is one of the few remaining schools in which the power of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ influences the hearts and conduct of the pupils.

The success, happiness, and training of the Boys have been so remarkable in this School that a BOOK OF TESTIMONIALS GIVEN BY THE PARENTS should be read to appreciate results so unusual. Two Vice-Chancellors have placed their wards as pupils in the school. Reference kindly permitted to Dr. Thorn, Paddington, London.

WE have advocated the claims of Magnetic Treatment in these columns by such arguments as are always unanswerable when the subject has passed beyond the theoretical into the proved and practical. We have endeavoured to put the arguments in intelligible language, such as any reflecting reader could comprehend; and we are encouraged by the fact that our labour has not been in vain; but there is yet a class of readers who are not to be convinced by argument or converted by statements of our patients, unless made by persons known to them. For the satisfaction of this class of inquirers we have arranged to append a list of 1000 names, some of whom are readers of The Christian, and may be known to other subscribers; these have endorsed the following general statement, and have expressed themselves willing to confirm it by letter or personal interview:—

"We have great pleasure and satisfaction in acknowledging the economy and efficacy of Mr. B. COPSON GARRATT'S Treatment by Magnetism."

BOOKS FOR ENQUIRERS AND CONVERTS.

Young Converts;

Or, Beginners in Zion's Ways. By Rev. R. BOYD, D.D. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.

I have been continually asked by young converts where they could get a book in which they might find advice that would be helpful to them. This book seemed just the thing needed at this time. I have known the author, Rev. Dr. Boyd, for many years as a dear father in Israel. I have read his work carefully, and recommend it to all young Christians for prayerful meditation." D. L. Moody

The Way of Life.

A Book for Enquirers. By Rev. ROBERT BOYD, D.D. Tinted Covers, 6d.; Cloth Boards, 1s.

"About fifteen years ago this little book attracted my notice. I read it with interest, and felt so much profited that I re-read it several times, and then circulated hundreds of copies among the soldiers during the American war. The number that then seemed blessed through reading the book has induced me to ask Messrs. Morgan & Scott to republish it, hoping that it may be the means of good in this country, as it has been in America." D. L. Moody

All About Jesus.

Thoughts and Reflections on the Person and Work of Christ. By ALEXANDER DICKSON. This book was printed at the express desire of Mr. D. L. MOODY. Tinted Covers, 1s. 6d.; Cloth, 2s. 6d.

"The volume sets forth Jesus very much in Scriptural language, for we have counted over 1340 passages of Holy Writ, chastely and lovingly interwoven in the discourses. Throughout, Jesus is the subject of delightful meditation, affection, and adoration."
The Methodist.

Addresses to Young Men.

By Rev. DANIEL BAKER. With Preface by D. L. MOODY. Tinted Covers, 1s.; Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.

"These discourses were designed to be of an awakening character. They were preached (in substance) in numerous revivals, and were blessed to the hopeful conversion of many precious souls, of whom some fifty or more have become ministers of the Gospel. May He who was pleased to bless these discourses when they came from the pulpit, bless them also now." AUTHOR'S PREFACE.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings; And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

The Christian.

NEGLECTED TRUTHS.

POPERY deliberately and systematically steeps her garments in the blood of souls. She has paganised the religion of Jesus, and made the Word of God of none effect by her traditions. She has counted the precious blood of Christ a common thing, and for silver and gold sold licences to sin. She hypocritically adapts herself to the sentimental, the moral, and the devout, while she panders to the worldly, the ambitious, and the unclean. She is the mother of harlots and abominations of the earth.

But is Protestantism pure from the blood of all men? Is she free from shunning to declare all the counsel of God? If there be any portion of divine truth for which there is no room in our scheme of Christian doctrine—nay, which is not a necessary part of that scheme—it is evident that our system is defective, if not untrue.

Protestantism originated in Luther's protest against the Popish lie of salvation by human merit, and the evil system of which that figment is the corner-stone. Accordingly, the watchword of Protestantism has always been "Justification by Faith." With his mind and heart fully occupied with this grand and fundamental truth of our salvation, Luther regarded jealously, and even denied the inspiration of James's Epistle. The tendency of Protestantism has always been toward antinomianism rather than toward the opposite extreme. This was the natural and necessary result of its origin, for it was a protest against legality—against the vicious theory of salvation by the good works of men.

Essentially wedded to the truth of justification by faith is "the record that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son; he that hath the Son hath life, and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life." Protestantism is strong upon these two points: that "a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law;" and that Christ gives unto his sheep "eternal life, and they shall never perish." In proportion as she has held these truths exclusively, without regarding the relation which they bear to other truths, has Protestantism careened towards antinomianism. But God has wonderfully guarded the mystery of godliness, and, whatever our theories may be, experimentally there is only fulness of joy as we walk in the light in fellowship with God: for, while dogmatically asserting the perseverance of the elect, the highest antinomians are the rankest doubters.

The Revival of 1859 found hosts of professors without life, anxious souls without joy, and converted people without assurance. There had been abundant preaching of Protestant doctrine, viz., the depravity of man, justification by faith, and eternal life as the portion of those who believe. But it had been very much in word and not in power; or what power there was, had, to a large extent, only convinced of sin, without giving the knowledge of salvation through the remission of sin. It had been John's ministry, preparing the way of the Lord. Like a breath of heaven came the glad tidings of great joy, and multitudes rejoiced in the finished work of Christ. Such texts as these set thousands of souls at liberty: "In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins." "Complete in Him." "The Lord our righteousness." "God raised Him from the dead." "And hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in heavenly places in Christ." "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my words, and believeth on Him that sent Me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life."

This special testimony had its day—the convinced of sin found pardon; the anxious souls rested from their labours; a great number of professing Christians obtained assurance of salvation, and were quickened into zealous effort on behalf of other souls. But, when the harvest was in great measure gathered in, and the sowing-time came round, the reality of the work was tested, and many who had run well lagged in the race. Here and there a man of God warned saints that "without holiness no man shall see the Lord;" but this was distasteful food. The season for ploughing and harrowing the ground formed to many a painful contrast to the joy in harvest, and to the days in which they rejoiced as they who divide the spoil. Believing themselves "complete in Him," they disliked the word of exhortation, especially when enforced by warnings such as these: "Take heed, brethren, lest there be in any of you an evil heart of unbelief, in departing from the living God. But exhort one another daily, while it is called to-day, lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin."

In a small room where a few children of God had lovingly united to hold communion with an afflicted sister, the sixth chapter of the Epistle to the Hebrews became the theme of meditation, and the general expression was that the fourth and two following verses* puzzled them. The passage was not a necessary and integral part of the system of doctrine which they had learned; nay, there was no room for it, and they did not know where to put it, or what to do with it. We are not now going to attempt an exposition of this or any other difficult passage; but to express our conviction that if our scheme of doctrine were complete, there would be no difficulty with regard to the large and important chain of passages, of which this is only a link; that if "the Bible and the Bible alone" were not only theoretically but practically "the religion of Protestants," these Scriptures would not need to cry out, "Give me place that I may dwell," but would be felt to be necessary to their appointed place in the temple of truth.

Paul and James in the Bible go hand in hand; but James is not generally a favourite amongst modern teachers. Nay, even Paul is supposed to be divided against himself; for while he says, "By one offering He hath perfected for ever them that are sanctified," he says in the next breath, "If we sin wilfully after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins." We find that, speaking generally, the truth contained in the former passage is frequenty maintained and urged, while that in the latter is overlooked and slighted; that, indeed, the tenth chapter of Hebrews is frequently read and dwelt upon so far as the 25th verse, but that the remainder receives very little notice. We therefore crave attention to the need in these days of the warnings and exhortations of Holy Scripture.

Firmly holding the fundamental doctrines which are named above, as the very truth of God, let us also consider:

1. That when a wise master-builder, an ambassador of Christ, has laid in another soul the only foundation, which is Jesus Christ, that other is exhorted to take heed how he buildeth thereupon. He may, instead of gold, silver, and precious stones, build wood, hay, and stubble, which will not abide the fire; and if any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss: though he himself shall be saved, yet so as by fire. (1 Cor. iii.)

2. That if we neglect giving all diligence to build upon or add to our faith virtue; and to virtue knowledge; and to knowledge temperance; and to temperance patience; and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherlyness; and to brotherly kindness charity: we shall not have an entrance ministered unto us abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of Christ and of God; for he that lacketh these things is blind, and cannot see afar off, and hath forgotten that he was purged from his old sins. (2 Pet. i.)

3. That whatever our views may be as to effectual calling and election of God, we cannot make our calling and election sure without giving diligence to these things; nor can others know our election of God, but as evidenced by our work of faith, and labour of love, and patience of hope in our Lord Jesus Christ in the sight of our God and Father. (2 Pet. i.; 1 Thess. i.)

4. That while the foundation of God standeth sure, only "the Lord knoweth them that are his;" and that the rule given for our guidance is, "Let him that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." (2 Tim. ii.)

5. That many deceive themselves and others. (James i. 26; Matt. xxv. 11; 2 Tim. iii. 13.)

6. That the good seed, even though not trodden under foot on the wayside, but springing up immediately, may have fallen on shallow soil in stony places; or have been choked by thorns; but that the proof of the good ground is that the seed springs up and bears fruit. (Matt. xiii.)

7. That a genuine work of God is known by its permanence, and that the proof that we have been made partakers of Christ is that we hold fast the beginning of our confidence steadfast unto the end. (Heb. iii. 6, 14; Col. i. 23.)

8. That a man may be enlightened, may taste of the heavenly gift, be made partaker of the Holy Ghost, taste the good word of God and the powers of the age to come, and yet may fall away. He may know the way of righteousness, and yet turn from the holy commandment, like the dog to his vomit, and like the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire. (Heb. vi.; 2 Pet. ii.)

9. That the condition of one who has thus willingly chosen sin in preference to holiness is essentially changed; the heart has been hardened by the deceitfulness of sin; the conscience seared as with a hot iron; he has sinned against the Holy Ghost; done despite unto the Spirit of grace; and it is impossible to renew such again unto repentance, seeing that they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put Him to an open shame (Heb. vi., x.)

10. That while the grace of God has provided in the blood of Christ an atonement so deep and wide as to embrace every sin of which man is capable: if that atonement be wilfully despised and deliberately trodden under foot, there doth not remain any other

* "For as touching those who were once enlightened and tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the age to come, and then fell away, it is impossible to renew them again unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put Him to an open shame."

sacrifice for sin. This is the presumptuous sin, the great transgression, which shall find no forgiveness, whether committed in this age or in the millennial age to come. (Ps. xix.; Matt. xii.; Heb. x.)

11. That this hopeless apostasy is not reached at once, but is the ultimate result of a process which commences with neglecting to give the more earnest heed to the things which in these last days God hath spoken unto us by his Son, and which have been confirmed unto us by them that heard Him; God also bearing witness, both by signs and wonders, and divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Ghost, according to his own will. A process continued by the hardening effect of the deceitfulness of sin, producing an evil heart of unbelief in departing from the living God; by forsaking the assembling of ourselves together; by fainting at the rebuke and despising the chastening of the Lord. And culminating at last in that much sorer punishment than the temporal death inflicted on the despiser of Moses' law. "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God. For our God is a consuming fire." (Hebrews, passim).

12. Therefore, "Exhort one another daily, while it is called to-day." "And let us consider one another," not to point out others' failings, but "to provoke unto love and to good works. Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is, but exhorting one another;" when we meet together in conferences, not merely instructing, encouraging, and comforting, but exhorting one another; "and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." (Ibid.)

THOUGHTS ON HOLINESS.—18.

By Rev. MARK GUY PEARSE.

THREE WAYS INTO CANAAN.

(Concluded.)

SET the map of Egypt and Canaan before you, and you will see that the common and easiest way from one country to the other was by the coast and through Gaza. It is the direct route following the shores of the Mediterranean and coming into Canaan through the land of the Philistines. That was the regular beaten track between Canaan and Egypt. By that way Abraham went, and Joseph, and Jacob, and his sons. By that way the treasurer drove when Philip was sent to preach to him.

Now in this route there was no Red Sea experience, and there was no Jordan. There was no awful manifestation of God's presence in dividing the sea; no thunder and lightning and no stars fighting in their courses.

Do let us believe that God has many ways into Canaan. With some the transition is very sharply marked; it is a matter of earthquakes, whirlwinds, convulsions; with another the way is a noiseless leading onward from day to day, so gentle and quiet a path that when they hear of the terrors of the Red Sea, and the marvels of Jordan, they doubt if they ever knew anything about it. Do not set up any ideal experience as the only one. Neither the passage of the Red Sea nor the Jordan was needful to get from Egypt to Canaan. It is plain that if all had been made of such stuff as Moses and Joshua and Caleb, they would have gone the nearer way. "It came to pass that when Pharaoh had let the people go, that God led them not through the way of the Philistines although that was near: for God said, Lest peradventure the people repent when they see war, and they return to Egypt. But God led the people about through the way of the wilderness of the Red Sea."

Let us learn that the Red Sea route is not the only one into Canaan, for some it is even out of the way. We may get up by way of Gaza; it is as good a way as any.

The second way went into Canaan across the Red Sea, and then right on without touching the Jordan; from Kadesh Barnea the people of Israel could have passed up immediately into the land of Canaan, far down to the south of the Dead Sea. If they had all been Joshuas and Calebs they would have gone in here, and not have known anything about the Jordan at all.

Then the third way was that by which Israel came in after years of wandering in the wilderness, by the way of Jordan over against Jericho.

Now let the three ways teach us that there is no need to spend years of wandering in the wilderness, that there is no need for us to require vast and overwhelming manifestations of God's power, and yet that God is able and willing with infinite patience to bring in the dull, slow, faint-hearted people.

Above all, do not let us think about any kind of experience or manifestation whatever as necessary to holiness. We have nothing to do with the way, that is for our Leader to decide. Do not doubt yourself, do not doubt others, because the ways differ. He who comes by way of the Red Sea must not look down upon him who comes by way of Gaza. He who has never gone down into the Jordan must not doubt because other people do. He who comes by Gaza misses the rapture of the Red Sea triumph, but what of that? He goes by a shorter route into the goodly land. He who comes by Kadesh Barnea misses the Jordan marvels, but what of that? He has missed the forty years of wandering in the wilderness. The way is no concern of ours.

Let us earnestly inquire as to that which was essential to Israel's coming by any route into Canaan, whether by Gaza, or by Kadesh Barnea, or by the passage of the Jordan.

(1) An earnest acceptance of God's purposes. All the route began there. They must listen to the voice of the Lord. "Out of Egypt have I called my son;" that call heeded and obeyed is the first step. Moses at first was rejected by the people as their deliverer, and they had forty years of further bondage. Put this first. God seeks to bring us up into Canaan, the goodly land. Are we willing to go? Do we hear his voice, and do we yield ourselves to Him for the fulfilment of his high purposes? That is the first step towards Canaan.

(2) A very distinct recognition of the way of salvation, and a whole-hearted confidence in it. Whichever way they went, every man who marched towards Canaan marched out from under the blood. Every man had to eat the flesh of the lamb. There are many ways, but there is only one door. There is no setting out for Canaan but from under the cross of the Lord Jesus Christ. There must be an absolute reliance upon the blood of Christ as the only ground of our salvation. That and that only comes between us and the curse of our sins. And every man had to eat the flesh of the lamb. Christ must be received and trusted in; we must feed upon Him in our hearts. In Him we must find deliverance from the bondage of our sins, and in Him we are to find strength for service.

(3) Each way required an absolute dependence upon God to bring them in. There were many difficulties by each route from which He only could deliver them. They had to get away from the cruel taskmasters, and from the might of Pharaoh, and of themselves they could do nothing. In all the way of their journey they had to trust God to guide them and to feed them, and to drive out from before them the mighty inhabitants of Canaan. Thus there was to be a complete committing of themselves, and their wives, and their children, and their all, into his keeping and guidance. That is almost Canaan itself, when we have learnt the blessedness of this restful reliance upon the might of Jehovah to bring us up into that goodly land, to deliver us from all our enemies, and to supply all our need.

(4) Whichever way they went, they had to get up and go on. There must be journeying. All arrangements were made for that. They stood having the staff in hand, and the garment rolled about the waist, and sandals on the feet, ready to follow as the Lord should lead. They must part with everything that hindered that—they never would have got to Canaan without that. No matter whether they went by Gaza, or by Kadesh Barnea, or by Jordan, they must get up and go on. That pilgrimage was their one great business. They waited on the pillar of cloud and the pillar of fire; day and night they were ready to strike the tents and be off to a further camping ground. Ah—there we often fail. We put the blood on the door and think we are all right. There we abide; and not only do not get to Canaan, but very often we do not even get out of Egypt. There must be this actual surrender of ourselves to the Lord to be led of Him. We must seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness. We must dwell in tents, suffering nothing to get such a hold of us that we get rooted and grounded either in Egypt or in the Wilderness.

We must get up and come out of Egypt. Whichever way they went, there was to be a very real separation between them and Egypt. Either the Red Sea must cut them off; or the great and terrible wilderness; or the way by Gaza, "which is desert."

(5) There must be the appropriation of Canaan. By whichever way they might get there, they had to enter in and claim it in the name of the Lord. "Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon have I given you." In the name of our glorious Captain and Saviour, we have to put our foot down. The tread of assurance, the march of triumph, is to be ours. Victory is pledged to us; it is ours now to claim it. The goodly land of Canaan, of conquest, of rest, of abundant fruitfulness, of God's abiding presence, and of a perfect service, is ours if we will have it. Now, in the Lord's name, let us go up at once and possess it, for we are well able to overcome it.

BIBLE FLOWER MISSION.—This Mission, of which Miss Anne Dove is hon. superintendent, pleads for flowers for distribution among the dispensaries and hospitals of the metropolis. The account for June states that 39,889 bunches were sent out, a deficiency of 6,293 as compared with June of last year. The address is 110, Cannon-street, E.C.

A SOLDIERS' HOME AT RAMLEH.—A want is greatly felt by our soldiers quartered at Ramleh (four miles from town), where we have about 900 men stationed, of a Soldiers' Home. Some time ago I made application for a room to be set apart for a prayer-room, but owing to the limited accommodation I was unsuccessful, and we have had to hold our meetings in the quarters of a brother in Christ. A place where our Christian soldiers could go to when their duty permitted would, I feel sure, be the means of drawing many others from the temptations which surround them. I am desirous of building a hut in the vicinity of the barracks, with prayer, reading-room, and a bar for non-intoxicating beverages, &c. It will cost about £100. Will any of God's people assist me by sending contributions to Colonel J. W. F. Sandwith, 4, Trafalgar-square, Charing-cross, London, W.C., or to Mrs. Evered Poole, Enfield House, Southampton.—W. Roberts, Army Scripture Reader.

CLEANSED BY BLOOD.

By the Author of "The Gospel and its Ministry."

WE have thus seen how Israel was redeemed by blood, and brought into covenant with God, and sanctified by blood. Fully redeemed and absolutely sanctified; what more can sinners need? What more could God Himself provide? And yet this was but the foundation on which the ritual of the Mosaic law was based. The object of that ritual was not to bring the people into the place of nearness to God; that was already theirs; but to maintain them in that place in a manner worthy of his holy presence. The types of the law teach deep lessons as to the holiness of God and the heinousness of sin. The contrast between the awful sights and sounds of Sinai and the peaceful cloud which rested on the tabernacle, marked the change in the attitude of God towards an unholy people, and towards that same people when sanctified by the blood of the covenant. At Sinai He sternly measured out the distance which separated them from Himself; in the tabernacle He dwelt in their very midst. And yet the ceaseless round of sacrifices, of which that tabernacle was the scene, ever testified that man was sinful and God was holy.

This appears even in the special sacrifices for transgressions and acts of sin, but far more plainly still in the many offerings which had no relation to definite known sins at all. There were first the sacrifices provided for particular occasions, such as the birth of a child, or the dedication of a priest. Then, again, there were the many offerings ordained for the festivals and other epochs in the sacred calendar. Further still, there was the morning and the evening lamb offered daily throughout the year. And, finally, there were the great sin-offering of the Red Heifer, recorded in Numbers xix., and the perennial sin-offering of the great day of Atonement.

This last claims special notice here. For every sin a sacrifice was prescribed. And apart altogether from sins, acts of defilement excluded from the presence of God, and provision was made for cleansing from such defilement. What room was there, then, for more? The great day of Atonement was not a provision for those who despised or neglected the special sacrifices enjoined for sins and for uncleanness. It was a provision for the godly and devout, not for the Godless and profane. Let us ask ourselves what that ordinance was to a saint like Joshua. Redeemed and sanctified, he knew what it was to abide in the Divine presence. Had temptation betrayed him into known sin, he would have brought his sin-offering, and have received pardon, absolute and full. If the circumstances of the desert had brought defilement, he would have obeyed the ordinance for cleansing. Paul could say, "I know nothing against myself," and the saints of an earlier age could say the same. And yet it was for such the Day of Atonement was provided "to cleanse them that they might be clean from all their sins before the Lord" (Lev. xvi. 30.)

The blood of the Burnt-offering of the Covenant was carried to where the people stood, and sprinkled on the people; the blood of the sin-offering was carried into the holiest within the veil, and sprinkled before God. The one was for sanctification, the other was for cleansing. If the sin-offering had been offered once for all, the type would have been perfect. But it was repeated year by year, to teach that it was only a shadow of the coming good things. But remember, its efficacy reached forward, not backward. It was not to cancel the unatoned-for sins of the year that had passed, but to renew the blood of which the efficacy had endured throughout that year. The scape-goat and the burnt-offerings which completed the ritual of the Day of Atonement, taught other aspects of truth. Here I am dealing only with the blood that was carried within the veil.

Where a special sin-offering was enjoined for an act of sin already committed, the offerer identified himself with the victim by laying his hands upon its head. In the case of other sacrifices the blood was sprinkled on the offerer. But in the great yearly sin-offering there was no such identification of the people with the goat of "the Lord's lot." The entire ritual respecting it was to Godward, and the only memorial of it was in God's presence, where none but God could see it.

The sprinkled blood of the Passover was left behind in Egypt. Its redemptive purpose was fulfilled, and it remained to testify to Israel's deliverance and Egypt's doom. The sprinkled blood of the covenant was, as it were, carried about by those whom it had sanctified; but the sprinkled blood of the sin-offering remained before Him "who dwelt between the cherubim," and its purpose and efficacy was to maintain the Israelites in the position they enjoyed as a redeemed and holy people. Acts of sin excluded from the camp altogether, and therefore the blood failed of its purpose if the practical walk of obedient holiness were wanting. But no measure or standard of holy living could have availed but for the blood upon the mercy-seat. The light of his presence is the only sphere of fellowship, but the blood alone is the ground on which it rests. "If we walk in the light, as He is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus his Son cleanseth us from all sin."

This cleansing has nothing to do with the practical purifying of heart and life. That depends on power—it is by the Holy Spirit; whereas blood represents death, which is the antithesis of power. The special lesson which the sin-offering teaches is not that God's presence demands a life of separation from evil; that is enforced in type and narrative and doctrine from cover to cover of the Bible. But we are sinners not merely in acts but by nature, and even a perfect life gives neither title nor fitness to dwell with a holy God. The saintliest of saints is ever dependent on the grace that never fails; and the blood upon the mercy-seat above.

As the Israelite looked back to the Passover and the burnt-offering of the covenant, his thoughts carried him to the blood within the veil. And so with the believer now. The blood-shedding of Calvary is not a lifeless fact of history but a living reality, for the Christ is at God's right hand, "a lamb as it had been slain;" and the preciousness of that death to God is the ground of his security, and the secret of his fellowship. Theology teaches us the truth that Christ has made propitiation for our sins. But the full revelation of the Gospel has given us a truth which transcends all types, and which theology has never grasped, the truth that Christ Himself at God's right hand is the propitiation for our sins, and that we have forgiveness of sins "for his name's sake" (1 John ii. 2, 12). Theology teaches us to rest upon his work, but God would lead us on to rest upon Christ Himself; not as separated from his work, for that is impossible, but as embodying in Himself all the everlasting efficacy and value of that work. It is not that somebody died for our sins, and that the blood then shed is now in heaven, available to cleanse from sin; "CHRIST died for our sins," and when we speak of his blood as cleansing us, we use figurative language, the language being taken from the types, and what we mean is, that his death is ever present before God for us, and that that death avails not merely to sanctify us, but to maintain us in separation from all that defiles.

FRIENDS OF FRIENDLESS GIRLS.

AMID much discouragement that necessarily attends many of the efforts made for the temporal and spiritual good of all classes amongst us, a brief account of the hopeful work of the "Ramsgate and St. Lawrence Ladies' Association for the Care of Friendless Girls" may have a cheering effect upon some of the readers of THE CHRISTIAN. The Association was actually started in May, 1882, though for some months previous to that a few ladies had anxiously and prayerfully desired to do something for the rescue of young girls from immoral influences.

Miss ELLICE HOPKINS was invited to give hints and advice as to the best way of setting to work; her public and private addresses were the means of enlisting sympathy in the cause, and in September, 1882, sufficient public support had been promised to enable the Committee to open a small house, and to secure the services of a resident matron. In time of weakness a poor girl is often open to a kind word, and can sometimes be induced on leaving the wards to take refuge in the Home rather than return to her former mode of life. The harbour officers and police have also been communicated with, and from time to time have drawn attention to cases. Local tradespeople and others have been liberal in their gifts of furniture and such like, so that the whole annual expenses have been only £179 17s. 10d., including house rent, salary of matron (the present one is a voluntary worker), payments for girls in other Homes, travelling expenses, &c. Fourteen girls have been received, of whom some have been placed in Homes, one is doing very well in Canada, and others are either in service or have been returned to their friends.

Considering that the work in this place was started amid many a prophecy of failure and very lukewarm support in some quarters, the Committee feel that they have much cause to thank God and take courage. Of all the girls who have come under their care, there is only one who seems to have returned to her former mode of life; the majority are believed to be truly changed in character. All expenses have been met, and though still more support is needed, they started for their second year with a small balance in hand. In face of these facts, let none dare say that these poor girls for whom we are caring are beyond the reach of a helping hand. Rather let them determine to make even greater efforts on their behalf, and thus tread in the steps of Him who came "to seek and to save that which was lost." Anyone feeling interested in this work may obtain particulars by applying to Mrs. Ferrie, 11, Nelson-crescent, Ramsgate.

THE HOSPITAL SCRIPTURE UNION.—A Union is being formed under the above title. Its objects are (1) to encourage the habit of daily reading the Word of God, (2) to induce the practice of intercessory prayer, and (3) the entire support of a cot or bed in one or more hospitals. The members pay one shilling yearly. For forms of membership and other particulars, address Miss Pattisson, 20, Clifton-gardens, London, W.

"THE ALARMING DESTRUCTION OF AMERICAN FORESTS" is the subject of an article which will appear in the August number of Forestry (14, Bartholomew-close, E.C.), from the pen of Mr. William Little, of Montreal, an authority who has made the subject of American Forestry a life study. Mr. Little states that at the present rate of cutting the United States will be entirely denuded of its merchantable yellow pine in seven years!

AMONGST THE KABYLES.

WHEN one has felt the Master's word "Go" in the depths of one's soul, it cannot be resisted; one is constrained to obey it. This must be our answer to those who inquire, "Why leave country, friends, and Christian privileges, and banish yourself to Africa?" The Lord wills that those who have never heard his Gospel, or tasted of his love, should have their opportunity, and if we had not come they would have been without it! They only know of Jesus as a prophet amongst other prophets; we tell them of a Christ whose riches are unsearchable.

We hear the morning call to prayer at four o'clock from the tower of the adjacent mosque (this is the largest of three), the cry by the marabout is, in Arabic, "God is great, I publish it to all the world, in the name of God, and in the name of Mohammed the apostle of God." The c y is repeated at noon, and at six and nine in the evening. We would fain cry from Fiouan, the mountain overhanging the village, "God is good, and in his love He has given his Son." "Behold your God!" (Isa. xl. 9.)

Few, comparatively, go to the mosque, the women never; there is nothing like united worship. Occasionally the Koran is read. On the Friday, their market-day, many from distant villages were accustomed before the insurrection to enter the mosque; but now rarely. We are now in the fast of Rhamadan, no food is eaten from sunrise to sunset, but night is turned into day for feasting, this lasts from July 6 to August 6; they hold to it so tenaciously, that no medicine even must pass their lips, not even a pill, nothing be applied to a decayed tooth, no squirting a remedy into the sore eyes. What a privilege it is to be able to do a little to alleviate the sufferings of men, women and children, but oh! how much greater to direct them all to "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." What a sweet sight to see them listening reverently to the words of Christ in their own tongue! Yes, healing and preaching must ever go together; an interpreter we have always found, to explain what we read, and this is encouraging for new comers, as thus they can at once begin missionary work. For the help of such I am preparing Prendergast's Progressive Dialogues in Kabyle, which will greatly facilitate the learning of the language. The Gospel of Matthew I am sending to the British and Foreign Bible Society.

The first part of our house was finished on Saturday, "La fête de la Republique." We had a pretty little episode. The four French masons, headed by the entrepreneur, each with a flag and bringing a bouquet with their felicitations, wishing us long life and health. I told them "this house they had been working at so industriously was set apart for the work and glory of Christ, that out of the rooms which they had prepared would arise, from hearts devoted to Christ, prayer for Kabyles, and for themselves, the French colons. We longed for the blessings of Christ to be shared by all alike, and we could conscientiously conclude by saying, "Vive la Republique!" I mention this for those who have so kindly lent a hand towards this so necessary part of our Mission work. The foundations of the second part of this house, for the second Mission family, are already laid, but we cannot complete it for want of means; about £300 will be required. This is one of the last of the tribes and peoples to whom the Gospel is being brought. From this, as a centre, we long that streams of blessing may flow forth. They are coming to us from distant villages; men and women hear about Sidna Aïlsa, the great Physician of body and soul, and narratives of his healings when on earth; their gratitude is extreme; such a kissing of hands!

We have been tried by disappointments, both inside and outside of the Mission, but no Mission, I suppose, was ever begun without them, and our enemy is very crafty. Mr. Mayer has gone to a distant tribe, and is putting up a two-roomed house on the mountains. He is sustained by Swiss and French friends, and is quite independent of us. The young man who was associated with him for a short time does not continue with us, as he cannot enter into our objects. Some of our Kabyle friends were first threatened to be sent to prison by one of the authorities for having to do with us. Recently four of them have actually been imprisoned and fined on trumped-up charges, but, as they believe, for this reason. This could not well occur in any other district, but people flock to us; we have had many women come for remedies, some of them bringing their little children of three or four years of age; they are brave little fellows, intelligent, and never wince at having their sores treated. One dear woman from the hills, to whom my wife read John iii. 16, seized the book and kissed it reverently. They have souls, and we lay ourselves out for their conversion.

How sweet is our little Sunday service for Mohammedans. What a joy, nay, what a luxury, to watch the awakened interest and the sparkling eye, as the truths about our blessed Lord and his saving grace are dwelt on. We can bear with the African July sun and the insects when we have such experiences. We have long missed the fellowship at Mildmay, but we are compensated. Let no one come out here who cannot stand alone, and in default of the streams knows not how to resort to the fountain. How strange there are so few of our own people to volunteer for this interesting land and people! May the Lord of the harvest Himself raise up labourers, quick in learning a new tongue, willing to be nothing that Christ may be everything; free from personal ambition, and having but one object before them every day, the salvation of souls. A knowledge of medicine, too, is very desirable, but this is a means to an end. No one will be long here without forming a lasting attachment to the Kabyles.

CAUTION.—We are requested to state that a female is going about London asking for subscriptions for Pastor Jacob's work in Oroomiah. Mr Jacob's son informs us that no one is authorised to collect money for the same.

MIDNIGHT MEETING MOVEMENT.—The organising secretary of this society has been holding Missions to the fallen in Portsmouth, Aldershot, Portsea, and neighbourhoods, with the kind assistance of many Christian friends. There are many poor women in these places. The meetings were well attended. There were many penitents, and some have been placed with friends, or in Homes. The number of women in these places appears to be much increased since the relaxation of the Contagious Diseases Acts.

HYDE-PARK.—Special blessing is being vouchsafed in the meetings here; hardly a night goes by but that someone publicly confesses his need of Christ, and is brought into the hall and prayed for and with. The immense number of men who attend the services is noted by all; out of eight distinct cases of conversion very recently seven have been men who have voluntarily asked us to pray for them. One man dates his conversion from the hour he heard the choir singing "Are you coming home to-night?" whilst another case was that of one who found peace through the hymn "Take me as I am." "The Lord hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad." CHAS. COOK.

For the Young.

WHAT ARE YOU GOOD FOR?

"CHILDREN," said Mr. Brown, "what is my watch good for?"

"To keep time," the children answered.

"But suppose it can't be made to keep time, what is it good for?"

"It is good for nothing," they replied.

"And what is this pencil for?"

"To mark with," said the children.

"But suppose it has no lead, and will not mark, what is it good for?"

"Good for nothing."

"Well," said Mr. Brown, "what is the use of my knife?"

"To cut," answered the little ones.

"Suppose it has no blade," he asked again, "then what is the knife good for?"

"Good for nothing."

"Tell me now," said Mr. Brown, "what is a boy or girl good for? What is the chief end of man?"

"Oh, that's Catechism," cried Willie Brown. "To glorify God, and to enjoy Him for ever."

"Very well; if a boy or girl does not do what he or she is made for, what is he or she good for?"

And the children all answered, without seeming to think how it would sound, "Good for nothing."

Dear boys and girls, if you are not seeking "to glorify God, and to enjoy Him for ever," is it not just as if you were good for nothing?

A REAL BOY.

A real, true, hearty, happy boy is about the best thing we know of, unless it is a real girl, and there is not much to choose between them. A real boy may be a sincere lover of the Lord Jesus Christ, even if he cannot lead the prayer-meeting, or be a church officer, or a preacher, but he can be a godly boy in a boy's way and place. He is apt to be noisy and full of fun, and there is nothing wrong about that. He ought not to be too solemn or too quiet for a boy. He need not cease to be a boy because he is a Christian. He ought to run, jump, play, climb, and shout like a real boy. But in it all he ought to show the spirit of Christ. He ought to be free from vulgarity and profanity. No real, true boy chews, or uses tobacco in any form, and he has a horror of intoxicating drinks. The only way he treats tobacco is like the boy who was jeered and laughed at by some older ones because he could not chew. His reply was, "I can do more than that; I can eschew it." And so he did all his life. A real boy is also peaceable, gentle, merciful, generous. He takes the part of small boys against large boys. He discourages fighting. He refuses to be a party in mischief and deceit.

Above all things, he is never afraid to show his colours. He need not always be interrupting, but he ought not to be ashamed to say that he refuses to do anything because it is wrong and wicked, or because he fears God or is a Christian. A real boy never takes part in the ridicule of sacred things, but meets the ridicule of others with a bold statement that for all things of God he feels the deepest reverence. And a real boy is not ashamed to say "father" or "mother" will not like it if I do so and so. It is only your sham, milk-and-water boys that are afraid to do right. Everybody respects the real boy, and everyone despises the sham, too-big-for-his-parents, smoking, tobacco-loving coward, who is afraid to do right for fear of a little ridicule.—The Outlook.

KESWICK CONVENTION,

July 23—28, 1883.

"THERE came a cloud and overshadowed them, and they feared as they entered into the cloud." A deep cloud was overshadowing the spot which had indeed been a mount of transfiguration, where we had seen the Lord Jesus transfigured from what we had hitherto seen Him, into the glorious King. On the Sunday previous the sermon preached in the church told that the beloved pastor who had issued the invitations to the Convention was now waiting at the very gate of Heaven. The sermon was preached by his son, and while he told how that the King's chamberlain who had invited us to the feast was going into His unveiled presence, the King Himself was as near and as full of gifts as ever. The next morning the call came, and our beloved friend went in to see the King. But as he went in, the glory from the opened gates streamed out, and it has been as though the Convention were held in the very glow of the near presence of God Himself; and a holy solemnity, but no gloom, was spread over every heart, while each one holds on to the Lord for the deeply bereaved ones who have parted with such a husband, father, and brother.

In the opening meeting, of Monday evening, Mr. H. F. Bowker, who had been appointed to preside at the Convention, spoke on Phil. iii. 10, showing how resurrection power and fellowship in Christ's suffering went together, and saying how that this blow might be made use of for blessing in leading us to see Jesus more clearly. It was not easy to speak at all, and each word was penetrated with the sense of "God has been here." We had met under unparalleled circumstances, in answer to an invitation from one who had been summoned to the Heavenly throng, just as we were assembling to the blessed earthly one. But both had Jesus for the centre, and there was only a vail between, but no gulf. Rev. E. H. Hopkins then gave as a motto-word, "My soul, wait thou only upon God, for my expectation is from Him:" and reminded us that the best preparation was to lie low before Him. Then Rev. C. A. Fox put in a word full of expectation, lifting our hearts from their crushed sense to Him who has so much to give, from the words, "Ask ye of the Lord rain in the time of the latter rain, so the Lord shall make bright clouds, and give them showers of rain, to every one grass in the field." It all depends upon "ask." Ask the more definitely as you know that the time of the latter rain has come, and then do not be afraid of "clouds" which He gives in response.

The next morning the tent was well filled for the early meeting, and the hunger present showed itself in the numbers of requests. There was a deep solemnity over the whole day. The throngs were greater than ever before; and the new tent, holding 1500, became crowded to overflowing by the evening. The old tent only held 1000. We could not but feel a deep sense of loss as we missed his face, whose wondrous and abiding calm and rest had been a real power in the meeting always; but the very blank made us fasten more upon Him who had given him that peace. And his Spirit did control and guide. Throughout the day our hearts were kept looking to Him. A deeper tone than ever before was to be observed. We had had the rest of faith, we had been shown what dying with Him meant; last year the note was Resurrection, this year we could be taught of the "sufferings that must follow."

The strong words of Rev. Dr. Elder Cumming (of Glasgow) were on this line clearly, with no mournful ring, but with the under-current of the joy of "with Him" in all. He put together the two questions of Jesus in Mark x. 36 and 51: "What wilt thou that I should do unto thee?" When the blind man replied, He answered without pause at once, and gave the sight he craved; but when He hears the prayer of Zebedee's sons He does not answer once, but prepares them, and asks them first: "Can ye drink of the cup that I drink of? and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?" There was a good and an evil element in their petition; there was self-seeking, and there was love; but the Lord takes up only the love in it, and shows them that to be beside Him meant more than glory and splendour. There was death, and darkness, and desertion in it, and would they face that the cost of being with Him? There is no easy way, no pleasant path to consecration. Are you ready?

Before this we would not have been ready to have this pressed; but now, knowing Him better, we could dare to hear it, and answer, "Lord, anywhere with Thee!" And in the prayer that followed it was said, "There is not only a cross to be taken up, but there is joy with it, and the joy within is the wings by which we can bear the cross. Yes, Thou art proving it now in the house which Thou hast so sorely bereaved, and art enabling Thy children to bear even the cross of death, because of the joy of Christ within."

At each meeting, that house into which the Lord had stepped with his sovereign yet tender tread, was remembered and pleaded for; and the answer was given, so that it has glorified his keeping power more than any words could do.

The morning meetings were taken by Rev. Hubert Brooke, whose clear, full, and interesting Bible readings were a great help. On Tuesday the subject was taken from Jer. xxxii., on The Sealed and The Open Evidence. He spoke of the purchase first; how the price was paid down while the land was yet in the enemy's keeping, and evidence of the purchase was taken, one copy firmly secured and hidden, the other open, probably posted up where all inquirers might see and know who was the possessor. So had Christ purchased us, and two evidences were required; one, sealed, between God and the soul; the other, open and manifest, visible to all. We find the two in 2 Tim. ii. 19. "The Lord knoweth them that are his." That is the upward side of the seal, which only God and I read; but then follows the downward side, which all around are to read, "Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." What would be the consequence of there being only the sealed evidence? Why that inquiries were made, "Whose is this land?" and because there was no evident answer posted up in the public way there would be trespassing upon it, and then there would be no cultivation. On this was founded a very earnest plea for clear separation and open evidence for the glory of the Master; for the owner was judged by the land he owned, and if the crops are poor by weeds, and hedges are broken, we say, "What a poor farmer!"

How very present and personal the Lord was was shown in the after-meetings conducted by Rev. E. H. Hopkins. Numbers openly surrendered to the Lord after a most heart-stirring address on the first evening by Rev. C. A. Fox, on "Ebenezer," or, "How even the place of double defeat might become the place of victory." (1 Sam. vii. 12).

The next day the number of requests was even greater, and Rev. J. A. Jacob gave the motto-word from "Lord, if it be Thou, bid me come unto Thee on the water!" reminding us that we required the word of God Himself before we could step out upon the life of faith and safely walk the waters.

Mr. Brooke again took the Bible-reading, this time on "Ye are my witnesses." In the afternoon there was one of the most practical and teaching testimony meetings which we had ever been at. It was not a mere announcement that surrender had been made, or that Christ had taken possession, and the joy that followed, but each one (all spoke from the platform, which was a very great gain) was enabled to tell out shortly, but very distinctly, in what way the Lord had led them, and each by such different paths that there could be an intelligent following. Some of these were Scotchmen, whose clear and cleanly-cut doctrinal knowledge enabled them to point out what the difference was, in terms which did not confuse, but enlightened seeking ones. They were mostly those who had been Christians for years, so that their testimony came with fuller weight. The Rev. — Laycock, from Barrow, Mr. W. Sloan, Mr. W. J. Govan, Mr. Crosby, and Mr. Duncan Craig, from Glasgow, and Mr. Albert Head, were amongst them, and the Lord greatly blessed their witness. It was beautiful to see how self was hidden, and the Lord Jesus kept so manifest all through.

This is one of the happy features this time. Although, from the human side, there are fewer speakers than ever before, yet new witnesses are coming forward. Neither M. Stockmayer nor M. Monod could come, and several of our own teachers, amongst them Revs. H. Webb-Peploe and E. W. Moore, are very much missed, yet the Lord fills up with new voices to speak good of his name, and He does not allow us to lack, and sustains those who have to bear a far greater strain than ever before, both through absence and death of many here last year.

In the evening the Lord spoke very markedly, through Rev. W. Haslam, who dwelt upon the conflict. Some mistook, and thought conflict was all over; but nay! for though the Lord who had come out as our Champion could have overcome all at once, and left us no enemy, yet, as He wants us to share his glory, so He would have us share his conflict—a victorious one always, if it be indeed shared with Him. Then let us love ourselves away to Him altogether, to follow wherever He leads.

This was followed by an address from Rev. C. A. Fox, which it is not easy to describe in words, for it was so overpoweringly impelled by the Spirit of God that we could only bow and yield. He took Luke v. 1—8. The first thing before we could be fishers of men must be confession of failure: "We have toiled all the night, and have taken nothing." Then after describing the vain toiling of many an agonising soul, he said after the "we have" confession of failure, must come the "I will" of determined trust on the word of Jesus, "At thy word I will let down the net." After that, there is something deeper still, and we must be brought down to the "I am" of utter self-despair. "Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord." That is what we must be brought to. But the Lord did not depart. No; we have a Father who can answer wrong prayers rightly; and though we should not ask wrongly for lack of searching, yet, my brother, pray out what is in your heart—God will answer it the right way. And listen! when He does give the blessing so freely after your own vain night toiling, what follows? Is it only hallelujahs of joyful exultation? Nay; I have the deepest sympathy with the glad expressions, but I sometimes fear lest they should lead us to forget the deep humiliation of spirit which God demands. Oh! let his blessing compel you to this, and then will follow what we are longing to hear from Him, the "thou shalt" of spiritual success with others. The after-meeting after this was very fruitful and deep, and could be no mere surface matter.

The next day the blessing went on. The morning meeting had another full-teaching word from Job by Dr. Elder Cumming, showing how closely Job had held to his integrity, until at last he abhorred himself, and that not by argument, but by the sight of God Himself. Then came the glorious end of blessing, towards which God was working all the way through.

We expect yet more. A solemn day has to come yet, when the "clay clothes are laid in the wardrobe of earth." May he make use of that solemn gathering.

FRUITFUL BOUGHS.

John xv. 2.

JOSEPH is a scion true
In the vine so dear to God;
Yet in thirsty soils he grew,
Thorny was the path he trod.
Though the archers vexed him sore,
Sweeter fruit he richly bore;
Wounded deep, he flourished more
In God his strength.

Moses paints in outline clear
Him by whom our sins were borne;
Hence, through life 'twas his to bear
Foeman's hate and kindred's scorn.
Reared in pomp, he meekly took Prophet's rod and shepherd's crook;
Suffering calmed, no terror shook
His steadfast soul.

David is a favoured lamb,
In the flock by Jesus led;
Yet by toilsome paths he came,
Far he wandered, oft he bled.
Thus the bruised reed grew strong;
Every tear has found a tongue;
Every sigh has tuned a song
Of praise to God.

Thou that hast the winepress trod,
Let thy life our pattern be;
Make us holier by the rod,
Fruitful through adversity.
First the seed, and then the shoot;
First the knife, and then the fruit;
May we bear on Christ, the Root,
"An hundredfold."

REVIVAL AT DARLINGTON.

ON July 1, 1883, Mr. Thomas Houston, the blind evangelist, of Bessbrook, in Ireland, and a member of the Society of Friends, commenced a series of Mission meetings in Hopetown Hall, Darlington.

For some time before his coming prayer was made for the salvation of souls, and God graciously answered.

The hall, which accommodates 900 people, was packed on Sunday evenings. As the preacher earnestly and faithfully delivered the Lord's message to the people it was intensely interesting to watch their faces. "The old, old story" of the Cross made even mature Christians weep. Few who heard the discourse on "He was wounded for our transgressions," are likely ever to forget the effect of such loving appeals.

On the first night fifteen persons who came into the inquiry-rooms professed to go to their homes "justified," and altogether some seventy souls are rejoicing in the belief that they have passed from death unto life. The solo-singing attracted and touched the hearts of many. There are those who can listen unmoved to words spoken, who, when they hear the same in song, are stirred to their very depths.

Mr. Houston held his farewell meeting on the 19th, when about 130 sat down to tea, after which a public meeting for praise was held. Thirty persons told their experience, among whom were some of the young converts, who showed their sincerity and earnestness by taking up the Cross and confessing Christ.

The hearts of the dear children have also been opened, and some of them have been helped to give pleasing testimony for Jesus. Never before has such a revival been known in Hopetown Hall, and the church there is earnestly praying that the work may continue. F. W. Wood.

NEW YORK.—Would any friend send The Christian weekly, after reading it, to "The Free Reading Room" of the International Tract and Missionary Society, 371, 3rd Avenue, New York, U.S.A.? And I would draw the attention of people coming to New York to the advantage of this free Reading Room. G. Brereton.

FRANCE AND MADAGASCAR.

THE following digest of information concerning affairs in Madagascar has just been issued by the London Missionary Society:—

The relations subsisting between the French and the Malagasy have been for some time in a very strained and critical condition. Certain demands were made by the French which the Madagascar Government was compelled to refuse. In connection with these points a Malagasy Commission lately visited Paris, but were unable to obtain any favourable terms from the French Government. The envoys were received with kindness by England, Germany, and America; but no interference on the part of any of these nations could be secured, except that of strong representations addressed to the French Cabinet.

The French have at length proceeded to violent measures. They bombarded and destroyed the ports of Amorokanga and Mojanga, on the north-west coast of Madagascar. After the bombardment of Amorokanga, a young Sakalava princess was taken off by the French, but none of the Sakalava would join them.

The tidings of these acts of hostility were received at Antananarivo with great dismay, and communications from our missionary describe the serious and grave condition of affairs which has there been brought about. The Malagasy people resent the outrage deeply. A war spirit has been aroused, and they are determined to resist with all their power this attack upon their country. The disposition to meet the French terms in a liberal spirit was changed into a deep sense of the injustice committed against them; and had it not been for the firm and wise action of the Queen and Prime Minister, it is probable that the French residents at Antananarivo would have been murdered, and, in the passion roused against the foreigner, others than the French would also have suffered. It was also rendered certain that the ultimatum of the French would be rejected. All hope of the peaceful solution of the matter in dispute was then dissipated. Immediate steps were taken for the defence of the capital and the resistance of an invasion, which now appeared inevitable. The Prime Minister, it is said, is complete master of the situation, and the enthusiasm of the army is intense.

This unprovoked attack upon the ports was looked upon as a declaration of war, and on Friday, May 25, the French residents were ordered to leave Antananarivo by the following Wednesday. The action of the Queen in this matter deserves attention. The general wish of the officers was that they should be turned out of the capital at once, and a message to that effect was sent to the Queen. The reply of Her Majesty was: "The French call us barbarians, and, if we do as you suggest, perhaps we should prove ourselves to be so. The French gave our people at Mojanga an hour's notice; we will give the French five days. We will not take their goods; and, if they have any difficulty in procuring bearers, we will assist them." This decision was quietly acquiesced in, though not without some muttering and discontent. Unless the Prime Minister had the people thoroughly in hand, there would have been bloody work. At one hint from him that the people might do as they pleased, the mob would have attacked and murdered the whole body of French subjects, and have seized their property and have destroyed their buildings. We may indeed feel thankful that such self-restraint has been shown. It is an indication of the growth of right principle, and a proof that the leaders of this people recognise the fact that they can only expect to maintain their position, and to obtain the sympathy of European nations, if they show themselves able to govern with moderation and wisdom in these trying times.

The condition and prospects of the English residents demanded serious attention. In the excited state of popular feeling, it was manifestly unsafe for foreigners to be residing in scattered places through the country. Our missionaries were, therefore, summoned to Antananarivo, and special guards are appointed by the Malagasy Government for the protection of the persons and the property of the English residents. A committee, representing English, Norwegian, and American citizens, was formed for the purpose of watching over the interests of foreign residents in Imerina, and consisting of Bishop Kestell-Cornish, Rev. L. Dahle, Rev. W. E. Cousins, Rev. G. Cousins, Messrs. Wilkinson, Pitman, and Wilson.

At such a critical time, it would seem that the ecclesiastical separations which too often dishonour Christian work are entirely lost sight of, and, in the presence of the common danger, men recognise only their common relation to their Saviour and Lord.

News from the capital is thus brought down to the 31st of May. The later events, which are of far greater importance, took place at the Port of Tamatave, from which news has been received up to the 16th of June.

On the 19th of May, Tamatave was startled by the news of the bombardment of the two ports, and the probable advance of the French ships upon Tamatave itself. A general alarm seized the people. Many of the Malagasy left for the country, while French, English, and foreigners came into the town to place themselves under the protection of their Consuls. Mr. Pakenham, the English Consul (of whose death public notice has already been given), called a meeting of British subjects, and gave excellent advice and counsel as to the behaviour of foreign residents, and assured his fellow-countrymen of the protection of the British flag.

During the ensuing week, preparations were made by the Governor and officers of Tamatave to meet the expected attack. Arrangements for an ambulance and hospital, if they should be needed, were made by one of our missionaries, and the purpose of the flags and badges suitable for such work of charity was explained to the Malagasy authorities. But when the French commissaire was informed of the proposed hospital, which would be at the service of all alike, he said he was not at all sure that the admiral would respect the flag, seeing that this people are not among the civilised nations.

On Thursday, May 31, the La Flore entered the harbour, and brought news of the capture of Mojanga. On Friday the French ultimatum was sent to the capital. It contained the following demands:—

(1) The French are to have guaranteed possession of all the island north of the sixteenth parallel.

(2) 200,000 dollars compensation for the claims in the Laborde case and others.

(3) A revision of the treaty, and a voice in all matters affecting the policy of the Government.

Eight days were allowed for reply. If unfavourable, Tamatave was to be bombarded. The people, who had to some extent returned to the town after the first alarm had subsided, again left. Very few seemed to have remained. The native part of the town was almost deserted. The Consul and Captain Johnstone, of H.M.S. Dryad, met a deputation of British residents, and, in reply to the representations and requests made by them, both Mr. Pakenham and Captain Johnstone expressed their desire to do all in their power for the British residents; and added that it was advisable all should come into the town, and congregate as much as possible around the consulate; that although England was very solicitous for the lives and property of her subjects, yet it must be remembered that those interests here, in Tamatave, are but a small affair compared with a war with France, and hence it behoved all British subjects to be very circumspect during the troublous times upon which we are about to enter; that, in the event of hostilities, and of danger to the persons of British subjects, the Dryad is at the disposal of the Consul, and all can take refuge there.

A standing committee was formed, consisting of Messrs. Aitken, Waterhouse, Gignel, Tessier, and Dupuy, with Mr. Shaw as president. Steps were taken to provide shelter and provision for indigent British subjects coming in from the country. Houses were rented for the purpose, and Mr. Pakenham consented, on behalf of the Mauritius Government, to supply them with sufficient funds to purchase necessaries. Permission was obtained to compel the burial of all petroleum and rum, and no difficulty was experienced in carrying out this resolution of the committee. All were advised through the committee to make preparations, so that on a very short notice they would be able to embark on board the Dryad.

As the allotted time approached conclusion, the feeling of the residents and those who remained in Tamatave became very intense. The Saturday morning prayer-meeting was unusually well attended, every one feeling a kind of presentiment that not only might it be the last together, but that in all probability there would be no service to-morrow. Those who engaged in prayer were influenced by no feeling of the war spirit. Prayers for righteous vindication, for guidance, and for eventual peace and goodwill, were those heard in Tamatave on the eve of the bombardment.

On Saturday night there was very little sleep for any who remained on shore. Watch was kept during the night, no one knowing from one minute to another, subsequently to midnight (when the time of the ultimatum expired), when the town would be shelled. However, nothing happened till Sunday morning. At 6.15 a.m. one of the French vessels, the Nievre left her moorings and steamed round into the south bay. As soon as she was anchored, the Beausaint fired the signal-gun, when the French flags were run up to each masthead and the bombardment commenced. Seven vessels were engaged in throwing shot and shell into and beyond the forts for an hour-and-a-half. The first shell from the Forfait fell into the Bazaar, and soon a column of smoke and flames showed it was on fire. Almost at the same time, a shell from the Nievre burst among some native huts on the south-west of the town and fired them. At 7.45 the firing ceased, and quietness reigned for a time, seeming more profound after the thunder of destruction that had been so deafening previously. At about 11.30 firing again commenced, and each vessel threw a shell at intervals of half-an-hour. But it was not till Monday that the French landed, quite unopposed, and an easy, unobstructed march took them into the Fort. Signals were hoisted at the flagstaff, but the French flag was not hoisted till Thursday morning. Hence, there was no police nor sentries stationed except close to the Fort, the town was at the mercy of all marauders and incendiaries. The Englishmen on shore formed themselves into a watch to communicate with the consular guard from the Dryad during the nights of Sunday till Wednesday. No fires occurred in the town, nor were any houses pillaged near the consulate. But further out, broken doors and windows, with furniture, books, and papers scattered about the courtyards and gardens, told a different tale.

On Friday, June 16, the French established themselves in complete authority in Tamatave, with a French commandant, French custom-house officers, and French patrol. Notices, headed "Republique Française," setting forth the various decrees of Admiral Pierre, decorated the walls and fences of the foreign residents. In one of these the inhabitants were informed that Tamatave was in a state of siege, that all consular offices were annulled, and stringent regulations regarding the customs and walking in the streets after certain hours were to be enforced by expulsion, and other pains and penalties.

The bombardment and occupation of Tamatave was thus completed. The greatest fears were entertained by our missionaries concerning the future. What may have been the events subsequent to June 16 has not yet been furnished. The date of the last letter from Tamatave is that of the day upon which it was reported that Mr. Shaw, one of our missionaries, had been imprisoned. His seizure may have taken place after the despatch of the mail. Judgment upon the high-handed action of the French admiral must, therefore, be suspended. Meanwhile, affairs in Madagascar demand the earnest prayers of all Christian men. In the meantime, Christian work, in Tamatave at least, if not throughout the country, is brought to a standstill. Our brethren, moreover, may be in serious danger.

The civilisation and Christianity of Madagascar are imperilled, certainly hindered. Whatever can be done for securing the safety of our friends will certainly be done. But, after all, the only real help for the evil of the hour is from God. He has already shown himself gracious, with a peculiar grace, to Madagascar. Through days and long years of no less darkness than the present did He bring his Kingdom with an exceeding glory, and He will not leave either the workmen or the work in this time of new distress. But He will be entreated.

DOMINION DAY AT GALT HOME.

LAST Christmas, when Miss Macpherson was sending out a circular letter, with loving words of counsel and cheer, to the hundreds of her boys and girls in Canada, she invited those who were located within easy distance of the Home to visit her on this general holiday. The Editor of a Canadian newspaper who was present on the occasion thus writes:—

"I was fortunate to be present at a hearty celebration of Dominion Day at the Boys' Home. Miss Macpherson had sent out a general invitation to the 'boys' to be there, and the result was that a large number joined the large 'family' of little ones, domestics, and visitors. Some of these were now grown-up young men. One of them, who is a successful teacher, and another who is attending college to become a missionary, told their experiences, and thanked Miss Macpherson from the bottom of their hearts for bringing them over to this good land. Miss Macpherson has already brought 3700 boys and girls to this country, a large proportion of whom are doing well."

In a letter to her fellow-workers in England, Miss Macpherson thus describes the scene:—

"Our little band of workers was early at work preparing to receive our children. Everything was finished, the tent up, the lawn mown, swings hung, when a batch of brave, brown-faced lads appeared. I could only exclaim, 'How changed you are, how you've grown!' It was delightful to listen to them comparing notes as to homesteads, number of acres farmed, cattle, &c., and to hear them asking each other: 'What year did you come out?' 'Which band did you belong to?' In many instances the master and mistress had been driven over by our boys. Could the dear ones in England have been present, how they would have praised our God, and realised his watchful care over, and deep joy in each one!

"After dinner we assembled under the trees to hear some kind and fatherly words from the Rev. Mr. Lundie, of Liverpool. He was listened to with great attention, as he spoke of the Good Shepherd who calleth his sheep by name. Then two young men, both students at Woodstock College, and former boys, spoke practically on the difficulties and temptations of young men growing up in Canada, warning them against getting lifted up by being called 'smart boys,' and advising them to think more of getting education than of receiving high wages. Another young man spoke of his conversion, and the happiness he had experienced since he had come to a decision and joined the Lord's people."

VISITS AMONG THE CHILDREN.

"Yesterday we travelled twenty miles, and visited five children; the twin brothers D——, first seen, are in adjoining farms with two brothers. They are now fourteen years of age, having come under our care at the death of their parents, when they were four years of age. A—— and L—— are well-grown, and thoroughly woven into the family. A stranger might visit the family, and never know but they were sons. They have been six years earning their board and education, and now this year they begin to receive wages.

"Our next visit was in a beautiful district, lake and woodland: a church, with square tower, lying embosomed among trees, and farms covered with corn. As we approached the frame-built farmhouse, the bow-window was a picture of loveliness. We were received in a well-carpeted parlour by our little girl Emily, now ten years old, and adopted two years ago as the only child of this childless home. Ere long her mamma asked her to play a tune to her friend, and Emily sat down to an elegant American organ and played and sang, 'Sing them over again to me, wonderful words of life!' Oh, City Missionaries! oh, workers! watch for little ones when parents are dying, that we may fill these happy homes of comfort and plenty.

"Ascending a hill to the next house of visitation, the farmer was away when we arrived, but we saw our young protégée flying across the yard to announce visitors. Jane, fourteen years old, one of four sisters, was busy milking her cows when she first saw us. The young mother was nursing baby, and another little girl sick with measles. We had a little season of conversation and prayer alone with Jane. By-and-by the farmer arrived, and we had an opportunity of speaking words of comfort and cheer. Tottie, a rescue from the green-room of one of our London theatres—how she had grown! As we arrived she was sitting on the steps of the verandah, reading. She goes to school, and has forgotten her former miserable existence, and is already doing a daughter's part.

"At each home we visited we read the Scriptures together, and prayed for our Father's blessing. Continue to pray that we may be strengthened to visit many districts among the children, and praise the Lord for our great and privileged opportunities.

"Annie Macpherson."

SHAFTESBURY HOUSE, MARGATE.

ON Wednesday, the 25th July, the first annual meeting in connection with the seaside home of the Central Young Men's Christian Association, at Margate, which is known as Shaftesbury House, was held at Exeter Hall, under the presidency of the Earl of Shaftesbury. The object of the Home is to provide a pleasant seaside resort for commercial young men requiring change for the benefit of their health, during the holidays; preference being given to members of, or subscribers to, any Young Men's Christian Association. Many scores of Christian young men have, since the opening, found it a boon, and speak of its arrangements and order in the highest terms. The house at Margate was bought by Mr. George Williams, and furnished by Mr. Samuel Morley, M.P. Mr. George Armatage, the manager, read the annual report, which stated that the Home was opened on June 24, 1882, with seventeen visitors. The total number of visitors to the end of the year was 922. The result of the year's working was to encourage the hope that with increased visitors the Home would pay its way as far as general working expenses, rates and taxes, are concerned; but for the heavy repairs and renewals consequent upon the persistent and excessive wear and tear a larger list of donations is called for.

Mr. George Williams said he was constantly applied to for tickets of admission, showing that the young men who had been to the Home fully realised the advantages it offered.

Mr. Hitchcock said the benefits of the Home were undeniably so great that it was to be hoped that other generous men would soon come forward and give the means, not only to support the present, but to start similar valuable institutions.

Earl Shaftesbury referred to the great value of convalescent homes; each hospital ought to have one or two. He was proud of the great honour that such a blessed institution as this should bear his name.

Mr. Samuel Morley, M.P., expressed his great satisfaction at being a partner in so excellent a concern. They might not get a return in the way of £ s. d., but he was of opinion that they got an infinitely greater dividend in promoting not the physical only but the moral health of those with whom they were dealing.

Notes and Comments.

In consequence of having to go to press a day or two earlier than usual by reason of August 6 being Bank Holiday, we must request our correspondents to let all important matter reach us by first post on Friday, August 3.

The war in Zululand, the death of Cetewayo, and the reported slaughter of his wives, is an unhappy issue of the policy which led to his restoration to the kingdom. The Times, commenting upon the event, says :—

"We have among us at the present day a most pernicious school, who fancy that fine moral sentiments and delicate sensibility are all that men require to govern States. They would not accept piety in lieu of ability in their boot-maker or their copying clerk, but they are always preaching the sufficiency of pure morality for the guidance of the policy of a nation. It is the natural creed of ambitious ignorance. Moral precepts are within everybody's grasp, but the wisdom which alone can lead to morality in great affairs is not; hence nothing is more delightful than to assume that a delicate conscience supersedes all the knowledge of the wise."

It is difficult to say precisely to whom these words apply, but they are apt to be understood as advocating, or at least, sanctioning disregard in matters of State policy to principles of pure morality. There certainly does not seem any danger at present of a too high standard of moral virtue being set up in our high places, and the tendency to brand those who put right before might as fools is already too common. True piety and true wisdom have nothing in them that is at variance the one with the other, and to act in obedience to moral precepts can never be an act of folly. It may not always be in accordance with the wisdom of this world to do right at any cost, but it is in harmony with the wisdom that cometh from above, and, whether in connection with Governments or individuals, in the end succeeds far more effectually than the shuffling and crafty policy which is but too often resorted to, in order to avoid a difficulty or gain an advantage. It remains eternally true that "Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people."

The statement of Mr. Mundella in the House of Commons last week in reference to educational statistics contained some facts worthy of notice. Referring to the objections of those who complained that the Department was overdoing the education of the children in our Board Schools, Mr. Mundella affirmed that the school life of the English child was shorter than any other in Europe on this side the Alps, and that the requirements of the English Code were lighter than those of any other European country. He further said that Paris spent three times as much per head for education as the City of London. The number of children on our school register was 4,189,000, with an average attendance of 3,015,000, the number of certificated teachers and assistants being 48,118.

Referring to the question whether the population was more orderly and moral, or less vicious and criminal, than it was before the present scheme of education was established, Mr. Mundella gave statistics which are certainly hopeful in the right direction. He said that all the information which had reached him in answer to inquiries, led him to the conclusion that there had been an improvement in the manners and language of the children. The average number of juvenile offenders in five years, ending 1875, was 1,373; in 1880, 1,074; and in 1882, 842. The last report of the inspector of reformatory industrial schools showed that the maximum was reached in 1869, when the number was 10,314. In 1875 it fell to 7,212, and the number fell steadily until now it was 5,480.

Speaking on the wretched condition of many of the children in the Board Schools, the hon. gentleman paid a high tribute to Sir Henry Peek for his endeavours in the direction of ameliorating it, and also to the Jews, of whom he said :—

"In the case of the Jews' Free School, Bell's-lane, Spitalfields, considerable influence was exercised on the attendance by the benevolence of several friends of the school, who not only paid great personal attention to the wants and comforts of the children generally, but also presented gifts of clothing and of other articles to all deserving. The fact was, in this respect the Jews were very much better than the Christians; the West-end Jews did their duty by the children of the East-end Jews. He wished that he could see the West-end Christians doing their duty by the East-end Christians."

A sadder picture of the social condition of some London districts could hardly be drawn than that found in the following facts, also contained in the same speech :—

"As an instance of the wretchedness and poverty of the children attending the schools of London, he might point out that the Saffron-hill School, Farringdon-road, was supported by 313 families, 182 of which, or 58 per cent., lived each in one room. The Golden-lane School was fed, so to speak, by 487 families, 400 of which, or 82 per cent., resided each in one room. The Tower-street School, Seven Dials, was supported by 339 families, 298 of which, or 85 per cent., resided in one room each. In the Drury-lane School the percentage of attendance was 86 in the boys' department, 76 in the girls', and 71 in the infants' department. Fifty-two per cent. of the children belonged to families residing in one room only; 36 per cent. to families living in more than two rooms. In the Vere-street School the attendance was 77, and 75 per cent. of the children belonged to families each residing in one room."

Mr. S. Smith, member for Liverpool, spoke wisely and well upon the whole subject, specially dwelling upon the evil of excessive competition and over-pressure of brain, which resulted from the present system of work. Children varied in mental power, and that fact ought to be taken into account in their training. He also referred to the injurious effects of the cramming process at present pursued upon the pupil teachers, and urged that education should have a more direct bearing on the actual work and duties of life. Physical and hygienic education should be more attended to. His suggestion that mental work should alternate with industrial training appears certainly wise and practical in its bearing. Altogether, Mr. Smith's advocacy of the children of our poorer classes was eminently worthy of him as one of our most prominent philanthropists and social reformers.

The debate was admirably sustained by several other leading men of the day, and ventilated various questions which required to be opened up, and cannot fail to be beneficial to the education of the country. The importance of the subject in relation to our future social and moral condition cannot be over estimated, and it demands the most earnest and careful attention of all who are concerned for the welfare of our land. Mr. Forster expressed an earnest hope that the day was far distant when there would not be alongside of a thoroughly good elementary education a sound scriptural teaching.

We regret to learn that Mr. Spurgeon has been suffering severely from another attack of gout, and is seriously prostrated by it. He is in Scotland, whither he had gone for rest and recruitment. Prayer will doubtless rise from many hearts on his behalf, that he may speedily be restored and strengthened for the Master's service, and that the consolations of God may be richly imparted to him now in his hour of need.

The Wesleyan Methodist Conference this year is held in Hull, the Rev. Thomas McCullagh being elected President in succession to the Rev. Charles Garrett. A very hearty reception has been accorded by the townspeople to the large number of ministers and laymen attending the meetings. The Vicar of Hull expressed a desire to visit the Conference in company with several of the clergy, and so also did the Nonconformist ministers of the town. Arrangements were therefore made for their being received, the former on Saturday morning last, the latter on Tuesday.

The new President, in his address, said that he rejoiced that Methodism was on terms of amity with all Protestant Churches, and that its strength had hitherto lain in its reverence for sacred things, in its adherence to Scripture, and in its moderation. His advent to office seems to be hailed with delight by the whole Conference, while his predecessor retires from his year of presidential service with hearty and grateful appreciation of the way in which he has borne its honours and discharged its arduous duties.

The total membership in the churches of the Wesleyan Connexion in Great Britain, as reported at this year's Conference, is 407,085, a net increase upon the preceding year of 13,331. In connection with some other sections of the Church, our Wesleyan friends report that the demand for ministers exceeds the supply. This is a fact which calls for serious consideration; something is lacking, that our young men are not more ready to enter upon a work so pre-eminently important and sacred in its character.

The death of Canon Battersby just on the eve of the Convention which was his special delight, as also the fruit of his own sanctified labour, is an event which reminds us afresh of the mysteriousness of Divine methods of working. The heavenly Husbandman knows when to transplant from earth to heaven those whom He has made to bear fruit for his glory, and we can in faith look beyond the present sphere, and rest in the blest assurance that his purposes are not broken but only the more completely fulfilled when those we love and fain would keep amongst us are taken from us, and gathered to Himself.

One of the very last acts of service rendered by our beloved brother was to draft the circular of invitation to the Week of Prayer for 1884, in connection with the Evangelical Alliance. In handing over the draft to the Council, he said how thankful he felt that God had used him for this work while laid aside from pastoral duties. There will be a peculiar interest surrounding the document, from the fact that it was drafted by one so near his end, and so much beloved by the whole Church of Christ. While calling others to prayer, he is himself called to praise before the Throne.

The Rev. F. Baldey, of Southsea, writes s from Betws y Coed, North Wales: "We re greatly enjoying this lovely country, and an most fully endorse the statement of A. L. n THE CHRISTIAN of the 12th inst. We are good deal about, and in every direction Irs. Grimké's text cards in the Welsh anguage and little Gospel books in English re received with unusual expressions of leasure and thankfulness."

Some of the gentlemen who give much of heir time to the invaluable work of the Children's Special Service Mission are now t Bournemouth and Weymouth. We are ure they will not ask in vain for the help of isitors and local friends. In another olumn will be found extracts from a circular vhich emanates from the two friends who ave undertaken the work at Weymouth. We cannot speak too highly of this Mission —its object, its staff of voluntary workers, nd the success with which God has blessed t in winning multitudes of children to put heir trust in the Lord Jesus.

Among others whom the hand of death has ately removed from our midst is Professor Birks, who has been long and well known in he circle of religious thought and work. He was for some years Secretary of the Evangelical Alliance, and only retired from that position in consequence of his change of views on the subject of future punishment. Concerning these the writer of a memorial sketch in the Record says:—"Let it be enough now to say that those views, as explained in 'The Victory of Divine Goodness,' were views formed through deliberate and most anxious thought and watching; and were, in their true meaning, whatever may otherwise be said in criticism or in defence, equally adverse to the Universalist and to the Annihilationist belief." In other respects he was decidedly Evangelical, and an able author of several valuable and standard works on prophecy, and of others on rationalistic theories, against which he waged war. Mr. Birks rendered important service to the cause of truth. He died at Cambridge, at the age of seventy-two.

Edward Irving's book, "Babylon and Infidelity Foredoomed of God," had, we are told, a powerful influence on the mind of Canon Birks, and disgusted him with the conventional idolatry of "modern progress." He was wont to repeat from that book with deep approval a strong sentence which described the present as "a poor mechanical age, with expediency for its polestar, knowledge for its divinity, and reason for its heaven."

The statement of Sir Wm. Harcourt on Tuesday night, in reply to Mr. Peter Taylor's appeal in the House of Commons for a remission of the sentence on Messrs. Foote and Ramsay, is eminently satisfactory. His words were: "Nobody could judge of this matter who had not seen the publication. I have seen it; and I have no hesitation in saying that it is in the most strict sense of the word, an obscene libel. It is a scandalous outrage upon public decency." It is a sad pity that in the face of such statements as these those who are guilty of the circulation of such outrages should be continually held up as worthy of commiseration, and their just imprisonment regarded as persecution. We are glad for the Home Secretary's honest verdict on the matter, and re-echo it as far as we can.

The Daily News of the 26th July animadverted on Sir William Harcourt's remarks, as having confused the issue presented to him, stating that the prisoners were convicted not of an obscene but a blasphemous libel, adding that the two crimes are as distinct in law as they are in fact. Those who have seen the number of the serial which contained the prints in question well know that obscenity and blasphemy are both stamped indelibly upon its pages, and to speak of those who could be a party to such publications as "martyrs" is to confound language and ignore fact. It would be an evil day when English law could fail to brand with infamy the name of men capable of treating the Divine name as it is treated in the columns which formed the basis of the trial, and it is to be hoped that such expressions as those contained in the reply given to Mr. Taylor, so far from being condemned as unjust, will be endorsed and maintained by general consent.

An obscene libel against God must be doubly blasphemous because of its obscenity; and the fact that the sentence of twelve months' imprisonment should be denounced as excessive for such a crime, is an awful sign of these perilous times of the last days.

Events in Madagascar are indeed stirring and significant. A testing time has come to that fair and favoured isle—favoured for years past with copious showers of Divine blessing and gracious influence. The conduct of the truly noble Queen under the great provocation she has received from the French Government at once proves how real is the work of God in the land, and how well that work can bear such testing as it has received. When asked, on receipt at Antananarivo of the news of the bombardment of Tamatave, that all French subjects should be forthwith expelled her capital, she replied in language worthy of the religion she has embraced, "We are Christians, and must remember at this trying time that we are so, and act as becomes Christians. They gave our friends at Majanga an hour. We will give them five days, and not a hair of their heads, remember, is to be harmed." When the French left they could not get bearers to take them to the coast, although they offered three times as much as the ordinary price, the men fearing that when they got to Tamatave they would not be allowed to return. But the Queen, through her Prime Minister, ordered bearers to take them at her own cost, and her orders were obeyed.

The French sneer at the Malagasy as barbarians, idolaters, and worthless savages. In contrast with the spirit of their cruel and unjust attack upon the liberties and rights of a peaceful and prosperous community, the spirit of the words quoted above place the people they contemn at an immeasurable distance above themselves.

The war in Madagascar has its bright as well as its dark side, and, whatever may be the issue thereof, it will remain on record that, in the hour of strong temptation and incitement to revenge, the spirit of Christ, even in the case of converts from barbarism and utter ignorance of God, triumphed over injustice and wrong on the part of a nation which claims to be the seat of modern civilisation and refinement.

It is a humiliating fact that the conduct of our own Government in reference to China, in forcing upon the people of that country the accursed opium traffic, weakens the strength of any expression of opinion concerning French tyranny and injustice in Madagascar. Our sin, as a nation, in that matter cries aloud for vengeance, and is a guilt and shame to us in the eyes of God and man. So long as, for the sake of gain, or because we fear a loss of revenue, we place that which ruins body and soul in the hands of tens of thousands of our fellow-creatures, we can but with an ill grace sit in judgment on other nations who oppress peoples weaker than themselves.

"The act of giving is as much an act of worship as prayer or praise can be." So said a well-known Christian worker at a meeting we recently attended. The truth of these words can scarcely be doubted by those who are spiritual in their disposition and aim. Yet, perhaps, they are few who so give of their substance as to make their giving a definite act of service rendered to the Almighty. "Of Thine own have we given Thee," said pious David, when he saw the gifts presented before God for the temple building, and it is this conviction which we need to have more forcibly applied to the mind whenever we offer of our substance to the Lord; our gifts would be far more abundant as well as acceptable to the Lord if it were so!

The death of Dr. Alexander P. Stewart removes from the Presbyterian churches of London a well-known and valued elder and leader. He was brought to a clear knowledge of the truth in 1830, during a visit to Geneva, through the influence of Dr. Cæsar Malan, with whom he came in contact. For many years he was an active coadjutor of the late Dr. Hamilton, of Regent-square, and latterly was connected with the Church in Chelsea, where, as a leader of a Young Men's Bible Class, and in many other works of usefulness, he was signally owned of God. His funeral took place at Highgate last week, Dr. Saphir and the Rev. John Matheson, amid a numerous circle of friends, conducting the funeral services. He will be greatly missed in many spheres of Christian labour and general devotedness.

The terrible calamity which has befallen the beautiful island of Ischia illustrates the dire uncertainties to which human life even in its brightest and most promising earthly conditions is exposed. The earthquake which visited the island on Saturday last, has not only devastated whole towns, and ruined thousands of persons, but has destroyed a large number of lives, and that amid scenes of surpassing beauty, and at a season when holiday pleasures and festivities were at their height. Suddenly, and without warning, hundreds—perhaps it may prove thousands—have been hurried into eternity.

While deeply sympathising with the mourning sufferers from this fearful event, it may serve to remind us of that approaching day of the Lord wherein He shall arise "to shake terribly the earth." The world in its gaiety and general forgetfulness of God may wisely learn from premonitory facts like this to consider the end to which all that is merely of the earth is hastening. It is written, "When they shall say peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them as travail upon a woman with child, and they shall not escape;" and again, "The world passeth away and the lust thereof; but he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever."

The death, by her own hand, of the daughter of Sir Samuel Baker, the well-known African explorer, is not only a mournful event, but, in its cause, one calling for special attention. The verdict of the jury at the inquest was that the unsoundness of mind which led to the act was "induced by mental and physical strain in her work as a Sister of Mercy in London." There are ample reasons for concern as to the growth and working of these Sisterhoods among us, and it will be well if this sad incident should lead to their being more closely examined, and their plans of operation more carefully supervised. The subject has already occupied the attention of the House of Convocation, and awaits further report.

The sentence of four months' imprisonment passed upon the Strome Ferry Sabbatarians for rioting, in connection with their protest against Sunday traffic in their port, may well be regarded as excessive, and the Free Church Presbytery of Edinburgh have determined to memorialise the Home Secretary to mitigate the punishment. Lawlessness cannot be justified on behalf of righteousness, unless conscience demands it, because the law is opposed to righteousness, and force is not the best weapon to employ even then. But assuredly the sin of these people deserved far less rigorous treatment than it has received. Crime is often visited with smaller penalties, and it would be hard to prove the Strome Ferry prisoners to be criminals.

The continued and increased spirit of persecution and intolerance shown in Switzerland in relation to the work of the Salvationists there demands reprehension on every ground. Altogether apart from the question of the wisdom or otherwise of the Army tactics, the action of the Swiss Government is reprehensible in the highest degree. A large number of English subjects travel in Switzerland, and it would be well if a widespread protest were made by them, for the matter affects all who desire when in that land to worship God freely and according to the dictates of their own conscience. It is indeed a disgrace to a free and enlightened people like the Swiss that opposition to religious liberty, worthy of the Dark Ages, should in these days emanate from among them.

The Presbyterian Synod of China has just closed after eight days' session at Shanghai. There are thirty-two foreign and fifteen native ministers connected with it, and 3150 church members, with 142 preaching stations. The rapid increase in the cultivation and use of opium was dwelt on by all the churches as a serious barrier in their path. There is a yearly importation of 100,000 chests, beside a native growth of some 300,000 chests more. A petition was sent to the British Government, beseeching them to abolish the trade, and a memorial was also prepared to the Chinese Government, setting forth the evil, and entreating the enforcement of strict measures in opposition to its native produce. Special prayer on the subject was also appointed to be made every Thursday. The Chinese Prime Minister has evinced much interest in the petition sent to our own Government.

BRADFORD.—Mr. W. Forbes, on his way to London from the Isle of Man, gave addresses here on Saturday and Sunday last, in connection with the Young Men's Christian Association. Although this Association was started only a few months ago, the members and associates number upwards of five hundred.

STRANGERS' RESTS, MARSEILLES.

("Le Repos" et "Le Phare.")

As many will have read the letter of "A Visitor," in The Christian of July 5, I beg the favour of a brief space, in order to add a few details and a word of explanation as to the new arrangements for the future care and development of the work.

From, I am thankful to say, a large number of cases that have come under our notice during the last six months, I cull the following:—

1. Two youths, unknown to their parents, left their homes, wishing to see a little of the world. The desolate parents wrote through a lady, to whom one was coachman, to a Christian worker at Marseilles, informing her of the fact, and begging her to make inquiries, as it was possible they would go to that city. A description of the youths was left at both Rests, and prayer offered that God would direct them to us. One morning two poor, dejected-looking lads entered the coffee-room of Le Phare, and asked for coffee, paying for it, as was discovered afterwards, with their last sous. The caretaker, struck with their appearance, questioned them, and much to the lads' astonishment they discovered they had fallen amongst friends. The Christian lady before referred to was sent for, telegrams were exchanged with the parents, and after two days of kindly treatment at Le Repos, the lads were restored to their parents, much the wiser and better, we hope, for their foolish adventures. But this is not the only good resulting from the incident. The lady of the place from whence the lads came has become so interested in the good effected by these Rests, that she has decided to establish one at M——, in the north-west of France, close to the Swiss border.

2. A bright young German sailor came to me one evening, begging for a supply of books for the voyage to Valparaiso. He was overjoyed at the Christian privileges of such a place as the Rest, and informed me that all on board with him were English, the captain a Christian also. I suppose he judged I should better understand this by telling me that the latter allowed his crew to do their washing on Saturdays, so as to have Sunday free to attend worship, and rest as far as possible. May many captains imitate this worthy example.

A Frenchman, who has lodged at the Rest, and is now in Senegal, writes: "Please send me a packet of New Testaments and some tracts. We have no one to speak the truth to us here." I need scarcely say a parcel was sent off immediately, and I hope to hear of blessing.

4. A young man, whose wrecked life had broken his poor mother's heart, came to the Rest on leaving the gaol, where he had been for the second time. We have good reason to believe that he has been truly reclaimed. He is now gaining his living honestly on board a vessel, and appears determined to persevere in the way of truth.

The Committee referred to by "A Visitor" is composed of a few friends, who from the first have shown a truly kindly interest in the work, but they in no way free me from monetary responsibilities. Their duties, that they accept gladly, will be to visit the Rests in turn, weekly, receive the reports of the manager periodically, and pass them on to me with their remarks; in short, act for me in my absence, which must necessarily be prolonged, especially during the winter months.

Conjointly with these friends, and acting upon their advice, I have published a circular in French, seeking to bring the work before those for whom the Rests are serving good ends, and to awaken a further interest. The circular states our united hope that the means for furnishing the remainder of the rooms in Le Repos No. 1, that will become vacant at Michaelmas, will be forthcoming, as also for enabling us to start a soup kitchen, so as to afford some measure of board as well as lodging. We believe that this development will greatly help to diminish the total yearly expenses, if not placing the work on a self-supporting basis.

I may just mention that £120 are needed, towards which I have already about £30.

It has been my great privilege and joy to spend lately six weeks in Marseilles, preaching constantly and visiting daily the two Rests, and conversing, individually, with many. Oh, that there were more labourers to enter a field at once large and promising!

PAKEFIELD CONFERENCE.

This Annual Conference for the promotion of growth in grace has just been held at Pakefield. The subjects brought before the Conference were as follows:—

1. The Substitutionary work of Christ the sole cause of our present and eternal salvation.

2. Christ as the Saviour of the body, and the consecration of the body to God as the Temple of the Holy Ghost.

3. Holy warfare and its relation to the Church Army Movement.

4. Inconsistency between Christian profession and practice as one of the most serious hindrances to the promotion of the glory of Christ and salvation of the world.

5. The witness, demonstration, and power of the Holy Ghost.

6. The saving, sanctifying, and all-sufficient power of the blood of Christ.

The speakers were Revs. R. Graves Walker, J. T. Layard, T. Richardson, John J. Luce, C. W. Servante, and L. Price. These subjects were opened out with great earnestness and power. Christ in his person and work was held forth as the one in whom all the fulness of the Godhead dwells for the justification, sanctification, and glorification of his people. The benefits and blessed effects of a life of simple faith in Christ and consecration to God, and the sad fruits of half-heartedness and worldliness in Christians, were powerfully dwelt upon, and made a deep impression upon many. The meetings were subsequently thrown open, and numerous short addresses given, which were very effective, interesting, and refreshing. At the evening meetings many valuable personal testimonies were given to the power of Christ to save, keep, and bless. L. Price.

GOSPEL ADVERTISING IN NEWSPAPERS.—I am about to start issuing in local and other newspapers short and striking Gospel Texts, arranged in such a way as not to occupy much room, yet at the same time to be in such bold character as to attract the attention of the thousands who, week by week, read the local news. I am anxious, therefore, to correspond with any Christian helpers who can practically help in this sphere of spreading the Gospel, and giving such suggestions as will effectually gain the point. Address for further particulars to T. C., 64, Hamilton-square, Nelson-street, Borough, S.E.

ASHLEY MISSION, BETHNAL GREEN. — On Thursday, July 26, an interesting gathering took place at the above place for the police of the K Division. Over sixty sat down to tea, and the evening meeting was attended by over one hundred policemen. T. A. Denny, Esq., presided at the afternoon meeting, and the Hon. Lionel Ashley in the evening. There were addresses given by Miss Gurney, the Hon. Miss Waldegrave, some able evangelists, and Miss Bontein, the hon. lady superintendent of the Mission, who holds a Bible-class for policemen on Thursday evenings. Mr. Turner, the superintendent of the police, as well as all the above-mentioned, gave earnest and practical addresses, expressing their deep sympathy with this effort to spread the Gospel of Christ amongst those whose duty calls them to scenes of vice and sadness. This Mission has over twenty different agencies at work, and is entirely supported by voluntary contributions.

CHRISTIAN CONVENTION IN NORWICH.

ON Wednesday and Thursday, July 11 and 12, a Convention was held at Norwich, the place of assembly being the newly-erected Agricultural Hall, and the result was exceedingly ratifying. The committee were fortunate in being able to secure the assistance of several well-known and acceptable Conference speakers, including the Revs. R. Graves Walker, C. W. Servante, Wm. Haslam, Evan Hopkins, and Frank White; also Lord Radstock, Mr. C. Russell Hurditch, Henry Varley, Captain Baring, &c., &c.

W. H. Jary, Esq., presided at the morning and evening meetings; G. M. Chamberlain, Esq., and Mr. Robert Adcock acted as honorary secretaries. Clergymen, local ministers, and other gentlemen of various sections of the church, occupied seats on the platform, thereby giving the Convention a thoroughly representative character. The subjects chosen for consideration on the first day (Wednesday) were:

(1) The Lord Jesus Christ as the Revealer and Representative of God and man.

(2) The Lord Jesus Christ as the Substitute or and Representative of man to God.

The morning meeting on Wednesday was addressed first by the Rev. R. G. Walker, then Revs. Frank White and William Haslam. In the afternoon Mr. Varley conducted a Bible-reading, and in the afternoon the second subject for the day was dealt with by Rev. C. W. Servante, Mr. Varley, and Lord Radstock.

On Thursday the subjects for morning and evening respectively were:

(1) The Holy Spirit applying the Redemption of Christ in conversion and sanctification.

(2) The Holy Spirit enduing believers with power for service.

The speakers in the morning were Mr. C. Russell Hurditch, Revs. Evan Hopkins, and Frank White; and those in the evening, Rev. E. Hopkins, Captain Baring, Rev. R. G. Walker, and Mr. H. Varley. The afternoon Bible-reading was conducted by Rev. Evan Hopkins, and was, in fact, an able extemporaneous address from Jeremiah xvii. 5—8, various points being enforced by copious references to old and new Testament scriptures.

The Convention was concluded by an evangelistic service in St. Andrew's Hall, on Friday evening, Captain Baring and Mr. Henry Varley being the preachers. At this service there was a large attendance.

At one of the meetings Mr. H. Varley came to the front of the platform, and expressed his gratification at the success of the movement, and suggested that this Convention should prove but a commencement of successive Conferences, to be held in the old city, which offered such facilities and contained such a number of public-spirited inhabitants, many of whom would doubtless be ready to exercise hospitality and find the means to carry on such an important branch of Christian work. He reminded his hearers that the world-renowned and magnificent Mildmay meetings had their origin at Barnet, twenty-seven years since, in much smaller gatherings than those assembled at Norwich on these two days. It was understood that this suggestion would certainly be acted on, the members of the Committee being unanimous in their desire to further the same.

We offer our Eastern Counties friends our warm congratulations on this most encouraging result of the first Christian Convention held in the city of Norwich, and cordially wish them increasing and abounding blessing in the future.

NORWICH.—The Rev. Jacob Freshman has paid a visit to Norwich, where he appears to have met with a very cordial reception. The Eastern Daily Express reports that a large audience assembled at the Friends' Meeting House (which had been lent for the occasion) to hear his lecture on "The Jews, their customs and religious ceremonies." The building was densely packed in every part, and a large number went away, unable to obtain admittance, or even standing room near the doors.

A LADY'S LETTER FROM ANCELON, FRANCE.

IT is long since I wrote concerning our work, perhaps because in our corner at Verchény there was little to communicate. Harvest-time is always more interesting than sowing-time, and for us the reaping time has not come. Our little Sunday-school has been kept up, but the boys have taken fright; they could not stand the taunts of the others, probably of their own fathers, and now, with one or two exceptions, they have all forsaken us. Will our friends pray for the boys? Thank God, we have good hope for our little girls. Occasional meetings in the neighbouring villages have been held, with much encouragement in some of them. The eager welcome in other villages is a strong contrast to our own poor village. Among the women there are some growing Christians whose prayers will assuredly be answered one day.

When the silk-worm season came, homes and hearts were so occupied by the crawling, voracious little creatures, there was literally no room for anything else; so we have taken the opportunity of visiting some of the villages where the silk-worms do not occupy so much attention.

Will our friends, in their superabundant privileges, pray for these desolate parishes? We were more struck even than before with the almost exclusive use of patois. The people were so eager to talk and ask questions, that it was very trying always to comprehend what they wanted to say. One man brought his Bible, and wanted me to remove some difficulty about Rom. vii., while absolutely he did not speak five words of French.

We visited Altamar and had an impromptu out-of-doors meeting, being accommodated with chairs on the heaps of decaying leaves preparing to fertilise the land! Well, the hymns sounded sweet and the groups of listeners were eager and devout, and one venerable old Christian insisted on our coming into his house to partake of his bread and the milk of his goats, saying, "It is said, He that receiveth you receiveth Me." We found a young girl of fifteen, crippled with rheumatism, confined constantly to her bed, but patient beyond description. The young teacher tends her tenderly (she is motherless), as one of the Lord's little ones. When the sun shines on the bed she can just manage to hold a little tract so as to read it. But in the dark, smoke-browned vaulted kitchen the light must come seldom and soon pass. Could not some little girl send her a Rayon de Soleil or Ami de la Maison occasionally, addressed "A l'Institutrice, Altamar, Beauriere, Drôme?" The people of Altamar shout across the valley to another village, Chonot, perched high on the mountain across the Drôme. They can be heard distinctly, and often communicate thus, but a letter would take three days. In all these villages the cry is the same, people longing to hear, and pastors too feeble or, at any rate, too something to feed the flock.

Now for a week past we have had the privilege of being the guests of a really living pastor in a village exceptionally secluded even here. Access to Ancelon is fenced on two sides by a col, which differs from any I have yet seen. The name, "Pas du Posterl," implies, I think, something of its character. A rampart of cliff, 150 feet in height, stretches for miles, utterly defying access. We climbed to its foot by fifty-six zig-zags of stony road, and then found that the rampart has been split and the line of rock recedes a few feet, so that you pass through a natural gateway and find yourself on green grassy slopes, from which you descend on Ancelon. We can sympathise with the pastor if his surroundings are understood. So narrow is the ridge that on all sides you look down into ravines, whose depth you hardly appreciate till you have painfully descended them in order to reach the annexes, which also demand the care of the pastor.

No wheeled vehicle has ever visited Ancelon; I have not even seen a wheel-barrow. The mountain air is pure, and in general the health is exceptionally good, but this year the measles have visited several mountain villages, almost like a plague, taking of course all who had never been previously attacked. Pastor M—— says one-third of his parishioners have had the disease. No doctor is to be had, for the charge, fifty francs, is beyond the means of any, and even the doctors have been puzzled with the unusual character of the disease.

Will our dear English friends pray, as the pastor prays, that this visitation may be a blessing to the people, that hearts softened by gratitude to Him who has smitten and healed, may indeed be opened to admit the Saviour, who here, as elsewhere, finds hearts still closed against Him.

S. R. Geldard.

PORTSMOUTH SEAMEN'S MISSION.

YOUR readers will be glad to hear of the abundant blessing given in answer to prayer on the work among the French soldiers on board the Annie of the above Mission, while moored in the commercial dock at Havre. Every evening crowds of soldiers came to the first meeting, and to the second some of the poorest of the French people came. All listened with such eagerness, as if they had never heard the Good News before, and we believe that God's Word has brought light and joy to many sad, dark hearts. Besides our meetings, some thousands of New Testaments, penny Gospels, and Gospel books were freely circulated among the citizens, soldiers in barracks, and on board the various ships and vessels in dock.

For three days during our visit there was a grand musical festival held, giving us a capital opportunity for scattering the good seed. All received the books most courteously. Seeing so many soldiers parading the town, we invited them to special meetings by means of printed invitations, which they gladly accepted, and came regularly, and were very sorry when the vessel sailed for another port. It was our great joy to see several of these men accept Christ as their only Saviour, and others bade us good-bye with the promise to read their Testaments. To God alone be all the honour of this third year of work in France in the Mission-boat.

Seeing the desirability of following up the preaching of the Gospel by this means, and being unable to leave the work at home longer, it was our happy privilege again to offer the Annie to Mr. Gibson for the month of July to continue their successful effort of last year at Rouen, Honfleur, and other ports. Mr. McAll has also accepted her for the month of August for Boulogne, &c. We shall then hope to send her again to Havre and Trouville.

Should any Christian gentlemen, who can preach the Gospel of the grace of God in the French language, feel led to come with us and share the joy of leading souls to Christ, we shall hail their coming with much pleasure and thankfulness.

Henry S. Cook.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—Portions for week ending September 11:—Sept. 6, Luke x. 1-16; Sept. 6, Luke x. 17-24; Sept. 7, Luke x. 25-42; Sept. 8, Luke xi. 1-13; Sept. 9, Luke xi. 14-28; Sept. 10, Luke xi. 29-44; Sept. 11, Luke xi. 45-54.

KESWICK.—Mr. Bowker writes us:—"There are 2000 people here. The tent crowded five times daily. Solemn indeed is the occasion. The man who for the ninth time summoned us here, died the first day of our gatherings. He is to be buried this afternoon, and will receive such a burial as no devout Christian man has had during this century. All the Convention will be present this afternoon. The meetings have been most remarkable—the teaching deeper than ever before, the tone more subdued, the blessing far more extensive. The Lord has answered our prayers, kept us all very low, and overshadowed the place by his presence in such a manner as a previous experience in the Christian life and nearly half a century has never revealed to me. All minds are hushed, and all thoughts fixed on Christ alone. I pray that the influence may extend far and wide."

OUR PRISONS AND THEIR INMATES.

BY CHARLES COOK.

"HOW long have you been in prison?" "Twenty years." "What is your sentence?" "For life." "Was it through drink?" "Yes; I was a soldier in India, and one night was taken to a party, was made drunk, came home, had a row with a comrade, who stabbed me; I stabbed him in return, he did not recover; I was court-martialled, and sentenced to penal servitude for life." "What reports have you against you since you have been here?" "I have not been reported once since I have been in prison." "Have you any friends outside?" "No, sir; I have no one, all my relations and friends have died since I have been a convict."

The scene was H.M. Convict Prison, Portsmouth, and the speaker a convict acting as cook in the Infirmary. Chief Warder George, who accompanied me round, had given me an exceptionally good character of him. As a soldier his life was blameless, and the man who could serve twenty years amidst the contaminating influences of a convict prison without a report against him, was surely not beyond the reach of human kindness or Divine love.

Let us change the picture. "So you think of getting married, Edwards?" "Yes, sir; I am earning over thirty shillings a week, and, please God, we shall do very well, with his blessing. We are both rowing in the same boat, and I am trusting in Him whose goodness has followed me thus far."

The scene on this occasion was Hyde Park Hall, London, W., and the speaker was our hall-keeper, and yet no other than the person whom I addressed in Portsmouth prison. I had left my card with the official above-named; in less than three months the man was discharged, and engaged by me as hall-keeper; having been with us some time, a good situation was found for him, and he is now married, and doing well.

Surely this one case repays for all the miles travelled, the money spent, and the pains taken in inspecting our prisons and visiting their inmates.

There are many persons who think that habitual criminals are beyond all hope of reformation; there are others of us who think that the Gospel of Christ, if it can be brought to bear upon them, can bring about their conversion, which is far better. Here is an instance. The recent visit of our brethren, Messrs. Moody and Sankey, produced quite a revival in Chatham, which was even felt within the walls of the convict prison there. Special services were held in the prison chapel for a fortnight, a different preacher being appointed each day. On one of these occasions, under the heart-searching preaching of the Bishop of Rochester, a convict, who had almost completed his fifth term of penal servitude, was brought under deep conviction of sin, has since found "peace with God," and being now at liberty, will be thankful if anyone will find him work. The blessed Lord is able and willing to save a living as well as a dying thief.

Through the kindness and courtesy shown me by the Secretary of State, and the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Convict Prisons, in granting me permission to visit our prisons, and having completed my visits to all the convict prisons of England, besides those of London, I am enabled to speak with some authority on the causes which bring so many within the walls of these places.

There is no disputing the fact that drink is the great cause of our ordinary prisons being so well filled. When preaching in the Tombs Prison, New York, the matron of the women's department told me that "were it not for drink she would have no prisoners there." The very next man I spoke to after the incident mentioned in the beginning of this article, was a poor prisoner suffering through the curse of strong drink. On my asking him what his sentence was, he replied, "For life." "How long have you served?" "Twelve years." "Was it through drink?" "Yes, I didn't know I was locked up till the next morning, when they told me I had killed a man."

Alas! there are many, many others in this prison of Portsmouth, working side by side with the Claimant, with Benson of the "turf frauds," and with Froggatt the solicitor, who tell the same tale, that drink has been the means of bringing them there. But whilst this is true, I have noted two other causes. "I had not been here had I not followed the teachings of Bradlaugh," is almost a common expression and experience among many of our convicts. They became lawless in proportion as they threw off the fear of God, and now bitterly repent having imbibed infidel doctrines. Bradlaughism teaches, "There is no God." It says, "Down with the Throne," and leads to licentiousness and the prison; whilst Christianity teaches us to "Fear God and honour the king," leading us in "the paths of righteousness," and making us a blessing to mankind. We charge infidelity with being the cause of largely increasing the number of the "dangerous classes." We bless the Author of our common Christianity for making his people the "salt of the earth," and the "lights of the world." The other evil I refer to is that of the spirit of gambling, so prevalent in these days, and many are now in "durance vile," who were shopmen, and more especially servants in gentlemen's families, that would never have thought of robbing their employers had they not been tempted by the love of gain, produced by the increasing habit of betting.

Having visited during my conversion most of our English race-courses, for the purpose of preaching the Gospel and distributing suitable literature, often in conjunction with our brother, Mr. Gawin Kirkham, of the Open-air Mission, we are able to give proof, if it were needed, of the increasing habit of gambling; it is surely seen in the fact that the Sporting Life and the Sportsman, which were both weekly papers, have only lately become "dailies." I trust that any who read these lines, who have men-servants in their households, may lay these words to heart for the good of such, and warn and advise them of the danger of such practices.

In London we have three Houses of Correction—viz., Coldbath Fields, Holloway Gaol, and Wandsworth Prison, where prisoners sentenced to two years and under serve out their sentences. I have good reason for knowing that at the first and last-named places there is a Christian man at the head as Governor; whilst at Holloway Gaol a most earnest godly man is there as chaplain, and many of the prisoners bless God for the day they were sent there to sit under his ministry. Here I had the privilege accorded me of preaching Christ to the prisoners. The House of Detention, where persons are sent to await their trial, or where they spend their time during their remands, is well looked after by the Rev. Mr. Horsley, the chaplain, who is doing good work there, and who frequently pleads the cause of Temperance. I forget now how many pledges he told me he took on the last occasion. "Drink and dress send nearly all we have here," said the matron to me, and pointed out eleven cells filled with women who had attempted to commit suicide.

The difference between imprisonment with hard labour and penal servitude is not generally and distinctly known; the longest term of imprisonment is two years, and the shortest term of penal servitude is five years. There was a three years' sentence, but it has been abolished some years. The horrors of penal servitude, except to the most incorrigible and depraved, must be dreadful, and can hardly be over-rated. Were it possible for these lines to fall into the hands of some graduate of crime, some tyro in vice, some slave to strong drink, let me warn him of where his steps may lead him, and assure him of the punishment which will be his should he become a convict. Every convict forfeits his clothes, and if he lives to complete his sentence he will be given a new suit of clothes on the morning of his discharge. The most dreadful part of his sentence is the first nine months, during which time he is doing his "separates," which means he will have to eat, and work, and live in separate, close confinement, in a cell, about ten feet by seven, during the whole of that time. An ordinary prisoner's dress is not very becoming—that of a convict is hideous. Soon after conviction he would be sent to one of the two "reception" prisons, when, after been cropped as closely as possible—both head and face—he would appear in a suit of light brown, short jacket and vest, and knickerbockers, with blue stockings having red stripes round them, the whole suit being profusely decorated with the broad arrow. I have seen all sorts and conditions of men, at home and abroad, but a more horrible and repelling set of human creatures than a batch of convicts "on parade" at an English penal settlement I have never seen. This is partly owing to the dress, and to the fact that sin leaves its stamp upon the countenance.

I have seen the prisons of Holland, Belgium, Italy, and America, and have but lately returned from a visit to those of France, and am thus enabled to compare them with our own, and, whilst there is much to commend in our own system, there are certain things which call loudly for reform. The governor of Portland Convict Prison said to me the other day, "I have only known two cases of real reformation in thirty-five years, one of whom was a gentleman standing high in our legislature, and who evidenced by years of consistent conduct the genuineness of the change." Of course he referred to R——, who laboured in the stone quarries here for some time, but who, after his conversion, was of such immense use as a nurse in the infirmary. If the sympathies of any are drawn out, and they would wish to know more of these things, I shall be glad to correspond with them, and if the readers of The Christian will pray for "all prisoners," and those who labour for their conversion, I shall be thankful.

PACKINGTON-ST. CHAPEL, ISLINGTON.

THE anniversary of the Open-air Mission carried on by the Volunteer corps connected with the above chapel, took place on July 15 and 16. Rev. F. Jewell preached in the chapel from Ex. xxxii. 29: "Consecrate yourselves to-day to the Lord."

The public meeting at night was addressed by Mr. Haig Miller, Mr. Pease, and Rev. F. Jewell, on the nature and duty of entire consecration. This was followed by an after-meeting, in which many persons came forward and united in consecrating themselves unto the Lord. It was a time of great blessing and rejoicing, so much so that long after the meeting was concluded the people continued in the chapel.

The report stated that "The Volunteer Movement had its very beginning in a determination to labour for Christ. We saw the multitudes of people around us living in utter disregard of godly things, making no preparation for eternity, spending the Lord's day in trading or pleasure-seeking, and our hearts were drawn out in concern for them, and we resolved to do something, in the hope of saving them from the present and future evils of such a life. We felt that if anything was to be done, it must be done in the public streets, where the people are in all their multitudes, and we resolved to begin the work in the name of the Lord."

The Lord has blessed the labours of those who have given themselves to this service. Winter and summer the open-air meetings are carried on without intermission.

It is proposed to start a "Bible Stall," towards the expenses of which £5 have been given, and £5 more are needed. Communications to be addressed, Rev. F. Jewell, 93, Packington-street, Islington, N.

WINDSOR.—Open-air meetings have been held in various parts of this Royal borough during the past sixteen days ending July 25, by Mr. James Sprunt, of the Grove Hall Gospel Mission, London. Large numbers of people have listened to the preaching of the Gospel, the "Coloured Teacher" being a means of attracting many of the careless. Addresses were delivered on Monday evening at Datchet to a large number of soldiers and village people, the Lord giving much blessing and encouragement at this place.

SUMMER SEASIDE SERVICES.

[The following are extracts from a circular issued y two gentlemen connected with the Children's pecial Service Mission, who are now at Wey-outh.]

DEAR FRIEND,—Knowing the interest you take in the work of the Children's Special ervice Mission, and particularly that very im-ortant department of the work the Summer easide Services, we write to you to ask your elp in the services we purpose holding (God illing) at Weymouth, from about July 27 to ugust 17, or later.

We have felt guided to select Weymouth this ummer for several reasons, the principal of such eing the large number of children who go there July and August, and the fact that since Mr. piers' visit, several years ago, no Seaside Ser-ices, as far as we know, have been held there.

We have not yet arranged details, but the ollowing will be approximately our week-day rogramme:—10.15 to 11, Meeting for Praise nd Prayer; 11.30 to 12.30, Service on Beach; 30 to 5.30, cricket for the boys, and on two three days of the week, lawn tennis, or her games, for the girls; 6.45 to 8, Service on each or in some building.

In addition to, or alternation with these, we ope to arrange for Scripture Union Meetings, leetings for Boys only, Text-searching Compe-tions, Lamp-light Meetings, and a Special lue Ribbon Temperance Meeting.

Perhaps you are inquiring how we want you help us. We would reply, by joining us in rayer and praise at our morning gatherings, nd especially by helping us at the other services distribution of hymn-sheets, speaking to and aking friends with children who seem im-ressed, and handing extracts from the report, c., to adults standing round during the ser-ice.

The amount of ignorance about the sea-side ork is almost incredible. It is often confidently serted that we are carrying on the services r simply mercenary ends, and are enjoy-g a holiday at other people's expense! We ave no time or opportunity to search out and eny these assertions, which do so much to hinder e work, but this is precisely where Christian iends can so easily and effectually help us.

Then, too, as regards the children. Many orkers seek to make friends with a few children hom they see day after day at the services, and y this means get opportunities for earnest con-ersation with them about their souls, and have e joy, during their holiday, of leading these ear children to accept the Lord Jesus as their wn Saviour.

We need say little about the cricket and other ames, beyond this—that experience has shown uch means to be most effectual in getting hold f very many (boys especially) who would not herwise be reached.

We will promise you, by God's help, if ou go to Weymouth this summer, a thoroughly njoyable holiday, as we know that to a true ild of God no joy is equal to that of lead-g even one lost one to the Lord Jesus, and t us never forget that these dear boys and irls whom we meet at the seaside are, by ature, "dead in trespasses and sins," and at youth is the time at which there is, by od's blessing, the greatest hope of lead-g them to true decision for Christ. In a few ort years they will be mingling in the business the world, and how difficult it will be to reach em then!

Now is our time, and now let us be found up nd doing. If these boys and girls can be led the Saviour in their youth, what a glorious ture in life lies before them, and what splendid pportunities for advancing the Redeemer's ingdom.—Your faithful friends in the Master's ervice,

BRITISH SYRIAN SCHOOLS.

MUCH is being done in the matter of colonising the Jews, and settling them in their own land, with a view to missionary work among them in the future. Amongst the agencies now at work seeking the salvation of the people, none are more in earnest, or more blessed, than the British Syrian Schools and Bible Mission, commenced in 1860 by the late Mrs. Bowen Thompson.

After the massacres in the Lebanon of every Christian (male) between the ages of seven and seventy, this Christian lady gathered round her the widows and orphans of the slain, and taught them the name of Jesus—the story of the Cross. The Lord has blessed the work; there are now in the schools trained teachers, daughters of those who were rescued by Mrs. Bowen Thompson, and the stream of blessing deepens, for the interest of the parents is awakened by hearing the children repeat their hymns and portions of Scripture, and they accompany their children to the services, saying, "We want to know more of your Jesus."

Schools are established at Beyrout, Zachley, Tyre, Baalbec, Damascus, and Hasbeya, besides other mountain stations. Never was there a time when there was more earnest seeking after the Lord, both in the institution at Beyrout, where the girls are trained to become teachers, and in Damascus. The people are thirsting for the Word of Life. Amongst the soldiers of the Lebanon there is a very distinct work: no more acceptable gift can be bestowed on them than a Bible. A schoolmaster employs his leisure holiday-time in work among them; when he arrives, they welcome him, saying, "We are longing to see you." Those to whom Bibles have been given on former occasions, are found to have gathered their comrades round them to read to them out of the treasured Book. This work among the soldiers is an outcome of the work among the children.

A Moslem, who brought his little brother to school, was told that he would be taught the New Testament. "Never mind," was the reply, "teach him what you like." A Roman Catholic priest having examined a little girl in her knowledge of Scripture, was so impressed with her answers as to say to the child, "Keep to your school, my child; you cannot do better." The Moslem schools have a hard time of it, Koran schools having been opened for girls as well as boys. As soon as these Koran schools were opened, the Scheiks went round and threatened the parents who sent their children to the British Syrian schools. The parents soon found the difference in the teaching of the Koran schools, and sent back their children to the Protestant schools, in spite of threats.

The Bible is the foundation of all instruction. Visitors are greatly struck by the intelligent Scripture knowledge of the children, elicited by answers to questions put by the visitors. There are thirty schools (twelve English ladies directing the work); ninety-four native teachers; also a staff of twenty-three Bible-women, harem visitors, and Scripture-readers. But there is much more land to possess. The natives are urgently asking for schools to be established in large villages; hundreds of children may be seen growing up in ignorance, without a school of any kind. Around Damascus large villages are scattered over the plain. How often have the Syrians urged that small branch schools should be opened in them; again and again the request has been denied for want of means; yet, after the first outlay, £30 per annum would accomplish this. At Tyre the school has increased so largely, that it is imperative to build a new school-house, the old school-house being so dilapidated as not to be worth enlarging. The cost of this will be not less than £1600, owing to the rise in the value of land at the Syrian seaports. Towards this object £600 is still required. £5500 is the modest sum required for the instruction of 3000 children and the Bible Mission; yet it is with difficulty this sum is raised. The Lord is working as He never did before; and many hearts are being stirred and drawn to Himself. It is not wise to mention names, or give publicity to incidents which rejoice the hearts of the workers.

Two of the schools are specially set apart for Jewish children; they read and learn the New Testament just like the rest. At first they sometimes omit the name of Jesus when it occurs, but gradually this prejudice is removed. At Damascus some of the best pupils are Jewesses; last year, when the prizes were given, a beautiful doll was given to a Jewess. She looked at it admiringly, and then said, "May I have a Bible instead?" A wonderful request this, when we consider the love of the Eastern children for dolls. A Bible-woman is at work in the Jewish quarter at Beyrout, and the promise is sure: "Israel shall be a blessing in the land."

We ask the Lord's people to help forward the work by their gifts and prayers. It is of his own we give to Him. Ask the Lord to baptize the workers with the Holy Ghost and with fire, that they may be flames of fire in the service of the Lord; and for the children, that they may be sons and daughters of the Most High; so shall his glory fill the land.

ST. MARK'S MISSION, PRESTON.

WE have just concluded a Mission in St. Mark's parish, which by God's mercy has been productive of great results, beyond anything we had either asked or looked for. The Mission, conducted by Mr. William Holt, of Burton-on-Trent, began with prayer and addresses in our schoolroom on Saturday evening 30th June, with an attendance of sixty, and concluded on Saturday last, with an early morning meeting for praise and consecration.

We can only give an approximate estimate of the number of those who have professed conversion during the three weeks of this Mission. The total reported to me is 160. From the first God has been manifestly with us. Not an evening has passed without anxious souls in the inquiry-rooms. Some evenings five or six, and as many as twenty and even thirty on other occasions. There have been no noisy demonstrations at any time. All has been quiet and orderly both in the crowded services and in the after-meetings. The Evangelist told the old Story of God's love in Christ to the perishing souls in that room, and in the open-air meetings, and the Spirit of God applied the Word. The writer has not known a Mission in which the Word of God was so much used as the instrument of blessing. Hence these great results. When visiting we have left souls rejoicing in the Lord who were up to that hour without Christ. Many of our converts are not of the Church of England. We thank God we have now a large accession of living worshippers at Church, and living teachers and scholars in our Sunday-schools.

One outcome of the Mission is the formation of a band of lay evangelists and helpers to carry on open-air preaching on Sundays and week-days. Another effect of the Mission is a thirst for the Word of God, and a large addition to my Monday evening Bible-class, which now numbers over 150. The devil is busy too. Our workers are opposed, and the converts are sneered at, and styled, "Salvationist," "Methodist," &c. We thank God, who counts us worthy to suffer shame for our dear Master's sake. May we have the prayers of the Lord's people, that Satan may not hinder God's own work. Overthrow it, he cannot. To God be all the praise.

BASUTOLAND.—Rev. H. Moore Dyke, who labours at Morija, writes on June 20:—"The jubilee of our Basutoland Mission has just been held; it is now fifty years since our first missionaries came to this land. It has been a refreshing festival and we may truly say, What great things the Lord has wrought! Political affairs continue to give us anxiety. We tremble to think of fresh hostilities, which may involve the scattering of the tribe, and the breaking up of our work. But the Lord reigns. It is his Church, He can deliver it. Pray for us."

CONTINENTAL NOTES.

MR. DIESTELKAMP, a Berlin pastor, has purchased a large restaurant and dancing-saloon, in order to convert it into a centre for a Christian meeting-place, and for the Christian work of that quarter. This building, situated in the north of the city, is the third of the kind in Berlin. Up to the present it has been dedicated to and called "Prince Blucher," now it will have for a sign "The Prince of Peace."

"He as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." On the return of the Pope's coronation day, the Observatore Romano, the official organ of the Romish Curia, writes as follows: "Thy crown, O Pontifex Maximus, is universal power over conscience, for as representative of the God-man thou hast the nations for thy inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth as thy possession; thou rulest the ages and all events. Thou blessest the nations in their up-rising and down-sitting, and showest to them all the ways of truth and righteousness. Thy tiara, O reverend Prince, is the righteous defence for the freedom and independence of peoples and kings, and under thy banner the holy key is united with the palm-branches of religion, science, and art. Thy crown, O most holy Father, is our delight, and nothing shall tear from our hearts this love to the Father of Christendom. The enemies of thy triple tiara are also the enemies of the Most Holy One, and the false friends of mankind. But the Lord, who brings to nought the counsel of the adversary, has written with his own hand, in inextinguishable characters, upon thy tiara, O Pontifex, O Prince, O Father, "Thy crown is everlasting!" Such is Ultramontanism.

A Christian lady, formerly a Roman Catholic, Mlle. de Précorbin, has taken to heart the work of Social Reform. She has spoken on this delicate subject in many towns of France and Switzerland, and recently held four meetings at St. Etienne, which resulted in some practical work. There were many additions to the League, and a committee of ladies was formed, amongst other things, to receive servants out of place, and to guard them from temptation.

Years of Sundays! Have you ever reflected, dear readers, on the considerable number of Sundays that have been given to you to enjoy here below? The Sabbath, returning every seven days, we may every seven years say we have had an entire year of Sundays. Thus a person twenty-one years of age has already had three entire years of Sundays. Every Septuagenary has in his life been able to enjoy ten complete years of Sabbaths! How have we used these days of grace?

Will not our Sundays lift up their voices against us at the great day of judgment, to reproach us for having misused them, or at least for not having employed them with more zeal and fidelity in seeking to do good to ourselves and others?—Le Témoin de la Vérité.

"The Son of his Love, who is the image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature, for by Him were all things created that are in heaven and that are in earth, . . . all things were created by Him, and for Him." The Agnostic, know-nothing philosophers would have us give up this faith, and what do they offer us in its place? Let us learn from a French paper. A freethinker of the freest sort has put together, under the name of "Catéchisme Laïque," what he believes to be a summary of incontestable verities, a profession of the faith of this age of light. Here is an abstract: "What is God?" "I do not know." "Who created the world?" "I do not know." "Whence comes humanity? where does it go?" "I do not know." "What becomes of us after our death?" "I do not know." "Are you not ashamed of such ignorance?" "There is no shame in being ignorant of what no one can know." One cannot but inquire whether it is worth while to light such candle-ends to illuminate the world. Would you like to have the latest word as to the origin of things? Here is a sample. It concerns the appearance of the bird in the air: "In the beginning it was a reptile. An era came when, bitten by the instinct of a superior destiny, it became disgusted with the misery of its condition, eternally in the mire. It desired a change, and began to dream of travels through the air. The dream of this flat-skulled creature was so persevering that obedient nature shared in it." According to this, granted a sufficient flattening of the cranium, one need not despair that some day the author of the "Catéchisme Laïque" will not only dream of, but accomplish, voyages in the air.

MR. GLADSTONE and the BLUE RIBBON.

THE Rev. A. C. Bevington, minister of the Methodist New Connexion Chapel at Hawarden, says that Mr. Gladstone, in a recent conversation with him at Hawarden, thus expressed himself relative to the Gospel Temperance Mission:—

"From the first I have watched the Temperance question with great interest, but I am bound to say that no phase of it has ever yielded me so much satisfaction as this has done. To witness the large number of ministers of all denominations, and of course the still larger number of members of perhaps all the churches, wearing the ribbon of blue, is an exceedingly gratifying circumstance, and speaks well for the future. Indeed, I firmly believe, as far as this matter is concerned, that much brighter days will soon, in God's good providence, dawn upon us."

JAPAN AND KOREA.

FROM an interesting letter from Dr. Whitney, an American physician in Japan, written to our friend Mr. James Mathieson, we are privileged to make a few extracts. After alluding to the death of his mother, who was an earnest Christian worker in Japan, Dr. Whitney says:—

"Such a revival has taken place here among all the Christian Churches as to greatly encourage all those connected with Mission work. The missionaries tell us that in some of the schools the scholars can hardly stop to learn their lessons at times, so earnest are they after the Word of truth. Several large and interesting meetings have been held in a theatre, when several thousand persons heard the Word preached as never before.

"Korea, too, is being opened up to commerce, chiefly through Japanese influence; and it does seem as if the Japanese were the ones to carry the Gospel to Korea. This opens up another road to China.

"At a Conference at Osaka, in April, a resolution was passed to lay before English Christians the great need of medical missionaries and trained nurses, the latter to instruct the native women in this most valuable art.

"My sisters are continuing my mother's meetings during the week, and we have a Sunday-school and evening service. We hope at some future time (D.V.) to open a little cottage hospital."

KENDAL.—Mr. Dening, the Mission preacher, has been holding a Mission at one of the churches lately, and has quite won the hearts of the people. The Lord has given much blessing with his Word.

NORWICH.—We gave a short notice lately of Mission work in Norwich. It should have been stated that the report referred to was that of the Victoria Hall Mission, which has been carried on for some years, under the direction of our friend and brother, Mr. Robert Adcock, the Mr. "A." alluded to by the Rev. W. Haslam in chapter xxi. of his interesting autobiographical book, "Yet not I." The Victoria-hall, situate in the very centre of the city of Norwich, was known as the Lecture-hall in 1864, when Mr. Haslam commenced a series of services there, during his residence at Buckenham, one of the first converts at which was Mr. Adcock, under whose superintendence the Mission maintains its undenominational character, and continues to attract large and attentive congregations, from amongst whom souls are being constantly added to the Church, through the uplifting of Christ and the proclamation of a full, free, present, and everlasting salvation.

BLUE RIBBON MASS MEETING AT BOURNEMOUTH.

ON Friday, the 28th July, a mass meeting for children, under the auspices of the Bournemouth Blue Ribbon Gospel Temperance Union, was held in the Town Hall. The meeting was a great success, there being children present in large numbers from every association in the neighbourhood, so that the Hall was filled. A good number of adults were also present in the gallery. The Rev. N. Curnock took the chair, and there were on the platform a number of ladies and gentlemen, including Mr. W. Noble, of Hoxton Hall, London; Rev. S. Eldridge, Throop; Rev. E. Evans, Poole; Rev. T. Wilson, Winton; Mr. McKenzie, London, &c. The Chairman and Mr. McKenzie having said a few words, Mr. Noble gave an address, and for about three quarters of an hour held the attention of the children. He pointed out to them the desirability of becoming abstainers when they were young, and the good they might do by joining the Blue Ribbon Union. But, above all, they should give their hearts to Jesus; failing that, everything else they could do would be worthless. Mr. Noble gave the children several suitable illustrations and reminders, and greatly interested them by playing a few selections on his concertina, which he handled with much ability. At the close of the proceedings the Doxology was sung, and at the invitation of Miss Wingfield Digby the children gave a hearty cheer for Mr. Noble, which terminated the proceedings.

NEWPORT, ISLE OF WIGHT.

IN full dependence on the blessing of God, and with deep thankfulness for his direction and guidance, the foundation-stones of the Legh Richmond Hall were laid on July 23, at Newport, Isle of Wight.

The work contemplated is of a fourfold character: 1, Evangelistic; 2, Work among young men; 3, Work among young women; 4, Gospel Temperance work.

The Bishop Cheetham delivered a powerful sermon in St. John's Church on 1 John iii. 1.

On the conclusion of the service, the site of the Hall, already enclosed in walls, was thronged by those warmly interested in the work.

Rev. H. G. Thwaites, Vicar of St. John's, and promoter of this good work, then briefly explained the order of the proceedings. Canon Wilberforce had kindly promised to lay the foundation-stone for the Gospel Temperance Hall, but was hindered by illness.

The stone of the Y.M.C.A. and Mothers' Room was then laid by Mrs. H. G. Thwaites. The Right Hon. the Earl of Cavan laid the stone of Y.M.C.A. Room. The Right Rev. Bishop Cheetham laid the stone of the Gospel Temperance Hall. General Henry Carr Tate laid the stone of the Evangelistic Hall.

Prayer and praise concluded this interesting Service. The Legh Richmond Hall will be completed and opened (D.V.) by the beginning of October. Visitors to the Isle of Wight may be interested in seeing the progress of a work linked with a name which is still honoured in the island.

Requests for Prayer.

FOR Mr. Scroggie, at Belfast, on Sunday next, August 5, and following week.——That a Christian mother and two daughters may find some suitable employment.——For special distribution of cards, &c., at the Bible stand, Crystal Palace, on Bank Holiday.——For a backslider whose reason seems giving way.——For a governess, that she may hear of some suitable occupation.

ARRIVAL IN SYDNEY.—Mr. Daniel Cooper, who left London in March last in a critical state of health, has arrived in Sydney. He writes full of joy and praise, his son says, and is thankful for the kindness of friends. His health is much improved.

Letters to the Editor.

SCHOLASTIC EMIGRATION.

Sir,—Permit me to solicit information from any friend of emigration as to the proper course a lay agent or schoolmaster should take to obtain an appointment in any of the British Colonies. His speciality consists in a thorough preparation for the Universities, public schools, and departments where accurate and advanced knowledge is required. Would prove useful to an over-taxed clergyman in an extensive parish requiring an active, zealous, good worker. Any suggestion will be deeply appreciated by Expectans.

THE "THOROUGHGOING" RIBBON.

Sir,—I should esteem it a great favour if you would kindly allow me to call the attention of all Christian and Temperance reformers to the new "thoroughgoing" ribbon which, I understand, has been brought out by the Anti-Narcotic League. There never was a more opportune time than the present for adopting the threefold pledge, i.e., a pledge against alcohol, tobacco, and snuff. The Primitive Methodists at their last Conference spoke very strongly against tobacco, and decided to adopt the threefold pledge in connection with their Band of Hope Societies. It may be obtained from the Anti-Narcotic League, 56, Peter-street, Manchester.

If other Christian communities will follow the example of our Primitive friends, we shall soon see the inauguration of a movement which will save thousands from the pernicious and baneful habit of smoking. Onward.

INTOLERANT DEMOCRACY.

Dear Sir,—I am glad to see, in your columns, the answers to your correspondent G. H. P. Without professing any admiration for Mr. Booth's Salvation Army, or for the peculiar methods it sometimes adopts in this country, a far more serious question underlies the action of the Swiss Government. I see by the papers that Miss Booth's appeal to the highest Swiss authority has been unsuccessful. This makes Mrs. J. E. Butler's remarks the more forcible.

In the progress of democracy in Europe, Switzerland has often taken the lead. The tendency there shows itself. And the tendency now in Europe generally is to an anarchical democracy that will be more intolerant of vital Christianity than ever Popes or Councils have been. The manifesto of the Social Democratic Associations of the Metropolis—published but as yesterday—is an indication to us British Christians of what is working below the surface. Switzerland shows it to us a little above the surface. Let us be forewarned, and what must our resource be? Increase of faith, of study, and obedience to the Word; of separation from the world; above all, of prayer.

SERVICES FOR CHILDREN.

Dear Sir,—Ere that sad Sunderland calamity fades from prominence, it seems fitting to urge, in a few words, the desirability of open-air services, during the summer months, specially adapted for children. The bairns are perishing. They have not well begun to live ere the vices of the age have seized upon them. Nineteenth-century civilisation is no atmosphere for healthy child-growth. The benefits of that tree that was to be desired to make one wise without God have come down to the children, and instead of that dewy freshness and simplicity which is the ideal of childhood, there has come the early heritage of worldly precocity, irreverence, and disobedience. Would that the age were wise enough to see, and radical enough to act upon the truth, that the root of the future citizen lies in the child; and if God, in his grace, has made it possible, yea, and far more probable than in the after years of development, that the very nature of that root may be changed, is it not the part of God's representatives among the nation to begin their evangelistic efforts where, certainly, the devil begins? And Jesus "called to Him a little child, and set him in the midst of them." Be sure that, if in our services in the open air, &c., we have the children in the midst, the fathers and mothers will gather round, and there will be a blessing for all. And the biggest blessing will be for him who, considering the little ones, goes out after the Lord's lambs. J. M.

THE SALVATION ARMY.

Dear Sir,—Your article headed "The Salvation Army," in a late issue suggests to me, as it does to many others, the question that as "General" Booth takes upon himself to appoint lieutenants and other subordinates, from whom does the General himself derive his appointment and authority?

Broseley. J. H. Maw.

Colonel G. N. Pepper is anxious our readers should be informed of a pamphlet written by Admiral Fishbourne, and published by Mr. Elliot Stock, 34, Paternoster-row, entitled "A Calm Plea for the Enlargement of Salvation Army Work."

THE RESTORATION OF ISRAEL.

Sir,—In the recent Prophetic Conference, and on many similar occasions of late, it has been assumed that Israel will be restored to Canaan in unbelief. The only passage I remember to have seen quoted in support of this statement is Ezek. xxxvi. 31, where it is assumed that the word then indicates a chronological sequence.

But this verse in the Hebrew begins as do each of the eight preceding verses, and the whole passage seems to show that the restoration will take place not before, but at the same time, with a spiritual renewal. The two things are spoken of in the same breath, verse 28 and verse 29; and in verse 31 we are told they will take place on the same day.

The words, "they shall look upon Him," are also quoted as a proof that Israel will be converted through the visible appearing of the Lord at his coming; but the expression in Hebrew "upon Him" is the same as in Is. xlv. 22, "Look unto Me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth."

May I also refer to the use frequently made of the phrase, "eye to eye," quoted from Is. lii. The meaning may be seen from Num. xiv. 14, where the same Hebrew phrase occurs. The Lord's servants in the coming time will see Him face to face, eye to eye.—Yours faithfully, W. F. K.

Notices of Books, &c.

The Leading Hand; or, Amy and Sybil. By Mary Inman. J. Heywood, 11, Paternoster-buildings. Notwithstanding some slight seeming impossibility this is an interesting, well-told story, with a good moral tone and purpose.

"Such a Blessing" is a little tract by Rev. J. T. Wrenford. 1s. 6d. per dozen. Partridge & Co. It gives an account of the way in which Miss Frances Ridley Havergal was led into "such a blessing" from the Lord. Her letters are freely quoted, and the answers thereto. It is a useful little tract.

Nos. 1 and 2 of The Taproot Series of tracts are entitled "Tippling Husbands" and "Tippling Women." By Rev. C. Courtenay. Home Words Office, Paternoster-buildings, E.C. 1d. each. They strike right home at the causes by which many gain the title of "tipplers," and are worthy of circulation.

The Lighthouse (Nisbet) is a little booklet by the author of "Life's Journey" and "Our Heavenly Home." It pictures the inmates of a lighthouse in contrast to a raging storm without, and draws a lesson therefrom in reference to the peace the soul has if at rest in Christ, the immovable Rock.

Passing Thoughts. By the late Mrs. Eliza Mote. 1s. Partridge & Co. A little volume of poems, sacred and moral, containing thoughts worth treasuring, and pleasantly expressed. The profits of the book are to be devoted to the blind poor, amongst whom the author's blind daughter labours in the Master's service.

The Gospel of St. Mark. By T. M. Lindsay, D.D. 4d. Blackie & Son, Old Bailey, E.C. This little book is a simple but useful commentary on the Gospel by Mark, and intended for Sunday-school teachers and Bible-classes. The notes are just the thing for thousands of our teachers. Dr. Lindsay makes a judicious use of the Revised Version, and gives careful quotations from well-known authors.

Brands Plucked from the Burning. By J. W. Wilson, D.D. Partridge & Co. A really "live" book on our social difficulties, and the best means of overcoming them. It contains an account of the origin and progress of the Albion Street Mission in the Justice Port of Aberdeen, and abounds in wise counsels and striking illustrations, calculated to be of great service to home mission workers. We have seldom seen the subject dealt with so practically, and at the same time with so fine a tone of spiritual fervour and evangelical faith. The need of blending sanitary instruction and temperance principles with clear, full Gospel teaching is shown in a most forcible manner, and the way to do it is also well pointed out. It is a book which should be in the hands of all our church members and ministers. It cannot fail to stimulate their zeal, and to excite deeper interest in outside work, such as is needed on every hand.

We have received the following:—

Books.—Evidences of the Bible versus Atheism, by A. A. Rees; British and Foreign Evangelical Review.

Pamphlets.—Calson's Circular, Goods-Guard's Story, Scripture Readers' Journal, Traffic in English Girls.

Tracts.—Presence of the Lord, Study of the Bible, He Satisfieth, He Forgiveth, He Strengtheneth, by C. J. Westlake.

Reports.—The Kilburn House of Rest, Preventive and Rescue Work, Rescue Society, Young Men's Christian Association, Kushmin Medical Mission, Glasgow Evangelistic Association, British Asylum for Deaf and Dumb, Young Women's Christian Association, Indigent Blind Society, Miss Cole's Orphan Homes, Miss Sharman's Orphan Home, Evangelical Continental Society, Book and Tract Society, Lord's Day Rest Association.

August Magazines.—Gospel Trumpet, British Messenger, Delving, Quiver, Tract Magazine, Child's Companion, Cottager and Artizan, Sunday at Home, Friendly Greetings, Leisure Hour, Girls' Own Paper, Boys' Own Paper, Welcome, Old Jonathan, Footsteps of Truth, Sunday Magazine, Good Words, Believer's Pathway, Evangelist, Messenger, Preacher's Analyst, Letter Mission Record, Hand and Heart, Sacred Melodist, Gospel Bells, Catholic Presbyterian, Sentinel, Jewish Herald, Edinburgh Medical Missionary Society, Expositor, Clergyman's Magazine, Rosebud. From Messrs. Cassell & Co.: Old and New London, Peoples of the World, Concise Cyclopædia, Greater London, Life and Work of St. Paul, Familiar Garden Flowers, New Testament Commentary, Popular Educator, Bible Educator, Our Own Country, Our Homes, World of Wonders, Gleanings from Popular Authors, Magazine of Art, Holy Land, Holy Bible.

DR. ZIEMANN IN GERMANY.

A SURE sign of the Lord's doing here is the opposition which has broken out, mostly on the part of certain pastors who try every means to drive Dr. Ziemann away. In Dortmund they sent him a letter signed by six pastors out of eight forbidding him to hold meetings, and they also appealed in the Press to the public not to attend those meetings "held by an apostle of the land of spleens."

But the result was otherwise. Over 3000 people crowded the hall, and the Doctor had quite an ovation as he said at the beginning: "I want your attention away from men and strife and ask, therefore: 'What think ye of Christ?'" It was a solemn meeting. In Hagen the enemy had boasted that the Doctor would get no hall, they had bribed the landlords; but a woman of high rank, and with a warm heart in the cause, went personally to secure the hall, which of course was not refused her; and though a plot had been arranged to disturb the meeting, the power of God secured deep attention.

Our people are very hungry after truth. The enthusiastic crowds which come to listen, are delighted with the meetings, and if the guardians of the Church will not change their position, they will drive multitudes away from the Church. Distinct opposition has sprung up, but the people, and also high officials, encourage the Doctor to go on with his labours.

BLOOMSBURY INSTITUTION, BIRMINGHAM.—Mr. D. Smith, Hon. Superintendent of this institution, reports encouragingly of the work of this agency and pleads for continued help. It is a Home for orphan and destitute children. Fourteen boys and four girls were sent out in June last to Ailsa, Craig and Ontario. Address as above.

CRUCIFIED WITH CHRIST.

Gal. ii. 20.

WITH Thee, Lord, crucified,
My heart to thine close prest,
So can I feel the throbs of love
That beat within Thy breast.

Ps. xxiii. 3.

My feet nailed to Thine own,
I must not, cannot stray
In paths of sin, but by Thy side
I'll tread the heavenly way.

Isa. xli. 10.

My hands to Thine are fixed,
I grasp no earthly thing,
But with Thy tender palm in mine,
To Thee alone I cling.

Cant. ii. 6.

My arms are stretched out wide—
Wide to accept Thy grace;
And Thine are open to bestow
A loving, warm embrace.

John xv. 4.

Thus, Lord, would I lie dead,
Dead to the world and sin,
That Thou, in all Thy grace and power,
May'st come and dwell within.

Eph. ii. 14.

Thy strength alone I wield,
Thy will, not mine, be done;
Thy love I feel, Thy life I live,
For Thou and I are one.

Fred. Armitage.

DUNEDIN, NEW ZEALAND.

HAVING made a tour of all the chief towns in New Zealand, and seen a little of the Lord's work in each, I have thought it might cheer God's dear children at home to know that in our "Briton of the South" God is giving us blessing, which we trust is only the beginning of greater things. From what I have seen, especially in Auckland and Dunedin, I feel confident there is a general move among all the churches, a deeper longing for more power of the Spirit, and greater earnestness in leading souls to the feet of Jesus. During the past month I have hadthe joy of seeing, almost nightly, souls enter into peace in blessing. Such experiences are truly refreshing, among all that one meets in the colonies, to drag even the Christian into the world.

Two months ago several officers of the Salvation Army arrived in New Zealand. Many of the Lord's children received them heartily. God has marvellously blessed their efforts up to now. Some far sunk in sin have been reclaimed, and the proud sceptic, in some instances by the most unlikely means, has been brought to the Saviour's love.

Our friend T. Spurgeon, in Auckland, is doing a grand work, the influence of which, we trust, will be felt all over the colony. One daring, wild, young man, to make fun for his companions, went to the meeting and prayed in it; in the act of doing so God's Spirit arrested him; he was convicted of sin, brought to Christ, and is now labouring to bring others to the Truth. Another, the son of a missionary, who has been given up by a praying mother for fifteen years as dead, was mightily wrought upon by the Spirit while working in the bush. For months he desired to get a Bible. He was presently led to a little township, where he heard the simple story of a full and free pardon through the blood of the Lamb. He believed in Jesus, and went on his way rejoicing. Will the Lord's people pray for greater and still more glorious things for New Zealand. David Whytock.

An Open Door of Service among Christ's Little Ones.

THE VILLAGE HOME FOR GIRLS, AT ILFORD,

Is now quite full, while every day urgent applications are received on behalf of needy Candidates for admission.

But, three and a half additional acres of Land have been obtained close to the Village, on which to erect Fifteen Fresh Cottages, and needful School Buildings.

A Lady near Newcastle has just given £600 to supply one of the first of these.

It is thought that there are some readers of The Christian who, knowing the need, may wish to contribute a small House to hold 20 Little Girls, to be snatched by Christ's servants from positions of danger or suffering, and trained in Christian ways.

If promises enough were received soon, the work could be begun during this fine weather; and next summer would, if God wills, see the Fifteen Houses taken possession of for their holy purpose.

Communications are invited, and may be addressed to

MARY LYON.
RECOLLECTIONS OF A NOBLE WOMAN
BY FIDELIA FISKE.
"Miss Lyon established, and for many years superintended, the Mount Holyoke Seminary, from whence a large number of devoted and earnest women have gone forth to do good service in the Master's cause. The author of the 'Recollections' was herself a pupil of Miss Lyon; and, after labouring with much success in Persia, returned to South Hadley to succeed her former instructress."—Sunday School Teacher.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN" WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER CONCERNING A YOUNG MAN IN NEW ZEALAND—CASE of CONFIRMED PHTHISIS.

Mr. JOEL HANDS, of 116, High-street, Burton-on-Trent, writes me April 7 concerning his son (the young man had been receiving medicine and corresponding with me for part of two years, until, sufficiently well to undertake a voyage, he sailed to New Zealand):—

"Your Balsam was the means of saving the life of my son in New Zealand. I have had a letter in which he attributes the sparing of his life to it, and I have no hesitation in confirming that statement."

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS

NOT

By CHARLES GRAHAM.

The Sword and Trowel says:—"So far as we can see, this is a sound book. If this is all that the Holiness people have meant, we cannot make out why there has been so much noise over the matter. To us these new revelations are nothing but the common-places of experimental divinity. With considerable skill and sagacity Mr. GRAHAM has proved his title, and wheeled away much fanatical rubbish. Anything which will promote true holiness has all our heart."

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST. By D. L. MOODY. 13th THOUSAND. Tinted Covers, 4d.; Cloth Limp, 6d.

"The moment a man takes hold of the truth that Jesus is coming back again to receive his followers to Himself, this world loses its hold upon him. Gas stocks, and water stocks, and stocks in banks and railroads, are of very much less consequence to him then. His heart is free, and he looks for the blessed appearing of his Lord, who, at his coming, will take him into his blessed Kingdom."—Extract.

SCRIPTURE READERS' SOCIETY FOR IRELAND,
Supported by Voluntary Contributions.
President—
The Right Hon. the Earl of Shaftesbury, K.G.

Established 1822, for the purpose of employing humble Christian men, well versed in the Scriptures, to visit from house to house throughout the country, and visit all denominations. Irish-speaking Readers are sent to Irish-speaking districts when required. The work is carried on in a spirit of love.

Subscriptions or Donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary, Capt. Kearney White, 27, Lower Pembroke-street, Dublin; or at 9, Paternoster-row, London.

The Earl of Shaftesbury says in his last letter to the Secretary:—Many thanks for your kind letter, and many thanks to Almighty God for the good intelligence you give me about your Scripture Readers in Ireland. I wish I could more effectively assist you. Your letter is the best thing that I have seen or heard from Ireland.

I enclose my donation, and only wish it was more.—Yours, Shaftesbury

N.B.—Friends will please notice the exact title, "Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland," and not as "Irish Scripture Readers' Society."

Educational.

TO GODLY PARENTS.—The undermentioned (who is in no way connected with the school) is desirous of recommending an old-established YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S BOARDING SCHOOL, DELIGHTFULLY SITUATED FACING THE SEA on the South Coast, a short run from London, in which a thorough and first-class Education is given, based upon the teaching of the Holy Scriptures.

It is one of the few remaining schools in which the power of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ influences the hearts and conduct of the pupils.

The success, happiness, and training of the Boys have been so remarkable in this School that a BOOK OF TESTIMONIALS GIVEN BY THE PARENTS should be read to appreciate results so unusual. Two Vice-Chancellors have placed their wards as pupils in the school. Reference kindly permitted to Dr. Thorn, Paddington, London.

CAPTAIN MORETON has great pleasure in recommending Mr. Foster's School to Christian parents, who value the judicious training of their sons. Mr. Foster personally superintends.—Eldon Park School, South Norwood.

THE OLD HALL SCHOOL, Wellington, Salop. Principal, Dr. Cranage, M.A. The next term will begin (D.V.) Thursday, September 20. Full particulars on application.

Parents who value Christian influence and training for their Daughters are invited to consider

THE GREEN HILL LADIES' SCHOOL, DERBY.

The Principal brings large experience to bear on the training of her Pupils, desiring to combine the influence and comfort of the Christian home with a thorough English education, music, drawing, modern languages, &c. House large and airy. Competent resident English and Foreign Teachers. Terms moderate.—Prospectuses and references on application to the Principal, Miss Whitmore, Green Hill, Derby.

PRIVATE TUITION
For Delicate or Backward Youths.
MR. WILLIAM PENN

devotes his personal attention, care, and tuition to such Pupils, of whom he takes only a few, as he desires to preserve the strictly family tone of his home. Great attention is given to the development of a manly Christian character, and moral training is regarded as more important than mere intellectual acquirements. Abundant opportunity for BOATING, BATHING, CRICKETING, NATURALISING, &c., close by. A Carpenter's Shop is fitted up on the Premises, and Pupils are taught Carpentry and Joinery. Full particulars on application, with References to parents of Pupils.

SURREY HOUSE, 52, CLAPTON COMMON, LONDON, N.E.

PREPARATORY SCHOOL for Little Boys, conducted by a Lady of many years' experience. Terms moderate. Delicate boys carefully attended. The next term commences Aug. 1. Principal, Essex House, Cecil-street, Margate.

PARIS.—Protestant Establishment for Young Ladies. Sciences, Arts. French only language of the house. Terms £40. Ladies with a private bedroom, £5 a month. References: Rev. Baron Hart, 21, Avenue de la Grande Armée; Rev. L. Vernes, 7, Rue des Batignolles, Paris; Rev. D. J. Watt, The Priory, Rectory, road, London. Principal, Mme. Flamant, 68, Rue Truffaut Paris.

LADIES' COLLEGE, Goudhurst, Conducted by the Misses Kendon, daughters of the Rev. J. J. Kendon.—A happy home and School for Girls. The situation is exceedingly healthy and beautiful, being on the range of hills near Tunbridge Wells, and about four hundred feet above sea level. Pupils prepared for the College of Preceptors' and the Cambridge Local Examinations.—For prospectus with references, apply to Miss R. Kendon, M.C.P.

BRAMFIELD, Cavendish-road, Clapham-common.—Miss Rabett receives a limited number of young ladies as Resident Pupils, to whom she devotes her personal supervision. Refined and Christian influences. Careful mental culture. Special advantages for modern languages and accomplishments. High class professors attend. Preparation for Cambridge Local and Higher Examinations. Prospectus on application.

VEVEY, Switzerland.—First-class Educational Establishment for young Ladies. Special facilities for acquiring foreign languages; careful Christian training; special attention to health; domestic arrangements as in the best English schools. The Lady Principal will be in England at the beginning of August.
H. E., Librairie, B. Caille, Vevey, Switzerland.

BELMONT COLLEGIATE SCHOOL for Girls, 13 and 14, Belmont, Bath.—A thorough English education, with Latin, mathematics French, German, &c., on inclusive and moderate terms. The School is arranged on the best modern lines, and the utmost care taken that the whole tone and atmosphere be decidedly Christian. A few boarders received in the house of the Principals.

DOVECOTE PARK SCHOOL,
Wood Green, London, N.
Young gentlemen prepared for the Universities, Professions, or Commerce. Few boarders. Comfortable home. Christian discipline. For prospectus and testimonials, address
Rev. W. E. Coller, Principal.

SWITZERLAND.—In a cheerful residence, with private grounds, near Geneva, a Swiss Pastor and his wife are willing to receive one or two young Ladies of 14 to 16 years of age, who would share in the education given to their daughter. Christian family life. References exchanged.—E. Petavel, D.D., Villa Sismondi, Chêne-Bougeries, Genève.

LONDON.—First-class Education for the Daughters of Gentlemen, in an establishment of long standing, conducted by members of the Church of England, occupying a spacious house in a most healthy locality in the West-end. The pupils have the advantage of loving care and safe training while pursuing their studies under first-rate Professors, their health, individual temper, and disposition carefully and tenderly watched over, and the whole system based on Christian principles.—Delta, Mr. Spalding, Stationer, 46, High-street, Notting-hill, W.

SOUTH-WEST LONDON COLLEGE FOR LADIES, 1, Carlton Mansions, Claphamrise, S.W. Principal, Mrs. Hale, A.C.P. Next term commences September 18. Terms moderate and inclusive. References to parents of pupils and Rev. C. H. Spurgeon. "I have the utmost pleasure in standing as reference. I can highly commend Mrs. Hale, and have the greatest confidence in her capacity, management, and character, having known her for several years."
C. H. Spurgeon.

EDUCATION.—A Lady can speak most highly of a superior school, where two of her daughters are being educated, in which the highest culture is blended with truly Christian training, loving and kindly interest taken in their pursuits, and recreations and home-like pleasures furnished at seasonable times. Particulars will be gladly given by Mrs. B., 30, Downshire-hill, Hampstead.

MARLBOROUGH COLLEGE for Young Ladies, Larkbeare, Exeter, in connection with Seaside Educational Home (for juniors and others requiring sea air), at Clifton House, Topsham. Under the personal supervision of the Misses Bamber, Miss Churton, the Misses Pope, assisted by Professors and English and Foreign Governesses of acknowledged merit. A high moral tone is ensured by careful Christian training. University examinations. Numerous references to Clergymen, Ministers, and Parents in England, Wales, Scotland, Ireland, and abroad.

EDUCATION.—Unrivalled advantages. The Institution for Young Ladies, at Hilden, near Düsseldorf, founded by the late Dr. Fliedner, of Kaiserswerth, is conducted by Deaconesses. Winter term commences middle of October. Particular attention is paid to the pupils' religious and moral training, based on Evangelical principles. Foreigners are afforded every opportunity of acquiring French and German thoroughly; also every other branch of education, including music, singing, and drawing. References: Rev. Dr. Rosedale, 54, St. German's-road, Forest-hill, S.E.; and Rev. C. McArthur, Burlingham Rectory, Norwich.—Prospectuses, and address of the Sister, to be had from the Directress, L. Korten, Hilden, near Düsseldorf; or from the Direction in Kaiserswerth.

A SWISS LADY, residing close to the Lake of Geneva, offers a happy home, and superior educational advantages (the services of efficient masters engaged, and lectures attended), to pupils who may be entrusted to her.—Reference, Miss Ford, 1, Grove-villas, Teignmouth, S. Devon.

Languages and music specialities. Autumn term commences September 12.—Grove House, Upper Clapton, London, N.

MORAVIAN EDUCATION, Fulneck Schools, near Leeds.—The above Schools lie beautifully on the slope of a hill facing the south; they stand in connexion with Moravian Schools in Germany and Switzerland. Pupils are prepared for the Local Examinations, the London University Matriculation, and the Entrance Examination for degrees in the Victoria University, whilst special care is given to moral and religious training. The next quarter commences Tuesday, August 7.—Application for terms, &c., for young ladies, to be made to Miss Shawe, and for boys, to the Rev. W. T. Titterington.

MARGATE.—Sandringham House Preparatory School for the Sons of Gentlemen, from 7 to 14 years. Conducted by Miss Rich, assisted by efficient governesses and masters. Although the primary object of the School is to train the boys for Christian life and service, the foundation of a first class education carefully is laid, and pupils regularly attend the College of Preceptors' and Oxford and Cambridge Local Examinations, at which many successfully pass each year. The health and personal comfort of the pupils is also greatly considered. The next term begins September 14.

EDUCATION IN GENEVA, Richemont, 35, Chemin de Champel.—Mrs. McVickars receives a limited number of Young Ladies, to whose moral and educational training she devotes much care. French is the language of the house. Italian also spoken, and German carefully taught when desired. Session from 15th September to 30th June. References to parents of former pupils, and to the Rev. Wm. Chalmers, D.D., Principal of the English Presbyterian College, 42, Westbourne-park-road, W.; Rev. J. Oswald Dykes, D.D., 49, Gordon-square, W.C.; and R. T. Turnbull, Esq., 50, Gordon-square, W.C.

KILBURN COLLEGE FOR BOYS.—Happy home. Christian influence. Pupils of 12, 13, and 14 years, successful at Cambridge Local Examinations. Principal, Henry Carvill, C.M., 9, Somerset-terrace, Carlton-road, N.W. Referees, Very Rev. Dr. Vaughan, Rev. Grattan Guinness, &c., &c. Next term will commence September 3rd.

ENCOURAGING PROOFS THAT MAGNETISM HEALS.

R. H. Townend, Esq., Tabley House, Ealing, W.,

wrote us last winter, when much prostrated by a severe illness, desiring any help we could supply at once: after carefully considering his case, we complied. From that time he recovered so rapidly that other friends were induced to seek our advice, and have been similarly benefited. We gave Mr. Townend's experience some time since, which was as follows:—

"My anticipations are more than realised; the Magnetic Apparel has had a marvellous effect. My medical man called the other day, and said I appeared to have taken out a new lease of life. I should be glad to lead every one needing a remedy to exercise the same confidence in your invigorating Treatment which I did, by testing it, and their faith would then be confirmed by experience, as in my case. I can truly wish you great success in your operations."

In May last his cousin consulted us, having suffered severely from neuralgia and rheumatism for several years, with intense pain in back, and inability to move about, only at ease when lying down, and very susceptible to change of weather. On May 26 this lady says: "I am glad to tell you I already feel better; I can move about more easily, and have walked a little in the garden." June 15.—"I am gaining strength from your appliances, and go out every day."

Mrs. Elborough, Ormehurst, Whitworth-road, South Norwood, recommended by this lady, consulted us June 21, for her husband, who had been for some time incapacitated from business, and was then apparently sinking from a (so-called) incurable disease. Under my treatment the progress of the malady was arrested at once, and the patient has been recovering rapidly to the present date.

Mr. John Downe, Enmore Lodge, Croydon-road, Penge, aged 83, recommended by Mr. Townend, was treated for a depressing and constant pain in the loins, on July 12. He has since personally reported most satisfactory improvement.

Such demonstrable advantages accruing from Magnetic treatment when other remedies have failed should commend it to all chronic sufferers; they prove what our next correspondent says from her own experience, "that there is a curative power in Magnetism" (when judiciously applied).

Miss E. Bungard, 30, Mainsforth-terrace, Sunderland, writes July 24: "It is now eight months since I first wore your Magnetic Appliance, for chronic rheumatism. The result is that I have never had one attack since last November, and taking into consideration that I suffered from an attack every few weeks, winter and summer, it is a plain and positive fact that there is a curative power in Magnetism. You have my best thanks for having been the means, by God's blessing, of doing me such lasting good."

Having spent many years of patient, laborious, and continued study in adapting his treatment to some of the most obscure and intractable affections, Mr. Garratt now claims, as the result of his professional career, to have attained a success unparalleled in the healing art. Those who desire further information on his method of treatment should peruse his Essays, explaining the radical effect of Magnetism upon the human organism in health and disease. His practice is essentially unlike the existing agencies for the manufacture or sale of special Magnetic or Electric articles, it having been Mr. Garratt's careful study to adapt the remedy to the requirements of each case—a practice based upon the principles laid down in his published Essays, which can be obtained post free on application. He will always be happy to confer with any scientific or medical gentlemen, either personally or by letter, upon any phase of the subject, or any case for treatment, and will send a private list of 850 names as references to any address.—Mr. B. Copson Garratt, Medical Electrician, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.

HOMES OF HOPE,

4, 5, & 6, Regent Square, Gray's Inn Road, London, W.C.

Special efforts are made on behalf of Mothers with their first infants, who are really the most hopeful class of the fallen, and are generally greatly to be pitied.

A Home has been opened for the reception of such young women, before they become mothers, as are unfitted, from their previous good character and position, to associate with a lower class.

The applications for admission are painfully urgent.

Funds are greatly Needed.

The Christian.

"OUT OF TOUCH."

IN a leading article on "The Methodism of To-day," The Christian World has the following words on the spirit of the times in relation to theological matters:—

"With respect to such subjects as the inspiration of the Bible, the nature of Revelation, and the history and the destiny of the human race, we can scarcely suppose that Methodist preachers stand just where their fathers did. If they do, they must certainly be getting 'out of touch' with the world around them, and to the extent to which this is the case they must be losing their influence and power. Popular thought on many important theological questions is certainly moving—whether forwards or backwards, whether progressively or erratically, is a matter of opinion—but what is certain is that those who essay to be teachers and guides, if they are content to stand still, satisfied with the repetition of stereotyped phraseology, must sooner or later find themselves standing alone."

The evils deprecated in this paragraph appear to us more apparent than real, and the conclusions arrived at anything but sound and conclusive. "Stereotyped phraseology" is of course to be avoided if it covers a lack of thought, and is not conservative of truth at once Scriptural and essential. But it may serve important purposes, and is not always to be condemned.

But suppose that clinging to time-worn and time-honoured forms of sacred thought and religious belief places us "out of touch" with the world around us, and necessitates our "standing alone," as advocates of the truth we have been led to receive: are these evils to be seriously dreaded, or may they not rather be distinctions in Christ's service, to be coveted and prized by those who aspire to fidelity therein? Was not the Master Himself "out of touch" with the world around Him, and were not his Apostles men who were often called upon to "stand alone" for the defence and confirmation of the Gospel? His holy precepts summon us to zealousness as to assuming this position, and to no feature of character on the part of his disciples does He give greater prominence and promise of reward than to that of willingness to bear reproach, and to risk separation and loss rather than betray his word. When St. Paul experienced what it was to lose friends and friendship for Christ's sake, he said, "Notwithstanding, the Lord stood with me and strengthened me." The Hebrew children were "out of touch" with the world around them, but "one like unto the Son of God" took up their cause, and though they stood alone in their fidelity to truth, they were never less alone than then.

This fear of "standing alone" haunts many minds in these days, and, it is to be feared, deters many from taking a position of boldness in proclaiming and holding firmly the glorious but world-despised doctrines of the Cross of Christ. "The noble army of martyrs" consisted of men and women who knew no such fear, and woe be to us if we are not prepared to maintain our stand, even though despised as fools and fanatics for so doing. The wisdom of this world never has been the wisdom of God, and in these days of new theories and rationalistic speculations, that Gospel which is in truth "the wisdom of God," has become, as in the days of Greek culture and Roman grandeur, foolishness with men.

Not a few of the avowed adherents of Christianity seem prepared, if not altogether to abandon the Gospel Paul proclaimed, as being a Pauline, and therefore a changing creed, yet to aspire to so clothe it with wisdom of words as practically to make it of none effect. If the views held by John Wesley concerning the inspiration of the Bible, the nature of revelation, and the history and destiny of the human race, are indeed out of date, and unworthy of the generation of to-day, so much the worse for the generation. As to preachers who maintain those views "losing their influence and power," we believe that, so far as power and influence in a right direction are concerned, they are the only men who really exert any. The preachers who to-day are proving themselves to be soul-winners, are men who endorse such views as our contemporary appears to contemn. Place the leaders of our modern theology by the side of Wesley and Whitfield, compare their influence for good, and their power to turn men to righteousness, with that exerted by the scientists and neologians who claim to represent the Christ of modern thought, and what will be the result of the comparison?

The fact remains indisputable that in Methodist circuits all over the kingdom there are to be found, as in the ranks of all Evangelical sections of the Church, men who for power and influence on the side of saving truth, and in Christlike service of humanity, are immeasurably superior to those who in high-sounding language, and subtle forms of thought, dazzle and bewilder the minds of those who hear and follow them.

Of nothing do the servants of Christ need to be more jealously on their guard, than the tendency to be ambitious of gaining the applause and commendation of the learned savants of our times. Better be scorned by them and approved by the Master we serve, than flattered by them and rebuked by Him, whether we look at present power and influence for good or future reward. "Athanasius against the world," was the old father's cry, in days when he was the advocate of an unpopular but Divine truth. Happy for all those who in the same spirit are content to stand alone rather than surrender one iota of "the faith once delivered to the saints." Better far to be right with a faithfu few than wrong with a faithless multitude to walk in the narrow way that leads to life, than in the broader and more seductive one which leads to destruction. It is still true of the former that "few there be that find it," and of the latter, "many there be which go in thereat."

SPEAKING THE TRUTH.

THE subject chosen for our Bible-class was "Heaven." We were speaking of our Lord's holding up a little child as a type of the inhabitants of the kingdom of heaven. One after another the men spoke of the trust of little children; how they believed all they were told, and trusted father and mother so simply. A few words on the great responsibility of being true to this trust elicited the reply from most of the fathers present, that they had never thought of this, but had constantly promised their children toys, &c., merely to "pacify them."

"My little Harry asked me for a wheel barrow the other day. I said 'Yes' without thinking, and now every day the little rascal says, 'Have you got my barrow you promised?'" "I suppose you forgot?" "Oh, no; I could not afford to buy one! Why, if I did, half a dozen of the others would want one too." The other men then said they were just as guilty; they had never realised how they were helping to turn little types of heaven into the sceptic, who professes to believe in nobody or nothing. The boy grows older, and goes to work among men, and he soon finds it wise and manly to trust no one, because he is laughed at for his credulity. He will eventually develop into the young man of the day, to whom the words "faith" and "trust" are objects of ridicule.

Who cannot remember the first time they were laughed at for trusting. The writer remembers an old lady who had expressed great distress at the godless way she and her brothers and sisters had been brought up, in a strictly moral, but worldly family abroad. The old lady set to work to teach the children their prayers and hymns. One evening she said to the writer (then a little child about seven), "M., would you like to feel my cork tooth?" Bearing in mind the lesson in politeness she had always received, the child fearlessly put her hand into the cruel mouth which closed upon her with a never-to-be forgotten horror. The pain was scarcely felt in comparison with the shame at having been "so silly" as to believe the good lady. Several similar experiences, and the girl would believe no one but her father, who had never, even in joke, spoken an untrue word. Christian parents may well ask themselves whether their children will one day find it easier to believe God because they have first learnt to trust them, or whether the young doubter who affects to believe in nothing, first learned infidelity at home. MISS COLE'S ORPHAN HOMES.—In her nineteenth annual report Miss Cole says: "We are expecting shortly to open our new Home, as the building is finished and paid for; but we are at present standing still for the want of more funds for the fencing of the ground, furniture and fixtures. Also I ask my kind readers to consider the increased daily expenditure that will necessarily be incurred by adding a fourth Home." The work of those Homes is such as commends itself to the Christian public. Miss Cole's address is Mount Hermon, Cambridge-road, Kilburn, N.W.

SAMSON.

Address by Mrs. GEO. C. NEEDHAM.

THE question may arise to some of you, Was Samson a child of God? The Scripture asserts he was. In Hebrews xi. ranked in the same company with Abraham, the heroic friend of God; with Joseph, the blameless saviour of his people; with Moses, the patient mediator of rebellious Israel, we read of Samson, the blundering, defiled Nazarite. As in a home every child claims the father's parentage, regardless of characteristic differences, so in God's true family, living faith raises the believer to the place of unquestioned acceptance.

Marvellous is it, as we study the lives of these faulty Old Testament men and women, to find them in the Hebrews without one charge of sin. My friends, this is for our blessed consolation. Some of us here to-night, as we review the past, blush crimson at its black record. But, pause: are we on redemption ground? In our heart of hearts dare we whisper, JESUS IS MINE! Then, oh, happy thought, fair as the lily of the valley, white as the dove washed in milk, are you and I in our standing before God. And as John beheld the twenty-four elders, seated in the presence of the Throne, calm amid thunderings and lightnings and earthquakes and woes—such is our assurance, through that blood which cancels all our guilt.

But, secondly, you may inquire, Why are such faulty histories recorded? I answer, that the depravity of man may be fully displayed, and the grace of God magnified in providing deliverance. Read we only of such blameless lives as Joseph and Daniel, how soon human nature would exalt itself; how soon carnal ambition would seek salvation through works and attainment! And so in Samson's life we are to read the old truth, "Faith only is accounted for righteousness."

And this leads us to ask, What are the special teachings in Samson's history? Evidently he is typical, and that of the Lord Jesus, Israel's true, great, and coming Deliverer. He was raised up at the time when the Philistines had dominion in the land. They were not a foe from outside, but among them, with whom the people were in intercourse. He began the deliverance, which David, a fuller type of Christ, finally accomplished. And so, in the latter day, when, according to the prophecies, the nation shall be gathered in their own land, a dreadful enemy will be developed in their midst, in the shape of that anti-Christian power with which they shall make friendly league, but who will deceive, and break covenant, and desecrate, and desolate, and destroy, both their temple and their land, till in their dire affliction, Jehovah interposes, and the strong arm of his Son smites the desolator, and accomplishes the final deliverance of Israel.

But, further, in the details of his life, we shall find Samson foreshadowing the Lord Jesus. He was born of promise, above nature. To his mother was announced, as to Mary, that his life was appointed to fulfil a special purpose: "He shall begin to deliver Israel."

Like the Lord, his childhood was obscure, unmarked by recorded event, save as is written of both, they grew in the favour of God.

We have him also, like Jesus, beginning his public work only when the Holy Ghost came upon Him.

I would turn aside here to notice the marked difference between the manifestation of the Holy Spirit under the old dispensation and in the new. In Samson's time He was bestowed only occasionally, upon selected men, for a specific purpose. I do not know that we read of any Old Testament character of whom it was said that the Spirit of God remained with him, as it is written for believers now, that the Comforter shall abide with them, even to the end of the age.

If you follow it out in your concordance, you will read of several like Saul, upon whom the Spirit of God came. The word upon reminds us of clothing. Like a garment the Spirit enwrapped these men. When the message was delivered, the power seems, for that time, to have been removed. But under grace, we are told the Holy Spirit dwelleth within the believer, keeping his residence there, to flow out in rivers of living water. How awful! that these bodies of vileness are made the treasure-house of such a mighty power! If Samson under special impulse could rend a lion and break the gates of brass, what ought not we to do in Satan's kingdom, under the steady urging of God's ever-present, almighty Spirit?

Again, will you observe how Samson was betrayed through Delilah's profession of love, and sold by her for money; how he was bound, led away by enemies, mocked at a feast, blinded, disgraced, and finally perished among wicked men, self-offered on the behalf of Israel.

Does it not remind us of Judas and his companions in bargain; of the kiss, the armed band, the binding, the mocking, the blindfolding, the crucifying, and the great atoning death? And does it not show us, however dimly and distantly, the man Samson prefigured our blessed Lord, that the Bible is written upon a grand system of purpose—type within type, figure overshadowing figure, mystery enwrapping mystery, and all to reveal Jesus; little by little, more and more, till at last our dull hearts begin to take in some of the wonderful glories and many-sided perfections of the Son of God.

But there is something very suggestive in Samson's choice of a bride. She was a Philistine, and appears not to have been a good woman. He does not say to his parents, "She has charms of person and beauty of face. I wish her, for I love her," but, "Get her for me, for she is right in mine eyes," literally, she is suitable for my purpose. No wonder his conduct perplexed his parents. They understood not, God was seeking occasion against the Philistines. How much of a sin it was for Samson, God's separated man, to enter into this alliance, I shall not now discuss. I wish to show you that worldly wisdom is always outside the secret of God's purposes, and opposed to them. When Jacob was chosen before Esau, the patriarch could not understand it. When Ephraim was preferred to Manasseh, Joseph thought it a mistake. When the youthful David was singled out from his full-grown brethren, even the spiritual Samuel was amazed. When the Lord chose unto Himself Israel, a nation perverse and rebellious from the beginning, He found it needful again and again to remind them, "The Lord did not set his love upon you, nor choose you, because ye were more in number than any people; for ye were the fewest of all people: but because the Lord loved you, and because He would keep the oath which He had sworn unto your fathers." The complaint of the Pharisees against the Lord Jesus was, "This man receiveth—literally putteth his arms about sinners—and eateth with them." And saith the Apostle Paul, speaking of the Church, Christ's black but comely spouse. "For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called: but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are: that no flesh should glory in his presence."

Samson's bride was chosen for an earthly purpose. We, my friends, are elected for a heavenly destiny, not only to judge angels, not merely to be in association with the Lamb in his day of vengeance upon the wicked inhabitants of earth, the enemies of Israel, but to share his glory and partake of his holiness everlastingly.

You will notice how Samson slew the lion, the first recorded demonstration of his power. "He went down to Timnath," and "he had nothing in his hand." In the lion we get a symbol of Satan. Early in our Lord's public history we have Him fighting the devil, encountering fierce temptations, like young lions in the freshness of their strength. "For this purpose," says John, "the Son of God was manifested, that He might destroy the works of the devil."

And Samson "had nothing in his hand." So Jesus was alone in the wilderness; alone in his battle with the craft of plotting Scribes and Pharisees; alone in the agony of the garden; alone in the sorrow of the cross. "I have trodden the winepress alone, and of the people there was none with Me." When he had by Himself purged our sins (He) sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high. "Out of the lion came forth sweetness." From the victories of the Lord Jesus come the blessings of grace. Satan has had a time of conquering in the world; but One stronger than he shall yet be his destruction. "Out of the bitter shall come forth sweetness."

But lastly, as a Nazarite, Samson was typical of Jesus, God's undefiled, elected one. This is the grand idea of his history. He was singled out of Jehovah to do a work of Israel. Had he remained steadfast to his vows, we may not limit the mighty deliverance which would have been accomplished through him. Alas! how sorrowful a picture of failure he presents. What a type of all Christians in their tendency to depart from the way of faith and walk of separation. How many, like him, have friendships in Sorek, the place of wine?

All believers are called to be Nazarites and have the vows of consecration upon them. "Ye are," says Peter, "a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people, that ye should show forth the praises of Him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvellous light."

We will notice, briefly, the conditions of Nazariteship. There were two classes of Nazarites: those, like Samson and John, so ordained from birth; others, like the case in the sixth of Numbers, who were voluntary Nazarites, attaining to the position through temporary submission to the conditions. These conditions were three:—

(1) Utter abstaining from every product of the vine.

(2) No razor was to come upon his head.

(3) He was to touch no dead body, not even a near relative.

Now, in these restrictions we are reminded, first of all, that as wine signifies earthly joy and worldly pleasure, the Nazarite was not to find his enjoyment in the things of earth. He was to keep down nature, and practice literal self-denial. It might be proper for other men to turn aside from the sternness of life to enjoy themselves, but it would be wrong for him. He was on a pinnacle of duty, from which he might not descend.

Now this condition of Nazariteship should engage the solemn consideration of every believer who listens to me. It has to do with the very core of your Christian life. As God's separated ones, you are forbidden to touch what other men and women may enjoy. You are not of the world, even as your Lord and Master was not of the world. You have no right to reason about it relatively, and say, "This thing seems very harmless," "this amusement appears moral." Your place is to stand in heaven, and look down upon earth and say, "How unlike God are all these devices of men." Yes, indeed, my friends, when you bring the gay things of life, the concerts, the sociables, the entertaining lectures, before Heaven's tribunal, to be judged in the light of absolute holiness, how it shames you that you were ever found among such things. But if some of you say, "This is too strict;" if the thought of such separation is oppressive, then I pity you. Your heart is not right in the sight of God. Repent speedily of this thy wickedness, and beseech forgiveness. Jesus could say, "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent Me." Such closeness of separation is our privilege, and ought to be our joy."

The unshaven head leads us to the eleventh chapter of first Corinthians for explanation. Long hair is the token of subjection. It is the man renouncing the dignity of manhood. Content to be to his God what the woman is to her husband, what the Church is to Christ—submissive in love. Spiritually, it is making one's self of no reputation. It is fulfilled in resisting not evil; in striving as much as lieth in you to live peaceable with all men; in suffering wrong; in bearing oppression; in yielding even legal rights.

The third condition was to touch nothing dead. Death is the expression of sin, its very essence and culmination. Every soul out of Christ is a judicial corpse. Every unconverted man with whom you have partnership on the street defiles you. How appalling! The ground I tread on is cursed. The scenery my eyes take in is blighted. The men and women I mingle with are condemned to death. The whole world lieth under the power of the wicked one. My friends, are you thinking of it in this light? Defilement touches us every step of our way. Oh! what shall we do? How can our consecration be preserved unbroken?

The Word declares, in the nineteenth of Numbers, we have a purely red heifer burned with fire, and her ashes, the whole residue of the sacrifice, laid up before the Lord, to perpetuate atonement, to be applied in washing away the uncleanness of any who became defiled by touching a dead thing. Here we learn of restoration for the soul. These ashes point us to our Saviour's priestly intercession in heaven. It is the very essence of atonement, meeting the daily sins of the believer's walk. "If any man sin, we have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the Righteous."

But, let me remind you, the Nazarite who fell from his vows suffered serious loss. He had to repeat the time of his separation from the beginning. Samson, for betraying the secret of his strength, lost his eyesight and much precious time that might have been devoted to Israel. He was never the same unfettered man again. His last victory cost him his life. In reckoning up the history of Israel under judges and kings, we find God threw out of the count all the years they were in servitude to other nations. How solemn to us! Your days and years, backslider, out of communion, are not set down in God's calendar. Paul speaks of some at the judgment-seat of Christ who will suffer loss; of some who will have no years of fellowship, no days of service to be remembered and honoured. Saved will they be, but only as by fire. Ah, my friends, consecration is no light thing! Let Samson's loss be a mirror to warn us against such soul damage.

And now, in closing, observe that to refrain was the keynote of the Nazarite life. It was to have been the abiding secret of Samson's strength. No wine, no razor, no dead thing. The majority of Christians are called to just this line of negative testimony. Very few of us have the privilege of standing like Elijah on Carmel, to do high, aggressive work for Jehovah. Most of us, by circumstance, are better fitted to take the quiet, the low, the negative. Like Joseph, to say, "I cannot do this great wickedness;" like Daniel, "I will not be defiled with the king's meat;" like Shadrach and his companions, "We will not worship thy gods;" like Mordecai, who would not do homage to a cursed Agagite. Let us be steadfast, then, in resisting the first suggestions to deviation. A fascinating Delilah may accomplish what a host of Philistines could not do. You may say, "I will go out as at other times before, and shake myself." The enemy will laugh, for he well knows that spiritual power once lost, is never fully regained.

FAITH, HOLINESS, AND VICTORY.

LOOKING from a divine standpoint at the religious movements of our day, one startling feature strikes us at a first glance, namely, the prominence given to man's feelings and to man's work. If we take leisure to go back in spirit to the time when our Lord Jesus fulfilled his brief and blessed mission, his one object the will and the glory of the Father, and then look in fellowship with God on the testimony of the Church today, one fact is undeniable—we have not kept the charge He gave us, "As my Father hath sent Me, even so send I you." We have not taken diligent heed to the word of the Master, "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto Me." We have the Gospel—yes, blessed be God! we have still the Gospel—but then the Church wants Christ just as much as the world, and let us be assured of one thing, that when He comes to take account with us as servants, our holiness, our faith, and our victories, will find their true place in the dust at his feet, and we shall have an undying Hallelujah to the one blessed name of Jesus.

We may fail to keep the charge committed to us, but God's purpose is unaltered. In the days of his manhood, when infant lips praised Him, we have the Word of Christ, "I tell you that if these should hold their peace, the stones would immediately cry out." When He was on earth, his presence only was the centre for his disciples, and ere He left them his own lips prophesied, "When He, the Spirit of truth, is come. . . He shall testify of Me"—not of his own work in the Church of God, but of a risen, glorified, and soon-returning Jesus. Now, if the Spirit is in the Church, as an indwelling power, how has He wrought by us? Ah, these are solemn questions to be answered at the coming judgment-seat. Let us meet them now. Soon God will crown the Lamb, slain for sinners, as God desires to crown Him, the one Lord of all. Now is our opportunity to lift Him up before men—to magnify his name, and his name only.

We would not pass by our privilege to be holy, but we would desire to seek after holiness in the one divine way given to us by the Holy Ghost through the Apostle. "We all, beholding as in a glass"—What? Our own hearts—our own experiences?—"Beholding the glory of the Lord, are changed into the same image, from glory to glory, even as by the Spirit of the Lord." (2 Cor. iii. 18.) Neither would we make light of faith, but if it does not rest upon a revelation from God to the soul of what He has done, or is about to do, what is it? Is it a thing to be worked up in our hearts as a means of bodily healing; or is it a Divine communication to those in fellowship with God of his purposes, whether it be for suffering or for health, as it best pleases Him? If it be less than this, then the link is missing that binds our need and our helplessness to the omnipotence of God. Faith only is precious or effectual as it lays hold of Him who is the centre of all power and blessing. The end of the Apostle's faith was not healing, but the glory of Christ. His purpose was one—"That Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life or by death." (Phil. i. 20.) Is it so with us?

When unseen hands rent the dividing veil in the day of expiation, it was rent "from the top to the bottom." In the early days of the Church they preached "Jesus and the Resurrection." Shall we come down to preach faith and holiness? Let us not begin at the wrong end. Let us give Christ the place that God gave Him, and we shall have it all, faith, holiness, and victory, all in Him.

A. E. W.

THE SILENCE OF PRAYER.

IN prayer we speak to God, but there is also the silence of prayer. Our lips utter no sound, we cannot find words to express the language of the heart, but the soul still prays. Perhaps we are too weary in body or in mind, perhaps the brain may be too utterly exhausted, to frame the petitions we would ask. Still, we desire to hold communion with Him who bids us come to Him when we are tired. "Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Then comes the experience and the sweetness of the silence of prayer. What is it? (1) It is just kneeling down in our accustomed place, and lifting up our heart to Him in a wordless petition which speaks only in the well of longing deep down in our souls.

(2) It is letting God speak to us in our silence and listening to His voice. There are many things He will say to us, if we will only hear them—deep, sweet, holy things—comforting things, and things that will draw us away from the world to follow Him more closely.

(3) It is a time of great nearness to Jesus. Is He not close by? Having felt the weakness of our nature, He draws near in full sympathy with our weariness.

(4) It is a time of strengthening. Our "strength is" sometimes "to sit still." No less do we receive strength from God when we are drinking in silence from Him who chooses sometimes Himself to be "silent in love." So may we arise from the silence of prayer invigorated and strengthened.

HOPPICKERS.—Mr. G. T. Gillingham is going again for a month among the Hoppickers at East Farleigh, near Maidstone, and as there are in this district during the season upwards of 8000 Irish Roman Catholics, he would be very thankful if any of the readers of The Christian could send him, at 145, Kirkwood-road, Peckham, S.E., packages of tracts for distribution, Scripture cards and illuminated texts. He also requests prayer for this work.

RESCUE WORK IN POPLAR.

THIS attempt to seek and to save the lost began in 1878. It was an individual effort, aided by a committee grown out of a conviction that individual efforts act most effectually upon the unhappy class that throng the streets. This little beginning has become a large and influential work, for it has been assisted by numbers of people whose hearts are stirred on one of the most pressing questions of the day.

A few Christian men and women try to gather up some of the wretched beings who are victims of drink, sin, and disease. It seems but a handful of sand compared with a mountain, high and hard to climb; but the effort is a protest, and bears witness of courage and good will. Take the number of women saved in penitentiaries, reformatory and refuge unions, houses of mercy, and rescue work of all kinds, that are kept up by Christian charity; the number will be pitiful in comparison with the thousands of lost women in London alone, to say nothing of those in provincial towns and cities. Given the money, there are plenty of good women who would labour to pick up these lost sheep, and help them into places where most of them would redeem the past and become useful instead of mischievous members of society.

Look at this girl that comes to us. A creature calling himself a man enticed her from home, a pretty, silly young woman of seventeen, gave her a little money, very little, and left her with a baby in a brothel. A good clergyman brought her to me. When I took them in, she was dazed and almost imbecile, would not tell her name, would not say a word about her friends or who the man was, refused all sympathy, would listen to nothing, but kept her baby in her arms, not letting anyone touch it. She called the poor little thing "Violet," and never was there a more patient and devoted mother in the world, but it sickened and died in spite of her care. I left her alone, and buried the baby. When she came back from the funeral, I talked to her, and then she said she would do anything I wished, she was so grateful I did not let the parish bury her little one. I brought her down to this beautiful home in the country, and asked her to wait at our table. Patiently, silently, she learned her work, and took pleasure in it; did it well for three months. Now she is in a situation with a very kind lady, who knows all about her. If she had been left alone by the clergyman who brought her here, she would now be on the streets, a hardened sinner.

See this high-spirited, loud-voiced, brazen-looking creature, with nothing on her head, who knows no work but how to earn a few shillings a week in a factory. She wanders about the streets every night with girls of her own class, talking loosely with men and boys, till all vestige of girlhood and modesty is gone. She is not fifteen; what shall be done with her? She has no friends, or none who care for her. Shall she stay and swell the army of women who disgrace London? No; send her to some distant home, where she may learn womanly duties, and be saved, body and soul. Prevention is better than cure.

Look at this poor woman worn-out with strong drink, and a bad life—no hope on earth, no friends, no clothes, no health. See in her the most abject of all human beings. An old, worn-out, bad man is dreadful enough, when he has given all his life to sin and wickedness, but to my mind, an old bad woman is worse, more shocking. The absolute look of blank despair that rests on her face is so dark and dreary that nothing can be compared with it. But see! she realises the love of the Lord Jesus Christ, the possibility of hope in another world; she makes an effort, abstains from drink. The change is so marvellous, that her eyes get steady in their gaze, her circumstances brighten; a few clothes, a little work to do, and the wretched creature almost grows young again. Who can calculate the value of a saved soul?

Yonder girl comes from service. Her master, who should have protected, "gets her into trouble," to use her own phrase. With an infant in her arms and no character, what is she to do? She must take a room, and go on the streets to earn bread for herself and baby. "No," we say, "we will help you not to sink lower; we urge you to live downy our sin, and, for the sake of the innocent child, do your duty." And she does it.

There stand a man and woman well-dressed, outside the gate on a fine Sunday afternoon. Some time ago they were living in sin together, he idle and drunken and living on the earnings of her evil life. We took her in at Poplar, and he was helped by plain straightforward words to see how mean and disgraced he was. He took the pledge, and kept it. We put in the banns at church, while she lived in our Home, and eventually they got married. He tells me on this Sunday afternoon that they have been married twelve months, that she is a good, industrious wife.

Look at this poor girl, ill in a ward of the London Hospital. A lady, young, gentle, and of good position in society, sits beside her bed, telling her that in spite of her sins and the foul disease that makes life a burthen hard to bear, there is hope and peace, life eternal, and forgiveness of sins, through the tender mercy of our Lord. The stricken girl gets better, and her friend brings her to us. In nine cases out of ten, such a one loathes her past life, and is reformed and saved. There are exceptions, but, blessed be God, they are few. If we can get means, we want to open a special ward at Kerbey-street, for convalescents from hospitals.

"Come and see my sister in the union; she says she cannot die in peace till she has seen you." These words are addressed to my fellow-worker, who has never left my side for five years. She goes to find a girl with her bed crowded round by half-drunken, painted, tawdry-looking, wretched women, who cry over her and urge the dying girl, as she struggles for breath—her last breath almost—to take more port wine. "Send them away," she said, "do send them away. I don't want them, they make such a noise. I want to talk to you, and I want you to forgive me for being so wicked as to leave you, but it was the drink, you know." Forgiveness, simple words of love, and sincere advice to speak only to the Lord, helped this dying one. After some broken words of prayer from the poor Magdalene herself, she fell asleep, to wake in the presence of Him who judges not with man's judgment.

Such is our "Rescue Work in Poplar." We are making alterations and improvements in Kerbey-street, but we need help more than ever. The work increases daily. In five years fully 1000 cases have been treated. We are most unwilling to lessen a work that meets the various wants of a suffering, hopeless class. I make this appeal to the followers of the loving Master. We will not go into debt, but unless aid is sent, a large portion of this Rescue work must be curtailed. Our treasurer is Mr. Henry Green, Blackwall, E.

AN AMERICAN POET.

THE following hymns or spiritual songs are from the pen of Mr. Thomas Mackellar, of Philadelphia, the head of what is said to be the largest type foundry in the world, and at the same time one of the most active and devoted Christian philanthropists in America. They beautifully indicate the spirit of faith and quiet resting on God which are so essential to self-conquest and victory over the world. They are taken from the New York Independent.

I.

My soul is resting in God's peace,
Without a care or fear;
The tumults of my bosom cease,
For Christ my Lord is here.

The Spirit poureth from on high
A sanctifying tide;
And bathing in its stream of joy
My soul is satisfied.

He driveth curious doubts away,
He giveth childlike faith;
And so I take the yea or nay,
Just as my Saviour saith.

I have not other wish to be
Than what my Lord ordains;
So what He knoweth best for me
That be my richest gains.

A spirit meek and quieted
Is better than a crown;
How rich the blessing on the head
That Jesus sendeth down.

Here in his banquet-house I bide,
His banner o'er me, love,
And wait the coming eventide
Of perfect peace above.

II.

Sometimes in quiet reverie,
When day is growing dim,
The heart is singing silently
A sweet unwritten hymn.

The strains are not to measure wrought
By cunning of the mind;
But seem like hymning angels brought
From heaven, and left behind.

The misty hills of bygone grief,
Once dark to look upon,
Stand out like blessings in relief
Against the setting sun.

The rain may fall, the wind may blow,
The soul unhindered sings,
While like the bird 'neath sheltering bough,
She sits with folded wings—

A brief and pleasant resting space,
A glance at Beulah land,
Before she girds herself apace
For work that waits the hand.

Then giving thanks to Him who poured
Refreshments in her cup,
She hears the calling of the Lord,
And takes her labour up.

GOVERNESSES IN PARIS.—A lady who has received much personal benefit from Miss Pryde's Home for Governesses, at 22, Rue des Acacias, Paris, writes: "A friend and myself have been here sufficiently long to enable us to form an opinion of the Home, and we feel that we cannot speak too highly of Miss Pryde's kind thought and care for those under her charge. A Parisian lady, with the highest diploma obtainable in France, gives two lessons a week in French without extra charge. French is the language of the Home, and those desirous of gaining larger incomes in England afterwards would do well to take advantage of the many opportunities offered. This Home has been greatly enlarged lately, and there is a great strain upon the exchequer. As it was through your columns we first heard of it, we should be glad if this notice would touch the hearts of many to help the work. All communications to be addressed to Miss Pryde's own residence, 16, Rue de Tilsitt, Paris."

CHRIST AS A FRIEND.

A SUNDAY MORNING ADDRESS TO CHILDREN

By Rev. A. J. Palmer, Folkestone.

"Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you."

THERE was a little girl who came home from school the other day in great trouble. The cause of it all was that she was "out of friends" with a young companion. Her tears flowed very quickly. It was not long before a tap was heard at the door. There stood the little friend, who had come to "make it up" with this little girl. She felt as if she could not be out of friends with her schoolmate.

Now, it is a bad thing to be out of friends with anybody. I should be sorry to be out of friends with a little dog or cat, much less with a human being. But how pleasant it is for us to feel that we may have a Friend who never changes. "Jesus has been my Friend," said an old man, "for nearly seventy years. I am almost blind, but He never grows blind. I am very hard of hearing, but his ear is so quick, that He can catch my faintest whisper. I am getting old, but He will never grow old." Would you not like to have such a Friend as that?

Now, you know you can never get anything in this world except on certain conditions. Your father goes to work on Monday morning, and toils till Saturday night, perhaps, in the workshop or in the office. The result of that is that you have the comfort and pleasure of home. Your little brother comes home from school with several prizes; but he had to study hard during the term—that was the condition on which he was able to bring them. How beautifully your elder sister plays the piano; you can sit in the drawing-room and listen with great delight as she plays piece after piece; but she had to practise many an hour before she could play like that.

So there is a condition that we must observe before we can be the friends of Jesus Christ. We must do what He wishes—we must become his followers—before we can enjoy his love. In order to have Him as my Saviour, I have simply to believe on Him, but to have Him as my Friend I must do the things which please Him, and which He has commanded me.

Well, then, what must I do in order to have Jesus as my Friend? First, I must trust Him. When the English were at war with the Red Indians, an Englishman was taken captive. For several days he was led through forests and over mountains. At the end of the journey he was placed in a hut. As he lay awake the first night he thought of wife and children, whom he had left behind; what would he not give to see their faces once more! He felt sure he was about to be murdered. Early in the morning a Red Indian came to the Englishman's hut, and placed some food and a gun by his side. After he had taken the food, the Indian said, "Follow me." He thought to himself, "I expect he is taking me away to be murdered." However, he resolved to follow him. Hour after hour they went on as quickly as possible, and when night fell they rested. Next day the Englishman followed the Red Indian again, mile after mile, till at last they reached a certain peak. "There," the Indian said, "you know where you are now?" "Oh, yes," he said, "that is my home." "Well, then, you had better escape as quickly as you can." "Why have you treated me so kindly?" said the Englishman to the red man. "Years ago, when I was a poor wanderer, you took me into your house and treated me kindly; I thought the least I could do was to save your life."

Now, don't you see, if that Englishman had not trusted the Indian his life would not have been saved. If he had turned back he would have been murdered, but he trusted in his friend, and his life was saved. Dear children, if you would have Jesus Christ as your Friend, you must trust in Him. Whithersoever He leads, thither must you follow; whatsoever He asks you to do, that must you do. If you would have Him as your friend you must trust Him.

Then you must love Him. Love follows trust. You may be sure that Englishman loved the Red Indian who had proved so faithful a friend. So if we begin by trusting in Jesus Christ, it will be easy to love Him.

Then, again, you must sympathise with Him. That is a long word; do you know what it means, my little friends? There was a boy in school one day who had to stay behind the others and do some task. Another boy asked that he might stay by his side and help him; but of course that could not be allowed. So the little fellow stood outside the window, and looked in every now and then. His friend was sitting there doing his task, and every time he looked in at the window it seemed as if he said, "Cheer up! I am waiting for you. As soon as the task is over we shall go together." Then he would whisper through the keyhole to let the little boy know that he was near. So that boy was cheered and encouraged by the sympathy of his friend and companion. So, too, if you would have Jesus for your Friend, you will sympathise with Him; you will love the things that He loves, you will hate the things that He abhors, you will always try to do the things that please Him.

Would you not like to have Jesus for your Friend?

"One there is above all others,
Oh, how He loves!
Other friends may pain and grieve thee,
But this Friend will ne'er deceive thee,
Oh, how He loves."

Believe in Him, do the things that please Him; then you will be his friend, and He will be your Friend as long as you live.

A LULLABY.

The ears of corn are nodding
Their heads are heavy with sleep,
The tired little flowers have closed their eyes,
While the stars begin to peep.

The evening zephyrs are singing
A sweet little lullaby,
Soft fleecy clouds, with rosy glow,
Are sailing across the sky.

Like the tired little flowers, my baby
Has shut up her eyes so blue;
Her dear wee head, on its silken bed,
With the corn has nodded too.

Still softer than evening zephyrs,
I sing her a little song
Of an angel in white fleecy wings,
Who will guard her the whole night long.

—The Quiver.

A GOOD SUGGESTION.

If any of our young friends wish to give pleasure to the poor children around them in a small way, let them prepare three or four scrap books, specially to lend in their homes. I tried the thing last winter, and it answered admirably. Many little ones, who see few books or pictures, were interested, and appeared highly gratified. Parents, too, were pleased, for one way of getting near them is to show attention to their children.

It is well, also, to have one or more "Sunday scrap-books." The pictures for these of course should be selected, with hymns, texts, and cuttings from papers. "Floral Leaflets" are very pretty and ornamental. If the flowers round the texts are cut out and pasted on the leaves in different forms, they make a pleasing variety. A. B.

GOSPEL TEMPERANCE IN THE WEST.

GOOD meetings have recently been held by Major and Mrs. Poole in Bridgwater, and Tiverton. The Town Hall at the former place was crowded on the 26th July, and many went away without being able to obtain admission. Mrs. Poole spoke wisely and well on the subject of Gospel Temperance, taking as a basis the story of the Prodigal Son, and "Am I my brother's keeper?"

The four days' Mission held at Tiverton resulted in confirming the abstainers, and consolidating the work done there at a twelve days' Mission a year ago. Major and Mrs. Poole's addresses were effective in leading many young people to take their stand on Temperance principles, and it is believed many, as in all places visited by these earnest workers, were led to the feet of Jesus.

WOMAN'S UNION MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

THE story of the work of this Society is well worth perusal. It says: "It was in view of the need of Zenana work and in response to the voice and call of Providence, that this Woman's Union Missionary Society sprang into existence more than twenty years ago—the first American Society to enter upon the distinctive type of foreign Mission service which was a Mission of woman for woman.

"As to foreign lands, the work of this Society, begun in India, has also been conducted in other Eastern lands—Burmah, Japan, China, Greece, Cyprus; while grants in aid of schools and teachers have been given to almost every quarter of the globe. In India alone this Society now owns and occupies three American Mission Homes, at Calcutta, Allahabad, and Cawnpore, each of which is a centre of Christian instruction, bringing the influence of the Word of God to bear daily upon thousands of pupils in Zenanas and schools.

"Is it not, then, a matter over which Christians of all names may rejoice and give thanks, that a missionary association consisting of members from eight different denominations has been able to unite in plans for the spread of the religion of Jesus Christ, meeting monthly for over twenty-two years without having spent one hour on the subject of their denominational differences?"

It concludes by saying: "It is good at times to feel that we belong to the Church Universal; to reach out a hand that holds an offering of love for Christ only. We therefore cordially invite our Christian sisters of every name to join with us in carrying forward this undenominational Mission of woman to woman." The address of the Society is 41, Bible House, New York, U.S.A.

A MONTHLY LETTER TO FISHERMEN.—In addition to her many other labours on behalf of those who go down to the sea in ships, Miss Agnes Weston now writes a monthly letter to fishermen. It will be distributed among the thousands of men engaged in the North Sea fisheries, through the agency of the Thames Church Mission. The first "letter," just issued, is sure to meet with a hearty reception from those brave toilers of the deep. Written in a pleasant conversational style, the way of life is faithfully pointed out, and many appropriate counsels imparted. All who desire the spiritual welfare of our fishermen should send for a specimen copy to the offices of the Thames Church Mission, 31, New Bridge-street, London, E.C.

MISS ANSTEY'S COLAR ORPHANAGE.

THE report of this admirable Mission for 1882-3 has been issued. Special attention is drawn to the cases of two young Brahmins, Kodandanhord and Lakshman Rao, who are most useful to the Mission; both are well educated, and of earnest piety. They are fruits of this work. It is truly encouraging to find that there are now eight native helpers come forth from the ranks of the orphans, endowed with gifts for varied spheres of service among their own countrymen.

A young brother from Mr. Guinness's Institute (Mr. W. A. Redwood), who had for two years been desirous to go out and labour for the Lord in Colar, has lately arrived. He has thus written:—

"Besides the three hundred and fifty souls depending on the Mission for spiritual instruction, food, clothes, &c., there are nearly ten thousand heathen fellow-creatures to work among in the town of Colar. The native workers and converts show pleasing signs of sincere spirituality. One is delighted to see the spirit of prayer so unmistakably evinced by many of them. In the evening, before retiring, I have unobservedly walked out round the Orphanage, and found a batch of the elder boys holding a prayer-meeting on the turf in the compound, or a company of big girls in their own room pouring out their hearts in prayer. And they do pray! Their whole being seems to go with their requests—some on their knees, others on their faces, before the Lord. Some of our English friends would enjoy the sight! The younger believers partake also of the same spirit. When one looks round, and sees the various branches of work connected with the institution, and remembers that Miss Anstey has been the 'mainspring' instrument, one wonders how she has done it. If any servant of the Lord deserves sympathy, it is Miss Anstey; and if any work deserves to be upheld, it is a work like this, where hundreds of poor famine-starved motherless and fatherless children have been rescued from the jaws of death and the horrors of heathenism! The rescue is more daring than it could be in England, and support less likely, humanly speaking.

"The children are evidently above the common level of natives, and many of them decidedly superior in moral character. About sixty of the children are in church fellowship, and about twenty more have applied for baptism. With workers, teachers, and all, the church already numbers about eighty; and when the twenty have been added, it will be a hundred."

The report proceeds: "The Lord has laid the work of evangelising in the neglected district around us, on the heart of Mark Silas, one of our native helpers. We asked the Lord to go before him, and prepare the hearts of the people to hear the Gospel message. He set out on foot, with a staff in his hand, sandals on his feet, and clothes on his back; the brethren accompanied him a little way. A few days after he wrote from a country town called Betamangala:—

"'The people hear the Word of God well; Brahmins, Government officials, and ryots come and hear the Word of God. It seems that the Lord has drawn their hearts to his truth, for they come to me and make inquiries about the truth. Kindly send some more Canarese tracts, and a bottle of quinine for those who are suffering from fever, for whom I have promised to get some medicine. Don't forget to pray much for me.'"

To show the industries of the Orphanage the following credit items are selected: "By sale of pomegranates, chunam and charcoal, groundnuts, mangoes, tamarinds, sugar, meat, and sheepskins, vegetables, milk, oil-cake seeds, sewing, blacksmiths' labour, ditto carpenters', ditto children's."

Here, then, we have, as regards the work of the Orphanage, a bright and blessed statement. The financial record, however, is by no means so satisfactory. According to the balance-sheet, Miss Anstey is found to have paid, during two years, no less a sum than 7224 rupees towards the support of the work. May God, on whose arm she leans, mercifully put it into the hearts of many who have the silver and the gold, to remove this untoward burden. It costs but £4 per annum to keep an orphan. Such an annual contribution would be a very effective way to help, and secure personal interest in the work. Miss Anstey does not plead for funds; she pleads for fellow-labourers, to go forth and bear some of the work involved.

MR. F. MURPHY IN DUNSTABLE.

ON Monday, July 23rd, Mr. Francis Murphy paid a visit to the ancient borough of Dunstable. The Gospel Temperance movement has been the means in this town of vitalising and energising temperance affairs generally, and bringing about a degree of success that five years ago we scarcely dared to hope for. These meetings have in every sense proved successful, and we hope to see them continued. Monday evening was very wet, but the Exchange was densely packed in every part. The lecture was delivered in inimitable style, point after point being pressed home in convincing words. Mr. Murphy's homage to the almost omnipotent power of love was to be seen running through all his remarks.

At the conclusion many fresh pledges were taken, and the effect of Mr. Murphy's visit will be felt long after he has left our shores.

T. W.

RICHARD WEAVER AT BLAENAVON.

THE services by Mr. Weaver were held in the large and commodious Primitive Methodist Chapel, with the exception of the Lord's Day, when hundreds failed to get in. The meetings throughout have increased in interest day by day, and the powerful addresses, accompanied with solemn and persuasive appeals, told mightily on the ranks of the devil. Numbers have wept their way to the cross, and the workers in the inquiry-room have been busily engaged, up to a late hour, in pointing the anxious to Christ. It has been a delightful sight to see husbands and wives, brothers and sisters, young men and women, earnestly seeking salvation through the blood of the Lamb.

One young woman, after accepting Christ, went out of the inquiry-room, and going up the aisle of the chapel, threw her arms around her companion's neck and besought him to turn at once to the Lord.

A child of twelve years having decided for Christ, went home and told her parents Jesus had forgiven all her sin, and asked her parents to kneel down and pray and Jesus would forgive them too. They have both since found Christ, and are happy in his pardoning love.

The town has been graciously stirred. Great changes are manifest among the forgemen and colliers; the churches have been revived; drunkards have come to Christ and signed the pledge. Mr. Weaver's faithful testimony and exaltation of the Word of God have had much effect upon the sceptics, whilst his graphic description of the drink and its attendant evils has told powerfully upon the public-houses.

LETTERS ON TEMPERANCE WORK.—Mrs. Bayly has published her letters, originally written to servants, in pamphlet form. They have been well received in their separate form, and will, doubtless, meet with acceptance as now issued. They may be obtained from Messrs. Nisbet & Co., Berners-street, W.

BERLIN.—On June 22 and 23 a Conference of friends of Missions among the Jews took place here. The public meeting held in the garden of the new City Mission-house was attended by about 1500 persons—a proof that there is no want of interest in this important work. Reports were given about the result of the Mission in different countries — Germany, Norway, and also in Palestine, to which a great many Jews are now returning.

SOCIAL REFORM IN AUSTRALIA.

IN a communication to the editor of The Sentinel, Rev. J. C. Kirby, of Port Adelaide, South Australia, writes:—

"Rev. Dr. Kennion, the new Church of England Bishop of Adelaide, has caused the formation of a White Cross League for the members of that communion in this colony of South Australia. The Young Men's Christian Association of Adelaide are arranging for Social Purity Lectures to be given during the coming winter. Mr. Marsh, Secretary of the Melbourne Y.M.C.A., has given lectures on Physical Reverence in Brisbane, the capital of Queensland, and in Auckland, New Zealand, to immense audiences. He stirred the public greatly.

"The Presbyterian Synod of Queensland had a long debate on the Contagious Diseases Act (in operation there), which they unanimously condemned. The City Council of Adelaide has favourably entertained a memorial from the Social Purity Society. The Salvation Army take up the Social Purity cause strongly.

"It would greatly strengthen our hands all over the Colonies if our English friends would write and send pamphlets, &c., to any friends that they have in these regions. I specially hope that those having friends in New Zealand will exert themselves in this way."

MR. D. L. MOODY'S SCHOOLS.

THESE schools have four buildings, which are well equipped, at a cost of £20,000. Mr. Moody is now raising a permanent endowment. Lately a Boston friend gave him £10,000, on condition that other friends would subscribe the remainder. Several scholarships have been founded recently. The following details are from the Springfield Daily Republican:—

"During the past year the trustees have turned away more girls than have been admitted, simply because there was no room for them, and additional buildings must soon be erected. To help matters, Mr. Moody has given the use of his house, except for a short time during the summer. Not a scholar has been kept from her duties a day during the past year by sickness. Much of this is probably due to the healthy site of the school. The 150 acres of the grounds lie along the Connecticut banks, and from the buildings one of the grandest views in the valley is obtained. Some people have criticised the location away from the railroad, but the seclusion this has afforded was a part of Mr. Moody's plan. He said: 'Girls can't go to school and into society at the same time, and they need to study their books diligently for a few years.' Therefore, he chose a quiet village. The experiment of educating a dozen Indian girls has proved a success. They are as bright and proficient as their white sisters, and next year they return to their different tribes as teachers.

"A case of curiosities arrived from the old world, and it will be the nucleus of a museum. There were bricks from ancient Babylon, figures representing the castes of India, bells used in heathen worship, &c. The school has a growing library, and most of the departments are well equipped for so young an institution."

THE ORPHAN HOMES OF SCOTLAND.—The Cottage Homes, at Bridge-of-Weir, have a magnificent and imposing appearance. They are built on a farm which Mr. Quarrier bought a few years since, consisting of forty acres; and his intention is to extend his cottages and use the remaining portion of the land for agricultural and other purposes. There are at present ten cottages, an Invalids' Home, extensive offices, and a large central building overlooking the whole. Each cottage is fitted to accommodate thirty boys or girls, the boys and girls occupying separate Homes. In accordance with the family principle, each Home has a man and a woman, who take the place of father and mother to the children. The offices contain a printing-press, a joiner's shop, stables, and many other kinds of workshops, and thus the boys learn whatever trade they wish, under the direction of the several men in the Homes.—The Quiver.

REFORMED CHURCH OF BOHEMIA.

AMONG the martyr churches of Europe, none was more cruelly treated or more unsparingly exterminated by the Church of Rome than were the Reformed Churches of Bohemia and Moravia. The Protestant population of Bohemia and Moravia now amounts to about 150,000. In 1868 a new law was passed, establishing a uniform system of Government schools throughout the whole country, to be supported by all, no account being taken of any existing schools. These Government schools are practically under strong Roman Catholic influence, and a new law is threatened requiring that all teachers shall be qualified to instruct the children in the religion of the majority—that is, in the religion of Rome.

For the last fourteen years they have been bravely struggling to maintain this burden, with some small assistance from abroad; but it has been altogether too much for them, and one by one, nearly half the number, or forty-one out of ninety-two evangelical schools, have been closed for want of funds. At the same time, a most promising training college for teachers at Caslau has been struggling on from year to year under heavy pecuniary difficulties, which threaten its very existence. The Protestant schoolmasters have evinced a magnanimous spirit of self-sacrifice, having been willing to continue their services at salaries quite inadequate for their support.

Last year the Reformed Churches of Bohemia and Moravia celebrated the centenary of the Ediot of Religious Toleration, and a marked spiritual revival has been the result. In one part, at least, crowded meetings are held for the study of the Bible and for prayer; some Roman Catholic laymen favour the movement, and invitations to the pastors to hold meetings are more than they can undertake. A legal decision has been given by the highest Court in the empire, allowing those who leave the Church of Rome and become Protestants to have the privilege of training their own children, instead of, as heretofore, being compelled to leave them in the hands of the priests between the ages of seven and fourteen.

In connection with the centenary celebration, Scotland has raised a considerable fund to promote evangelistic work in those countries. To maintain their evangelical schools, and thus save the children from being sent back to recruit the ranks of Popery, is of even greater importance. There are signs that the time for God to favour the old martyr Churches of Bohemia and Moravia is now come. And we might here impress upon Christian travellers the immense pleasure and privilege they may enjoy by visiting these people, and cheering them by a few kind words of Christian sympathy.

Here is a case deserving of sympathy. The Protestant congregation at Horjitz, in Bohemia, are making an effort, in connection with the centenary, to build a small church in token of their gratitude for religious liberty. The little Protestant community dates back scarcely more than ten years, and owes its origin to a stonemason. This humble man was engaged in cutting an inscription on a tombstone for a Protestant family belonging to a distant village, when the words awakened within him a desire to see the book whence they were taken. He obtained a New Testament, and became so interested in it that he invited his neighbours to come and read it with him. This went on for some months, until at length his convictions led him to join the nearest Protestant church, eight miles off. This step, and his continuing to hold private meetings in his house, resulted in his being denounced by the priest, turned out of his lodgings, and deprived of work. The attention of the Evangelical Continental Society was called to these facts by Pastor Janata, of Chleb, and a minister was sent to Horjitz. Services have been regularly held in the town ever since; some of the scattered Protestants in the neighbourhood have attended them, and both amongst them and amongst the converts from Romanism—the friends of the stonemason—an earnest religious life has, by God's blessing, sprung up.

The meetings are held in a room insufficient in size, and with most undesirable surroundings, but the best that could be obtained. It is felt that the time has come when the church should possess a building of its own, together with a dwelling for the pastor. As yet but a small part of the £500 required has been raised.

Pastor Schubert lately gave an encouraging account of evangelistic work in which he had been engaged. There had been a marked desire to hear the Word of God explained and the Gospel preached. There had been meetings of the brethren at Schlan for Bible-reading and prayer among themselves. They numbered from forty to sixty, and were stirring one another to greater spirituality and self-sacrifice. The Roman Catholic priests had been raised by this to persecution, and one man at Schlan had been fined 100 gulden for having family worship with invited guests. There had been a good work at Jungfreternitz by the preaching of Valis. It was quite an awakening. A priest had refused burial to a heretic. The Government allowed it. A crowd of nearly 1000 persons collected, and the Gospel was preached.

Invitations came to Valis to visit other places with the Gospel. There were daily meetings in two or three places, and some of the invitations were from Roman Catholics. It is still the day of small things: but when the Holy Spirit works, who shall hinder? Kings and statesmen have been planning the liberation of the Slavonic race from oppression; God in his providence seems to be preparing a branch of the Slavonic race in Bohemia, that they may in due time be the missionaries to carry a pure Gospel to the oppressed nationalities.—Evangelical Christendom.

THE POLES OF EAST PRUSSIA.

THE Countess Anna Gröchen, of Ponaein, and the Pastor Cendius, who is stationed on the borders of Polish Prussia, are very deeply concerned for the state of these people. The next generation will be probably familiar with German, as it is taught in the schools; but the adults at present only understand Polish. They are utterly neglected, morally and spiritually. Drunkenness and crime abound. But they are an intelligent people; and wherever reading has been taught, they manifest an intense love of books. Whenever they have received tracts, or portions of Scripture, they are faithfully treasured up, often for years; and everything of the kind is received with the most lively interest.

Through the kindness of Mrs. Robertson, of the Association for the Free Distribution of the Scriptures, a grant of Bibles and Testaments, to the amount of £10, has already been forwarded to East Prussia, and half this quantity is in Polish. This is some help, but much more is needed; especially is aid wanted for an Orphanage which Pastor Cendius has established. He found orphan children in a state of fearful neglect, and collected them into a dwelling, under a suitable matron. He hardly knows how to meet the necessary outlay, even on the very humble scale on which he has commenced it, and he cannot receive the numbers needing the benefit of the institution.

In this emergency, the friends of the work appeal to British Christians for help, which will be received by the Foreign Evangelisation Society, through the Hon. Secretary, Rev. Horace Noel, White Rose Grange, Woking, Surrey.—Yours faithfully,

E. Jane Whately.

KINGSTON-ON-THAMES.—Open-air services are being vigorously carried on in this neighbourhood by various friends. In the month of September it is hoped to have the meetings in a tent, provided by the Evangelistic Mission. Mr. Britton, Malvern House, Surbiton, will be glad to hear from any who can help in this effort.

"WE WOULD SEE JESUS."

SUGGESTED BY MR. BLACKWOOD'S "OPENING REMARKS" AT THE MILDMAY CONFERENCE, 1883.

"WE would see Jesus!" How the longing groweth,
As the years gather, and youth's roses fall!
We turn from pleasure, for the end who knoweth?
Even life's best begins at times to pall;
Only this great, unsatisfied desire
Grows stronger, deeper still, like a consuming fire.

"We would see Jesus!" Night and day returning,
Ever new duties, new distractions bring;
Yet through their discord this unuttered yearning
Sounds like vibrations of a hard-struck string.
One fleeting vision of what angel eyes
Gaze on with ceaseless joy in far-off Paradise.

Ah! if to-night, while I am standing gazing
O'er the lit sea, along the moonbeam's track,
Far in the distance, with strange brightness blazing
He would but come for one brief moment back,
Up to my side, across the waters dim!
That stream of radiance seems a pathway meet for Him!

See yon dark clouds, the low horizon bounding,
Couched, like wild creatures who their Lord await!
Are they not sentinels, his house surrounding,
Veiling the splendours of his palace-gate?—
A grim, deterrent throng, who sullen stand,
To baffle curious gaze on that fair heavenly land.

Surely at seasons open flies the portal,
And through its battlements the Lord doth come!
Cinctured with glory, clad in guise immortal,
Unto the confines of his whilom home?
Or, 'mid heaven's rapture doth his heart grow cold
Unto the race He held so wondrous dear of old?

Nay! for He "loved us," and that love is burning
Deep in his heart, 'mid circling cherubim,
Where, all unsatisfied, his ear is turning
To catch earth's murmurs through the angels' hymn;
Scarcely they need Him in those courts of gold,
While, far on desert hills, sheep wander from his fold.

Is He not still the Shepherd, whose soft calling
Rang first like music o'er the inland sea?
Till, through long centuries, His tones are falling
On ears that hearken—tho' our eyes can see
Nothing of Him, whom we have learnt to love
More than all things below, and most of all above.

How I desire Him! Oh, to "see" Thee, only
Just for one moment, standing by my side!
Never more, Master, would the path be lonely;
Surely one glance would leave me satisfied?
What were the glare of day, the gloom of night,
To eyes that once were sealed by such a glorious sight?

"We would see Jesus!" But his stars shine coldly
Down on the restless motion of the deep,
And He replies not; though I cry so boldly
While his whole world is lying wrapped in sleep!
Patience! wild heart, be steadfast and be still,
For thou shalt see Thy Lord!—but, when it is His will.

EAST LONDON INSTITUTE.—The following list of articles needed in connection with the work at Harley House, Bow, E., is given in The Regions Beyond. Some of our readers may be able to respond: Our stock of sailors' book-bags has just run out, and we shall be glad to receive a fresh supply, either filled or empty. Ladies wanting to give work to poor women might employ them in making these. A pattern sent if required. We are just fitting up a new library at Cliff College, Curbar, Derbyshire, and shall be much indebted to authors and others for any contributions of standard books. May we also remind friends that the gift of a good new book is a cup of cold water to a thirsty soul out in the Mission field. Friends engaged in manufacture and trade could very effectually help the Congo Mission by contributing in kind. All sorts of cloth, cutlery, toys, beads, cheap jewellery, tools, tinned provisions, japanned boxes, iron utensils, old-fashioned materials of brilliant primary colours, useless here in these days of subdued tertiary tints, are highly appreciated by the unsophisticated native of Congo. Military or naval costumes make effective 'dash' for a king, and musical snuff boxes of any size are invaluable as presents."

Notes and Comments.

THE Rev. W. Cadman, the rector of Marylebone, has been appointed to a canonry in Canterbury Cathedral. Few men are more worthy of preferment, either for their gifts, or their devotion to the work of God entrusted to their charge.

The Rev. Alfred Barry, D.D., Principal of King's College, London, has accepted the offices of Metropolitan of New South Wales, and Primate of Australia and Tasmania. It is a position of no small importance and responsibility, and it is well that a man of such eminence in the Church to which he belongs should have been found to fill it.

A deeply-interesting meeting was recently held at the Mission House in Bloomfield-street, in connection with the departure of the Rev. J. Gilmour and others for China. A farewell address was given to the brethren by the Rev. J. Guinness Rogers, whose description of true heroism, as contrasted with the worldly idea of it, is well worthy of reproduction. It presents a standard we could wish to see more widely aimed at in all our churches:—

"What was a hero? One who yielded simply to the inspiration of love, and obeyed, at all costs, the voice of duty. One who took no counsel with flesh and blood, but obeyed at once the Divine impulse, and was content to take his life in his hand for the sake of the Master to whom he was devoted, and for the sake of the men for whom He died. In this heroism there was something of the chivalry of the true knight and the courage of the true martyr, and in the highest sense of all they were heroes, with this super-added quality—that their heroism was purely spiritual, begotten at the Cross, fostered by communion with Him who gave Himself for them and for all the world. The strongest element was that personal devotion to the living CHRIST, in the absence of which their service would become a burden, and their very life a weariness to their own spirits."

The Women's Union of the Church of England Temperance Society has collected the evidence of thirteen doctors as to the effects of grocers' licences on the drinking habits of women. All of these witnesses, with one consent, condemn the system. The following is the published testimony of one of them:—

"So many cases of secret drinking have come under my care, and particularly amongst ladies, that it would be useless just mentioning one or two—many to the entire ruin of their families. In nearly every case it has been discovered that the liquor has been obtained from grocers, and I believe that no teetotal pledges or any other temperance movement will do the good that the total abolition of grocers' licences would do. I know a lady who once or twice a month breaks out in the most fearful state of intoxication. In her case it is always obtained from the grocer, as she would be ashamed to go to the public-house."

We commend to our readers the African Settlement Society, which has been established for the purpose of relieving our overcrowded Homes by obtaining situations for the children in Christian (English) families, in our South African Colonies, or receiving them at the Society's Settlement in Natal. They require about £1000 for their settlement, and they have selected a party of Christian workers, who go forth without remuneration to prepare the place for the first party of boys. We rejoice to think that alcoholic liquors will not be allowed into the Settlement—the first of its kind ever formed there.

Mr. G. E. Sargent, the author of "The Story of a Pocket Bible," "Frank Layton," and many other well-known publications of the Religious Tract Society, has just died, in his seventy-fifth year. He was deservedly beloved and esteemed by a large circle of friends, and by his writings has been eminently successful in the promotion of healthy and high-toned principles of human conduct.

There is just now lying at the office of the Palestine Exploration Society a curious Phœnician copy of the Book of Deuteronomy, which is said to date back so far as B.C. 900. It has been found by a Mr. Shapira, of Jerusalem, in the possession of some Arabs near Diban, in the land of Moab. The writing is on a number of small pieces of parchment, which evidently are of great antiquity. It is being subjected to minute scrutiny by Dr. Ginsburg and other eminent Oriental scholars, and the results of their examination will be awaited with deep interest by many. Some important variations from the received version are found in the document, as, for instance, in chapter vii. 20, the word "leprosy" is given instead of "hornet;" and in chap. xxviii. the "Blessings" are varied from our version, while the record of the death of Moses is omitted.

The worst fears as to the destruction of life caused by the earthquake in Ischia have been realised, not fewer than 5000 having perished in the ruins, or died from injuries received. The scenes depicted by those who witnessed the event, or who have visited the spot, surpass in horror and distress anything known in modern times. The King of Italy, accompanied by his ministers, has inspected the island, and personally administered relief to the sufferers, manifesting deepest interest and concern in all that is going on. Another shock has been felt by the inhabitants since the catastrophe, and the present eruption of Vesuvius adds to the consternation and alarm occasioned by the recent overthrow. Surely men must see in it all the proof of human weakness and dependence on Divine power.

It is stated by a survivor that the performance which was going on in the theatre in Casamicciola at the time of the shock commenced with a mimic representation of an earthquake. A curious incident was also told the King as he passed the Piccola Sentinella at Casamicciola. Just before the shock, a Welsh gentleman in the house began to play Chopin's "Funeral March," which one of the guests, Count Capella, found so affecting that he left the house, unable to listen longer. He thus saved his life.

Seldom has the insatiableness of human thirst for revenge, and the bitterness of human hate, received such striking illustration as in the case of the murder of James Carey. The execrableness of his conduct as an informer, manifesting no signs of contrition or sense of guilt or shame as a principal accomplice, places him outside the pale of sympathy, but none the less must the crime of his murder, and the principle of lawless hate which it develops, be unhesitatingly condemned. Unhappy Ireland can only reap bitter fruit from this fresh proof of lawlessness and insubordination on the part of some of her sons. Would that another spirit could be induced in them for their own and for their country's sake, as well as in the interests of society at large.

Every fresh outburst of fanaticism and crime connected with Ireland only serves to increase the force of the demand for bringing the influence of the Gospel more widely and vigorously to bear upon our sister isle. The Papal yoke must be broken, and its withering blight upon the community removed, before we can hope to see peace and order established in the land. Ignorance and low standards of moral obligation must prevail while priestcraft continues to rule and the Bible is prohibited and neglected through its influence. We plead for heartier support than ever to be given to all who are labouring to promote the evangelisation of Erin.

Teetotallers who are not already aware of the fact, will be glad to know that the American Barnum's Show is a travelling Total Abstinence Society in itself. Of the 716 persons who travel with it, every one is pledged to total abstinence from all "intoxicants" during the existence of his or her engagement. "My partners and myself are rigid teetotalers," said the veteran showman last week to a newspaper reporter, "and we pay for the brain as well as muscle of all employés. We are compelled to follow this rule where the most thorough discipline and system are so vitally important."

The annual session of the Methodist Free Church Assembly is this year held in Rochdale. Mr. Henry T. Mawson, who has for some years acted as Treasurer for the Connexion, was elected President, and this, seeing he is a layman, and an unusual preponderance of ministers were present to take part in the voting, is a fact which indicates the high esteem in which he is held by the assembly over which he is called to preside. A long debate on the eligibility of laymen to hold the office, which had only been filled hitherto by ministers, preceded the election. The Congregational Union, by its choice of Mr. Henry Richards, M.P., on one occasion to fill the office of chairman, established a similar precedent.

The Annual Conference of the Bible Christians has also just been held in the city of Exeter, the Rev. Peter Labdon, of Sandown, being appointed President. The desirableness of increasing the efficiency of the College and other educational institutions connected with the Society was discussed, and advances in this direction resolved on. It is pleasing to find indications of growing power and success in Christian work presenting themselves in these useful and zealous sections of the one true Church of Christ.

It is rather discouraging to those who strongly feel the need of social reforms to find how easily the wheels of the legislative machine get clogged, and sometimes stopped altogether. It would seem as if a large proportion of the members of both Houses of Parliament think it their function not to legislate, but to prevent or delay all legislation that will tend to the elevation of the people.

If ever there was a measure that might speedily have found a place in the Statute-book it was the Sunday Closing Bill for Cornwall. All the mayors in the county, and indeed almost the entire adult male population, had petitioned in its favour, yet it is rejected by the vote of a few "noble lords" who cannot, by any stretch of constitutional courtesy, claim the right to override the expressed wishes of those most nearly concerned.

A still larger number of persons throughout the nation will deplore the failure of the Government to carry the Criminal Law Amendment Bill through the Commons, notwithstanding its safe passage through the Upper House. The crying need for such a measure must be patent to all dwellers in our large towns, and it argues little for the moral earnestness, either of the Executive or of the House itself, that such a valuable Bill should be quietly massacred, without a single protesting voice raised on its behalf.

Another veteran minister of the Gospel has just been called home, after a lengthened period of service in the cause of Christ. The Rev. Eliezer Jones was well known for many years in the Eastern Counties as pastor of the Congregational Church at Jackett-street, Ipswich, and had previously been honourably connected with churches in Oxford and Plymouth. He was by birth a Welshman, and possessed qualities as a man and as a minister which marked him out for a large share of public esteem and Christian usefulness. He died at Acton, July 25, in his seventy-sixth year.

Mr. Samuel Morley, M.P., in presiding at the 2000th consecutive nightly meeting of the Blue Ribbon Temperance Mission, held at the Shoreditch Tabernacle the other night, gave utterance to some very useful and pertinent ideas. Among them were the following wise sayings, which will repay consideration :—

"Drink was doing more than all other causes put together to keep the people of England down. Habits of abstinence were eminently conducive to pure and virtuous homes, and he had infinitely more faith in the good effect of pure and virtuous homes than of large armies or great wealth. The spread of habits of temperance among the people was embarrassing to the present Government, of which he was in the main a great admirer; but the Chancellor of the Exchequer, like himself, rejoiced at the falling-off of the revenue from drink. With the money saved by the people they were able to give fuller employment to labour, while they would be better able to bear the burden of taxation in other ways. Legislation was necessary, but he should like the people of England as much as possible to be a law unto themselves, so that but little legislation should be necessary."

The value of personal effort for the salvation of souls is well illustrated in the case of the Rev. Charles Garrett, ex-President of the Wesleyan Conference. When quite a lad, he was met in the High-street, Shaftesbury, by a good woman, who said to him, "Charles, isn't it time you gave your heart to God?" It was an arrow shot by the hand of God, which pierced his soul to its very depths. He at once replied, "Yes," and from that hour decision was made for Christ. It is written, "A man hath joy by the answer of his mouth, and a word spoken in due season, how good is it."

The Echo of last week remarked that Dr. George Macdonald took the part of Macbeth in a dramatic costume recital on Saturday, and preached at Dr. Allon's church at Islington on the Sunday. The comment on the fact is to the effect that the connection between the Church and the Stage grows closer and closer. It is, alas! true that the world is as really in the Church as the Church is in the world, and, as a consequence, the influence of the Church over the world is being sadly weakened, to the grief of those who thirst for the glory of Christ, and the advancement of his cause. Meanwhile, the enemies of the Cross rejoice, and say, "So would we have it."

Amid so many indications of a prevalence of warlike sentiments and dispositions, we hail with gladness anything calculated to promote peace and concord among the nations. The Literary Convention which has been signed between Germany and France provides for what must surely lead in time to a better understanding between these two countries. The rights of French and German authors are so mutually upheld and secured by this treaty that either will be as safely and fully protected in the other's land as at home. May we not hope that the influence of this piece of international friendship will extend itself to spheres beyond the merely literary circle to which it relates?

The following extract from a letter sent to The Indian Witness, of Calcutta, needs no added comment. It speaks eloquently to every parent's heart, and urges a query of solemn weight, as well as practical importance :—

"'Mother, you have forgotten my soul.' So said a little girl, three years old, as her kind and careful mother was about to lay her in bed. She had just risen from repeating the Lord's Prayer. 'But, mother,' she said, 'you have forgotten my soul.' 'What do you mean, Anna?' 'Why,

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep;
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take."

We have not said that.' The child meant nothing more, yet her words were startling. And, oh, from how many rosy lips might they come with mournful significance! You, fond mother, so busy hour after hour, preparing and adorning garments for the pretty little form, have you forgotten the soul? Do you commend it earnestly to the care of its God and Saviour? Are you leading it to commit itself, in faith and love, to his keeping?"

The Rev. W. K. Landels, of Naples, speaking at a Convention on Missions recently held in Aberdeen, said that one of the greatest—perhaps the greatest—hindrance to Mission work in Italy is the want of united action among the different denominations. The King himself, who would seem to have decided leanings towards Protestantism, when waited upon by a deputation of evangelical ministers, strongly urged them to find some means of uniting together. The leaders of the Romish Church continually twit them with the divisions that exist. The evils resulting from party strife and mere sectarianism at home may not be so evident as in some of the foreign fields, but they are not less real, and account to a mournful extent for the lack of power which prevails in our home work. How is it Christians of every name seem so slow to perceive and remedy the evil?

Mr. Landels further said that the remedy is to make all the churches independent of foreign help. He also urged the importance of a freer use of the Press for Mission purposes, stating that what is chiefly wanted in Italy now is a paper, so conducted that its sale among the people would be insured, dealing with every branch of social life. He is now visiting England and Scotland for the purpose of raising funds to establish a printing press.

It is a cause for deepest gratitude and joy that in addition to other centres of evangelisation in Italy, there are in Rome itself seven places of worship where the Gospel is preached freely in Italian, while an eighth is in course of erection. There is much indeed at this time, in connection with the work of the Gospel in that land, to awaken hope and stimulate zeal, to sustain and increase its operations.

A leader in a recent number of The Rock discusses the question as to what constitutes the true dignity of the Church of Christ. This is a subject upon which many minds need enlightenment in these days. Our contemporary does well to point out that "it is not in surpliced choirs, or surpliced preachers, ornate services, or costly and imposing edifices," that the Church of Christ will find its power to impress the souls of men, but rather in a spiritual worship, and in its being the depositary of the glorious Gospel of the blessed God.

The protest against Ritualistic forms and ceremonies, such as are so common among us now-a-days, cannot be too strong or too frequently raised. Cardinal Manning has already said: "The clergy of the Establishment have taken out of the hands of the Catholics the labour of contending for their doctrines." A Roman Catholic paper, writing on the same subject, says: "Looking at the Ritualists as a party, whatever admixture of error and passion there may be in their action, they are doing our work, and doing it in a manner in which we could not do it ourselves." In the face of statements like these, only too true, it behoves all Evangelical Christians to join those who protest clearly and strongly against the practices of Romanising priests and laymen, who, while abetting Popery, yet claim to be members of a Protestant Church.

An "Inquirer," writing to The Record, calls attention to the Primate's description of the chancel of a church he lately consecrated as "that portion of God's house associated with the highest and holiest act of divine service." He justly protests against this undue elevation of the Lord's Supper above other spiritual acts of worship, asking when the believing people of God offer prayer and praise as the spiritual priesthood, what can be higher or holier on earth? Such expressions are certainly, to say the least of them, unguarded, and in times when sacramentalism is rampant in its influence, their use by leaders of religious thought and action is to be earnestly deprecated. It is right and needful to keep guard over the tendencies and proclivities of those in high places.

There are many in the various sections of the Christian Church who fail to see the true character of the Lord's Supper as being simply an act of commemoration, in which we have fellowship with our blessed Lord, and with one another in Him, as being all alike "partakers of that one bread." There is nothing in it of a sacerdotal character, and no act of worship should be associated with a greater degree of sacred joy and hallowed freedom than that in which we celebrate the love of Him who hath made all his true disciples to be equally kings and priests unto God; all alike redeemed and sanctified by his precious blood. In no service should the child of God feel more at home than when he is thus seated at the Father's board, and feasting on the provision made by the Father's love through Christ his Son.

THE LETTER MISSION.—The object of the Letter Mission is to encourage and develop among Christians the use of letter-writing as a means of awakening the careless. The simple aim of the Mission is the salvation of souls. The official envelope, with heading, "On the service of God," is supplied to members by the Secretary when their names are enrolled. Particulars may be had from Mr. S. Washington, Morecambe, Lancashire.

PERSECUTION IN SWITZERLAND.

THE following from the Geneva correspondent of The Daily News will speak for itself; the correspondent of The Times sends to that journal a communication of similar import:—

"The Federal Council have published the text of the judgment on Miss Booth's appeal against her expulsion; but they do not publish, as in common fairness they should, the text of the appeal. In that document, a copy of which I have procured, Miss Booth claims under the Treaty of September, 1855, between England and Switzerland, to be treated precisely as a Swiss citizen in similar circumstances would be treated. The Federal Council do not dispute this position, but they assert that, having disobeyed a police regulation possessing the force of law, she forfeited her right to remain in the country, and the Genevan authorities were justified in expelling her. The offence imputed to her is that she did not, when required by the police, render a full account of the moneys collected at the meetings which she conducted.

"The Council do not say under what law this demand was made. They merely observe that it was made in virtue of the general right of surveillance and control over public collections which incontestably appertains to every political authority.

"No such principle as this was ever before laid down either in Switzerland or any other free country. It means, if it means anything, that in matters as to which law is silent the police are supreme. If Miss Booth was rightly expelled, the chaplain of every English Church in the Confederation who cannot produce his accounts on demand ought to be sent to keep her company. She has, in effect, been punished for inability to comply with a regulation of whose existence neither she nor anybody else was aware, which was never enforced before, and has not been enforced since. In her appeal Miss Booth calls attention to the fact that there is no enactment, either Federal or Cantonal, whereby the police are empowered to require accounts of collections made at public meetings. Nevertheless she did not refuse to produce her accounts, as alleged by the Genevan police, but simply asked that she might be allowed a little time to prepare them. On this she was expelled from the Canton without ceremony. The unpopularity of a sect affords no excuse for arbitrary proceedings, but if the Swiss police are a law unto themselves, and can send foreigners out of the country for disobedience to an imaginary regulation, it is well the fact should be generally known."

CAIRO.—A young man, of the name of Mahomed Effendi Habeeb, who has lately become a Christian, and who kept a shop in Cairo, has been imprisoned for professing his faith in Christ by baptism, and thence despatched to Cyprus under the plea of preserving him from the dangers to which his conversion to Christ exposed him. Mahomed, of course, objected to this, but even Sir E. Malet considered it necessary. Such persecutions as these are generally the forerunner of victory for the Gospel.

CHRISTIAN GARDEN PARTIES.—In the last issue of The Regions Beyond, Mrs. Guinness writes:—"We entertain at Harley House, in the course of the summer, many a mothers' meeting besides our own, various "classes" of lads and lasses; the little children of our Sunday-schools, who are too young to be taken for the "day in the country;" the Mission hall adults, the police, the railway and tram men, the shipbuilders, &c. And we get precious opportunities of speaking to these men, and commending the precious Gospel to their acceptance on such occasions. Are there not many who might gather such companies as these in their gardens occasionally, as well as more congenial ones? Is it not what our Master meant us to do? Surely Luke xiv. 13 is a precept to be obeyed by Christ's disciples. And if any East-end friends who have not gardens or conveniences of their own, would like to 'make a feast' for such a company as their own workpeople, it may be, or others, we should be pleased to lend the grounds of Harley House and the use of the College Hall and tea apparatus on any unoccupied day in August or September. Some neighbouring churches have been glad to avail themselves of this opportunity. Parties must not number more than 350 or 400."

FOREIGN NOTES.

ASSAM.

A YOUNG Danish count, Charles de Moltke, while travelling through India, was so much struck with the power and beauty of missionary work in the Santhal country, that he has resolved to devote himself entirely to the same work. He has been placed at the head of the Assam community, at the foot of the Himalaya.

MR. C. FAITHFULL'S "REPOS."

Mr. R. Saillens says, "I am happy to express the sympathy I feel for the work of the Repos, Marseilles, directed by Mr. Charles Faithfull. This work, intimately connected with ours, has produced the most blessed results, which I could most easily prove. I know of no enterprise, at once philanthropic and Christian, more worthy of support. I may add that my venerated chief in the Mission, Rev. R. W. McAll, of Pari, cordially joins in this testimony.

SWITZERLAND.

The Evangéliste says, "We are happy to state that the greater part of the Protestant Evangelical organs do not hesitate to characterise as they deserve the resolution of the Swiss Cantonal Government relative to the Salvation Army. M. de Pressensé, in Révue Chrétienne, while speaking, as we think, too severely of the Army, says, 'these governments have ratified the verdicts of the sovereign people sitting in the public-houses.' He declares the allegation which places the Salvation Army in the category of prohibited corporations to be false, for he says, 'whatever their inconveniences, and they are grave enough according to me, they resemble in nothing a monastic order with the three vows which are indispensable and which completely annul all individuality.'"

One of the few religious journals which have preserved a calm and moderate attitude with regard to this Association, the Vaudois Évangile et Liberté says, "In spite of the respect which we feel for our magistrates in the undoubted difficulty of their position, we cannot deceive ourselves that constitutional principles have given way, liberty has received a wound. We regret it for the present, we regret it more for the future. Once on this incline, where are we to stop? The events of which we have been witnesses during the last few months, strongly recall to us the religious persecutions of the time of the Revival, and the mode of repression has not sensibly changed. The difference is in the victims; formerly they were dissenters and momiers, who to-day appear to us worthy of pity, but who then excited the popular fury. In the year of grace 1883, it is the Salvationists who are antipathetic to the majority." The Evangéliste goes on to say, "We greatly regret some of the exaggerated public manifestations; we wish them more wisdom in the choice of means employed, but we persist in thinking the good they do much exceeds the evil."

SPA, BELGIUM.—Miss E. J. Whately appeals to the friends of the work at Spa for help in erecting a sanatorium and residence for the pastor and his family, as a memorial of Miss Esther Beamish, who has recently gone to be with the Lord. Particulars may be had of Miss E. J. Whately, 21, Belmont-park, Lee, S.E.

REMEDY FOR CHOLERA AND DYSENTERY.—We have received the following recipe from a correspondent, who states that it was found to be very beneficial in cases of cholera in Ireland some years ago: Reduce three or four corks to powder by burning them on a very hot coal; when sufficiently burned, blend the powder as fine as possible and put a table-spoonful—heaped—into a noggin of new milk with a lump of loaf sugar, and add a little bit of cinnamon to make it more palatable; boil the powder in the milk, and when cold add ten drops of laudanum. Give half the quantity of milk to the patient, and in ten minutes or quarter of an hour after the remainder, if necessary. The second dose generally cures, but in a few instances it had to be repeated some hours after.

DOMINION OF CANADA.

BRITISH AMERICAN BOOK AND TRACT SOCIETY.

THE British American Book and Tract Society, organised in 1867, is catholic in its constitutions and operations. It is a medium through which Bibles, religious periodicals, books and tracts, to the value of £67,000, have been circulated throughout the British Colonies, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, Labrador, Southern Quebec, and Newfoundland. Grants have also been made to Manitoba. The Society's depository is in Halifax, N. S. The choicest English and American publications are supplied to Sunday-schools and families at low rates, while grants of Scriptures, books, and tracts are made to clergymen, poor schools and families, and Y. M. C. Associations. Free grants aggregate £3,200. In Halifax harbour, during 1882, the missionary to the seamen distributed about 36,000 tracts in eleven languages among 41,696 men in 3751 vessels.

The field covered by the Society has an area of 100,000 square miles, with a population of about one million, in many cases widely scattered, and destitute of good books and other means of grace. There are very few book stores, except in centres of population, and colportage is absolutely necessary if all the people are to be supplied with even God's Word. One hundred and two colporteurs have been employed, and performed work equal to that of one man for 142 years. In making 360,000 family visits, they have travelled 220,000 miles, and held religious conversations or offered prayer with 144,000 families; 1600 Protestant homes have been found without Bibles, and supplied; and 2600 with no other religious books, while 2500 families habitually neglecting the Gospel were urged to a better life. In sections not favoured with a preached Gospel, the colporteurs, as intelligent Christian lay evangelists, have told the simple story of the Cross in 8000 meetings.

Through colportage the light of saving truth has entered the hearts and homes of many Roman Catholics, who constitute one-third of our population. About 17,000 visits have been made to these people, and some clear statement of the way of salvation through the illustrated tract or periodical or the living agent left in every home. During the month of February last as a colporteur visited 118 Roman Catholic homes, he sold twenty-nine Protestant Bibles, and was welcomed by almost every family. The vast importance of such work will appear when it is stated that colportage is the only Protestant agency that reaches this class.

Colportage is sustained by donations. Each man with his horse and outfit, without which he would be of little service in our vast fields, costs from £80 to £100, a portion of which is returned in sale of books. Thirty men are now at work, but fifty are needed. The annual support for that staff can be secured in the provinces immediately interested, but an appeal is made to Christians in Britain this year for an increase of our publication fund to supply books for the expanding work.

The recent origin of the British-American Book and Tract Society, this small capital (£1725), and lack of legacies, the value of colportage to reach all classes, the pressing demands for extended operations, the lamentable ignorance of Christianity among many thousands, and the large number of English and Scotch in those colonies, all plead for liberal help from the Motherland.

Most cordial thanks are returned to friends in this country who have lately given help to the society. Others wishing to assist may send donations to the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN, to 56, Paternoster-row, London, E.C., or to the National Bible Society, Edinburgh or Glasgow. A. N. Archibald, Secretary.

THE GOSPEL IN BRITTANY.

IN this district is a people whose history is very interesting, but whose ignorance is appalling; who are little better than mere animals, the women being veritable beasts of burden. Catholicism acts with its ponderous weight upon the people, and suppresses, by means of an espionage of 1800 priests, and between 4000 and 5000 sisters of mercy, the entrance of the light of the Gospel, nay, of civilisation. It would harrow the feelings of your readers if I were to tell one tithe of what I have seen and heard in my brief visit. But I plead for help for the Master's sake, for even the ignorant Breton is to be drawn to Him, provided He be lifted up.

In the midst of these two millions of Brezonic-speaking people, with whom their French fellow countrymen seem to have little or no sympathy, there are but three Protestant missionaries who can speak to them in their own tongue. The priests are from the lowest of the people, and if we may judge by the language they use when they speak of or to the Protestants, they are in no wise improved by their introduction to the sacerdotal office. The Protestant workers are an heroic trio, and in the face of the opposition they meet with they have need of much courage, faith, and prayer, for all sorts of methods of boycotting are practised.

Besides the regular meetings which each holds many times in the week, I was privileged to see the modus operandi of one of them last week. It was at a village in which there was being held.

ONE OF THE LARGEST FAIRS IN BRITTANY.

The one long street of the village was packed with cattle and human beings. The Mission station was surrounded by sheep, cows, and pigs. Amid the inharmonious chorus arising from the vocal protests of these animals, the voice of the missionary was heard proclaiming the Gospel of our blessed Lord. Five times did he preach for about three-quarters of an hour to as many attentive audiences, which packed the little building and filled the open windows. At the close of each address a number of helpers, several of them being previous converts, distributed the Gospel of Matthew, the first contribution of a new Breton version of the Bible, the work of one of the missionaries, issued by the English Trinitarian Bible Society. These were greedily grasped, and one could see afterwards a bon homme driving a litter of pigs by means of a whip in one hand, and holding his Gospel in the other. The audiences were composed of men who had sold their stock, and with their whips tied round their necks, and women with sacks in which they had brought their little pigs, now changed hands. These returned home with some Word of Life, which but for such efforts they would have never had. In this village there is no church, no place of worship except the Mission, and the changed character of the inhabitants is great cause for much joy.

We saw one of the Gospels referred to torn up, others will doubtless be taken away by the priests, but of the thousand distributed we hopefully rejoice. As to the torn one, we remember that one of the principal workers—the Dorcas of the Mission—tore up the Gospel first given her while a Roman Catholic.

At present the principal and subsidiary workers are working at high pressure, and the whole land is now free, but instruments are wanted. There are many Breton converts now equal to preaching the Gospel, and £60 a year would maintain worker, building, and all comprised. A new and most advantageous station is offered in the chief place in the district—in fact, no less than ten such stations are available.

One other example might be cited. The Mission has a station at Brest, and the room is crowded for an hour before the speaker arrives. A new room is needed, and the land can be now secured for seven francs the square metre, but soon, owing to the growth of the town, it will be doubled. This, too, is a Mission to the Bretonic-speaking people, who are not reached by the French pastors. The present room is so crowded that not unfrequently unpleasant physical consequences result. I will be happy to give any further information. W. L. Lang.

SAILORS' HOME, CARDIFF.

A FEW facts about our work at the "Welcome Home" may be interesting to your readers. The first sailor we met with soon after we arrived here was one who was a patient for some months in our hospital in Gracia, Barcelona. He seemed pleased to see us, and we gave him a Bible and some tracts. A "wandering boy" was brought into our coffee-room the worse for drink one Saturday night, and handed my father two sovereigns to keep for him. He remained in the house that night, and we found the next day that he had a praying mother. He was willing to remain an inmate of the Home until he could find a ship. Ere he left the Home he testified in a meeting to having found Christ.

A young prodigal from London came in for refreshment. My father suspected he had run away from home, and finally persuaded him to return. He did so, and we afterwards heard he was re-instated in his home. May the truth put before him find a place in his heart! We have had very interesting times with French and Spanish seamen. Several crews have come and gone lately; they have all seemed grateful for the little kindness shown them, and have listened attentively to the Gospel.

One man who seemed anxious about his soul, we have reason to believe found peace before leaving. One evening I suggested singing some hymns, but he surprised me by saying: "No, never mind the hymns; they are good: but read from the book"—pointing to a Bible. "I wish, as it is the last time, to try and see the thing clearly."

Many Frenchmen come in the evenings, and join in the "Cantiques Populaires," and also listen to the Gospel.

May I remind your kind readers that contributions of flowers, good literature, English, French, Spanish, Italian, or German, wall texts, pretty text-cards, and some French and Spanish Testaments for distribution, would be most acceptable. E. Lawrence.

BARCELONA HOSPITAL.—Miss Anna Von Mielecka, St. Lawrence Dene, Ventnor, I.W., would be very glad if kind friends would again send her old postage stamps, especially colonial stamps, for the benefit of the work in Spain. All stamps (which must not be torn), except English penny and halfpenny and the common German stamps, can be sold, also wrappers, postcards, registered and embosssed envelopes, but they must all be whole. Miss Mielecka would also be thankful for Mrs. Grimké's German and Spanish cards for distribution. She strongly advises all Christian travellers on the Continent to carry with them a supply of these cards.

CHINA FOR CHRIST.—The following notes are from the current issue of China's Millions: Mrs. Cardwell and daughter, and Mr. F. A. Steven, arrived at Shanghai on April 18, when they were met by Mr. Cardwell and Mr. and Mrs. Dalziel. After a short stay in Shanghai, Mr. Steven proceeded to Yang-chau to commence the study of the language. Mr. G. Nicoll and Mr. Marcus Wood, who travelled together in the same steamer, have safely arrived in Shanghai—the tidings at present are only telegraphic. Mr. R. J. Landale arrived in London with his motherless child on July 10, after a favourable voyage—both very well. The early return to the field of Mr. and Mrs Williamson, Mr. and Mrs. Pearse, and Miss Horne, is anticipated. They will probably be accompanied by eight or ten new missionaries. We ask for special prayers for Divine guidance in the difficult and important work of selecting from among the candidates those who are soon to stand for Christ in the high places of the field.

THE BEST FOR GOD.

A SHORT time since I was staying at the house of a friend, and was an interested observer of the character of his little girl, a rosy mite of four. She was the reflex of all that passed around her, and our after-dinner chats furnished her with material for the quaintest ideas and most startling queries. One day she seemed to be progressing very slowly with her dinner, setting aside portions on her plate which at other times she had regarded with great favour. We were lamenting the want of system in giving to the Lord, and the ingratitude of many who spend recklessly for themselves and then give the shabby remainder to the Master, when the child suddenly broke in upon our conversation with:

"But see, papa, Winnie 's saved the BEST for Dod!"

She had kept apart the daintiest morsels of her meal, and was tightly holding her plate preparatory to a final move, when we asked to whom she was about to give her little hoard.

"To poor Ann" (a black nurse who had fallen sick), "for Dod loves Ann—she says so—and I loves 'em bofe."

What an example! She was but a tiny child, but she had caught some of the light from that Spirit, the outcome of whose very existence is that, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

"The best for God." I turn the words over and over in my mind, and wonder how much of the best we have given to God. Have we given Him the best thoughts of our awaking, and sought, morning by morning, his gifts of peace and strength? Have we read the Book of comfort, and then offered Him the best praise of heart and lip for so unspeakable a gift? Have we yielded unto Him, day by day, the best fruits of thought and action, and ever been impelled by the best motives for his sake? Have we, in business or in pleasure, sought Him as the Friend, laying our best and highest hopes and ambitions at his footstool, and giving Him the best place in our hearts and lives? Has it occurred to us that the fading carpet, or the second-season garment, or the old-fashioned dinner set should be made to serve another six months if we can thereby give God the best in some case of urgent need or call for immediate help? Can we say that in the Church, the Mission, the business, the home, we have always recognised his claim to be first, and have laid upon his altar the offering of first-fruits, the best of our substance? Have we given Him our best in striving to win, by his grace, one soul to Himself? Have we, when trial, or pain, or sorrow, or bereavement, has visited us, been able to say, "Lord, take—my best is Thine"?

But, above all, let us look back and ask ourselves how much of the best we have given Him in private—in prayer for his people at home and abroad, for the extension of his kingdom, for the power of his grace, in watching and prayer, that when He comes we may be found ready to enter into the joy of our Lord. If on any of these points we have failed to give the best to God, let us, by his help, strive to surrender to Him the very best in the future which lies before us. Surely there are those who, in the tests which God is applying variously to his people, can see that only the best of whatsoever shape shall come out of the fining-pot to stand before Him. Let the severe teaching of the present sink deeply into our souls, and let us learn the lesson of self-sacrificing love which Christ so beautifully illustrated during his persecuted life among men.

Henceforth, Lord, we would say, with little Winnie, "Not the rest, but the best, for God."

M. Butler Gerds.

ALDERNEY.—Rev. C. P. Way, Presbyterian Minister, Alderney, Channel Islands, writes that he purposes taking and furnishing a commodious house in this beautiful and healthful spot, for a House of Rest and Orphanage. He asks for the help of our readers, and will be glad to give full particulars to any friends who may apply to him.

MORE NOTES FROM KESWICK.

ONE of the addresses which touched many was from a new and welcome voice, that of Rev. C. Campbell, of Weston-super-Mare. It was on "The Rest of Faith," from Hebrews iv. 3. He bade us mark the present tenses of God, and not to meddle with the grammar of Scripture. Jesus is our home; no tent pitched for a day. And we find rest by taking his yoke. The yoke was "easy" to Jesus—is it to you? The answer is the measure of your surrender. If there is galling under it, it proves that the surrender is not full; but in keeping step with Jesus, and going at his pace, we do find rest.

The Rev. E. H. Hopkins followed on "The Fight of Faith," bringing out the balance of truth in a way which has distinguished this Convention markedly. It is indeed rest, but also fight, and the success of the conflict depends on the solidity of the rest. The victory is progressive, but the conditions are instantaneous.

On Thursday the Rev. H. Brooke again took the Bible-reading, and afterwards the Rev. J. B. Figgis spoke on delighting ourselves in the Lord. How can we do that? By seeing Him; and then we must stay with Him, for we cannot get warm in an hour. "Take time to be holy," and give God the early hours, the cool, calm hours before the fret gets in, and then the delight will abide, and the fret will have no room. The Rev. E. H. Hopkins followed on the Cleansing by the Blood. What is meant by "the blood?" The blood is the life while it is in the body, but when the blood is shed it is the life sacrificed; therefore the blood is also the death. This takes us back to the Cross. The blood separates us from the old life: and there is power in it to separate us from the old habits. We began with the Rest of Faith; then we saw the cleansing power—the momentary cleansing by the blood of Christ; and now if we have grasped these two, there follows the Filling of the Holy Ghost. It is our responsibility and our privilege to be always full, and also to expect special filling which shall cause overflowings and bring blessing to others. Peace, purity, power,—God's order.

The evening meeting commenced with a few words from Mr. Bowker, saying how many were at the point where they are close up to the blessing, and need only to take the final plunge into the arms of Jesus. We believe that this was a very fruitful meeting to such—that through the words given many did take the "final plunge." Rev. C. A. Fox pleaded from the "mutual challenge" given in Mark ix. 22, 23. The poor, despairing, broken-hearted soul brought to an utter end of itself, and having tried all human help in vain, at last casts itself down on the Lord. "If Thou canst do anything!" The Lord replies by a return challenge: "If thou canst believe!" And then follows the deliverance. He spoke of the means—prayer and fasting; prayer, the hand of faith laid upon the throne of God, and linking omnipotence with powerlessness; and fasting, the other hand of faith, laid upon self, and keeping it under in a holy abstinence. "Abstain from fleshly lusts," first of all. Flight is the best fight there. Then "abstain from all appearance of evil," from things that are neutral-tinted; and abstain further from meat offered to idols; from any compromise with sin; from anything which has to do with sin.

The over-ruling of God's Spirit which was claimed and leaned upon, came out very strongly in the clear practical way in which the speakers were led to bring our weaknesses forward; the common stains and the daily infirmities, as we too kindly call them. If there is to be full cleansing, these "little" things must be searched out, and bravely brought to his light. This was done, and in the closing meeting specially; and all through the ladies' meetings, conducted with great blessing by Mrs. M. Baxter, this was one very distinct characteristic; many have deep cause of thankfulness that the unrecognised home hindrance or unsubmissiveness has been brought to his light and laid down at his feet, to be under his power henceforth and his momentary cleansing.

THE LAST DAY.

There is always something peculiarly solemn in the last day, and this was more solemn than ever. The early morning meeting had much thanksgiving in it, and then Mr. Figgis spoke on pleasing God. He said we were always wanting God to please us. How many of us put our pleasing Him first? There was no need to go into the philosophy of it, for the thing has been done, and God's own record of Enoch, the seventh from Adam, is, that he "pleased God."

Rev. Dr. Elder Cumming later took up the Levitical sacrifices, showing how that in consecration light the difficulty as to their order was fully met. There were four in the first few chapters of Leviticus; which of these represents the sinner's first acceptance with God—which represents atonement? Without hesitation he answered now, neither one of the four. The sacrifice by which the sinner's access to God was secured was a previous one: it was the Passover. Now, these four sacrifices are those which, as a redeemed man, he has to offer to God. The pardon is pre-supposed, and all these are the offerings of a forgiven man. This is clearly pointed out by Lev. i. 1: "The Lord spake out of the tabernacle," on redeemed ground. The first is the whole burnt offering. The God-ward side of this is the complete and unreserved sacrifice of the life of Jesus to his Father (Eph. v. 2). The man-ward side of it is our bounden duty to offer ourselves a living sacrifice, as bidden in Rom. xii. 1. The second sacrifice is the meat-offering. What is the God-ward aspect of this one? It represents the entire possessions on earth of the Lord Jesus which He gave up to his Father. It seems hardly possible to speak of "earthly possessions" of his, for He did renounce all so completely. The man-ward aspect is that we are called on to give up all our possessions, down to our daily food, holding all for Him, and only using for Him.

The third is the peace-offering. God-ward, "He is our peace." Man-ward, is it not true that after full consecration of ourselves, after full renunciation of all we have, that there does follow a deep and unspeakable peace? But we never shall know it until the two first sacrifices have been offered. This sacrifice had to be eaten by the offerer—may not this refer to the indwelling of Christ, which is the seal of our peace and the power of our life?

After all this complete consecration and perfect peace, is there any further need of dealing with God about sin? Yes, and so there follows the fourth offering, the sin-offering. It is for sins of ignorance, and for them alone. The guilt of sin has been wiped out (the Passover); then follows consecration of life (burnt-offering); after that, giving up of all possessions (meat-offering); and then comes perfect peace; but a sin-offering must follow still, for sin is not only conscious transgression, but want of conformity to God. The Lord Jesus meets this need of the redeemed soul also; and in the cry, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," He appears as the sin-offering for sins of ignorance. Yes, remember that! The blood had to be shed that sins of ignorance might be forgiven.

Then comes the trespass-offering, which was also in connection with sin, definite external acts, and not only sins of thought. As a matter of fact, what is the last sin a Christian is delivered from? Is it not sins against others—sharp words, hard judgments, unkind thoughts? And here we have God making provision for this also, all through the atoning blood. Jesus was also a trespass-offering, as the Hebrew word in Isa. liii. 10 distinctly states.

Rev. H. Webb-Peploe said he was here only by the deeply solemn call of God to our beloved friend Canon Battersby, but many will have cause to bless Him for ever for the message given by his servant, so strangely compelled to come, against all arrangement, and plan or possibility, as it seemed. With the very strongest, clearest light of God, he was given the authority and charge to search into the very closest recesses of evil and inconsistency. It is hardly possible to give the words, but none present will ever forget this meeting, when the scathing light of God fell so full on the failures and fallings of even consecrated ones. Nothing escaped, and with words that laid bare, he spoke of their deficiencies at home, Christian masters before their servants, and Christian servants to their masters. The motto given was 1 Tim. ii. 12: "Giving me this ministry." He spoke of what "ministry" involved; it implied being a slave, being the dusty man (διακονος), dusty by the errands run for others; and the amount of your dust, my brother, is the measure of your honour. This is what the whole Church is languishing for; not for heroes, not for leaders, but for men who are willing to be slaves—to be in the dust for the service of others. Are you willing? Shall this be the result of this Convention? "Yes, Lord," many and many a heart answered back.

CANON BATTERSBY'S FUNERAL.

In the afternoon, Mr. Bowker gathered the Convention visitors in the tent. Mr. Figgis prayed that our share in the coming funeral might be a consecration service to each, and from there a solemn, subdued procession went to the churchyard, entering one gate, while the inhabitants entered the other. An intense quiet reigned over all. We were without, while the congregation filled the church, and there we waited, in the unclouded sunshine falling upon the opened grave. From all parts of the United Kingdom we had come at his invitation, little knowing that it was to be round his grave. But though it was so, the gloom of death had all been banished, and those who loved him most were the ones who saw the glory clearest. Now we could say, "death hath no more dominion over him—alive for evermore," as truly as of Jesus. Over the grave, on the church wall, were the words, "With Christ, which is far better." "Peace, perfect peace," sounded faintly to us from those within the church, and when the procession came out, all together joined in the hymn, "Change is our portion here." At the close we sang, "The sands of time are sinking." What were we doing there? Obeying the Lord's own call, "Rejoice with Me, for I have found my sheep!" Yes, we were entering into the joy of our Lord at his welcome to his blessed servant; and we could sing of "Glory, glory, dwelling in Immanuel's land."

Then Rev. H. Webb-Peploe spoke from Rev. xiv. 13: "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord." He spoke not only of the blessed dead, but made an earnest plea to those who had refused to listen to the voice of him who was gone. The Lord will not let these solemn words fall to the ground.

In the closing meeting in the tent, Rev. H. Webb-Peploe again spoke, in further words of intense searching, bowing down all hearts as they saw themselves, but raising all to see Jesus as sufficient for all home life needs, as well as service needs. At the after-meeting there were few who did not respond to a thanksgiving rising in testimony to blessing received, or blessing deepened, that is to say, Jesus received.

On the Saturday, the usual parting words from each speaker were given, and at a testimony meeting later on, there were many to speak good of Him. This gathering was marked, as all were, with the prominence given to the Lord Jesus, and the hiding of self behind Him.

On Sunday, funeral sermons were preached by Rev. Canon Richmond, and Rev. C. A. Fox, and in the tent by Rev. J. Figgis and Rev. E. H. Hopkins. At the Communion, in the evening, 575 met together, by far the largest number ever yet known. More attended this Convention than ever before. The expanded tent often overflowed, and when, one day, 500 came from Barrow, a meeting was held in the church by Rev. W. Haslam, whose work had been a very harvest work at Barrow some time ago. So we separated in deep thanksgiving; many have learned, by visible witness, how the Lord can make of a cloud his chariot, for He has used this deep cloud "to ride into the recesses of many souls." He has visibly answered prayer by upholding the most deeply bereaved ones in a marvellous way. He showed his power in giving to his servant, who presided, very "great grace" in his very trying post of following Canon Battersby, to guide, and yet to hide himself. Now may the opened gates of heaven, round which we met, remain open to the bereaved ones we leave, and to us who go home.

THE BLUE RIBBON MOVEMENT.

THE "TWO THOUSANDTH consecutive nightly meeting" has an unusual sound, and is certainly an unusual event. But on Wednesday evening, August 1, the Blue Ribbon Army—or, as it is now designated, the Blue Ribbon Mission—founded by Mr. William Noble, celebrated its two thousandth meeting. This was held in the Shoreditch Tabernacle, under the chairmanship of Mr. Samuel Morley, that good friend of every good work.

Rev. G. M. Murphy gave an interesting address. He was followed by Mr. Noble, who compared the man who, in reliance upon his own strength, ventured upon the use of intoxicants, to the late Captain Webb, who, regardless of warnings and in reliance upon his own powers, ventured into the seething rapids below the Niagara Falls ("I believe I can do it"), and fell a victim to his own self-confidence and his own rashness. The movement which, in this country, originated in Hoxton Hall, has now spread over the whole length and breadth of the land. Mr. Noble has good cause for giving God thanks in this matter.

A FAITHFUL WITNESS FOR CHRIST.

PERHAPS your readers may be interested in the following incident. My father, Pastor Jacob, writes to me from Oroomiah:—

"I have a young Mohammedan friend whose name is Koola Bak. For nearly a year and a half he has been coming to my house to hear the word of God. On account of his being so Christ-like, some wicked people went and complained to their Great Moshtahed, or priest. He was taken to the Moshtahed's house and asked what was his faith. He replied, "In Jesus Christ." Upon hearing this the Moshtahed rose up in great rage and beat him with his stick on the head. He again asked him the same question three times. The young man gave the same reply each time.

"He was then bound upon a beam and beaten by three servants with switches until the blood gushed out of his back and feet. Shortly afterwards the young man came to my house with his bleeding body and told me all about it. I was so much touched that I wept for him, especially when he said to me: 'Pastor, I will not give up Christ, even if I am to be killed. I believe that He is my Saviour, and is able to deliver me from these wicked people, who try to torment me because of my belief in Jesus.' He asked God to bless that Moshtahed who treated him so badly.

"A few days after this incident took place, the Moshtahed sent a gift to the young man and asked his pardon. The next day the Moshtahed with his brother visited the young man's house, and they still try to win his heart, but he boldly said, 'No, it is impossible for me to forsake Jesus, in whom I have believed as my Redeemer.' So they left him and went their way."

May I ask the earnest prayers of your readers on behalf of the blessed work which is being done in that barren and dark land.

MERRION HALL, DUBLIN.—Mr. Denham Smith writes: "You will be glad to know I am having a most happy time in my old field of labour here. The Merrion Hall has been renovated at the cost of £1000, and is about to have some hundreds of pounds more laid out on it, in order to make it complete. It is, for the service of the Gospel, one of the finest halls in the Kingdom—a child of 1857—60."

MORSELS FROM THE MAGAZINES.

THE WORLD OF FINANCE.

THERE lies, not far from Capel-court, a mysterious world, the world of Finance. It is a world inhabited by a race resembling men, who spend their lives in whispering, chattering in corners, winking at each other, making signs, buying nothing at all without money, and making great profit thereat; selling for nothing what they have not got, and going bankrupt over the transaction; building up great edifices for other people out of rotten eggs; knocking these down again, and with the profits buying marble palaces; stealing the slender fortunes of widows, orphans, clergymen, and all who are poor and defenceless; promising what they will never perform, stating what they know to be false, and prophesying things which will never happen.

WALTER BESANT, in Good Words.

THE WORK OF MARTIN LUTHER.

Philosophic historians tell us that Luther succeeded because he came in the fulness of time, because the age was ripe for him, because forces were at work which would have brought about some changes if he had never been born. Some changes there might have been, but not the same. The forces computable by philosophy can destroy, but they cannot create. The false spiritual despotism which dominated Europe would have fallen from its own hollowness. But a lie may perish, and no living belief may rise again out of the ruins. A living belief can rise only out of a believing human soul; and that any faith, any piety, is alive now in Europe, even in the Roman Church itself, whose insolent hypocrisy he humbled into shame, is due in large measure to the poor miner's son who was born in a Saxon village four hundred years ago.

THE FOUR CHIEF APOSTLES.

It is not by the force and freshness of their voices, nor by the adroitness of its execution, that the Apostolic choir attracts listeners even at the present day; it is by the subject of its song—Redemption, the Redeemer. It is the Saviour Himself, who, living in these men and revealing through them, in four distinct forms, the fulness of his work and his glory, has given to their voices that heavenly tone of which from age to age the world has never wearied. Who could have foretold to the Hillels, the Shammais, the Gamaliels, and all the illustrious doctors of the Sanhedrim, that their voices would pass away without leaving an echo behind, while those of the ignorant Galileans, brought up before their tribunal, should fill the world till the end of time? Yet Jesus had foretold it. It was necessary, says Paul, that this treasure should be given to the world in earthen vessels, "that the excellency of the power may be of God and not of us."

PROFESSOR GODET, in Contemporary Review.

THE FORGIVENESS OF INJURIES.

If a man commits an offence against us, misrepresents us, insults us, injures us in any way, what are we to do? Brood over it? That is what some Christian people nearly always do. It is wonderful what care they take to get all the pain and suffering out of an offence they can. They might have brushed it away at once and have done with it; but no, the hasty, bitter word, the selfish act, they lay upon their memory, and they will not forget it whatever else they forget. . . . If a man injures you, do not brood over it. Nor must you talk about it to everybody you meet. What is your motive for speaking about the injury? Do you want to get your friends to take sides with you against the offender? You ought to want to make the offender himself take sides with you against the offence. The more people know of the wrong, and the stronger the feeling you create against the wrong-doer, the harder you make it for him to acknowledge his fault.

REFORM OF DISCHARGED CRIMINALS.

Chance for moral retrievement in England there is none. The stigma of penal servitude is not more lasting than is the professional prejudice of the detective police against "a convict at large," or anyone who is known to these emissaries of the law to have been convicted of theft. Mr. Howard Vincent, in the Contemporary Review for March last, expresses his belief in the existence of a London police that neither annoy discharged convicts nor prevent them from gaining an honest livelihood. I am far from doubting the sincerity of such belief; but if the chief of the Criminal Investigation Department could personally supervise the action of each detective policeman, or inoculate his subordinates generally with his own humane opinions, he would only then be in a position to give such an assurance to the public. . . . I do not say that the detective police, as a body, systematically prevent discharged prisoners from gaining an honest livelihood: but it is absurd to suppose that they are more considerate of the interests of the man whom they are trained to look upon as a confirmed criminal, than of those of the employer of labour, who, they naturally enough believe, runs the risk of being victimised unless warned of the record of the ex-gaol bird who may have succeeded in entering his employment.

WORK AMONG YOUNG WOMEN.

"Necessity knows no law," and in the struggle for existence and amid the keen competition of the times, positions are eagerly accepted in which the occupants are daily, and indeed hourly, exposed to the severest temptations. To say nothing of what the requirements of her situation demand and the expenses thereby entailed, it often happens that the utter inadequacy of the wages given drives the perplexed young woman upon the horns of a terrible dilemma, from which, with no friendly aid or counsel at hand, there appears to her to be but one means of escape. Or if she have sufficient principle or self-respect to avoid the course to which she is thus tempted, still she is daily and hourly subjected to evil influences which must sooner or later, unless a remedy be provided, produce their natural and demoralising effect. Foolish conversations must be listened to; evil examples constantly witnessed; and, whenever an attempt to follow wiser counsels is made, the shafts of sarcasm and ridicule must be expected and borne. All this shows the need of providing some strong counteracting influence; or a refuge to which she can go at all times in her hours of leisure, and where she will meet with that advice and encouragement, that womanly sympathy and moral support, of which, in such a position, she stands so much in need. This the Young Woman's Christian Association seeks to provide.—The Quiver.

ST. GILES' CHRISTIAN MISSION.

THE Report of the St. Giles' Christian Mission, under the excellent superintendence of Mr. George Hatton, is full of interesting details of a work which is daily extending. The "preventive," as well as the successful rescuing of "discharged prisoners," has been greatly blessed during the past year. Mr. Hatton says: "The letters of sympathy that constantly reach us from all parts of the world, with assurances of constant remembrance at the Throne of Grace, are a source of much comfort, and ofttimes greatly encourage us. Our monetary needs are pressing, but we doubt not, as in former years, the Lord's people will see to it that the preventive and rescue work in St. Giles' is not hampered or stopped for the lack of means." The address of Mr. Hatton is 12, Ampton-place, Regent-square, W.C.

DR. SOMERVILLE IN SOUTH AFRICA.

IN my last letter I gave an account of the work accomplished by Rev. Dr. Somerville on his first tour in South Africa, and I now propose to do the same for his second and third, both accomplished facts.

Both these journeys differed in many respects from the first, and they differed also from one another. They differed from the first in that they were both to a great extent conducted in districts where the population is less scattered than farther inland, and where means of rapid locomotion were more easily obtainable, the railway, in many instances, giving access to distant points. In spite of all this there was one district visited, in the course of the second tour, in which we saw more of the truly savage life and customs than anywhere farther inland. These two journeys differed from one another in that the second, which lay exclusively in the eastern province of the Cape Colony, brought the Doctor into contact with British and natives, while the third, being in the Western province, was among a population the majority of whom were Dutch.

I shall now refer briefly to both in detail. The second tour began with a week's services in where the evening meetings were held in the handsome Town-hall, and the midday meetings in the schoolroom of Trinity Episcopal Church, kindly granted by the incumbent, Rev. T. Bennetts, who was throughout a warm friend of the Mission. The attendance increased daily and much interest was shown, every effort being made to induce Dr. Somerville to prolong his stay for a week; but the number of places asking for a visit was so great, and the time so limited, that he could only promise to deliver a lecture on his return from the eastern district. From Port Elizabeth we went to Nitenhage, a town twenty miles inland and much frequented by merchants and others for its picturesque surroundings, Dr. Somerville spent two days, holding three services in the Town-hall, and having very large audiences. One of his addresses, printed nearly verbatim in the local newspaper, was circulated to the number of 2000 copies in the town and district, through the kindness of the Editor. From this place, in response to a cordial invitation, Dr. Somerville proceeded to a large and influential town, notorious, of late, for its unhappy ecclesiastical troubles. Here the services continued for four days, being held in the fine Town-hall recently erected, which, in spite of the doubts of the local committee as to its acoustic properties, proved admirably suitable for the purpose, and was crowded to excess every evening, by members of all denominations. The last meeting, which was intended for the native population, and was held in a different building, attracted also a large number of white people, the chapel being crowded in every part. There was also a daily noon-meeting held.

Leaving Grahamstown, the Doctor entered on a part of the country occupied by a numerous native population, and with comparatively few towns. The whole district has again and again been the scene of much bloodshed during the Kaffir wars which have broken out at intervals during the last forty years, the latest only some six years ago. Forty miles east of Grahamstown lies the small town of Alice, and near it the Missionary Institute of

LOVEDALE.

Here Dr. Somerville arrived on a Saturday evening, driven by Rev. Dr. Stewart, Principal of the Institute, who had come part of the way to meet his guests. The party, consisting of Rev. Dr. Somerville, Rev. Dr. Johnston, of the Irish Presbyterian Church, Belfast (who had joined us at Grahamstown, and was travelling for his health), were struck, on approaching the Institution, by the home-like appearance of the roads, with footpaths and cut hedges, while the avenue leading up to the buildings, lined with gum, oak, orange and lemon trees, would not have discredited some English country-house. A still greater surprise was in store, for on reaching the house, we found all the pupils, male and female, to the number of fully three hundred, drawn up in lines three and four deep, for the purpose of welcoming the white-faced visitors. The effect in the darkness was strikingly picturesque; the subdued light of a few lamps, held by some of the Mission staff, falling upon the white dresses and dark faces of the pupils, formed a picture truly African, and not likely to be soon forgotten by those who saw it. After a few words of greeting, spoken by Dr. Somerville and Dr. Johnston, the pupils sang "Hold the Fort" in English, and gave three hearty cheers.

This institute belongs to the Free Church of Scotland, and has become one of the features of the Colony. Its training is religious, educational, and industrial, and its pupils are drawn from all parts of the country, not to be received free, but to pay sums ranging from £10 to £20 per session, for the privilege of being trained there. Mr. Donald Ross, the late lamented Inspector-General of Schools for the Colony, says of it in his able report issued shortly before his death: "The scheme is at present the most complete, the largest, and the most successful of its kind in the country, and the institution, as a whole, is probably the greatest educational establishment in South Africa . . . . it works on a grand scale."

Dr. Somerville made this his headquarters for a week, during which time he held numerous services in the institute for the pupils, and had the privilege of opening, at his first service, the large new hall, built and furnished in a way more resembling the town hall of some enterprising community than the public room of a missionary institute. The building was well filled by an audience of upwards of 400, chiefly natives, and Dr. Somerville's subject was the appropriate one of "The Conversion of the African Treasurer of Queen Candace, and its Lessons for Africa." All his addresses here were given through the medium of an interpreter. The music was effectively led by a choir of some forty voices, trained by a native teacher to sing Kaffir hymns and Mr. Sankey's hymns.

Dr. Somerville also visited the adjoining towns of Alice and Fort Beaufort, and a number of very interesting Mission Churches lying in the vicinity, McFarlane, Burnshill, and Pirie, at all of which he had numerous audiences. From Lovedale Dr. Somerville went to and by the way saw on two occasions two of the chief native dances, which, according to some accounts, are the cause of much wickedness, and are stubbornly clung to by the people. They are performed on the occasion of young men and young women coming of age, and are often kept up day after day for weeks together, the women taking a prominent part in them. King William's Town is a frontier town, and there the Doctor spent three days, holding two meetings daily, and having the Town Hall full each evening. From this the Doctor went across the frontier into the visiting the Mission Station at Toleni, where the veteran missionary, Mr. Richard Ross, has laboured with such signal success for many years, founding many out-stations and schools. Unfortunately, the strain of work carried on single-handed has impaired the health of this devoted servant of Christ, and he is now in need of a period of complete repose. Not far from Toleni is the missionary institute of Blythswood, on the model of Lovedale, but on a smaller scale. It has about 100 pupils at present, and under the management of Mr. and Mrs. McLaren it is rapidly advancing in popular esteem, and promises to become very useful among the Fingo population.

Coming back from this region, the Doctor visited also a frontier town, where for three days he had very successful meetings, and was welcomed so heartily by all as to carry away a most pleasing recollection of the place. From this he made his way back to Port Elizabeth, where, according to promise, he gave a lecture on "The Bible for the World," to an audience, presided over by the mayor, Mr. W. H. Pearson, which filled the Town Hall to overflowing. This completed his second tour, which involved some very heavy travelling in bad weather in order to overtake all the work which had been sketched out.

From Port Elizabeth, Dr. Somerville proceeded by the steamer Hawarden Castle to Mossel Bay, where he began his final tour by holding three services, which the people gladly attended.

From Mossel Bay viâ Great Brak River (where an afternoon service was held) to George Town and Onatshoorn was the next stage, and at both places services were held in the Dutch churches, the western province on which he had now entered having, as I said before, a preponderance of the Dutch element; amongst them, lately, a considerable quickening of religious life has taken place in many towns.

In order to reach Worcester, the next town, in time for Sunday services, it was necessary for the Doctor to undertake occupying one day and two nights' constant travelling in an open car. The toil was aggravated by the excessive coldness of the weather, winter having fairly set in, and the hills being tipped with snow. On reaching Worcester, on Saturday, June 16, the Doctor felt somewhat indisposed, but nothing serious was anticipated, and services were held on Sunday and Monday, Rev. W. Murray, Dutch Reformed Church, acting as interpreter for the benefit of the Dutch people. On Tuesday, however, the Doctor was so unwell that medical aid had to be called in, and Dr. Beck at once pronounced the case to be a violent attack of erysipelas in the head and face, and ordered all work to be discontinued. The illness kept the Doctor a close prisoner, under severe pain, until July 6, when, though still invalided, he was able to be removed to Cape Town. During his enforced stay at Worcester many touching acts of kindness were done by the inhabitants, and much sympathy exhibited for the sufferer; the Dutch pastor, his wife and family, spared no pains to alleviate the tedium of the enforced seclusion.

As an unfortunate result of this illness, the remainder of the programme of work, which embraced visits to Wellington and Stellenbosch, and ten days' work in Cape Town, had to be abandoned, as the doctors strictly forbade the excitement of public meetings, and thus the venerable evangelist who had been so graciously guided and upheld during so many arduous months had to forego the pleasure of completing his Mission by labouring in these important centres.

On looking back on the Mission thus unexpectedly terminated, one cannot fail to note its comprehensive character, and the striking way in which for the preaching of the Gospel. Although in the course of some seven months Dr. Somerville visited forty-four different places, holding services in each, yet he did not visit the Transvaal, Zululand, or Basutoland.

With regard to the Transvaal, the time required to visit even a few of the chief towns would have been out of proportion to the work done, owing to the long distances to be traversed; and as to Zululand, the Doctor was on the borders just after Cetewayo had been restored, and when everything was unsettled. The news which has since come would tend to show that such a Mission could not have been successfully carried out. Only the other day a young German missionary, Schröder by name, was cruelly murdered, and several other workers have been deprived of nearly all they possess.

Basutoland, too, though an effort was made to reach it, had with deep regret to be passed by, and the opportunity of meeting with the valued French missionaries, some of them personal friends, was thereby lost. As a field for evangelistic work, the South African Colonies offer special advantages, and it is with thankfulness to God that his servant's work has been so prospered, and himself sustained, through journeyings extending on the east as far as the Umvoti River and on the west to Cape Town, that I now close this record of Dr. Somerville's Mission in South Africa.

The Doctor sails, as originally arranged, to-morrow, July 16, in the Grantully Castle, for England, and to-day he met the local committee, to whom he gave an account of his work in South Africa, and was received with the greatest kindness and sympathy.

Cape Town, S. Africa, July 9. JOHN B. CUMMING, Stud. Theol.

Another correspondent, writing on July 4, gives the following interesting particulars:—

Dr. Somerville's visit to Queenstown was a season of great refreshing to God's own children, and a time of decision to many who had been halting between two opinions. One family of my acquaintance have to thank God for putting it into the heart of his servant to come to our town. On the second night of Mr. Somerville's addresses, when he was expatiating on the love of God, as displayed in Christ, my friend's husband's heart was melted down; he there and then yielded himself to Jesus. My friend's daughter also received a rich blessing. She was so filled with joy and gratitude, that language could scarcely describe her feelings. The Home has since then been a Bethel, prayer and praise ascending to the Lord for his signal mercies, on the occasion of that long to be remembered visit. On calling on other families, I have also heard of much good having been received.

Dr. Somerville safely reached England last week, but, we regret to say, has not fully recovered from his illness.

TWO NATIVE AFRICAN EVANGELISTS.

IT will rejoice the readers of THE CHRISTIAN who take an interest in the natives of Africa, to know that two women from Pondoland are preaching to the Kaffirs and other natives with great success. They are sisters, and were converted through the preaching of Charles Pamla, a Wesleyan native Evangelist, whose work has been blessed to the conversion of hundreds, in different parts of the colony which he has visited. Their plan of procedure is to go to any place where they are invited, remaining two or three, or more days, as circumstances determine.

On the Sunday afternoon, when the writer had the pleasure of hearing the elder woman preach, there was a large attendance of white people, as well as natives, in the Wesleyan Native Chapel, in Queenstown, and her address was interpreted into English. The party of females consisted of six: the two sisters who preach, and four other native women, who assist at the prayer-meetings they hold. The portion of Scripture selected for the lesson she read in three languages, Kaffir, Basuto, and English. Her text was taken from Prov. vi. 27, "Can a man take fire in his bosom, and his clothes not be burned?" The address was most powerful, showing the effects which various sins produce on the lives, characters, and destinies of those who commit them. It was a remarkable service, the power of the Lord being present. Many were led to give up their evil ways, and flee to Jesus for pardon. M. B.

STOCKTON-ON-TEES.—On the 30th July Mr. W. R. Bradlaugh entered upon the fourth week of his Mission, and the highly successful series of meetings was brought to a close on Monday. Both for the numbers attracted to the services and spiritual results, this has been one of the most encouraging of all the Missions which it has been Mr. Bradlaugh's privilege to conduct. Night after night it has been necessary to take down the sides of the canvas pavilion, and crowds have been waiting for admission long before the gates were thrown open.

Letters to the Editor.

LUSBY'S MUSIC-HALL.

SIR,—As so many persons seem to misunderstand the recent case of Messrs. Crowder and Payne versus myself, in the Court of Chancery, I trust you will allow me one word of explanation. The public appear to be under the impression that I am prevented from giving away tracts in front of the plaintiffs' music-hall, and also that I undertook to keep away ten yards from the doors of that establishment. Neither of these impressions is correct. The Judge refused to grant an injunction to restrain me from walking up and down in front of the music-hall and distributing ordinary religious and temperance tracts. I voluntarily agreed, however, without prejudice, to withdraw the two particular tracts of which they complained, and not to give away any tracts relating to music-halls in front of plaintiffs' hall. I also engaged not to address persons in front of their hall with reference to that hall or any other music-hall.

This, therefore, leaves me and my fellow-workers at liberty to continue the distribution of tracts, which we are still doing.—Your obedient servant,

FREDERICK N. CHARRINGTON.

THE FASHION OF THIS WORLD.

DEAR SIR,—As your valued paper abounds in remarks of practical usefulness to its readers, I feel I may venture through its instrumentality to call the attention of my Christian sisters to what has appeared to me an increasing conformity to the fashions of this world in the modes of dress.

The Apostle Peter (1 Peter iii. 3) says: "Whose adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel." This leads me to say, as an aged Christian, that for some time my heart has been grieved to observe this instruction of the Apostle's conspicuously unattended to by some of my sisters, whose dress is so conformed to the fashions of the times, that they might rank as its leaders. I also have observed on the fingers of Christian women such a number of jewelled rings as has made me sad, not only because of its showing much worldliness, but also because of the waste, the useless expenditure, while the painful undeniable fact exists that multitudes of our deserving poor are in want of food and clothing, and our many philanthropic and Christian institutions deserve and need increased support.

Praying that my dear sisters will give this matter their prayerful consideration, and that our heavenly Father will by his Holy Spirit so enlighten their understanding his will, and that henceforth they may walk in newness of life in this respect,

I am, yours, for Christ's sake,

S. M. B.

THE LUTHER COMMEMORATION.

DEAR SIR,—Permit us to call the attention of your readers to the approaching commemoration of the fourth centenary of the birth of Martin Luther. On the Continent of Europe the 10th of November will be widely observed, and especially in Germany, where, by order of the Kaiser, the celebration will partake of the character of a national demonstration. Already there are signs that Protestant England will not be slow to express sympathy with this movement.

The Council of the Evangelical Alliance, having had the matter under their serious consideration, some few weeks since, resolved to place themselves in communication with various religious societies, with a view to some combined action being taken, if possible. The result has been the appointment of representatives, who will shortly meet for consultation.

We may add, that the Council of the Evangelical Alliance look upon the occasion, not only as one when praise should be given to God for the great blessings secured to our country by the Reformers, but also as an opportunity for emphasising the great principles involved in the Reformation. How far this object may be secured by sermons, public meetings, &c., is a matter for earnest consideration.—Yours faithfully, J. FIELD, A. J. ARNOLD, } Secs.

MANIFESTATION.

"Then shall the righteous shine out as the sun, in the kingdom of their Father."—MATT. xiii. 43.

THEN shall the righteous truly shine
As gold from out the darkened mine;
As diamond from the flinty rock;
As polished marble from the block.
Aye, as the sun in all his strength,
So shall the righteous shine at length.

On earth their light is oft obscured,
In darkness and in gloom immured.
God's pearls lie hidden from the sight,
His jewels do not come to light.
But then, when taken from the mine,
In radiant beauty they shall shine.

As princes travelling in disguise
Seem beggars oft to human eyes—
Heirs to a kingdom and a throne,
Their royalty unseen, unknown;
So God's own sons walk thro' the earth,
That knows not of their royal birth.

But, "then," this life for ever past,
In glory they shall shine at last;
Within their Father's kingdom hailed,
Their royal rank and right unveiled,
God's hidden ones shall stand "complete,"
And cast their crowns at Jesu's feet.

Oh, glorious consummation—time!
"Manifestation" all sublime!
The glory that shall be revealed
In those whom God the Father sealed;
May we who, patient, watch and wait,
"Then" share with Him that royal state!

MR. T. E. MURPHY IN IRELAND.

THIS young and earnest Apostle of Gospel Temperance has had a most successful campaign in the sister island. By his ardent and eloquent speech he has carried conviction to the minds and hearts of many waverers, while the tried and experienced workers have rallied round him in the fight. There have been large accessions to the abstaining ranks, and the good cause has received a powerful impetus in all the places he has visited.

A large and most enthusiastic gathering crowded the Belfast Ulster Hall on the evening of July 31, to hear Mr. Murphy's farewell address in that city. We are glad to say that our young brother will continue to labour in different parts of Ireland up to October.

EARLY CLOSING MOVEMENT.—This Association urges the closing of all shops at five o'clock one evening in the week. Where practised, it has proved a great boon to both male and female assistants, especially the latter. The address of the Association is 8, Salisbury-square, Fleet-street, E.C.

FRANCE.—Pastor Fallot has held important meetings in Marseilles for men alone, for women alone, and for mixed assemblies, on the Social question, stigmatising the police laws legalising vice, and showing up customs of polite society, such as mothers receiving into their circle immoral men, leaving on their drawing-room tables immoral books and journals (under plea of literary merit), suffering inuendos and jokes in conversation which should be reprobated by the pure-minded. A very deep impression seems to have been made. A local committee was already formed for the raising the tone of public morals, and this has been a stimulant. A home is to be created for the numerous class of servant-girls who come to Marseilles for places, and who are watched for and too often entrapped on arriving at the railway terminus. Girls, undistinctive of creed, will be received, and will find a copy of the New Testament in their rooms, and motherly reception.

Notices of Books, &c.

Two little tracts entitled, "On the Study of the Bible," and "The Presence of the Lord," by C. J. Westlake (Book Society, 6d. per dozen), are both worthy of circulation. The bearing of these subjects upon the Christian's daily life is simply and plainly put.

The Messiah's Witness (394, Hackney-road, E.) for this month has the first part of an address on "The Holy Spirit," by Mr. George Hucklesby, delivered at Sevenoaks Conference recently. The subject is carefully handled, and is to be continued in the September number.

Under the title, "Christopher Crayon in Scotland," Mr. J. Ewing Ritchie has republished, with additions, some tourist notes and experiences that were written for a weekly periodical several years ago. As a genial and entertaining holiday companion, Mr. Ritchie could hardly be surpassed, and these clever sketches ought to find a ready sale among summer travellers in Scotland. The little book is published by Jas. Clarke & Co., Fleet-street, London, and Wilson and McCormick, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow; price 1s.

British and Foreign Evangelical Review, July, 1883. 3s. 6d. Nisbet & Co. It is refreshing, in days when there is such an absence of positive Christian teaching in many Reviews, to turn to this serial, edited by Dr. Sinclair Paterson. Its pages are at once scholarly and orthodox. The most notable article in the present number is that by Professor F. Patton, on the Dogmatic Aspect of Pentateuchal Criticism. So far as we know, nothing has appeared which, with such robust learning and ability, confronts the speculations of Dr. Robertson Smith, and the German critics of the same school. This article alone is well worth the price of the Review, which has altogether our best wishes and commendation.

Proceedings of the Society for Psychical Research. 2s. 6d. Trübner & Co. When persons find that this Society has been formed to investigate matters relating to Thought-reading, Clairvoyance, Spirit-rapping, and Mesmeric Trances, they will be disposed to treat it with suspicion. But some of the objects of the Society are worthy of sympathy and approval, and there were reasons for its formation. Those who believe in a supernatural world are not disposed to dismiss contemptuously reports of supernatural facts, nor to treat with ridicule testimonies as to foregleamings of a future life. All they demand is that these reported facts and testimonies shall be carefully examined. This the above Society attempts to do. We think its existence is justified. The book under notice is the second part of the history of its proceedings, and may be studied with advantage by cautious readers.

Moravian Missions: Twelve lectures by A. C. Thompson, D.D. 7s. 6d. Hodder & Stoughton. This is a delightful book, pervaded with a spirit of missionary enthusiasm. It is a kind of modern "Acts of the Apostles," abounding with facts and incidents of the power of the Gospel of Christ to transform the most degraded heathen into intelligent, devoted Christians. It is, besides, a complete history of the rise of the "Unitas Fratrum," and of their head-quarters at Hernhutt, as well as of the origin and progress of their world-wide missionary operations. Drawn principally from the class of men from whom our Lord chose his disciples, with no special training for a missionary life, but possessed with a passionate longing to tell the story of the Cross to heathen Esquimaux or West Indian slaves, these early Moravians braved every kind of danger and privation, even to the sacrifice of their lives, the places of those who had fallen being quickly filled by others animated with the same spirit of Divine consecration. During 150 years of devoted work, sketched in this volume, the reader finds the Gospel introduced to the aboriginal tribes of America, Africa, Australia, and the Polar regions. The book conveys much valuable information concerning the histories of these peoples, contrasting their present and former condition in a striking and effective way.

We have received the following:—Books.—Part 28 Dr. A. Clarke's Commentary. Irish Educational Guide. Pamphlets.—Africa, Christian Schools of England, Albania, Light and Truth. Reports.—Baptist Missionary Society, Pilgrim Mission, Blind Pension Society. August Magazines.—Woman's Work, Lifeboat, Our Darlings, Protestant Times, Band of Hope Chronicle, Friend of Missions, Christian Church, Forestry, Monthly Notes, League Journal, British Friend, Missionary Intelligencer, Missionary Gleaner, Herald of Peace, Shield of Faith, British Workman, Sword and Trowel, Postman, Western Temperance Herald, City Mission Magazine, Our Own Magazine.

REFUGE FOR YOUNG WOMEN, Stratford, E.—Miss Skinner appeals for help in the work of this Refuge. She visits public-houses, and seeks by various means to receive girls and young women. Her work is highly commended Address, "The Refuge," 1, Garnet-terrace, Great Eastern-road, Stratford.

CANAL AND GIPSY CHILDREN.—Mr George Smith, of Coalville, sends another of his earnest letters to the papers advocating the cause of the canal and gipsy children. He complains that no provision whatever is made for the education of these needy classes in the parliamentary estimates for the year. He mourns over the failure for another session of his Canal Boats Amendment Act Bill, and thus concludes:—"It is time our legislators threw aside their idiosyncrasies, crotchets, and eccentricities, and faced the dark, sad, stern facts and realities of some phases of English life. It is time they turned into law a measure that will, at any rate, start 80,000 poor children upon a path that will lead them to heaven, with no loss or inconvenience to the opposers, except that of having to acknowledge by their retracing action that they were wrong in seeking to keep the poor children in the dark in the midst of the sunlight of civilisation."

Notices.

COLCHESTER.—Mr. J. Harris, of the Evangelisation Society, in conjunction with Mr. J. W. Cowell, has held a series of Gospel services here during the past three weeks. The meetings have been well attended, and have proved a real blessing to many souls in this neighbourhood.

A MESSAGE FROM PASTOR CHINIQUY.—Before he set sail from Liverpool on Saturday week, on his way back to his work in America, Father Chiniquy addressed a letter to the young people of Scotland, in which he says: "You should know that there is a great conspiracy going on to make you and your country the slaves of the Pope of Rome. Now, I love you and your country. I have much cause to do so. Often Scottish men have saved my life, when I was nearly put to death for preaching Christ's Gospel. But that is not all. God converted Patrick Hamilton, George Wishart, and John Knox, who, like myself, were all priests of Rome. It was by these men and others that God gave Scotland the Bible and so made you free. I want you, then, to prize and hold fast by the Bible as your best treasure, and to read the life of John Knox by Dr. M'Crie. Then you will know the greatness of the blessing God has bestowed upon your dear country, and why you should every one pray and strive against that conspiracy."

Bankers.

MESSRS. RANSOM, BOUVERIE & Co., 1, Pall Mall East, S.W.; MESSRS. BARNETTS, HOARES, HANBURY, & LLOYD, 60 and 62, Lombard Street, E.C. MESSRS. BOYLE, LOW, MURRAY & Co., Dublin; THE STANDARD BANK OF SOUTH AFRICA AND ITS BRANCHES.

THIS Society has been formed for the purpose of establishing a Christian Settlement in South Africa, the intention being to continue, and, as far as it is possible (with God's help) complete, the noble work begun by those Institutions which shelter the children and orphans in this country by emigrating them to a land where, under the supervision secured by the family system (besides obtaining places for these children in Christian families residing in South Africa), it is hoped they will continue to develop in moral character, and earn for themselves the advantages of an honest livelihood.

The Government of Natal has given a tract of land in Alexandra County, on Umzimkulu River, opposite Port Shepstone, of about 3,400 acres, on most favourable terms, and will grant free passages to Natal for our settlers and children.

Boys who have been brought up as tailors, bootmakers, bakers, carpenters, &c., will be further trained and employed in such occupations; on the other hand, boys fitted by nature and disposition for field work will be trained and educated as agriculturists.

Among the more important of the Bye Laws which have been drawn up, and have obtained the sanction of the Government, mention may be made of one prohibiting the introduction into the Settlement, as well as the production and sale therein, of every kind of alcoholic liquor. The climate of Alexandra County, Natal, is, without doubt, one of the healthiest in the world.

We require for our work just now about £1,000 for our settlement or depot. We have selected a party of five Christian men (without salary) and their families to go out and prepare the place for receiving our first party of boys. Everything is ready, but we have not yet received all the funds required, and—as we believe the Lord's work must be done without running into debt—we have determined not to move in this scheme until we have the necessary funds collected.

It is urgent that we should have the sum required in hand within this month, so as to be in a position to take out the boys offered us by Dr. Barnardo, Mr. Fegan, Miss Macpherson and others in December or January, a time when much distress prevails. This will enable those honoured workers in the Lord's vineyard to receive more children from the mire of the street.

Our party of girls (most of whom are from Dr. Barnardo's Homes) will leave in a few weeks for situations in Durban, about one hundred miles north of our settlement.

Can you help us in this matter? You will observe that our Committee is composed of gentlemen of all denominations.

Donations and Subscriptions (for even the smallest sums) will be thankfully received by any of the Society's Bankers, or at the office of THE CHRISTIAN. All Cheques and Postal Orders should be crossed.

THE POPULAR EDITION OF

CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE

To the OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.

Strongly Bound in Cloth Boards, PRICE FIVE SHILLINGS.

Presentation Edition, handsomely bound in Cloth, price 7s. 6d.

THE POPULAR EDITION

Of CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE (Published by MORGAN & SCOTT) contains a carefully revised and much extended List of the PROPER NAMES of the OLD and NEW TESTAMENTS with their Meanings in the Original Languages, by Rev. ALFRED JONES, M.A., Author of "The Proper Names of the Old Testament Scriptures Expounded and Illustrated."

"Cruden's laborious work is likely to hold its own as the most valuable accompaniment to the sacred volume, enabling the student, as it does, to make the Bible its own interpreter. In the present case, we have a handsome and clearly printed edition of the original work, with a revised and extended list of the proper names, giving their meaning in the original language. Publisher's Circular.

The Publishers desire to call the attention of Sabbath School Superintendents and Teachers to the "POPULAR EDITION" of this invaluable Work, which, at the price now named, is within the reach of almost every Teacher in the land.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The Publishers will supply twelve copies of the "POPULAR EDITION" of "CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE" to any Sabbath School Superintendent on receipt of Post Office Order or Cheque for 50s. Thus the Teachers of his School may be supplied with this useful handbook at a reduced rate.

Mr. D. L. MOODY, after having recommended the purchase of a good Bible, says, "Next I would advise you to get CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE and a Scripture Text Book. These books will help you to study the Word of God with profit. If you have not got them, get them to-morrow, for every Christian ought to have them."

☞ "CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE" may also be had in Twenty-Four Weekly Numbers, price 3d. each (post-free, 3½d.).

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings; And may be ordered of any Bookseller.

SIXTH SERIES OF WEEKLY CASES.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"
WHO MAY BE personally or relatively
INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK
ADVANCED CONSUMPTION.

"VERY REMARKABLE was the CASE of RICHARD PAIGE, of KERSFORD, Devon. The correspondent was Mr. R. BROOK, of KERSFORD, BRIDESTOWE, DEVON."

When first submitted to me, the leading particulars of the case were as follows:—The father had died of Consumption, and there was a tendency thereto on the mother's side also. The patient had been subject to bronchitis for eight years, but now the complaint had merged into phthisis, and he had been laid up for fifteen weeks. The cough was very violent, with dark and heavy expectoration, sometimes mixed with blood. Pain in the right side, breathing short, hectic flushes, general loss of flesh, the strength gradually failing.

I sent a full letter of advice, and corresponded on the case with Mr. R. Brook, nearly to the end of last year. There was a gradual improvement until the patient went to work, Mr. Brook several times remarking that "R. Paige was a wonder to many, and an astonishment to his former medical adviser."

I have recently received a letter from Mr. Brook (June 13), in which he says: 'Richard Paige, considered once to be in a deep consumption, was so far restored in a few months as to resume his employment, and, notwithstanding the very wet and trying Winter, he was able to continue work. He is a wonder to himself. He has been the means of inducing others to try your treatment, with very gratifying results. May it become universally known."

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS
NOT
By CHARLES GRAHAM.

The Sword and Trowel says:—"So far as we can see, this is a sound book. If this is all that the Holiness people have meant, we cannot make out why there has been so much noise over the matter. To us these new revelations are nothing but the common-places of experimental divinity. With considerable skill and sagacity Mr. Graham has proved his title, and wheeled away much fanatical rubbish. Anything which will promote true holiness has all our heart."

By E. J. CARR.

Price One Penny: 1s. per dozen (post free).
Neatly Printed on Tinted Paper, suitable for enclosing in Letters.
"AN ISRAELITE INDEED."

"Joe C—was a dear young friend of ours; one, it might be said, as of Nathanael of old, in whom was 'no guile.' But though he had naturally this guileless spirit, it could not be said of him, until he was seventeen years old, that he was 'an Israelite indeed.' His conversion was so simple. It was just through his sister saying to him one day, 'Are you a Christian, Joe?' She was a Christian herself, and she longed for her brother to decide for Christ. He could not say 'yes,' so he was silent; but he could not rest until he knew that he was a Christian too. A few days after, when the subject was renewed, and the same question asked again, it was answered this time with an emphatic 'Yes!'"

WORKS PUBLISHED BY MORGAN & SCOTT.

THE POPULAR EDITION OF

Cruden's Concordance

To the OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.

Strongly Bound in Cloth Boards, PRICE FIVE SHILLINGS.

Presentation Edition, handsomely bound in Cloth, price 7s. 6d.

THE POPULAR EDITION

Of CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE (Published by MORGAN & SCOTT) contains a carefully revised and much extended List of the PROPER NAMES of the OLD and NEW TESTAMENTS with their Meanings in the Original Languages, by Rev. ALFRED JONES, M.A., Author of "The Proper Names of the Old Testament Scriptures Expounded and Illustrated."

Cruden's laborious work is likely to hold its own as the most valuable accompaniment to the sacred volume, enabling the student, as it does, to make the Bible its own interpreter. In the present case, we have a handsome and clearly printed edition of the original work, with a revised and extended list of the proper names, giving their meaning in the original language. Publisher's Circular.

The Publishers desire to call the attention of Sabbath School Superintendents and Teachers to the "POPULAR EDITION" of this invaluable Work, which, at the price now named, is within the reach of almost every Teacher in the land.

SPECIAL NOTICE.—The Publishers will supply twelve copies of the "POPULAR EDITION" of "CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE" to any Sabbath School Superintendent on receipt of Post Office Order or Cheque for 50s. Thus the Teachers of his School may be supplied with this useful handbook at a reduced rate.

Mr. D. L. MOODY, after having recommended the purchase of a good Bible, says, "Next I would advise you to get CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE and a Scripture Text Book. These books will help you to study the Word of God with profit. If you have not got them, get them to-morrow, for every Christian ought to have them."

☞ "CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE" may also be had in Twenty-Four Weekly Numbers, price 3d. each (post-free, 3½d.).

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

GEORGE WHITEFIELD:

HIS LIFE AND TIMES.

By J. R. ANDREWS. Cheap Edition, Sixpence.

With Portrait, Cloth limp, 1s.; Cloth boards, 1s. 6d.; Presentation Edition, with Engraved Portrait, Cloth neat, 5s. (post-free).

"Whitefield was not a framer of discipline, not a leader of a sect, not a founder of societies, not a ruler of men, but pre-eminently a winner of souls. Would that such preachers were multiplied in the present day! We thank Mr. Andrews for this seasonable addition to our religious biography. No young preacher or student should be without it. But it possesses an interest far beyond any special class, and deserves a wide and general circulation."—Methodist Recorder.

Paper Covers, 1s.; Cloth Limp, 1s. 6d.;
Presentation Edition, Cloth Boards, Bevelled Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

THE NUMBER "SEVEN" in SCRIPTURE.

Compiled by S. A. BLACKWOOD, Esq., C.B.,

Author of "Shadow and Substance," "Forgiveness, Life, and Glory."

"I do not presume to offer an opinion as to the purpose with which the number seven has been so prominently interwoven with the Scriptures. That there is some purpose, however, I can hardly doubt; for the use of the number is far more than merely mechanical or artificial. It runs through the whole of the Bible, commencing with the institution of the seventh day—or Sabbath—in Eden, and concluding with the various series of 'sevens' in the Apocalypse."
Extract from Introduction.

London: MORGAN & SCOTT, 12, Paternoster-buildings, E.C.; and may be ordered of any Bookseller.

BY ANNA SHIPTON.

"TELL JESUS."

Recollections of Emily Gosse. Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.; Cloth elegant, Gilt edges, 2s. Also a Cheap Edition for general distribution, price 6d.

"Presents us with notices of a life spent in loving, intimate, and uninterrupted communion with a personal Lord. . . . We have read the book with deep interest. We would that indolent professors might read it and be quickened, and that suffering saints might read it and be comforted."—Christian Times.

WHISPERS IN THE PALMS.

A Volume of Hymns and Poetic Meditations. Printed on Toned Paper, and attractively bound, Gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"A truly pious and Christian mind alone could have uttered these 'Whispers.' They breathe a spirit so pure, and in the richest harmony. . . . The extremely tasteful and elegant style in which this edition has been produced reflects the highest credit upon the publishers."—British Workwoman.

THE BROOK IN THE WAY.

Hymns and Poems Illustrative of the Christian Life. Printed on Toned Paper, and elegantly bound, Gilt edges, 3s. 6d.

"A collection of sacred songs, which, as rippling murmurs, are intended to guide the pilgrim to refreshing streams. . . . The waters to which it allures us are evangelically sweet and pure. Whoever listens to these murmurs and tastes these waters cannot fail to be refreshed."—Sword and Trowel.

BY REV. J. MACPHERSON.

SCRIPTURE READERS' SOCIETY FOR IRELAND.

Supported by Voluntary Contributions.

President—

The Right Hon. the EARL of SHAFTESBURY, K.G.

Established 1822, for the purpose of employing humble Christian men, well versed in the Scriptures, to visit from house to house throughout the country, and visit all denominations. Irish-speaking Readers are sent to Irish-speaking districts when required. The work is carried on in a spirit of love.

Subscriptions or Donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary, Capt. KEARNEY WHITE, 27, Lower Pembroke-street, Dublin; or at 9, Paternoster-row, London.

The Earl of Shaftesbury says in his last letter to the Secretary:—Many thanks for your kind letter, and many thanks to Almighty God for the good intelligence you give me about your Scripture Readers in Ireland. I wish I could more effectively assist you. Your letter is the best thing that I have seen or heard from Ireland.

I enclose my donation, and only wish it was more.—Yours, SHAFTESBURY

N.B.—Friends will please notice the exact title, "Scripture Readers' Society for Ireland," and not as "Irish Scripture Readers' Society."

Educational.

TO GODLY PARENTS.—The undermentioned (who is in no way connected with the school) is desirous of recommending an old-established YOUNG GENTLEMEN'S BOARDING SCHOOL, DELIGHTFULLY SITUATED FACING THE SEA on the South Coast, a short run from London, in which a thorough and first-class Education is given, based upon the teaching of the Holy Scriptures.

It is one of the few remaining schools in which the power of the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ influences the hearts and conduct of the pupils.

The success, happiness, and training of the Boys have been so remarkable in this School that a BOOK OF TESTIMONIALS GIVEN BY THE PARENTS should be read to appreciate results so unusual. Two Vice-Chancellors have placed their wards as pupils in the school. Reference kindly permitted to Dr. THORN, Paddington, London.

THE OLD HALL SCHOOL, Wellington, Salop. Principal, Dr. CRANAGE, M.A. The next term will begin (D.V.) Thursday, September 20. Full particulars on application.

MENTAL AND PHYSICAL MALADIES:

THEIR CAUSE AND CURE.

The phenomena exhibited by that pathological condition called General Debility includes a want of mental force, of nervous will-power, in which the patient often suffers more mentally than in cases of great organic derangement.

A disease is none the less real because it is mental. To say that a person's disease is of the mind is quite a different thing from an assertion that nothing ails him, and it need give no offence, if we at the same time exhibit a true sympathy for his sufferings, and show him that they are not less important because they arise from other than physical causes. Every practitioner is familiar with this condition. A very large portion of chronic affections—at least three-fourths—come under this designation. There seems but little organic disease, and sometimes none, only a general weakness in the action of all the organs, a lack of vital force everywhere, a negative state of the whole system.

We do not know what constitutes this ever-active Spring of Vitality to the system, but we do know that sensation is a property of nerve matter, and that it is only when the nervous forces of the frame are active and healthy that life is enjoyed in all its fulness.

The direct action of the mind or will on the limbs, and also the sensation associated with this motive power are transmitted through the brain and spinal cord; and, therefore, the ability of the mind to perceive and to act through the body must mainly depend upon the integrity with which the nervous centres and sympathetic nerves fulfil their office. It is manifest that impaired sensation and muscular action must result from disease in the nerves, because will and perception, or sensation, are never exercised except in connection with the nerves. Therefore, if the nervous apparatus be in any way rendered sensibly unfit for the use of the will in acting upon the limbs, we experience weariness and debility.

Any influence which will tend to reinforce and regulate our nerve power must therefore be of great practical value; and as both theory and practice unite to prove that no agent so directly influences and sustains nervous power as that now under consideration, we contend that the facts arising out of the employment of these forces as nature and art have enabled us to employ them, entitle our statements to the fullest credence and support.

The nervous system acts merely as an Electric apparatus; so contrived that by it the chemistry of life is carried on, and those states of the organs produced, which best enable the mind to register sensation, and to react on the body. That nerves, under the action of will, are capable of discharging electricity, is proved by its actual production in the torpedo, the electric eel, and other creatures that possess an arrangement of nerves and muscles by which they can, at will, until fatigued, accumulate and discharge a succession of shocks.

Mr. Garratt will always be happy to confer with any scientific or medical gentleman, either personally or by letter, upon any phase of the subject, or any case for treatment, and will send a private list of 850 names as referees to any address.—B. Corson Garratt, Medical Electrician, 16, Finsbury-square, London, E.C.

HOMES OF HOPE,

THE WESLEYAN CONFERENCE.

A CONVERSATION on the State of the Work of God formed a very useful as well as interesting feature of the Wesleyan Conference at Hull, the other day. Rev. Charles Garrett spoke most hopefully of the signs of progress and success which he said presented themselves on all sides, in the churches of the denomination. He specially mentioned the increase of spirituality amongst all classes of their members, and the growing concern and desire which existed for the conversion of others. His favourable opinion on the revival of spiritual life among them was, he said, based on the frequency with which of late he had been brought into contact with the rich and poor, the educated and unlearned, of their Society. He rejoiced greatly in the widespread adoption among them of the Bible and Prayer Union Letter system.

Other speakers dwelt on the difficulties and hindrances which stood in the way of the work of God. Those chiefly referred to, and most calling for attention, were the spirit of "restlessness" which prevails as to method of work, "religious novelties" drawing away many from regular and stable efforts to promote the cause of Christ. The fact that while the increase of membership, and of wealth and influence, in their congregations had been great, they were nevertheless in financial difficulty, was regarded as proof of a want of soundness, and as calling for grave anxiety, as was also the fact that more than 30,000 members were lost to them every year by removals and causes not accounted for. It was also stated that out of 840,000 Sunday scholars only 100,000 were church members. It is well that such facts should be carefully considered, and it is a good sign when Christian communities set themselves diligently and prayerfully to face them and remedy them.

Rev. E. E. Jenkins spoke much to the purpose, and made a distinction of great importance, when, in addressing young ministers on doctrinal and other difficulties, he spoke as follows:—

"Intellectual difficulties were not doctrinal difficulties; and he besought them not to depart in any degree from the doctrines of the New Testament which had come down to them, and which were surely believed by their fathers. 'With regard to any dogma (said he), if I make the ground of my acceptance of a dogma the likelihood of the doctrine, I am at sea. I cannot understand the creation out of nothing' of the universe; I cannot understand the immortality of the soul; I cannot understand the doctrine of retribution; my mind is under certain limits—necessary limits—but, when God speaks to me, He speaks to me under conditions which demand from me absolute submission. Scientists cannot explain the simplest facts which they discover; and, as we have this glorious heritage of doctrine, let us seek to preach these doctrines, and especially let us speak to our people from our present realisation of their truth."

We are glad to note that the Conference has passed a resolution condemning the opium trade, regretting that attempts should be made in this country to defend it. Mr. Jenkins spoke of it as infamous and immoral, Dr. Osborn following suit by branding it as a terrible sin, and a murderous traffic. No words can be too strong for condemning the evil, and the shame connected with the matter. As Mr. Jenkins said, it is the duty of Christian ministers to speak out plainly upon the subject, so as to awaken the national conscience concerning it.

The voice with which the various sections of the Church speak against this henious crime committed by our nation is so strong, and so frequently uplifted, that surely it should command greater attention than it receives from our rulers. When will they set the example of proclaiming the force of right as opposed to might, and of moral obligation as contrasted with mere pecuniary claims and material interests?

Among the closing acts of the Conference was the passing of a series of resolutions in favour of the repeal of the Acts regulating vice, as being iniquitous in principle and demoralising in tendency. The Conference rejoiced at the signal success recently won in the House of Commons, and trusted that this success would be speedily followed by the complete abolition of the system.

M. RENAN ON THE VALUE OF LIFE.

THIS eminent French littérateur has been addressing the scholars of the Lycée Louis le Grand, in Paris, having chosen for his theme the value and pleasantness of life. His words are cheering and hopeful so far as the present is concerned, but we look in vain for any light upon the life that lies beyond. He expressed a sense of envy towards those who had life before them, because they would see what their seniors could never behold, and know what older men sought for restlessly, and must die without discovering.

The optimist view of life taken by the great French rationalist may be better than the sullen gloom with which some sceptics have regarded it, but it is a poor philosophy which finds its chief comfort concerning the value of life to consist in looking backward, rather than in pressing onward into the glorious and eternal world which awaits those who have here done the will of God and cherished the faith of Christ. If the all of life is to live, then life is vain, spite of M. Renan's endeavour to prove it otherwise; but happily the Word of God abideth sure, and life is precious because of its possibilities in relation to eternity, rather than on account of its relation to time. The aged believer need not envy the young, for he goes to a sphere where his knowledge shall be infinitely increased and his joy eternally perfected.

If read in the light of faith in God and the hope of immortality, some of the advice given by M. Renan was, nevertheless, worthy of acceptance and adoption. The sentence, "There is but one foundation for a happy life, the pursuit, namely, of the good and the true," is full of wisdom; and his exhortation to consider life as a matter serious and full of responsibilities, is one that all may wisely follow. But the only motive powerful enough to stimulate to such action is lacking in M. Renan's system of morals, viz., certainty of conviction as to Revelation and the acceptance of Christ as our Life.

SOME ASPECTS OF GERMAN LIFE.

TEMPERANCE reformers will be glad to hear, on the authority of a continental paper, that there has arisen in Germany "a new Temperance cause, headed by Count Moltke, swelled by nearly all religions, and supported by committees in every part of the country." The promoters of this "national movement," it appears, do not advocate total abstinence as the remedy for intemperance; they content themselves with ardently preaching the Gospel of moderation. Everybody ought to wish for the success of the new crusade; but we shall be agreeably surprised if it shows the "substantial results" that are hoped for.

One feature of the movement, however, will commend itself to the heartiest sympathy of all who take an extended view of the drink question. "As yet," says The Pall Mall Gazette, in a short article on the subject, "the enemy is in possession of the field, and it is not unusual to find forty-seven public-houses in a high-road three miles long." We think we could equal, if not beat, this in Great Britain; but we highly approve of the plan of "converting the taverns into coffee-houses" that is finding favour in these German reformers. The writer in The Pall Mall Gazette strikes at the very root of the matter when he remarks:—

"The mere propaganda of total abstinence has failed, and is certain to fail, as long as the causes which render it easy to drink and difficult to abstain from drinking flourish untouched on every side."

The proverb that "prevention is better than cure" has a special application to the insidious and ensnaring habit of drinking.

Intemperance is not the only crying evil that needs to be fought in the Fatherland. The Berlin correspondent of The Daily Telegraph writes a long and strongly-worded communication on the prevalence of "Duelling in Germany," that indicates a very low view of the sacred regard for human life which is a fundamental precept in the moral law of God. He says:—

"Scarcely a week passes—nay, scarcely a day—that our eyes do not light upon some account of private deeds of violence which the popular feeling of Continental Europe palliates and permits. Fortunately in England the time of the duel is past; there is no sympathy with the tradition which excuses a cold-blooded murder on the ground that it is "satisfaction" for an insult. It is strange to think how few years have passed since these traditions extended to us too, and we may congratulate ourselves on having shaken ourselves free from the superstitious adoration of a fetish called "honour," which, while it ought to be one of the fairest conceptions of civilisation, has been and is often degraded into the red rag, upheld to arouse the most bestial of human passions."

The writer states that in the German army any challenge addressed to an officer is referred to a regularly organised "Court of Honour," which is attached to every regiment; "if it is decided that the insult is real, fight he must, or leave the service." If one officer, in cold blood, shoots another, he is merely subjected to a mild form of imprisonment for a short period, and returns to his regiment, "without the slightest moral taint on his character."

Such a deplorable state of social feeling is truly "a relic of more barbarous ages," but we fear it is hopeless to expect, as the Telegraph correspondent does, that it will shortly disappear from Europe with the growth of civilisation and culture. What is needed is the transforming power of Divine truth, which not only enjoins us to love God with all our hearts, but to love our neighbour as ourselves, and not to be overcome with evil, but to overcome evil with good.

THE ALMIGHTINESS OF GOD.

By the late F. COVELL, of Croydon.*

"I know that Thou canst do everything, and that no thought can be withholden from Thee."—Job xlii. 2.

WHAT a mercy it is to have to do with such a God, with whom nothing is impossible. If I had not to do with such a God as this, of all creatures I should be most miserable. When the Son of God was telling his disciples at one time how hard it is for those who have riches to enter into the kingdom of God, they asked in astonishment, "Who then can be saved?" "Oh," says the Son of God, "what is not possible with men is possible with God." How blessed to have an interest in such a God as this; to have his eye towards us, and his heart upon us for good!

Here we find what He can do; He can do more than He ever has done, and more than He ever will do. He could raise up stones, and make them a seed to Abraham; but He will not do that. As the Son of God said in his temptation, He could send twelve legions of angels; yet He did not do it; but He will do everything for his people that they need. Esau is bent on the destruction of Jacob, but God turned him as a river of water. Just as if there were a river here, and we should make a channel for it to run in. So we find Esau purposes to kill Jacob. He owes him a grudge. He comes to do it; but then God has a hand in it. So we find Esau runs and falls upon Jacob's neck, and kisses him. All his evil intent is knocked out of him; he says, "It is as if I saw the face of God"

Balak and Balaam are determined that they will curse the people of God. Balaam says, "Build me here seven altars, and prepare seven bullocks and seven rams." So they do; all things are ready. Then Balaam sets to and blesses the people. Not all Balak's gold can make him do what he is determined to do. He will have Balak's gold if destruction follows; let God send an angel with a drawn sword, he will go through; but God comes, notwithstanding all his covetous purposes, and he blesses the people. How cruelly the Egyptians oppressed the Israelites; but God moves in their hearts, so they load them with silver and gold, and send them out enriched.

Job said, "I know," but God had to teach him a good many things. What did Job find? He said, "He can break my heart, make me just like clay in the hands of the potter; after all my hard speeches He can do everything. He can make me feel that I am vile."

What an unspeakable mercy it is to have to do with such a God as this—that can do everything. What can He do? I will tell you what He can do for you. He can open your blind eyes, and enlighten your dark mind. You cannot see the work of God in your soul, cannot see that you are in the footsteps of the flock, cannot see that He has got a heaven for you; all the preachers in the world cannot make you see it. You have been trying to find it out and cannot, but God can show it to you in a minute. He has done it for me. Sometimes I have been ready to say, "All things are against me;" but God has made me eat my own words; He has made me see and feel they are all for me.

The longer I live, the more I see that God can do everything. I will tell you what He can do; it seems to me to be a marvellous thing. I have tried hundreds of times to do it, and cannot do it in the least: God can do it in a minute. What is that? He makes my trifling mind serious, turns me inside out, and makes me another man in a minute. What a mercy! Perhaps some of you have a light spirit, you have laid many bands on yourselves, tried many things. Along comes something—a foolish word, or somebody jests; all your bands are like a thread; you break through all your vows just the same as Samson rent the lion like a kid. You go to bed sighing, "What a fool I have been! what is the use of my trying? it will never be done." What is not possible with men is possible with God. I will tell you what else He can do; He can make your hard heart soft. That is a wonderful thing; for a hammer could not do it. But God can do it in a minute. Did you ever feel Him do it? "Yes," say some; "I have been as hard as a rock, and my heart has melted like wax before the flame; now I will keep it so." But you cannot; before the day is over you are back in the old place; God must keep it.

"I know that Thou canst do everything." I will tell you something God can do, that is a wonderful thing; He can subdue and conquer your bewitching lusts, whether they are the "lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye, or the pride of life." He can so turn them out, or bring them down, that you can put your foot on the neck of them, and feel: More are they that are for you, than all that can be against you. You cannot do that; you cannot conquer the least one. "The pride of life"—the things of time and sense, the many things your heart is privy to, you cannot subdue; your stubborn sins rise up and reign; you are ready to conclude that they will master you. You find that you may lay what you like on them, they will break through.

If you know a little of this, let it encourage you to trust in Him at all times. "I know He can do everything," say you, "but the thing is, will He?" I can see plainly, in turning things over, it is not so much the will of God we mistrust as it is his power. I believe the Word of God will detect our hearts better than we can ourselves. If you look into the blessed Word of God you will find it is his power we doubt. The angel came to Sarah, and said, "At the set time Sarah shall have a son;" there was his willingness, there was no question about that; you will see she stumbled at his power. "Shall I have a child that am old," she says, "my husband being old too?" Now God says, "Is anything too hard for the Lord?" She questioned his power to do it. God comes to Moses, and says, "Moses, the people shall be fed with flesh for a whole month; I mean to do it." Moses says, "Lord, shall all the flocks and herds be slain, or shall all the fish of the sea be gathered together, that Thou sayest, 'The people shall eat flesh for a month?'" "Is My hand shortened," says God, "that it cannot save?" God had told him his will; Moses doubts his power.

There was a famine in Samaria. The prophet comes and tells the king, "To-morrow, about this time, shall bread be sold in Samaria for such a price." "Oh," says a lord on whom the king leaned, "if the Lord would make windows in heaven, might such a thing be?" "You shall see it with your eyes," said the prophet, "but you shall not eat thereof." So it came to pass according to the word of the Lord; bread was sold at the gate of Samaria at such a price; and as this man had the charge of the gate, the people trod him down to get at the things, so that he died. It was God's power he questioned.

"Oh, my unbelieving heart, Prone from Jesus Christ to start."

It may be so with some of you; you are doubting his power to pardon your many sins. Can God pardon them? We read that He has opened "a fountain for sin and for uncleanness." You keep looking at your sins and shortcomings—what you are and have been. It is not so much the will as the power of God you doubt. There is power enough in his blood to cleanse you and me. May the Blessed Spirit work faith in our hearts to ask in faith, for "whatsoever ye ask in faith, believing, ye shall receive."

Just to encourage your poor heart, whatever you may think about yourself, turn your eyes for a minute into the blessed Word of God. You see a poor wretch, the Philippian gaoler, at the very gates of hell; for, when the prison doors were opened, he was about to kill himself, and send himself quick to hell, but Paul said, "Do thyself no harm, for we are all here." Such is the love and mercy of God to poor sinners, that when he came in trembling and said to Paul and Silas, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" the answer was, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." How the Blessed Spirit works faith in the love and blood of the Son of God to save the vilest of sinners! Before another morning dawned, here was the gaoler rejoicing in God. Poor sinner! what is thy sin to God's great grace?

God likes to do great things for his people; that is why He lets you and me come into trying and difficult places at times. It is on purpose to get Himself a name and praise. Some of us could not speak so well of God, if we had not been plunged in these places; we should never have been able to speak of what his power can do, if we had not been brought into such places. If we had not been set fast in ways of providence, and feared the worst—believed it must come to a smash—we should not have known God can do everything. These are not nice places to come into. "Now," a man says, "I am done; it is all over, there is no help for me in God." Says the Psalmist, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help; my help cometh from the Lord which made heaven and earth." If God can make heaven and earth He can do everything. He not only made heaven and earth, but He hangs the earth upon nothing. You cannot make the air hold up a feather or a pin; let a pin or feather go, it will fall to the ground. See what the will and word of God can do. The air of itself will not hold up a pin or a feather, yet God makes it hold this ponderous earth and all upon it. Yet, at times, you and I try to measure arms with God; as we cannot see how it can be done, we think God cannot see. Hear what He says, "Even the youths shall faint, and be weary, and the young men shall utterly fall; but they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength."

What a mercy it is to have to do with such a God as this, that laughs at impossibilities. What fear is there of your coming to want? When you look at many things, you say, "It will all come down;" then God comes in, and says, "Is anything too hard for Me?" More are they that are for us, than all that can be against us. Who ever trusted in God, and was confounded? Whoever rested on Him, and was ashamed? To show his power towards us, whether it is in pardoning our iniquities, or appearing for us in temporal things, God goes such a contrary way to what we expect or like. We see that God has a way in the whirlwind and the storm, and the clouds are the dust of his feet. When He was going to do something great, something like a God, at the wedding in Cana of Galilee, He said, "Fill the water-pots with water." Who would ever have thought that was the way He was going to display his glory and power? Has God never brought wine out of water for you? Have your tears of sorrow, contrition, and repentance, never brought wine to your souls? They have to mine; oh yes! When the water-pots were filled with water, Jesus said, "Draw out now, and bear to the governor of the feast." "I never had such wine before," said the governor. Let the Son of God make a feast, there will be no bitter in it.

God has got a way of his own, He acts like a God; what is not possible with us is possible with God. Oh, if we had more implicit trust, if we had but a little faith! We have not faith enough to believe God will manage our concerns. We come into a little difficulty, enemies rise up; we say, "They will be too much for us." This, that, or the other difficulty stands in the way. "It will be too much for God to bring us through," we think. What little faith, my friends! The prophet says, "He sitteth upon the circle of the earth, and the inhabitants thereof are as grasshoppers." I would speak it with reverence, but we think they are the more powerful, and that God is the grasshopper.

We are apt to think that because God has done all these great things his arm must be shortened. You who are mechanics know that if you have made an article a thousand times, you are just as able to make it now; it has not taken away your capabilities. So with God; He has done thousands of things, but He says, "my hand is not shortened. I have done wonderful things for my people; I have stopped lions' mouths, made ravens feed my people, made the sun stand still; yet my hand is not shortened."

"I know that Thou canst do everything." Job did know it. Look at him in the very dust, not a friend to pity him, bereft of everything, his family and property gone, and himself covered with sore boils, the devil at him, and he full of tossing to and fro in his mind. What a poor, pitiable object! "I know that Thou canst do everything." "Then," says God, "I will do it." Then He blesses him with a family, makes him a great deal richer than he was before, makes him such a man that he stands head and shoulders above many in the Word of God.

"This God is the God we adore,
Our faithful, unchangeable Friend;
Whose love is as great as his power,
And neither knows measure nor end."

May the Good Spirit work in your hearts, whatever may be your difficulties, whether from men, devils, or sin, that you may cast yourselves at the feet of the Almighty, and feel, "I know that Thou canst do everything."

"'To trust Him endeavour; the work is his own;
He makes the believer, and gives him his crown.'

A "BRITISH WORKMAN" MEMORIAL.—The Church Standard of August 3 published a letter from a correspondent suggesting that a memorial should be subscribed for by the readers of The British Workman and Band of Hope Review, to perpetuate the work of the late Thomas B. Smithies, in the shape of a fund to open or extend British Workmen's coffee halls throughout the kingdom. The suggestion is a good one.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST, AND EVENTS CONNECTED THEREWITH.

A WORD FOR INQUIRERS INTO THE SUBJECT.

WILL the second coming of Christ be a personal one? Yes. The word, "appear," in Heb. ix. 28, answers the question conclusively. A spiritual coming, or presence, would not be a visible one (see also Acts i. 11; Matt. xxiv. 30; John i. 51; Rev. i. 7; Zech. xiv. 4, 5).

When will He come—before or after the Millennium? Before. "Iniquity will abound" up to the very time of his appearing (1 Tim. iv. 1, 2; 2 Tim. iii. 1—5, 13; Jude 17, 18, 19; 2 Peter iii. 3, 4; Matt. xxiv. 37—39; Luke xvii. 26—30; Luke xxi. 33—35 R.V).

For what purpose will He come? To establish his Kingdom and personal reign of righteousness over the earth. Preparatory to this, according to promise, He first descends from heaven to receive his saints, both those who have died and those who are then alive, who are changed, and "caught up to meet Him in the air." "This is the first resurrection" (1 Thes. iv. 15, 18; John xiv. 3). He doubtless returns with them for a time, to the immediate presence of the Father, when will take place the judgment of works of service as believers, according to 1 Cor. iii. 12—15, with a view to position and reward in the coming Kingdom; also, what is termed in Rev. xix. 7, "the marriage of the Lamb." The salt of the earth being thus removed, moral corruption and anti-Christian rebellion and apostasy develope unhindered, and spread with increased rapidity, until, the cup of man's iniquity being full, the Lord descends to earth with his saints to "execute the judgment written" in Psalm cx. 5, 6; Isaiah lxiii. 1—6; Daniel ii. 34, 35, 44, 45; Zechariah xiv. 1—5; Ezekiel xxxix. 17—21; Joel iii. 9—16; Malachi iv. 1—3; Jude 14, 15; Rev. xiv. 17—20, xvii. 13, 14, and xix. 11—21; also Psalm ii.; 2 Thes. i. 7—9, and ii. 7—12. This is the "day of vengeance of our God" (Isaiah lxi. 2, lxii. 4, and xxxiv. 8), "the day of the Lord of Hosts" (Isaiah ii. 12—17).

What follows? The binding of Satan in the bottomless pit for 1000 years (Rev. xx. 1, 3). The repentance and conversion of the Jews by the actual sight of their Messiah (Zech. xii. 10, 14). Full restoration and establishment of Israel and Judah in their own land (Ezek. xxxvii.; Zech. viii. 3—8; Jer. xxiii. 6—8, and xxxi. 31—40; Isaiah lxv. 18—23). Renewal of the earth by partial removal of the curse (Is. xxxv.; Joel iii. 18; Amos ix. 13) and change also in the natures of the animal creation (Isaiah xi. 6—9, and lxv. 25; Rom. viii. 21). Conversion of the Gentiles (Isaiah ii. 1—3, and xlix. 6; Micah iv. 1—4; Ps. xxii. 27, 28; Zech. viii. 20—22; Isaiah xi. 9; Hab. ii. 14; Mal. i. 11) and commencement of the Millennium, or visible personal sign of Christ and His risen glorified saints over the regenerated earth (Matt. xix. 28; Isaiah xxxii. 1; Jer. xxiii. 5, 6; Zech. xiv. 9; John i. 51; Rev. ii. 26, 27, iii. 21, and xx. 4).

What, then, is the object and character of the present Gospel Dispensation?

Not the conversion of the whole world, but, first, to make manifest the fulfilment of the Divine purposes in the institution of the preceding one—Judaism, with its system of teaching by types, sacrifices, and ordinances, and its consequent setting aside.

Also, the full clear revelation of God's perfect plan of saving lost man by the sacrifice of his own beloved Son, the God-Man Christ Jesus, once crucified for us, but now the risen, victorious, glorified Saviour (Heb. vii.—x.). This plan to be fully and faithfully proclaimed, by those who accept it, to "the whole world for a testimony unto all the nations" (R.V.); the ordained result to be, the gathering out from amongst them, both Jews and Gentiles, a people to his Name, to be his witnesses, "to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven," who shall bring in the succeeding age of universal righteousness.

At the close of that glorious period, another outbreak of Satanic and human wickedness is to take place, to be, however, speedily and finally put down (Rev. xx. 7—10), followed by the judgment of the wicked dead—the finally impenitent, before "the great white throne" (ver. 11 to 15), the passing away of the present heavens and earth, and the creation of "new heavens and a now earth," (Rev. xxi. 1—5) "wherein dwelleth righteousness," and where there shall be "no more curse" (2 Peter iii. 13; Rev. xxii. 3).

"These are the true sayings of God,' though but a part of those things He has revealed in his Word as yet to come to pass "Hath He said, and shall He not do it? or hath He spoken, and shall He not make it good?" "The Great Day of the Lord is near, it is near and hasteth greatly" (Zeph. i. 14). The ploughshares must be beaten into swords, and the pruning-hooks into spears (Joel iii. 10), ere the swords shall be beaten into ploughshares and the spears into pruning-hooks (Micah iv. 3). The mighty men of war must be awakened for the last dread conflict which comes as "a destruction from the Almighty," and terminates at Armageddon (Rev. xvi. 13—16), of which He has said, "I will overturn, overturn, overturn, until He come whose right it is, and I will give it HIM" (Ezek. xxi. 27), before we can reach the time when "the nations shall learn war no more." Many are crying, "Peace, peace!" and expecting to establish it on earth apart from the coming of the "Prince of Peace," in spite of what is thus clearly revealed, and in spite of the warning trumpet of the signs of the times, now waxing louder and louder. But "the counsel of the Lord, that shall stand." He must, after long forbearance, do his work of judgment on rebellious men, ere, as the Sun of Righteousness, He can arise with healing on his wings, and "fill the face of the world with fruit," the fruit of the Tree of Life.

These two contrasted periods in the closing years of the world's history are rapidly approaching, yea, are even at the door. "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh;" HE shall execute the judgment, and HE shall bear the Glory, and wear his "many crowns" in the scene of his former humiliation, and suffering, and death, for "the Father hath committed all judgment unto the Son." "Then the moon shall be confounded, and the sun ashamed, when the Lord of hosts shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously" (Is. xxiv. 23).

LIBERIA.—The American bark Monrovia recently sailed from New York to Liberia. Four negro families, who are to colonise in Liberia, were among the passengers. These colonists were accompanied by Rev. Andrew Cartwright, whose devotion to the interests of the colony was plainly shown by his returning in the steerage because the church needed all the funds which he had succeeded in collecting while on his visit to this country. On the same vessel the Rev. D. W. Frasier, of Howard University, went out as a Presbyterian missionary; also Miss Jennie E. Davis, a graduate of the Boston High School, who goes out to take charge of the Female Seminary.

For the Young.

TO THE BOYS AND GIRLS IN ENGLAND WHO ARE STUDYING FRENCH.

Dear Young Friends,—I have been thinking much about you lately, and how much may depend on the pains you take with your lessons now. It does not seem so very long, after all, since I was terribly discouraged with those verbs, thinking my French master needlessly exact about those tiresome irregular ones, and asking, too, in what way I could serve God by taking pains with my lessons.

Now what enjoyment I should have missed if I had neglected study! So I thought perhaps the Editor of The Christian would let me encourage you in your work by telling you a little of the joy we have in ours. It is solemn work to tell the news of salvation to sinners, but it is also joyful work; and up here among the mountains I am sure you would be delighted to learn to know the children if only you could talk to them and understand what they say.

One day I got into a Nuns' school, where the poor children were singing Latin hymns to the Virgin; so when they had sung to us, my friend sang to them—and I asked leave to tell them a story. If you had seen their bright eyes fixed on me as I told them of a foolish man who had only one treasure, a diamond ring, and who, playing with it, let it fall into the sea, you would have said, "It is worth while to work hard at French, so as to be able to invite the little French Catholics to give their only treasure, their heart, to the Lord Jesus, who died for them." The two nuns listened as eagerly as the children.

"Jésus, m'aime, moi petit, Oui! Lui même me l'appris;"

I wish you could see the children of Aucelon, how they climb and run on the very edge of the rocks, and hardly ever slip and hurt themselves. Many have been very ill lately, and have had to get well without either doctor or medicine. They seem quite as happy as children in the towns; perhaps happier, because there is not a shop within three hours' distance, so they are not always wanting "sous" to buy "bon-bons" or "dragées."

Last Sabbath was a great day for the children who were well enough. Once a year, before the summer heat has burned the grass, the pastor has a service high up on the mountain. He invited us to stay for it, and we were very glad to do so. Early on Sunday we were ready to start: it is nearly three hours' journey. Miss Mudie and I had a mule between us, with its master, an old shepherd, as guide. Though Aucelon is on one mountain, we began to climb up the steep stony paths directly. We could see nothing but mountains all round, and ravines below. Sometimes we rounded the head of a ravine, sometimes descended into it, but in general it was all up, along paths sometimes so narrow there was scant room for the mule's feet. Soon we heard other mules behind us, and the pastor's two boys, very happy on one mule, and a woman very comfortable across hers, with her little boy before her, came up and passed us. Others soon followed, among them the pastor, with his little Paul clinging behind him. It was very hot, but at length we came to the place for the meeting.

A forest shades the upper part of a mountain, the lower slope is covered with splendid green turf, rarely seen here, covered with flowers. Scattered beech trees gave shelter from the sun, and masses of box and wild roses were interspersed. But the flowers! White monkshood, turncap lilies, gentian, great blue campanulus of three sorts, were among the striking flowers, while very homelike were ragged robin and woodruff; but there were very many quite unknown to us. The roses were deep crimson and white. Aucelon is so narrowed on its mountain top that the mere space of greensward was joy enough for the children, and yet when we arrived not a child had strayed, only one boy ran up to us with a rare mountain fern and curious everlasting.

I wish you could have seen the group round the great beech tree. They had loosed the mules which were already eagerly enjoying the rich pasture, and now every one was glad of a piece of bread and fresh curd, which takes the place of butter here. A man from the nearest hamlet brought a mule laden with water, and his wife looked very happy when I told her she was giving many cups of cold water at once.

Then the meeting began, stragglers on foot coming in last, and no wonder, for it is a long, long way. We had been singing a beautiful hymn in Mr. M'All's hymn-book.

"Quel bonheur, quand faisant trève,
Un moment à nos labeurs
L'aube du saint jour s'élève,
Dans le ciel et dans nos cœurs!"

Truly rest on the turf was very sweet to these toilers under the summer sun. I was much struck with the perfect quiet and attention. Once a man had to run up the mountain after his mule, and once a woman started up suddenly to go after a tiny child who disappeared all at once behind a rock, but the order was never disturbed, and the pastor's words were sweet and solemn as he spoke of the great gathering there will be one day up above "la haut." Then he asked us to speak to the people too, and it was a great privilege to do so, with the clear blue sky above our head and eager faces drinking in every word. Prayer seemed, as the pasteur said, to go straight up to God.

Then came an interval for dinner, when each family group enjoyed their household bread and curds, or offered a share of their cheese or butter to a neighbour.

Then the pastor's daughter guided nearly all the children to the mountain top through the forest. We did not go so high, but the sound of their hymns came down to us as we rested among the roses on the hill side. The only anxiety of the day was caused by the tiny boy I mentioned before. He is two years old, and apparently the only restless one of the party, so during the meeting he wandered about among the flowers on the slopes below; no one noticed when the ambition seized him to climb. So, when his mother missed him, every one searched below, among the box-trees, except the schoolmistress, who, with another, looked higher up, nearer the forest, and there, fast asleep, his cheek on a stone, and his flowers beside him, lay the little wanderer.

Gradually all returned to the trysting-tree, and again there was prayer and praise, and the listeners were pressed to decide at once for Christ. Then came the separation: the mules were saddled, and soon the hill-side was left, deserted by all but a few grazing oxen. We took another road home, by the little hamlet in the valley, stopping to visit each house, and in the first to drink some warm goats' milk and taste the household bread. The others were sadly disappointed that we could not eat a second meal with them, but we had no more time.

Paul climbed gaily on to his sister's mule, Theodore and Samuel on another, and so we started, this time down a long, green valley, and then climbing up a kind of rocky terrace above a forest, where the depth of the precipice was hidden by clematis and honeysuckle. Out of the shade we passed on the long mountain slopes glowing in the setting sun, which was fast sinking behind the rocky heights behind Aucelon. We were home a few minutes after sunset.

Now if you would like to attend the mountain meeting next year, you must have your French ready or you will have little enjoyment and certainly be of little use. Seriously, dear boys and girls, will you work hard at your French, and pray that the Lord will prepare you to use this talent for Him?—

THE NORTHFIELD SCHOOLS.

As a supplement to the interesting communication which we inserted some weeks ago, Mr. W. H. Newett, of the Manchester Y.M.C.A., sends us the following particulars of Mr. Moody's Seminaries at Northfield; they will be welcome to his numerous friends on this side of the sea:—

In the female seminary, during the past year, there have been 51 boarders, viz., 9 from New York State, 3 from Maine, 3 from Delaware, 1 from Rhode Island, 8 from Vermont, 1 from Mobile, 1 from Indiana, 5 from Pennsylvania, 1 from Iowa, 1 from Virginia, 1 from Michigan, 5 from Canada, 1 from Germany, 1 from Bulgaria, and 10 Indian girls belonging to the Shawnee, Cherokee, Creek, and Choctaw nations. In addition to these boarders, the advantages of the Seminary have been shared by 101 day pupils from Northfield and the surrounding district. Applicants who wish to enter the Seminary as boarders, must be at least 15 years of age, able to pass examinations in arithmetic as far as Interest, in geography, and in grammar. They are required to bring certificates of good health, and to pay £20 per annum for tuition, board, and lodging.

It is desired to surround the students with such religious and social influences that at the end of their four years' training they shall go forth fully prepared to assume the responsibilities of life in the spirit of earnest consecration to the Master. In the accomplishment of this purpose, the study of the Bible is considered fundamental; and besides the regular course of weekly Bible lessons, its words and its spirit are daily brought to bear on the lives of all. One can more readily understand the secret of Mr. Moody's Bible readings, which are the most popular of his Mission services everywhere, by the training he receives at school in these weekly Bible lessons with the girls.

The students perform the work of the house, under the supervision of the matrons; regular exchange of work gives opportunity for a knowledge of the different departments. There is a good chemical laboratory for practical work, and the philosophical room is well supplied with valuable apparatus. A Physical Culture Society has been organised among the girls, which has for its object their enlightenment upon all subjects pertaining to health and to home and society relations. The motto of this branch of work, "Ye are the temple of the living God," tells the importance they attach to it. In addition, each Monday morning a plain talk is given to all the girls of the school upon suitable topics, and the eager interest shown is proof not only of interest, but of the felt need of such information. The girls also have a Missionary Society, meeting monthly, and its proceeds are given to the education of a girl in Miss Mumford's school at Philippopolis, Bulgaria. The lady principal is an M.D., there are five other female teachers, three assistants, and two matrons.

Mr. Moody's text for the school this year is, "I, the Lord, do keep it; I will water it every moment: lest any hurt it, I will keep it night and day" (Is. xxvii. 3). Amply has this promise been fulfilled in the pecuniary provision, in the teaching given, and in the health of the inmates.

SICK POOR IN EAST LONDON.

THE neighbourhood of Ratcliffe Highway presented an unwonted appearance on the 5th inst., when a number of its population turned out to keep a Hospital Sunday they had improvised for themselves. A special service had been arranged for at Shadwell Church, with a collection on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children in Shadwell. A dense throng of East Londoners marched in procession, with bands and banners, to the church, to show their hearty sympathy with an object so important in its bearing upon the homes of their own class. Collecting boxes were held all along the line of procession, to receive from the spectators contributions to the hospital funds. The church, of course, was crowded to excess. The procession, and indeed the whole proceedings, had been arranged by several temperance lodges, composed of working-men, among whom the hospital is held in high repute.

The institution on behalf of which this novel demonstration was made is a highly deserving one, and it is a cause for sincere regret that it should have to struggle with pecuniary difficulties. It is only sixteen years old, and owes its origin to the efforts of a young couple, Mr. and Mrs. Heckford, who in 1868 commenced the work by hiring two old warehouses for the purpose at Ratcliff-cross. These first experiences were rough and trying, but by degrees success attended the movement, and now the East London Hospital for Children, with its three wards and ninety cots, is the result. No fewer than 117,000 cases of outdoor and indoor patients have been treated since its establishment, and the need for its benevolent work in such a district is painfully felt and ever increasing.

Such manifestations of sympathy with an effort on behalf of suffering little ones, and such grateful appreciation of others' practical concern for them, as the fact referred to above betokens, indicates that our poorer fellow-citizens have kind hearts to be touched and honest sympathies to be aroused, if only they are wisely approached. The British workman may be rough in his exterior, and harder to reach than some in his susceptibilities, but none the less is he of the same flesh and blood as those who sometimes affect superiority to him, and well repays brotherly endeavour to elevate and benefit his class.

MISS WESTON AND THE SAILORS.

THE report issued by Miss Agnes E. Weston, of her work during the past twelve months' among our Blue Jackets, is a deeply-interesting record. Miss Weston now writes five Monthly Letters to seafaring men and boys, viz., for "The Royal Navy," "The Mercantile Navy," "Boys' Letters," "United States' Navy," and "North Sea Fishermen." In addition to the diffusion of over 250,000 monthly "comforts" to the men and boys, which exert an immense amount of spiritual and moral good among the recipients, Miss Wintz, a fellow-helper of Miss Weston's, has succeeded in the circulation of 7000 copies of a Temperance paper monthly.

With regard to the work of the "Rests" at Devonport, Portsmouth, and Sheerness, we observe that the number accommodated last year was 52,389, nearly 8000 more than the previous year. There could be no stronger evidence of the real value of these "Rests."

Miss Weston states that, to keep the work in full vigour during the coming year, she will require £500 more than last year. Her address is, Sailors' Rest, Devonport.

RELIEF OF PERSECUTED JEWS.

AS representing the Committee of the Syrian Colonisation Fund, the Earl of Shaftesbury appeals for immediate help in settling some 200 Jewish refugees upon land granted to them in the island of Cyprus by the Government. It must be peculiarly gratifying to him to have obtained protection and safety for this body of Israelites who have suffered at the hands of ignorant "Christians." If Jewish prejudice against Christianity is to be removed, the beginning must be made by practical acts of kindness. We trust that the money needed—about £1600—will speedily be contributed, and that the venerable Earl may be cheered by the response which will enable him and the Committee at once to take steps for securing next year's harvest, and the independence of this Jewish colony. To do this, the land—about three square miles in extent—must be cleared for sowing before October; cottages in which to live, and wells for water, must be provided. The sum needed is not large, but it is needed at once.

The Jews are delighted with the beauty of the island. Their land is situated on the hills, on a healthy spot, fit for vines and olives, and all the varied products of Cyprus. The climate, soil, and cultivation are similar to that of Palestine; cattle, poultry, and bees do well. Cyprus is within sight of the Land of Promise, to which it is as a stepping-stone, and may also become a training-school of agriculture, in preparation for the return of the people of Israel to their own land.

Fresh and serious outbreaks of persecution of Jews are reported from Hungary and from Russia. Lord Shaftesbury refers in his letter to the great work of relief which he and the Committee desire to prosecute in the Holy Land and elsewhere—when the Cyprus colony has been established. It is earnestly to be desired that this aged friend of Israel may be supported, and his hands strengthened, in the arduous work to which he is devoting himself. The Secretary of the fund is Mrs. Finn, 41, Parliament-street, S.W.

AMSTERDAM EXHIBITION.

A VERY interesting account of the good work carried on at the Kiosk here has been received by Mr. John Stabb from Mr. Doyer, the director. The distribution of the 4500 copies of John's Gospel, in the Dutch language, is regularly carried on, and a good use is being made of the thousands of tracts in various foreign languages recently granted by the Monthly Tract Society. Among the recipients were 400 young mariners and 200 boys from the Royal Naval Institution at Leiden; together with numbers of the employés, police, telegraph workers, military and marine workmen, and servants from the cafés and restaurants.

It is very interesting to learn that the friends at the Kiosk recently had a visit from the Queen of Sweden, who, together with the ladies accompanying her, took such an interest in the work that they volunteered to become tract distributors themselves on two occasions when they visited the Kiosk. It is encouraging to find that some of those to whom a tract has been given return after a time and ask for another. The Bible Society's Text-book has been found very acceptable.

It is hoped that the help which is needed to sustain this good work will be kindly given. Friends desirous of contributing should send to Mr. John Stabb, 29, Darville-road, Stoke Newington, N.

THE CHRISTIAN'S PORTION.

"My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory, by Christ Jesus."—Phil. iv. 19.

Is thy life lonely?
Jesus is near thee;
Is thy heart saddened?
Jesus can cheer thee.

Dost thou feel friendless?
Jesus befriends thee;
Helpless and hopeless?
His grace attends thee.

Dost thou lack power?
Jesus can give it;
Grace for life-witness?
From Him receive it.

Dost thou fear trial?
He will shine through it;
Fiery temptation?
Jesus foreknew it.

Long'st thou to love Him?
He notes thy sighing;
Notes it—to give thee
Soul-satisfying.

Would'st thou be faithful?
Christ can uphold thee;
Fear'st thou to falter?
His grace will enfold thee.

Out of his riches
Each need supplying,
Trust Him for living,
Trust Him for dying.

NEW BETHEL FOR SAILORS, GLASGOW.

FOR nine years past the Glasgow Seamen's Friend Society have carried on a very successful branch of their work among the sailors on the south side of the river in a hall near the Kingston Dock. The work has so prospered that the hall has been found too small for the numbers attending, and ill adapted for the needs of the work. The great increase of sailors residing on the south side of the river, has induced the directors of the society to look out for suitable premises as near the seafaring population as possible. They have succeeded in purchasing a piece of ground in Eaglesham-street, about twenty yards from the Govan-road, and in the immediate neighbourhood of the homes of 900 or 1000 sailors' families. They have decided to erect on this ground a seamen's chapel, library, free reading and recreation rooms, with accommodation for a coffee-house (when needed), all of which will be continually at the disposal of sailors.

Donations towards the £5,000 required will be gladly received by Mr. Richard H. Hunter, 27, Jamaica-street, Glasgow.

SINGING THE GOSPEL.—An Evangelistic choir (unsectarian), established to give free services of song and otherwise help Mission work in London, is badly in want of male voices. Services on week-days only. Applicants must have a knowledge of music, and be in communion with some Evangelical Protestant Church. Address Secretary, 132, Lorrimore-road, S.E.

BRAZIL.—Rev. E. Vanorden writes from Rio Grande, on July 2: "Yesterday we commemorated the Lord's death, when four Italians, three young men and one married, made a public profession of their faith in Jesus. Our services are very well attended. Among those who come is a captain of the regiment in garrison here, a man of superior education, who is diligently searching the Scriptures. Our negro converts are doing very well, but have much to suffer on account of their faith in Jesus. Six years ago when I arrived here there was not one convert in the city, now through God's mercy a working Church of Christ has arisen, with a bright future of extending its usefulness to other parts. Will friends pray for us, and send their annual donations to Mr. M. H Hodder, 27, Paternoster-row, London."

DARK MOROCCO.

MY DEAR SIR,—I meant to have written you before this about our visit to the land of the "Moors." It is now over a month since we returned to England, after spending six months in forming some acquaintance with dark Morocco and its benighted though interesting people.

It would seem as if the piracy and slavery which were so long and so viciously practised against Europeans by the Moors, or people of Morocco, and maintained to so recent a date, had inspired them with such a dread and feeling of alienation towards both the region and name of the "Moor," that their very abolishment has become a signal for bidding a long farewell to that land, once the terror of Europe. For many years past there has been no desire but to leave the Moor to himself, and have nothing more to do with him, so that literally he has been shut up a prisoner in his own land and buried in oblivion, with no one to care for his release, or disentomb the unrelenting pirate and slave master any more. So thoroughly has this been done, that to prevent him from coming out on the high seas again, all his ships were destroyed, and to this day not one is permitted to him beyond the few lighters or barges that lie in the ports of call, to carry goods to and from the English and French steamers and the shore. Thus in the course of much less than a century the tables have been so completely turned, that the Moor, not long ago the foe and robber of the mariners of all Europe, lies now disabled and dejected at their feet. He is fallen! And how great has been his fall!

But it is not for the Christian, in this the day of grace, to stand afar off from his fallen foe in cold and hopeless indifference, but rather should he return—not to revenge, but to render good for evil; thus far the way for exhibiting practical Christianity in Morocco is open. There is now no longer the piratical fleet to dread, nor yet the fear of having to endure the misery and degradation of Moorish slaves. The wild, unsparing fanaticism that brooded over Morocco, and, almost as much as a cholera cloud, filled the opposite continent with dread and dismay, has now virtually passed away. True, a few of the wildest and most unfrequented parts of the country, especially among some of the mountain regions, where the people are not only fanatical but independent, are still sealed against anyone in the garb of a "Rûmy," or European; but the seaport towns, and a great part of the interior, are as open and safe for travellers as Egypt or Syria.

The Sultan of Morocco, Mulai Hassan, and his Government, do their best in their way, not perhaps so much from friendliness as from fear, to protect the few Europeans who go into their dominions, so as to avoid a quarrel or dispute that might lead war ships to pay their coast an unwelcome visit, as was done not many years ago both by the French and Spanish fleets. The events that occurred in Egypt last year helped also to overawe them. This salutary fear instilled into the mind of the once proud and cruel oppressor, is now ostensibly the safeguard of Europeans residing in or visiting Morocco, so that most of the Moors, in their present condition, show a desire to be friendly with strangers, and in a good many instances of late the peasants have been eagerly seeking the partnership in trade of the once hated Christians, so as to obtain through them the protection of their Consuls against the crying wrongs and grinding oppression of their own Moorish rulers.

In this and other ways the providence of God would seem to be opening a door into dark and long-sealed Morocco for European influence and trade, and (shall we not pray?) for Christian teaching and light, so that Moorish exclusiveness and tyranny are becoming both their own punishment and cure.

As to personal experience, I found the people friendly, both in the sea-coast towns and in the interior, with almost no exception, and not unwilling to be spoken to on religious subjects by a Christian. The reverse rather was true, for they seemed in many instances to be surprised and pleased to find a Christian who would speak to them on such matters. One Moor from the great inland city of Fez, who had seen the copy of Proverbs and the Gospel of John which I had given to another man, was so interested in them that he got his friend to come and introduce him to me, and beg me to give him copies of the same two books. He said he would thoroughly study them, and if he found in them the truth, he would gather his relations and friends together, after returning home, to study them with him. After I spoke a few words to him, he told me he had never met anyone before who spoke to him of such things. I gave him the books, and we can only pray "that the Word may not return void." Some asked me with evident interest, "What do you Christians really know and believe about Christ?" Others have asked, "Is He now dead or alive?" And that in such a spirit as evidenced doubt in their own Moslem traditions about Him, and respect for a Christian's testimony on the subject.

In villages that I have visited considerable groups have gathered round me and have listened with attention and interest while I have read and spoken to them from the Bible. At one village where I gave an intelligent young man an Arabic Gospel on loan until I should return a second time, he immediately went off and brought me a dish of fresh milk. But with all this it was difficult to find any who were willing to pay money for the book, which they were otherwise glad to receive. David's spirit in refusing to offer to the Lord "what cost him nothing" has yet to be known.

The Bible Society have kindly agreed to send us back to make a second journey to the parts of Morocco which were not visited, so as to make further investigations into the state of the country; and I earnestly trust the Lord of the harvest may move other labourers to think of that dark and needy land, and go there to labour for the enlightenment of its benighted people. I append a list of the special wants of Morocco as a missionary field for the consideration of those whose hearts the Lord may incline, reminding them that in the whole of that dark land, containing MORE THAN SIX MILLIONS OF PEOPLE, there is ONLY ONE MISSIONARY!

Yours faithfully, W. Mackintosh.

GIBRALTAR AND NORTH-WEST AFRICA.

Among the crying wants of this needy and unoccupied field are:—

(1) A gifted missionary who knows or would acquire Spanish thoroughly, for the Spanish population of Gibraltar. A large, intelligent, and well-to-do section of the people have so far broken off from Popish allegiance that they do not attend the Roman Catholic Church, and are drifting into Socialism. He could also visit Algeciras and other Spanish towns in the neighbourhood, as well as Tangier, where, besides the Moorish population, about twelve or fourteen thousand Spaniards and Spanish-speaking Jews reside.

(2) A thoroughly good school at Tangier for children of Spanish-speaking British subjects (mostly from Gibraltar). English must be taught as well as Spanish, and after a time French and Arabic might be found necessary. We have had an earnest letter from a representative of this community, requesting that such a school should be opened, including a branch for boys and another for girls, and they hold out the hope that it would be partly self-supporting.

(3) An orphanage for Moorish children at Tangier would be a missionary agency of inestimable value, by giving a practical knowledge of Christ in the present time, and by preparing native labourers for the future. Language—Arabic.

(4) A Mission, including medical mission for all classes, Spaniards, Jews, and Moors, in Tangier and surrounding country. Language—Spanish and Arabic.

(5) A general Mission to the Rîfians and other Berber tribes in the north of Morocco, with Tetwân, for the present, as centre. They are wild, independent, and uncivilised, but most intelligent and industrious. Language—Rîfy and Arabic.

(6) Mission to Moors in Central Morocco; basis at Rabat, the nearest point from which the large and populous inland cities of Fas and Miknâs could be occasionally visited. Language—Arabic.

(7) Mission to the Shlûh or Sûs people in the south of Morocco; starting point, Mogodor or Agadîr. Language—Shilha (a dialect of Berber) and Arabic. A permanent centre would have to be further south. The missionary for the Jews at Mogodor is the only missionary at present in the whole empire of Morocco, with its six or seven millions of people. This section of the country has a coast-line of two hundred miles from Agadîr to the river Draa, includes Wâd Sûs, Wâd Nûn, and the whole of Sidi Hashim, and stretches hundreds of miles inland. During the last few months a British Trading Company, represented by Mr. James Curtis, has been trying to gain a footing at Erkshîsh, near the middle of this coast, fifty miles south-west of Aglû. Bedawin Arab tribes are found interspersed with the Sûs people in this region. They speak exactly the same dialect of Arabic as that current in Syria at the present day.

(8) A Mission to numerous and most interesting tribes of Bedawin Arabs and Berbers inhabiting the great belt of North Africa, marked on maps as the Sahâra, with an Atlantic coast-line of 900 miles, extending from the River Draa to the Senegal, and stretching across the Dark Continent eastward between the south-east boundary of Morocco and Timbuctoo till the confines of Egypt are reached. At Cape Juby, the nearest headland of this region, after leaving the coast of South Morocco, is the station of the English trading company, which Mr. Mackenzie has been organising for the past few years. Comparatively little is known of this immense tract, but we have sufficient information to prove that it contains a large population of varied and interesting people. At Tangier we were told, for example, about the people of Shinghit, a town of twenty or thirty thousand souls, in the province of Adrâr, in the south-west of this so-called Sahâra, that they are very fond f books, and are quite a literary and pious people in their way. From there Arab Moslems come all the way to Tangier by land, and thence go by sea to Jedda on pilgrimage to Mecca. The chief language of the Sahâra is Arabic, but dialects of Berber prevail also.

MOUNTAIN TRACTS.—Mr. Henry Hill, jun., has prepared an illustrated leaflet for distribution amongst the mountaineers of Tyrol and Switzerland, and will be glad to supply travellers with the same at cost price, viz., 12s. 6d. per 1000, if they apply to him at 38, Bow-lane, London, E.C.

NEW MISSION HALL, WALWORTH.—A Mission Hall and Class-rooms were opened here last week, when Rev. G. D. Copeland was able to announce that they were opened free of debt. Several other friends gave addresses, and a profitable commencement was made of a work which is intended to supplement the parochial work carried on by the vicar.

A HOME FOR THE FATHERLESS.

A TEA and public meeting to commemorate the fourteenth anniversary of Mr. Toye's Home was held on Friday, August 3, in the schoolrooms of the Home, situate in Lewisham-road, Greenwich. An inspection was made by the visitors of the houses, of which there are five. Much satisfaction and pleasure were expressed at the admirable way in which the arrangements for the comfort and happiness of the children are carried out, and to which the healthy-looking faces of the children abundantly testified.

Mr. Toye gave an interesting account of the Lord's dealings with him during the past year. He said: "It is just fourteen years ago since the Lord first led me to undertake this work in simple dependence upon Him day by day to meet all our need. I rejoice to be able to make my boast in the Lord. We have never once during these fourteen years wanted for a loaf of bread. Many times during that period we have been without a meal till almost the meal time has come round. But it has not been so lately; only once last year were we brought very close. Sometimes our funds have been very low; some days I do not get a penny. I think yesterday there only came in sixpence, and I think the day before it was one halfpenny, which I found in the box at the gate. The smallest sums have been a halfpenny, and the largest has been £300 (deducting £30 for legacy duty), which was left by a dear old lady whom I only once met at a Bible meeting in Tunbridge Wells.

"Here we are, at the close of another year, testifying to God's wondrous love and faithfulness. The Lord has been very gracious to me, and to-night, if I were to be silent, the very stones and the pillars which sustain the schoolroom would cry out, if I did not make my boast in the Lord, and speak of his wondrous love and his tender mercies over us from day to day. Perhaps there never was a time when all our necessities were so kindly and graciously met. Some of you have seen the children out, and noticed how tidy they look. Well, I have my show days. I take my children out sometimes that people might see what God can do. Why should I take them out in ragged clothes? I put all the ragged things away. I am exceedingly careful about this because I think God's children ought not to go out with things that want patching.

"There are many more applications for the admission of destitute children than we can entertain; as the Lord is pleased to allow me to add house to house, and fit them up, so we receive. At present 100 of the children sleep in cots made with my own hands. I do not speak this boastingly, but just to show that when the Lord gives his servants their work, He gives them the willingness and the ability to do it. I trust I can say my aim is that the Lord may be glorified."

Several gentlemen addressed the meeting; and during the evening the children sang some appropriate hymns. At the present time there are 134 children in the Home—50 boys and 84 girls. Communications may be addressed to Mr. Toye, Lewisham-road, Greenwich, S.E.

Y.W.C.A., ISLE OF WIGHT.—On Thursday, August 2, the Annual Meeting and Summer Outing of the branches of the Isle of Wight Young Women's Christian Association was held at Cowes. Over 130 took tea together in the Dolphin Temperance Coffee Hall. Rev. H. Thwaites, vicar of St. John's, Newport, made some excellent statements about the work and advantages of Young Women's Christian Associations. Bishop Cheetham, Vicar of East Cowes, spoke in a loving manner as to the necessity and appropriateness of Young Women's Christian Associations. Rev. I. Mummery, from London, gave a telling address on the real moral benefits and spiritual blessings such associations were to this country, and recommended them to the support and prayers of all Christians in the Isle of Wight. The company afterwards adjourned to the beautiful Green Banks at the west end of Cowes, where they enjoyed the warm and refreshing sea-breezes, and heartily sung several of Mr. Sankey's hymns.

A DARK SPOT IN SOUTH LONDON.

"WELL, you quite woke me up last Sunday evening. I had been in bed until you commenced your meeting; then I said to the missus, 'I shall get up and see what them chaps are up to;' and I suppose you had been going on for an hour before I came out." These words were spoken by a working man. The Sunday referred to was July 29. After much prayer and consideration, we had decided to go forth in the strength of the Lord, and proclaim in the open air the "good tidings of great joy" to a people who seldom if ever hear God's message of peace. There were but two of us; but, God was with us, and, taking our stand in a central position, we commenced singing:

"Ho, my comrades, see the signal Waving in the sky."

Before we had finished this song we had a large audience, composed principally of children, many adults also coming out to their doors to hear the simple Gospel told in a simple manner.

The neighbourhood has a population of between 5000 and 6000 persons. The devil and his servants are of course very busy, and there are no less than eleven gin-palaces regularly frequented and supported by a large number of the population; yet the only house of God in the district will not accommodate more than 200. What is to be done for these 5000 souls "for whom Christ died," but who are totally neglected in this dark place. This question has for a considerable time been laid heavily upon the mind of a brother in Christ who has a factory on the spot. At his own expense he has taken the adjoining building, consisting of two large rooms, each capable of holding 400 persons. These rooms are to be furnished as soon as possible, and Gospel meetings for adults and children will be frequently held. A Sunday-school will be commenced, and every effort will be made to tell in this neigbourhood

"The old, old story,
Of Jesus and his love."

On Sunday, August 5, the "upper room" was opened, although the seats then available would not accommodate more than fifty. A children's service was held in the morning, attended by as many as could be comfortably seated. In the afternoon, about 120 young people assembled; some were seated on forms, while very many either stood or sat on the floor, and eagerly listened to the Gospel. One young man occupied himself nearly all the time by going into the streets, and bringing in his companions; and even during the singing of the last hymn some big lads were following him up the stairs. Again in the evening an open-air meeting was held, when at least 500 persons were within hearing of the Word of God. It is worthy of record that the working-man who addressed us with the sentence put at the commencement of this notice was present at each meeting, at 11, 3, and 6.30.

This work is certainly of God. It is quite unsectarian, and it is not connected with any existing agency. We have no doubt that the means needed for the furnishing of the rooms and for the support of the Mission will be sent by Him who has put it into the hearts of his servants to begin the work. We are also looking to Him for labourers in this part of the great field, which is truly white already to harvest. Particulars will be given to any who may be led to send tracts or magazines for general distribution, or to render help in any department of the work, by Mr. S. Clayton, 85, Montpelier-road, Peckham; or by F. T. Watt.

THE HEATHEN WORLD.— A striking tract has been issued from the Orphans' Printing-press, Leominster, on the preaching of the Gospel to the heathen world. On the first page is a reproduction of the engraving which shows the comparative condition of the world from a Christian standpoint. The great black space which represents the 856 millions of the heathen world ought to carry to the mind of the Christian a constant suggestion of the need of effort in spreading abroad the news of salvation through Christ. The tract is sold at 1s. per 100.

RAILWAY MEN IN THE WEST.

NOWHERE, perhaps, have the Evangelistic operations of the Railway Mission been crowned with greater or more genuine success than at the hall in Kensal-road, near Westbourne-park. This neighbourhood is thickly peopled with the families of those employed in various capacities by the Great Western Railway Company. Last January Gospel services were commenced by Mr. G. Clarke, Secretary of the Mission, at the hall in Kensal-road, seating 200 persons. These meetings have been continued without intermission up to the present time, and very abundant have been the fruits. Many instances of real turning from sin to God have been met with, in some cases embracing whole households. A fortnight's special Evangelistic Mission was recently held, when a large number professed to have found Christ as their Saviour.

The work has now assumed considerable proportions. There are three services on the Lord's day, and nightly meetings during the week, in addition to the purely Gospel gatherings, these embrace a Bible-class, conducted by Lady Hope, Temperance meetings under the guidance of the men themselves, which have proved most successful, and largely attended a Saturday afternoon meeting for children. The growth of the Mission, while it has rejoiced the hearts the of workers, has also placed them in a serious difficulty, because of the lack of room for the crowds that wish to attend. This is felt especially on Sunday evenings, when numbers have to be sent away, an open-air service being first held, from the door of the hall. This fact deters many from coming under the sound of the Gospel. Having endeavoured to enter the hall on several occasions without success they naturally stay away, and the opportunity of reaching them is lost. The existing building is also sadly out of repair.

It has therefore become an imperative necessity, if the work is to continue, to secure enlarged and better accommodation. The committee of the Mission are anxious to build a larger hall on the present site; this they can do by acquiring an adjoining shop. The attendants at the services are showing an eager and active interest in the project; in the space of about a month the men themselves have collected £140 towards the new building. Some of the details of this laudable effort on their part are of touching interest. One man, having a pension of 8s. a week, promises to devote 6d. a week to the building fund. A woman who earns a scanty sustenance by mangling takes a collecting card, and heads the list of contributions with half a crown. Over seventy of the men, whose wages amount to a pound a week, have each given or collected £1; one man collected as much as £40. A little girl, whose heart is full of zeal in the good cause, has secured £2 by levying pennies on every likely person she meets.

These samples of the earnestness shown by the people are undoubted tokens of how they appreciate the spiritual provision they find through the live and hearty services conducted at the hall. They have done what they can, but £140 only goes a small way towards the £600 needed for the larger hall, with a reading-room attached. If a generous Christian public will but emulate the example thus set them, the desire of the workers will be speedily fulfilled, and this Mission will be more than ever a centre of spiritual, moral, and temporal blessing to the neighbourhood. The address of Mr. Clarke is 186, Aldersgate-street, London, E.C.

THE BASIM MISSION, INDIA.—The Bombay Guardian of July 14 says:—"We have much pleasure in mentioning the arrival of two ladies from America, Miss French and Miss Millet, for the Basim Mission. Miss Wheeler was left in sole charge on the departure of the Misses Sisson last year. Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Fuller have been there for some months, but will probably be removing soon to some other station. We hope the ladies who have now arrived will be favoured with health and good spirits and a wide and effectual door of usefulness. Miss E. Sisson is expected out again in a few months.

Notes and Comments.

AN Indian Prince, Sardan Herman Singh, heir to one of the richest provinces in the North of Hindostan, is stated to have been led to the knowledge of salvation in Christ through the labours of some Presbyterian missionaries; in consequence, according to Hindoo practice, he has lost all right to the succession.

Perhaps the petition signed by 231 missionaries in China, and presented last week to the House of Commons praying for the discontinuance of the Opium trade, may quicken the conscience, or at least the action, of our legislators. Let us hope so, for the sake of all that is righteous and tending to the welfare of men.

The Revised Version of the New Testament has received the imprimatur of a recent Convention of Baptists at Saratoga, the first formal sanction it is said to have obtained from any of the larger religious bodies. Dean Vaughan, of the Temple Church, has been deploring the almost total cessation of public interest in the Revision, and says it will have to be re-revised.

It is proposed to erect a suitable memorial as a token of public esteem towards the late Canon Battersby. Those who have had the privilege of attending the Conventions at Keswick will doubtless readily join in such an expression of gratitude for the blessings received through these meetings. It is not yet decided what form the memorial should take. Communications may be addressed to Mr. R. Wilson, Broughton Grange, Carlisle.

A friend who is conversant with the facts of the case, draws attention to the misspelling of the names mentioned in a short article in our issue of last week, on "The Poles of East Prussia." The Countess Anna Groeben and Pastor Cludius are the earnest workers who are seeking to provide for these neglected populations. Our correspondent, who is personally acquainted with the Countess Groeben, says:—

"I think it must be six years ago now that you inserted an appeal on behalf of her church. Her mother denied herself luxuries, sold work, &c., and the daughters persevered in their efforts, till finally, I hope, the church will be opened next spring. The readers of THE CHRISTIAN helped greatly."

The death of the celebrated Dr. Robert Moffat, the noble African missionary and intrepid traveller, occurred on the evening of the 9th inst. At the advanced age of eighty-eight we could not have hoped to retain him long in our midst, but his death, nevertheless, is an event which we are sorry to have to record. His presence was a link with the past, as well as an ornament to the present, that we very regretfully part with. His name has long been a household word throughout the land; indeed, in every country of the world it has been known and honoured as that of a truly great and heroic man. His dauntless spirit, unaffected piety, and untiring efforts for the welfare of mankind have for many years marked him out as foremost among the servants of our Lord to whom the honour of evangelising a dark world has been assigned. Long as the age lasts will the honoured name of Moffat, associated with that of Livingstone, be held in highest repute; by the exemplary saintliness and devotion of his life many will continually be animated to consecration and fervour in the Master's cause.

Rev. T. Howard Gill, Rector of Trowbridge, Wilts, a well-known Evangelical clergyman, has been appointed the Chaplain of the English Church, Rue d'Aguesseau, Paris. The Record congratulates the English residents in Paris on the fact; and it is cause for thankfulness that Protestant Church principles should be faithfully represented in that city, as they will be, we are assured, by Mr. Gill.

Another island, it appears, has been destroyed by volcanic eruption and earthquake, although not attended with such terrible loss of life as in the case of Ischia—the island of Ometepec, on Lake Nicaragua. The inhabitants have been removed in schooners and boats to Granada, Rivas, and other cities, and the pleasant slopes which have been cultivated for centuries, are now a scene of complete devastation and ruin.

Notwithstanding the factious opposition of one or two members of Parliament, Mr. S. Morley's Bill for the Prohibition of the Payment of Wages in Public-houses has at last become law. Employers of labour will henceforth be obliged, as a general rule, to pay their workmen apart from the temptations of the public-house. The majority of working men themselves will be thankful for this useful piece of legislation; their wives and families will, doubtless, reap much benefit, while the sobriety of the bread-winner will be enhanced.

Another much-needed measure, introduced by Mr. Anderson, for the suppression of pigeon-shooting for purposes of sport, has also happily escaped from the clutches of the Obstructionists, and is now fairly under way to being enrolled on the statute-book of the nation.

Last year Canon Wilberforce threw a bombshell into the ranks of his fellow Churchmen in denouncing the proprietary, by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, of a number of public-houses. The late Archbishop of Canterbury requested the Commission to investigate the matter; the result of the investigation has now been communicated to the House of Lords by the Bishop of Rochester, and is issued as a Parliamentary return. It appears that the statements of the Canon were somewhat exaggerated, neither of the four public-houses specified by him being under the control of the Commissioners. At the same time, they are compelled to admit that they have an interest in as many as twenty-four drink shops on their London estates.

The praiseworthy action of Canon Wilberforce has no doubt quickened the desire to shake themselves clear of this reproach, expressed by the Commissioners; but judging from the published statements, they seem to be very half-hearted over it. They are evidently more concerned about the financial than the moral aspects of the subject. The Freeman is justified in saying that "if any other religious body were to authorise a like confession, the scandal would make its ministers and members ashamed, and the evil would presently be put an end to."

Referring to the same subject, The Echo makes the remark that "every man of common sense and ordinary observation knows full well that twenty-four public-houses will do more harm to society in a month than a whole Bench of Bishops will do good in a year."

The formal opening of the Noel Park Estate, Hornsey, by Lord Shaftesbury, on Saturday week, is an event in the social annals of the Metropolis worthy of note. It is the third large suburban estate acquired by the Artisans and General Dwellings Company, and will provide 2600 separate dwellings for the industrial classes. The erection of public-houses is prohibited on all the company's estates—a good example, which the Ecclesiastical Commissioners would do well to follow. Mr. S. Morley, M.P., one of the speakers at the opening ceremonial, made the practical suggestion that the Government should lend money, at a low rate of interest, for the erection of suitable dwellings for the poor, one of the greatest social needs of the day.

The Presbyterian pastorate in London is about to receive a valuable accession in the person of the Rev. R. M. Thornton, of Glasgow, who has accepted a call from the Camden-road Church, vacant by the departure of Mr. Dinwiddie to Australia. Among other ministerial changes is the settlement of the Rev. W. H. Jellie (till recently a Congregational minister) over a Presbyterian church in Canterbury. The death is announced of two "Disruption worthies," Rev. Dr. Thomson, Paisley, and Rev. W. Cousin, Melrose; the latter was the husband of the author of the well-known hymn—

"The sands of time are sinking,
The dawn of heaven breaks."

The earliest public utterances of M. Waddington, the new French Ambassador, are full of good omen. At a large meeting of working men from London held at Normanhurst Court last week, he said "he wished the English people to know that the mission on which he was engaged was a message of peace and goodwill. He had full and profound hope that the work he had undertaken he should be able to carry out." Every well-wisher to France and England must rejoice in such an assurance, and join heartily in the conviction he expressed that the English people and Government would support him in his endeavour to maintain and consolidate a peace so essential to the welfare of both nations.

In connection with this we note with much thankfulness the hopeful words of the Prime Minister at the Lord Mayor's banquet last week. We hope Mr. Gladstone's caution as to the need of exercising patience with regard to reports from abroad will not be forgotten.

The meeting at which M. Waddington's words were spoken was of a very interesting and commendable character. Sir Thomas Brassey, M.P., had invited the members of the London Working Men's Club and Institute, with their wives and children, to pay him and Lady Brassey a visit on Bank Holiday. The mansion and beautiful grounds of the honourable baronet were thrown open for their inspection and enjoyment. Upwards of one thousand persons availed themselves of the invitation. Sir Thomas, in his address, speaking of himself and other large employers, expressed a sentiment which cannot be too generally inculcated and applied, when he said, "Their great aim should be to use their advantages for the good of others." Were this principle more widely acted upon by our great capitalists the relations between capital and labour would be far more sound and friendly, and much would be effected in the way of remedying many of the social evils which exist.

The advocates of Sunday amusements lose no opportunity of urging their cause, and loosening the bonds by which the due observance of the Day of Rest is maintained. The Committee of the Sunday Society have adopted a memorial to the Prince of Wales and the Committee of the International Fisheries Exhibition, praying that it should be opened some few Sundays before it is finally closed, and stating that they are prepared to furnish attendants if their request is granted. We observe with satisfaction that the authorities have declined to comply with the request. It would have been a lamentable thing for so bad an example to be set and so dangerous a precedent established for further efforts in the same direction.

The Baptist Missionary Society has experienced a great loss in the death of another of their devoted band of workers on the Congo River. Mr. John Hartland, who went out with Mr. Comber and others some four years ago, has expired at his post, a fearful attack of dysentery having proved too much for his strength to sustain. Amid severest suffering of body, his mind was kept in a state of almost seraphic joy and peace. His dying words to his beloved fellow-workers were :—

"Christ is all in all. Let me go, my friends. Don't hold me back. I must go. I want to go to Him. 'Simply to thy cross I cling.' Let me go."

His struggles then ceased, and he was gone to be with Jesus. His loss will be deeply felt by his brethren, and his premature end is a mystery of Providence truly inscrutable and deep. But it is right; and the influence of his death, at once so calm and yet triumphant, cannot fail to produce beneficial results upon the churches at home, in deepening sympathy with the work to which he was so devoted.

Mr. Jos. Tritton, the Treasurer of the Society, has written the following beautiful and touching lines on the event. They are published in the Society's Herald for the current month :—

"Don't keep me, friends, I want to be With Him," for whom I crossed the sea;
Left home beloved, and brethren dear,
His name to speak, his cross to rear,
On these dark shores outstretched around,
Where none have raised "the joyful sound."

"Don't keep me,"—I had thought awhile
To serve, with his approving smile,
And win some trophies for his crown
Ere yet I laid the banner down
And sank beneath the sands to rest—
Strange, "strange it seems, but He knows best."

"Hold me not back,"—for voices sweet
My listening ear already greet;
And forms I see, as though they wait
To bear me gladsome through the gate,
Thine first to whom my soul takes wing,
While "simply to thy cross I cling."

"Hold me not back,"—let dying speech
From Congo's shore far homeward reach,
And many a youthful heart beat high,
Like him to live, like him to die;
True life-word this, on Duty's track,
At God's high call, "Hold me not back."

The New York City Mission and Tract Society have adopted what promises to be a very successful plan of providing for the spiritual necessities of those not reached by the various religious sects and parties which exist. They have organised undenominational churches, based upon the Apostles' Creed as their theological standard, the spiritual government of which is in the hands of a pastor and a board of church officers; the latter chosen annually by the members from among themselves. Free-will offerings are made by all the people for the support of the ministry, and for incidental expenses, the buildings being erected at the cost of the Mission funds. Everything is so arranged that the working man may feel at home, and that without repelling his sense of independence and self-respect. The temporalities of the church are managed by the City Mission, in whose hands the title to the property is also placed.

The advantages of this method are many and great. Regularity of worship is secured, Gospel teaching as well as evangelistic work is provided, and a suitable Christian home for new converts is established, where fellowship and fraternal aid may be enjoyed. The success which has attended the movement is attested by the fact that already four of these churches for the people are in active operation, while the society proposes to erect buildings for others as fast as funds become available for the purpose.

As the time draws near for the expected return to London of Messrs. Moody and Sankey, it behoves all who long that the metropolis should be graciously visited, through their instrumentality by the Divine presence and power, to be fervent in prayer on their behalf. The way must be prepared, and the Lord's remembrancers must not keep silence, if great blessing is to be obtained.

Lord Shaftesbury has added one more to his many claims on the nation's gratitude by his earnest speech in the House of Lords on Friday week on behalf of juvenile acrobats. It appears that the Bill passed in 1879 has failed to stop the cruelties imposed on young children, because its provisions do not apply to the period of training, when the real mischief is done. As Lord Dalhousie, on behalf of the Government, expressed the fullest sympathy with the objects aimed at in Lord Shaftesbury's speech, we may fairly hope that next session will bring an adequate alteration in the law.

The work of Temperance Reform is progressing in New Zealand, where it has been and is still sorely needed. Sir William Fox, who has long and strenuously toiled in the cause, has at last succeeded in getting a Licensing Bill passed, which goes far to rival the Local Option Bill proposed for adoption among ourselves. The need of it appears to have been exceptionally urgent, judging from the statements made by a correspondent of The Christian World, who says :—

"It is none too soon that God-fearing men have bestirred themselves, for in these semi-tropical climates strong drink soon does its work. Lunatic asylums were fast becoming too small. Crime was on the increase, and pauperism was looming in the near distance. The leprosy had got into the Christian Church, and priest and people were falling fast before its touch. One of the saddest pages of colonial history would be the record of ministers and church members who have gone astray through strong drink."

It is sad and distressing beyond degree to learn from the same source that "the supreme obstacle to Temperance reform in New Zealand is the strange insensibility of Christian merchants to the sin of distributing the accursed stuff." The chief importer of strong drink in Nelson is said to be a leading Wesleyan, and an ex-President of the Young Men's Christian Association, while a prominent Presbyterian rivals him in the traffic. The Maori race are so addicted to drunkenness through the introduction of intoxicating liquors to the Colony by ourselves, that they are fast disappearing before its influence, "poisoned," as the writer says, "by the fiery liquor." It is indeed a good thing to learn that total abstinence has so far advanced in the island as that in one town at least the last public-house has just been closed, while numbers are rallying round the Temperance banner in the various centres of the population.

Our enthusiastic brother, Mr. R. Adcock, of Norwich, suggests, in a somewhat lengthy communication, that Mr. C. H. Spurgeon should, if possible, be induced to take a year's entire rest from public work. This, says our correspondent, might, in the providence of God, lead to his complete restoration to health and vigour, and so conserve and prolong a most valuable life. In order to relieve Mr. Spurgeon's mind of all anxiety during this period, with respect to the institutions over which he presides, Mr. Adcock further suggests that the sum of £30,000, which he estimates as the sum annually needed to sustain the many agencies of the Metropolitan Tabernacle, should be subscribed by the Christian world, and presented to the famous preacher on his next and fiftieth birthday.

Whether or not Mr. Spurgeon ought to cease from all his labours for a twelvemonth is a matter solely for himself to decide. We feel certain, however, that he ought to raise no objection to the second proposal of our correspondent; we trust it will be taken up and carried to a successful issue.

Last Sunday morning Exeter Hall was crowded at Mr. Spurgeon's first service there, during the repair of the Metropolitan Tabernacle. He said he was exceedingly feeble in bodily health, and, he feared, mentally as well; there were no traces of that, however, in his admirable discourse, from Acts xx. 24: "To testify the Gospel of the grace of God." It was a magnificent exposition and defence of Evangelical truth; we trust our readers will help its circulation through every possible channel. Some of the passages were marked by the characteristic vigour of the preacher, as for instance when he said, in alluding to Paul's readiness to sacrifice his life for the sake of the Gospel :—

"We have gospels now-a-days that I would not die for, nor would I recommend anyone to die for them, inasmuch as they are gospels that will be snuffed out within a few years. I have lived long enough to see half a dozen new gospels. They have gone on improving and improving it, and heaven knows—perhaps hell knows—what next will come of their improvements; I am sure I do not. Is there any doctrine in the Bible at all worth dying for? Perhaps, after all, the martyrs were great fools—especially the English martyrs who went to Smithfield, and burned merrily for Christ—a set of fools every one of them, were they not, to die for ideas that are exploded now-a-days? I do believe that in their heart of hearts some of our moderns think there is no such thing as truth at all; or if there be, they have not got down to it yet."

The Sunday evening services at Exeter Hall, during Mr. Spurgeon's brief sojourn there, are free to all without tickets. On the last Sunday evening (Sept. 2) he will preach specially to young men. His week-evening service, this day (Thursday), will be held in Rev. Newman Hall's Church, Westminster Bridge-road.

SPA, BELGIUM.—We are requested to state that contributions for Miss Beamish's Memorial Fund, referred to in our last issue, will be received by Rev. Horace Noel, White Rose Grange, Woking, Surrey.

FOREIGN PRISONS AND THEIR SYSTEMS.

By CHARLES COOK.

"SURE, Sor, it's me boy I'm going to see," answered the old Irishwoman, in answer to my inquiry as to whom she was going to visit. We were on board the "Prisoners' boat," having just left New York, and were bound for "Blackwell's Island," on which is situated the City Prison. Having landed, we entered the prison, and I was much surprised at many things I saw. Whilst waiting for an official to take me round, I noticed that the dress of the prisoners was much more becoming and far less hideous than our own; in fact, for some time I was uncertain whether several of the women whose friends had come to see them were prisoners or not; one ladylike-looking person had a black silk lace shawl over her shoulders. All the prisoners were allowed to see their relatives and friends together in a large waiting-room, where I was sitting; this is in marked contrast to our own system, where the prisoner is in a small compartment, the friend in another opposite, each divided off by wirework, and a warder in the passage between. Presently the young Irish lad, about nineteen, entered, and for fully five minutes neither mother nor son spoke; sobs and tears choked the utterance of words. How true it is that when we sin we generally cause others to suffer with us. My next surprise was in seeing the old lady open a basket which she had brought with her, which was full of cakes, and raspberries, and other good things, which the young man began eating.

Escapes from this prison constantly take place; outside the prison, where many of them work, they have but to swim the river, where often friends are waiting for them. On my speaking to one of the officers on the laxity of the prison discipline, he replied, "Yes, I reckon that if you have got money, we can, in this country, get you off anything, even the gallows."

"The Tombs" Prison in New York, which answers to our House of Detention, is a massive building of Egyptian architecture. Here I preached to the prisoners on the Lord's day, and visited them individually during the week. In the corridor known as the "Murderers' Row," I found three poor men condemned, and did all in my power to put Christ before them in all simplicity, and Eternity in all its reality. Before the address was given on the Sunday, a lady sang, "Where is my wandering boy to-night?" When she had finished, the prison rang again with the shouts of "Bravo, bravo," from the prisoners, whilst every one clapped their hands with delight.

The great convict prison of Sing Sing is some thirty miles up the Hudson. But I have said enough of one country; let us journey on.

The prison discipline of Belgium has been the model for all the world. In company with my wife I visited nearly all the prisons of the country, and for discipline, order, quality of food, and cleanliness, its system stands unrivalled. The great military prison of Ville-vordé stands on the spot where Tyndale, the martyr, was executed. During his imprisonment here he was instrumental in the conversion of the gaoler and several of his family. Being led to the place of execution, he was tied to a stake, calling out, "Lord, open Thou the King of England's eyes." He was then strangled, and his body consumed to ashes.

In Belgium they have no capital punishment. Men found guilty of murder are sentenced "for life," which differs from the same sentence in England, inasmuch as it means what it says; with us it practically means twenty years. At Bruges, in the vast convict establishment there, we were shown into one large workroom where there were sixty convicts at work. I asked the guardian chef, who conducted us round, what their sentences were? He replied, "For life." On my telling him what we meant by that term in England, he answered, "Ah, but some of these have been here 35 years," and added, "they are all murderers." With some measure of pride the officials in Belgium showed us the portrait of Elizabeth Fry hanging up on their prison walls, and having her autograph at the back. All the women prisoners are under the care of Sisters of Mercy, and apparently they seem to rule and govern well. I did not meet with a single Englishman in the prisons here. An American from Saratoga was in custody for a diamond robbery, and implored us to visit his wife in the opposite prison, which we did; we gave them suitable books and advice, bidding them seek the Lord in their trouble.

We also visited Holland, but found the prisons here very different to those just mentioned. The Dutch Government, on seeing my credentials and hearing my request to visit their prisons, gave me every facility, and were as courteous as we found the authorities of Belgium. The Hague is supposed to be the cleanest city in the world, but the prison here I found to be one of the worst; dirty and old-fashioned, the men herded together in large unhealthy-looking rooms, whilst the food, I have no hesitation in saying, was far from what it should be, the bread especially was very inferior, being almost black, and very heavy. The sleeping accommodation also needed the examination of the sanitary authorities.

In contrasting our own system with that of other countries, I would say that, excepting the very small size of the cells (in which the prisoners sleep, and spend the whole of Sunday and a great part of Saturday) in several of our prisons, such as Portland, Chatham, and Portsmouth, we have now little to learn from other places. That there are serious defects I admit, and of which I should like to write at another time; and the importance of prison discipline and reformation is obvious from the words of the Premier, who says: "This is a subject which demands the utmost possible public discussion;" whilst the Secretary of State, writing in June, 1882, to the Secretary of the Howard Association, says: "There may be faults in the conduct of prisons, which I very closely watch and constantly criticise; but, on the whole, I am satisfied that they are, perhaps, the best conducted institutions in this country."

But lest some one should feel at all sentimental concerning the treatment of our criminal classes, I beg to submit the following lines, written by a convict who was "doing" a second sentence of penal servitude at Portland; they were found with other verses written on his slate in his cell:—

"I cannot take my walks abroad:
I'm under lock and key;
And much the public I applaud
For all their care of me.

Not more than others I deserve—
In fact, much less than more;
Yet I have food, while others starve
Or beg from door to door.

The honest pauper in the street
Half naked I behold;
While I am clad from head to feet,
And covered from the cold.

Thousands there are who scarce can tell
Where they may lay their head;
But I've a warm and well-aired cell,
A bath, good books, good bed.

While they are fed on workhouse fare
And grudged their scanty food,
Three times a day my meals I get,
Sufficient, wholesome, good.

Then to the British public health,
Who all our care relieves,
And while they treat us as they do,
They'll never want for thieves."

When in Italy some years ago I had seen a little of the prison life there. In that on the Campagna near Rome, I found the prisoners were chained to their beds and otherwise treated in a manner more fitting the barbarous ages. I was here enabled to distribute suitable books, and hope ere long to revisit that land and carry with me a portion of the Word of God to every convict.

But it is with respect to France I more especially wish to speak to the readers of THE CHRISTIAN. I had long wished to visit the French prisons, and a few weeks ago in company with Mr. Thomas Clark, our village evangelist, we started for Paris, and through the kindness of the English Ambassador, Lord Lyons, who gave us a letter of introduction to the Minister of the Interior, that gentleman gave us the required permit, allowing us to visit the nine prisons of Paris and those also of Normandy.

In most other countries prisoners are thought of, and cared for in some respects, I mean as regards their soul's welfare. In America exceptional liberty is allowed to prison philanthropists who seek the reformation and conversion of the inmates. In England the spiritual welfare of the thousands of our prisoners almost entirely depends on the chaplain. If he be a converted man all is well, but should he not happen to be, sad is the case of those under his care. Still the prisoner has a Bible and a Prayer-book, to which he may turn for comfort in his dreary, lonely hours; and in many, many instances, especially in "first conviction" men, has the light of God shone through a prison cell into the heart of some poor "wandering boy" through his reading the precious Word of God.

Alas! in France the prisoner is not provided with a Bible, so that if the Spirit of God convinces him of his sin, where can he turn for light? Sunday in the prisons is given up to recreation, with the exception of a ten minutes' mass. Look at that Convict Prison at Caen, in Normandy. No Bibles, no Christ, no sermon, no attending chapel, the schoolmaster even forbidden to utter one word concerning religion in their hearing. Once during the week for ten minutes the door of their cell is left open about a foot, that the words of the priest saying mass in a small chapel some fifty yards away may reach them. After being taken to the Conciérgerie, the prison where Marie Antoinette was confined, we went to that of La Roquette, where the Communists shot the hostages, Archbishop Darboy, the Curé of the Madeleine, and four others. A marble tablet is let into the wall in the garden against which they stood. Whilst walking through one of the workshops, an English voice said, "Nice work this, sir." It was a London pickpocket, who had nearly completed twelve months' hard labour for being caught stealing in the French capital. I gave him my card, and told him if he called on me in London, I would help him if he wished to lead an honest life. On the second Sunday after my return to London he walked into the Hyde Park Hall, stayed to tea, and left promising to call on me in the morning.

The morning came but not the released prisoner. The following week I received a letter from him written in La Roquette Prison, Paris. HE WAS BACK FOR TWO YEARS.

In one day we visited six of the Paris prisons, and returned home worn-out physically and depressed spiritually with the thought that "no man careth" for the souls of the poor prisoners; and yet we rejoiced at what we had been able to accomplish.

For literary purposes I was desirous of adding to my knowledge the condition and system of these prisons; suffice it to say here, I found some of them most badly ventilated and dreadfully unhealthy, and feel very strongly that the system of keeping a man in solitary confinement for ten years, as has been the case in the convict establishments, ought to be abolished at once, for it drives them mad. In England we find that nine months is the maximum time we can with safety sentence a man to this punishment. From Paris we came on to Rouen, where we found the prison healthy and well-ventilated, the Governor having had the windows cut down and made much larger. Leaving Rouen, I went on to Caen. It was here I saw a man who had been in a dark cell for 25 days, and who seemed almost blinded by the glare of the lantern I carried in my hand. Seven days' dark cell is the longest term allowed by English law; this poor man had veral more days to stay there. After we left m, the chief officer of this prison said to me, I do not know a single case of reformation in years." Can it be wondered at? There is thing in their system calculated to reform. o Word of God, no Christ, no Gospel light; it n only tend to habitual criminality—to mad- ss and despair.

And now the readers of this article will be adly surprised to hear that before starting on an spection of the Paris prisons we had been to the ract Depôt, and having procured sound Gospel ooks and tracts, and thinking that my authority om his Excellency M. Waldeck Rousseau would inder them interfering with me, we scattered ie precious missives right and left through these reary places, "no man daring to make us fraid," leaving the seed thus sown for the hurch of God to pray over, and the Christ of od to bless, judging when we reached our rooms t night that it had been one of the most blessed nd most important day's work we had ever been ermitted to do for our Lord. From Rouen, Mr. lark returned home, leaving me to journey lone to Havre, Honfluer, Caen, and other places. can only say the delight and wonderment ex- ressed by the prisoners as they eagerly took the ooks repaid us for the labour entailed in this lessed work.

I ought, perhaps, to add that this prison work n which I am interested does not in any way ffect the funds of the Mission carried on by ne at Hyde Park Hall and the Music Hall (the report of which will be printed ery shortly), but has been sustained out of oneys supplied for my own personal use. Out f £90 thus sent toward personal expenses, I ave spent £55 in visiting and helping prisoners uring the last fourteen months. I am desirous f seeing the prisons of Italy thus visited by ome one, and also those of France where I ave not been. Is there no brother of means who could devote himself to this work? Gladly vill I give him all the information I possess, nd use any influence I may have to get him the equired permission from the authorities.

I believe there is a possibility of some one aking a portion of the Word of God—say the Gospel of John, or the Psalms, to every prisoner n Italy, besides many in France. If someone rom England does not do it, it may never be lone. Should no one else better able be stirred p to do this, then, God helping me, I would do t. I should prefer a companion, but failing his, I am ready to go alone should the Lord nable me.

Hyde-park Hall, Edgware-road, W.

THE LATE DR. MOFFAT.

IN another column we refer to the falling asleep of our venerable brother, Dr. Moffat, the well-known African missionary. Since his retirement from missionary work in Bechuana- and he has lived in this country, and for the ast four years in a pretty country residence on he estate of Mr. S. Morley, M.P., at Leigh, near Tunbridge. Here he busied himself in various ways, occasionally preaching in the chapel n the village, built by Mr. Morley. The people oved him for the gentleness of his spirit and he entire absence of sectarianism.

His last moments were bright. He was out n his garden, trimming shrubs, twenty-four ours before he died. The immediate cause of leath is supposed to have been the breaking of a blood-vessel.

Nine hours before his departure he sent for is friend, Mr. Maxted, and at once began re- eating favourite hymns and texts of Scripture. le asked for texts to show that Christians would now each other in heaven. He remembered his beloved departed wife, and spoke of her last happy moments with tears of joy. She had lived with him for fifty years, and, as many of our readers know, was a most devoted helper with him in the Lord's service. Her prayerfulness and great wisdom and ability to counsel him were conspicuous traits in her character. Since her death his daughter, Miss Moffat, has been con- stantly at his side, and has nobly and lovingly watched over him.

MISS MACPHERSON IN CANADA.

MANY who have read Miss Macpherson's journal of her voyage to Canada, and her account of Dominion Day at Galt, will be glad to hear how the work is further progressing on the other side. Very cheering are the letters lately received by her fellow-workers; from these we give the following extracts:—

July 17.—Yesterday, we left with regret the happy Galt Home, to travel to the shores of the Georgian Bay, to hold meetings in several towns, thereby opening up new homes for the yet un- rescued children of our great city. Arriving, in a heavy storm of thunder and lightning, at a small town, after eight hours by rail, we drove to an inn in an omnibus, it being too late to seek the home of our friend, Mr. Ross, some miles off on the shore of the bay.

This morning we got a buggy, and drove a few miles to Leith. We passed Owen Sound, which lies embosomed on every side but one with hills, on the borders of the bay. It is the largest town in the northern part of the pro- vince, and the situation is lovely. There are no poor here to clothe and feed; everyone can get abundance of work if blessed with health. Arrived at Leith, a social meal with our kind friends was partaken of, the book box, with fresh stores, was opened for distribution, and then on to the next village, to call on four Christian families, where our little ones had grown almost into womanhood; thoroughly woven into the home-life were they, calling the heads of the family "father" and "mother." How much better than remaining isolations in our great cities!

At 8 o'clock, from several miles around, con- veyances arrived, and the schoolhouse was filled with stalwart young men and refined young ladies. In the background were a large number of young men, who, unable to get seats, stood quietly for an hour and a half, whilst we spoke of the need of labour among the heathen. Canada has, undoubtedly, he material ready for the Mission fields of China and Africa; men and women able to adapt themselves, to build, or to cultivate the land, whilst preaching the Gos- pel. How glad we should be to erect a hospital for children at Galt, where the daughters of wealthy farmers could receive training to fit them for Medical Mission work in China and India. Here there are no poor on whom to expend the energy of their warm hearts. One hundred and twenty children are placed out among the Scotch and English settlers here. What cause have we for praise and thanksgiving!

July 20.—Since writing we have had some long journeys over rough roads, sometimes in a lumber waggon with no springs! Yesterday we had seven hours in a waggon driven by a pair of plough-horses, and heartily did we rejoice when the minister met us and said our public meeting was to be held the following day. The scenery was different to former journeys; high limestone rocks forming embankments gave signs of having been washed by the waters of the bay long ago, and the surrounding hills had probably been the enclosure of great waters. But now, the expanse on all sides was dotted with farms, and land was everywhere brought under cultiva- tion. At Tara, a small town of 300 inhabitants, our first stopping place, we had a good meeting in the well-filled Presbyterian Church. We cheered the pastor with a few new books, and were helped on our way by his fervent prayers.

Collingwood, our present abode, is a more stirring place; it has a population of 5000, and is situated at the foot of the Blue Mountains, where pleasure-seekers go and rusticate under the shade of leafy maples, and enjoy the beauties of nature at a high altitude. The town will in- crease in importance, as it is the direct route to the north-west through the Lakes Superior and Huron. We are meeting here delightful Chris- tian people, and the work of holding meetings assigned to us is intermingled with seasons of refreshing converse and Bible-readings. We long to be used with power to the stirring up of fresh labourers for the far-off heathen. Praise the Lord! Already we have met three young Christians, who are laid upon the altar, waiting for the way to open up; young, strong, well- educated, and, above all, able to prove that they have already been soul-winners.

We had an unexpected scene at the close of our public meeting here. Whilst speaking, a band of stalwart men and boys came in late, and took the only empty seats in front. Mr. Thom had been out on surrounding farms during the day, and had apprised the families of our gathering. And here were the masters with our boys. At the close these farmers gave a beautiful testimony, saying the boys were all they could desire, and that they far surpassed their expec- tations! They spoke of the tender love mani- fested by the lads for those who had brought them to this land; when they spoke of the friends at the "Home" tears gathered in their eyes. They also mentioned the remarkable knowledge of Scripture possessed by the boys, and that they were assured those who lived with them were lambs within the fold of Jesus.

The scene was very touching when we came to part with the boys; we had to wipe away their tears, and remind them that we must return to the old land, yet again to dry the tears of the orphan and the destitute. The Canadians meanwhile were looking on, learning more by this little incident than by my long hour of talking and bringing before them mental pictures of the need of the children. One lady called me aside, and said most tenderly, "Send me one of your little boys; by God's help, I will be a true mother, and train him for the Lord."

We are daily receiving answers to prayer, and are much enjoying social intercourse with kind friends, from which, through pressure of work and correspondence, we are debarred at home, whilst the opportunities for meeting kindred spirits, filled with soul-longings for the heathen, are most precious. This has been one of the happiest visits among my children in Canada. May the time spent here prepare us for another winter of service, winning souls for the Master, whilst rescuing another two hundred orphans to fill the homes opening up during this tour.

Last Saturday we had a sweet time of fellow- ship with several ministers of the town, under shady trees, in a lovely garden. They had many questions to ask about our work; how was it supported? did we receive many answers to prayer? where did the children come from? were we not overwhelmed with the responsi- bility? The account of work in the lodging- houses, the "Bridge of Hope" Mission, and the work among sailors in Ratcliff-highway deeply interested them, and they promised to bear us up in prayer at their meetings.

THE KILBURN HOUSE OF REST.—During July five workers, who had been for some time in the house at Kilburn, have had new spheres of labour opened to them, and have gone forth into the Home Mission field to be witnesses unto the Lord. The waiting time to some of them had been long, but it proved a profitable season. They bore testimony before leaving the House of Rest that they were going out with renewed bodily strength, and with a fresh baptism of the Holy Spirit for the service of their Lord. Several others have made a short stay for rest, and returned again to their work, and others again have come in, that they also may "renew their strength" As in the days of the Apostles "Trophimus" had to be "left at Miletum 'sick'" (2 Tim. iv. 20), so it is now. Some of the Lord's servants are left in the House of Rest sick; but with every indication that restoration is being granted, and that oppor- tunities of future service are still before them. In the meantime they can "Rejoice in the Lord," and receive with thankful hearts the daily mercies and privileges provided for them by the loving hand of our Father who is in heaven.—August "Monthly Paper."

MR. FEGAN AND HIS WORK.

DEAR SIR,—Your readers will, I am sure, be grieved to hear that Mr. Fegan, who for so long has laboured for the welfare of the poor outcast boys of London, is seriously ill. He is so ill, indeed, that his friends, acting on the doctor's orders, have removed him from the Home in Southwark-street for perfect rest, both of mind and body. It appears that he has been suffering for some time in his head, but would not give up even temporarily the work to which he has devoted his life.

I write to lay the matter of these 200 boys before your readers. How great must be the anxiety of our beloved brother as to how these boys will be cared for during his enforced absence, intensified by his pain and weakness. For some time, I understand, the funds have been very low, whilst the number of boys in the Homes has never before been so large. The strain and anxiety of this, I fear, has in some measure produced the illness from which our brother is suffering. Will your readers make it a matter of earnest prayer, first, that our brother may speedily be restored to health, and, second, that the institution may have supplied to it the support of which it stands so much in need. I need hardly add that Mr. Fegan has no knowledge of this letter being written.—Yours truly,

[We gladly insert the appeal of our correspondent, though we are deeply grieved to think that it is needed. Only those who are intimately acquainted with the facts can appreciate the devotion with which Mr. Fegan has given all his energies to the work of rescuing waifs and strays from the seething tide of London life, and training them up for God and heaven.—Ed.]

THE GOSPEL IN SIAM.

IN a letter to The Pittsburgh Banner, Rev. Eugene P. Dunlap, Petchaburl, says:—"Notwithstanding Siam's darkness, there is here a great open door for the entrance of the Gospel. We are at liberty to preach in the bazaars, streets, chapels, court-houses, dwellings, and temples. Last week I visited one of the largest heathen temples in this city, when services were being held there in connection with the cremation of two heathen priests. Here I met a crowd of people, and talked to them about Jesus, gave them some tracts, and then pushed out among the crowds outside. With the aid of a fellow-labourer, and some of the school-boys, we sang in Siamese the hymn, 'Come to Jesus.' A crowd soon gathered about us, and for almost one hour I told them of the plan of salvation through Christ. Some heard it for the first time. They asked me many questions.

"Finally, one in the crowd who had heard me teach with the aid of the magic-lantern, begged me to come and show the pictures in the temple grounds that night. I said, 'If the high priest of the temple consents, I will come.' The spokesman at once brought the high priest. I said, 'I am a teacher of the religion of Jesus. These people beg me to teach here to-night. If I bring my pictures, it will be to teach the life of the Lord Jesus.' He said, 'I invite you to come.' For more than one hour we held the crowd, estimated at from 1000 to 1500 people. Frequently, as the pictures appeared on the canvas, the people shouted, 'Explain that.' 'Tell us more about that.' Two of our native teachers were stationed in the crowd, and taught the people beyond our voices. After service the people crowded us with thanks, and served us with tea, mangoes, and palm fruit, and urged us to come next night. This whole land is open to missionary effort. But if we had even one missionary to each 100,000 of the population, we would then have but sixty or seventy missionaries to all Siam Proper, and that would be more than twenty times our present number. Assuredly there is an open door for the Gospel in Siam."

JEWISH REFUGEES' AID SOCIETY.

SIR,—Permit me to invite all parents and teachers to enlist the sympathy of their little ones in this great and noble cause. The promise, "They shall prosper that love Thee," belongs to all who obey its call, without distinction of age. No doubt the promise is spiritual; perhaps if it were not so, if it referred to worldly prosperity alone, many more would join the ranks of Israel's lovers. But it is good it is not so. God's greatest gifts to men are his spiritual gifts; and I pity those parents, and still more the children of those parents, who think more of the temporal wants of their children than their spiritual prosperity. But all Christian parents who wish to see the spiritual prosperity of their children should make them do something for Israel. Tell them of the wonderful things God is now doing in Jerusalem; let them remember the Jews in their prayers.

Teach your children to look upon the Jews of to-day as identical with the Israelites of the Bible; they do not always know it. A friend of mine, now a missionary to the Jews in Jerusalem, told me that during the great day of the Sunday-school Centenary in the Crystal Palace he spoke to a little girl who had received a prize for efficiency in Bible knowledge. He asked her many Bible questions, all of which she answered well. He then asked her whether she had ever seen an Israelite. She could not answer, but looked quite as puzzled as she would have been had she been asked whether she had ever seen a Hittite, or Hivite, or Jebusite.

When your children see the contrast of Israel in the days of her glory and the Jews of to-day, rejected of God, despised by men, tell them what has caused all this. But tell them the whole truth. Do not only say they are rejected of God because they rejected and crucified Jesus. That is only part of the truth. Tell them also that: "The branches (the Jews) were broken off, that I (the Gentile) might be graffed in" (Rom. xi. 19). Tell them it was the Jews who gave them the Gospel, and how can they show their gratitude better than by giving it back again to the Jews. Finally, it is true of children as of men, they who love their Bibles are sure to love Israel, and, vice versâ, they who love Israel are sure to take an interest in their Bibles.

I trust these few lines will draw the attention of many parents and teachers to these great, though neglected truths.—I remain, yours truly,

London, Aug. 4. A Friend of Jerusalem.

EMIGRATION FOR WOMEN.—I beg to thank those friends who have kindly enabled Madame van der Bruggen to start for Toronto to-day with her first detachment of young girls. Our work is daily increasing in interest and importance, as more confidence is felt both in the good openings for young people and in the care taken of them.—Adelaide Ross, St. Philip's Vicarage, Stepney.

THE SOUTHAMPTON CONFERENCE. — The meetings of this Conference are fixed to be held in a tent in the grounds at the Deanery, Southampton, from August 16 to 23. The hours will be as follows: On the 16th, 17th, and 18th, Prayer-meeting, 8; Instruction on Spiritual Life, 11 and 3; Evangelistic Meeting, 8. On Sunday, 19th, a special address will be delivered to men only by Mr. H. Varley, at 3.30. An Evangelistic Meeting will be held at 8. On the 20th, 21st, and 22nd Evangelistic addresses will be delivered every night at 8. All are welcome. Prayers for blessing are asked.

STRANGERS' REST, ST. GEORGE'S.—The monthly meeting of workers in connection with the "Strangers' Rest," St. George's-in-the-East, was held on Thursday week, Mr. R. C. Morgan presiding. The address was given by Mr. G. Kirkham, on "John the Baptist, a model for Christian workers." He closed by observing that as John the Baptist heralded the first coming of Christ so the Evangelists of the present day were heralding his second coming, which might be soon. Several brethren offered prayer before and after the address, and a profitable evening was spent. The work of the Strangers' Rest goes on seven days a week. There is a fresh importation of young girls in the Highway; prayer is asked for their rescue. The house needs repairs; a local painter has offered the paint, showing his appreciation of the work done there.

CONTINENTAL AND OTHER NOTES.

CONSTANCE.

AT Constance, says the Feuille Réligieuse, an evangelist is doing a blessed work. In this town, celebrated as the place of martyrdom of John Huss, he has established religious meetings, and visits many in their own houses, and his efforts have borne fruit. A number of men meet every week to ask God to open the hearts of the inhabitants of the town and neighbourhood to receive the truth. Those who have already proved its beneficent power are beginning to make the Word of God known to those around them.

NEUCHÂTEL.

The summer réunion of the Independent Churches of the Val-du-Ruz was fixed for the first time at Dombresson. The subject for consideration was—"The Word of God and our duty with regard to it." Many pastors and others spoke, showing that the Word of God, loved, read, and lived out, is the only defence against the increasing seductions of the present time. A similar Conference was recently held at Fleurier, when the pastors of four churches and some laymen encouraged each other in more joy, faithfulness, Christian zeal, and regular study of the Bible. It is thought and hoped that such meetings will greatly increase Christian love and unity.—Journal Réligieux de la Suisse Romande.

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY IN SWITZERLAND.

It is not surprising that many good men are uneasy at the report of the Neuchâtel State Council concerning the Salvation Army. The decision made by the Council denies the right, which it was thought had been conquered for Switzerland for ever, of choosing and manifesting freely its faith, when causing nothing contrary to public order and good morals. It is excessively serious; accordingly it is under consideration to establish a League for the defence of liberty of conscience, which we hope will be strongly organised, and that the struggle will be engaged in with courage and perseverance, until its efforts are crowned with full success.—L'Evangéliste.

ZURICH.

The committee of the Evangelical Society of Zurich requested permission from the Committee of the National Exhibition to conduct Protestant worship every Sunday morning, at seven o'clock, in the Industrial Hall. This permission was granted without difficulty. On that day the doors of the exhibition were not opened till ten a.m.; the service was voluntarily attended by about thirty or forty of the men employed at the Exhibition for many consecutive Lord's days. The President of the Central Committee, M. Vœgeli Bodmer, and the Director of the Exhibition, M. Zuan de Salis, were also present at this religious service. This is very significant and cheering, as the Committee includes a very small minority of Evangelical Protestants.

ONTARIO, CANADA.

The past six months have witnessed a most remarkable religious work in Kingston and Portsmouth (Canada), through a few women of the Salvation Army. The Captain (Abbie), a good-looking, clever American woman of about thirty, with some four or five subordinates with tambourines, have literally emptied the saloons, and gathered every night in Kingston, an assembly of 1000 "roughs" of whom about 500 profess conversion to Christ.

The means they adopt to gather the masses, and the slang language they use instead of the ordinary language of Canaan, astonishes everybody, and yet they have got the masses whom the churches could not influence or prevail upon to attend worship. The ministers of the evangelical churches have looked on in amazement and yet could not but recognise the hand of God in the real conversion of souls.—Extract of a letter to a friend, from a prominent lay member of the Church of England in Canada.

ITALY.

Signor Capellini has been at Salerno and the ighbourhood working amongst the regiments ationed there. He has also visited Caserta, apati, Pagani, and Nocera Inferiore, every- here indefatigably working in the cause of hrist. He has just returned to Rome, but only r a few days, as he intends to visit the camp Rieti, where he is sure to find work ready for m, and a welcome from those soldiers who ave learnt to love the truth.

DR. ZIEMANN IN GERMANY.

Our friends in England will rejoice to hear at the work of the Lord is prospering here bove all we had hoped. The opposition seems ly to help to rouse interest in quarters that ave not been reached before. Some of the apers daily report the meetings favourably, id many earnest pastors come with more bold- ss in front. From Wesel the papers state at the meetings there rouse the whole town; e four pastors are in warm sympathy with e meetings, and have issued a circular en- ting their clerical brethren from the country attend. An important meeting is described, hich was arranged for soldiers only. The my chaplain and the commandant both ished that Dr. Ziemann should speak to them, id about 1000 men, with their officers, gathered hear the Gospel. I. D.

Suest, Westphalia.

FRANCE.

The Rev. T. Howard Gill, M.A., of Trinity ollege, Cambridge, and rector of Trowbridge, iltshire, has accepted the vacant chaplaincy of e English Church, Rue d'Aguesseau, Paris. r. Gill hopes to commence his duties the first nday in October.

Mr. McAll's work has definitely been placed der a Committee composed of eight members ree English, an American, and four French, he Society will be called Mission Evangélique en- rance, and according to the statutes no change n be effected in the objects of the Society, its octrines, or its financial organisation, unless it e by a general assembly of all the members of e Society.

M. de Pomaret and his wife, new labourers, ung and devoted, have just sailed from France r the Tahiti missionary field. M. Viénot, who s spent his life and health in the same field, pecially in organising Christian primary hools as well as a normal school, is visiting e churches and pleading the cause so dear to s heart.

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY IN BAVARIA.

Until recently Bavaria was the least favoured to religious liberty of all parts of the rman Empire. The law recognised only mily worship, and forbade all public worship cept that of the Established Roman Catholic urch. The Methodists, who have a few Cir- its there, met with all sorts of difficulties. The lice, it is true, often shut their eyes, but they ten acted in a persecuting manner.

All that is now changed. A royal manifesto s just granted to all Bavarian Methodists the ghts of a distinct Church, including liberty to each, to hold Sunday-schools, to exercise dis- pline, to have places of worship and cemeteries. a word, except the right to ring bells, and to ve processions and demonstrations in the open r, the Methodists will enjoy all the privileges anted, till now, to the National Church alone. The population of Bavaria is about five illions, of whom three-fourths are Roman atholics. The German Wesleyan Church has ready circuits at Munich, Augsburg, and uremburg, and now that the entire country is en to them, they propose vigorously to profit it.—L'Evangéliste.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS. — Mr. Robert Bilke sires us to say that his address is now 18, Green- rk Villas, Harlesden, London, N.W.

GIBRALTAR.—Miss Archibald and another lady end are doing a good work among the soldiers re. They have been helped by some friends om Scotland who are at present making holiday the famous Rock.

MR. SHAPIRA'S MANUSCRIPT.

(From "The Times.")

The following is a literal translation of the commencement of the manuscript now deposited in the British Museum. It will be seen that it is a more succinct narrative of the journeys of the Israelites than that given in the received text of Deuteronomy, and that these appear in a different order. Modern critics, who have taken exception on geographical grounds to the order in which the journeys are enumerated in the received text, will find that the questionable points do not arise in this recension:—

"THESE be the words which Moses spake according to the mouth of Jehovah unto all the children of Israel in the wilderness beyond the Jordan in the plain. God our God spake unto us in Horeb, saying, Ye have dwelt long enough in this mount. Turn you and take your journey, and go to the mount of the Amorites, and unto all the places nigh thereunto, in the plain, in the hills, and in the vale and by the seaside. And when we departed from Horeb we went through all that great and terrible wilderness, which ye saw; and we came to Kadesh-Barnea. And I said unto you, Ye are come this day unto the mountain of the Amorites. Go ye up and possess ye the land, as said [unto thee the God of thy fathers.] [Notwithstanding] ye would [not] go up. And ye murmured and said, Because [God] hated us . . . to cause us to perish. And God was angry [and sware] saying, As I live, surely all the people that saw my wonders and my signs which I have done these ten times . . . not . . . they have not hearkened unto my voice, they shall not see that good land which I sware to give unto their fathers, save your children and Caleb the son of Jephunneh and Joshua the son of Nun which standeth before thee, they shall go in thither, and unto them will I give it. But as for you, turn you and take your journey into the wilderness by the way of the Red Sea, until all the generation of the men of rebellion shall be wasted out from among the host. And they abode] in Kadesh-Barnea until the men of rebellion were wasted out by death from among the host . . . . Ye are to pass over this day the coast of the children of Esau, which dwell in Seir. Thou shalt not distress them, nor meddle with them in war, for I will not give you of their land any possession, because I have given it unto the children of Esau for a possession. The Horim from of old dwelt therein, and the children of Esau succeeded them, and dwelt in their stead. And we turned and passed the wilderness of Moab. And God said unto me, ye shall pass over this day the coast of Moab, Ye shall not distress them, nor meddle with them in war, for I will not give you of their land any possession, because I have given unto the children of Lot the city for a possession. The giants dwelt therein from of old, and the Moabites called them Amim, but God destroyed them, and they dwelt in their stead. And we turned and passed the brook Zered. And God said unto me [saying], Rise ye up and pass over the river Arnon. This day will I begin to deliver to thy face Sihon the Amorite, King of Heshbon, and his land. And we went forth against Sihon to Jahaz, and we smote him till we left him none to remain. And we took all his cities from Aroer, which is by the brink of the river Arnon, unto Gilead and unto the brook Jabbok. God our God delivered all unto us. Then we turned and went up the way of the brook Jabbok. And God said unto me, saying, Ye are to pass this day the coast of the land of the children of Ammon. Ye shall not distress them nor meddle with them in war, because I have given unto the children of Lot the land of the children of Ammon for a possession. The giants dwelt therein from of old, and the Ammonites called them Azamzummim, but God destroyed them before them, and they dwelt in their stead."

Mr. Shapira made a statement on Monday, the 6th inst., to the authorities of the British Museum to the following effect:—

He first heard of the fragment in the middle of July, 1878. A Sheikh, with several Arabs of different tribes, came to him at his place of business in Jerusalem on other matters. The Sheikh had nothing to do with antiquities. They spoke of some little black fragments of writing in the possession of an Arab. They had been found in the neighbourhood of the Arnon. One of the Arabs spoke of them as talismans, smelling of asphalte.

The day following Shapira was invited to dinner by the Sheikh, and heard more about the fragments. About the year 1865, at a time of persecution, certain Arabs had hid themselves among rocks. There, on the side of a rocky cavern, they found several bundles wrapped in linen. Peeling off the covering, they found only black fragments, which they threw away. They were picked up by one of the Arabs, believing them to be talismans. He kept them as such, and became rich, as he thought, in consequence. This was probably ten years or more before Shapira heard of them. Captain Conder knows the exact time. Shapira promised the Sheikh a reward if he would bring to him an Arab he spoke of who would be able to get hold of the fragments. This happened on the day of the dinner. The Sheikh fell ill, and afterwards died.

About ten or twelve days after the dinner a man of the Ajayah tribe brought to him a small piece, containing four columns. A few words only were legible. A week after, on Sunday, he brought fourteen or fifteen columns, containing the clearer writing. The next Sunday he brought fourteen or fifteen more columns, in another character of writing, but not all of one form. Ten days after, on Wednesday, he brought three or four columns, very black. Shapira saw nothing more of him.

After an interval of four or five weeks Shapira went to Professor Schlottmann, on September 24, and after, also, to Dr. Rieu. The writings were (some of them) in better condition than at present. Schlottmann wrote that they were fabrications, and blamed Shapira for calling them a sacred text. He never saw the writings themselves, only Shapira's copy. Schlottmann wrote in similar terms to the Consul at Jerusalem, Baron von Münchausen, and desired him to prevent Shapira from making the find public. Then Shapira wrote or telegraphed to Dr. Rieu that the writings were forgeries, and that he was to take no steps in respect to them. This he did in consequence of Schlottmann's judgment of them, and the reasons on which it was founded. He placed them in a bank in Jerusalem.

Subsequently he began to reconsider Schlottmann's objections, and he found that they were partly grounded on mistakes Shapira had made in deciphering the writing. He felt better able to judge of them himself because he had had more experience in manuscripts. It was before Easter of the present year that he re-examined them, and he deciphered them a second time. Professor Schroeder, Consul in Beyrout, saw them in the middle of May, 1883, and pronounced them genuine. He wanted to purchase them. Shapira took the writings to Leipzig at the end of July to have them photographed. Professors there saw them. Dr. Hermann believed in them, as did Professor Guthe, who intends to write about them. They had been smeared with asphalte originally as a kind of embalmment. They became subsequently further darkened by the use of oil and spirit. The oil was used by the Arabs to counteract the brittleness, and to prevent their suffering from wet.

EARLY-CLOSING ASSOCIATION.—The address of this Association is 100, Fleet-street, London, E.C., and not 8, Salisbury-square, as stated in our last issue.

JUVENILE SMOKING.—In order to prevent as much as possible the growing practice in the United States of juvenile smoking, the Executive of New Jersey has just put in force a law recently voted by the Legislature, making it a punishable offence to sell cigarettes or tobacco in any form to boys under sixteen years of age.

GOOD USE OF A TESTIMONIAL.—The members of the Congregational Church, Highgate, recently presented the Rev. Josiah Viney with £720 on the occasion of his resignation of the pastoral office. At the rev. gentleman's expressed wish the money will be applied to the foundation of a scholarship in connection with the school for the sons of Congregational ministers now in course of erection at Caterham, of which Mr. Viney is chairman.

ENGLISH GIRLS IN PARIS THEATRES.

LAST week I returned from Italy, where I had been called to bring to our Orphanage two out of six orphan English children who had been found in the greatest destitution. There was nothing in the apartment in the shape of food or clothing, only the dead father, once a London merchant! Amongst a heap of letters forwarded to me from Paris, I received a post-card, upon which was written, "Fifty ballet girls left London last night for Paris. I know you will try to help them if you can. Some of them are members of the Theatrical Mission."

We were soon in correspondence with the Secretary of this Mission, Mr. C. E. Todd, who sent us the name of the theatre and of five of the girls employed there. We presented ourselves at the private entrance of the theatre, trying to glean some information. After an encounter with one of the administration (who told us that it was nothing to them what the girls were, or where they lived—all they did was to avail themselves of their services), we succeeded, not without prayerful courage, in groping our way to the back scenes of the theatre, where a rehearsal was taking place. We attracted the attention of a French girl, who good-naturedly sent one of les Anglaises to us. She could not give the name of the street where they were lodging. There were twenty of them at that theatre, and of these ten lodged together. She had scarcely uttered the words before she was called away for her part. We were discovered, and ordered out, in language less polite than expressive of being there for some bad purpose.

Asking God to guide us with the faint clue we had, we left a pencilled note with the concierge containing our address and an invitation for tea on Sunday, promising to come for all who would accept it, asking for it to be given to the girls as they left the theatre. We received in return, by post, a printed card of the hotel where they lodged, with a pencilled line on the back of it, saying that eight or nine of the girls would be glad to come. Sunday afternoon found us at their hotel, of very doubtful character. They were living in a dirty back room, for which they were paying an exorbitant price. They were thankful to escape from their surroundings for a few hours, and to tell of their difficulties and dangers. We were surprised to learn that the agent who procured them the engagement claims one shilling out of every pound which these poor girls earn! With scanty means, not knowing a word of the language, they buy the poorest food at the dearest price. With only those about them who watch for their fall, it is easy to foresee the end; for they must live, and it is but a question of time how long the struggle to do so honestly will last.

After a substantial tea—and they were hungry—our conversation turned upon the late earthquake at Ischia, the awfulness of sudden death, and the only safety in resting fully upon Jesus. Five of them were evidently much impressed and did not conceal their anxiety to know more of these things; indeed but one of the little company appeared to have imbibed somewhat of the spirit of Gallio. Almost simultaneously they entreated me, "Can't you make a home for us, ever so simple, and let us come and live with you? We shall be lost where we are. We want you to care for us, for we need a friend." The plea was irresistible; our heart was too full to find words to express the great yearning after them. After some of Mr. Sankey's hymns had been sung, two of the girls choosing their favourites, and a prayer, their appeal was renewed. Two of the elder ones said, "We all want to come. Will you help us? We can only say: Thank you from our hearts.'"

The next day, asking God to guide us to the right place, we sought an apartment in a respectable locality within a reasonable walk of their theatre, and found one. It will just accommodate the ten, and will cost £80 a year, exclusive of taxes. We have taken it, and it is to be clear for us by the 20th inst., and we hope to have it furnished and ready for them by the 25th. This apartment will give them a good-sized general sitting and dining-room; and, with a godly woman in charge, we shall provide them comfortable meals, so necessary for these young creatures in their unhealthy, overstrained, artificial life. We earnestly pray that by the power of God's Holy Spirit not a few of them may be induced to renounce their unhallowed calling for one more in accordance with the mind and life of Christ. Meanwhile we take up the burden of this work, which God has almost laid at our feet, with joy. We are sure that He who listened to a friend's prayer, as she indited her pencilled post-card en route to a foreign city, guided our steps to the girls, and theirs to us—nay, more, so touched their hearts to plead with us themselves—bids us go forward. Not a day should be lost in furnishing the apartment; it is evident that the girls cannot hold out much longer, and we must not forget that there are other voices for them to listen to save ours. In a city where one sees on every side the costliness of sin, shall it be said that we lacked the means to form one method for its speedy prevention?

Ada M. Leigh.

P.S.—Three of the girls have just made their way up to us to ask when the new house will be open.

THE BANK HOLIDAY.

GROVE HALL, LISSON GROVE.

THE usual Bank Holiday gatherings for prayer and exhortation were held here afternoon and evening. The friends who addressed the meetings were Messrs. J. Sprunt, S. Tinsley, T. Kirtley, S. Guinness, and F. Dowling.

TRINITY-STREET, BOROUGH.

A free tea was given on August 6 to a number of very poor people in the Primitive Church, Trinity-street, S.E. After tea, a Gospel Service, consisting of singing and addresses, kept the people together. Rev. J. Aston, Messrs. Dyer, Hoskin, Tucker, and Smith, took part in the meeting.

HOXTON HALL.

Mr. Fred. Wilson, accompanied by his wife, addressed an exceptionally large audience in Hoxton Hall, on Monday week. Mr. Wilson's address deeply interested and impressed his audience, while the simple, natural singing of Mrs. Wilson greatly enhanced the interest of the meeting. Fred. Wilson's account of his conversion is singularly free from the defects which too often mar such recitals.

KILBURN TEMPERANCE COUNCIL.

A grand Temperance fête, attended by upwards of 2500 persons, was held on Bank Holiday in Kilburn, under the auspices of the Kilburn Temperance Council. The entertainments provided were very numerous. There was also a great Temperance meeting; amongst the speakers were Mrs. Ellis Cameron, Rev. J. W. Horsley, Dr. J. W. Kirton, Mr. S. Shirley, and Mr. G. Garlick.

WORKING GIRLS IN LONDON.

The Earl and Countess of Aberdeen entertained on Bank Holiday upwards of 150 residents of the houses, in connection with the Homes for Working Girls in London, at their residence, Dollis-hill, Willesden. The residents were conveyed in omnibuses provided by the Countess, and upon arrival were at once seated to a substantial dinner. In the course of the day there were music, singing, and a few short speeches by Lord Aberdeen, Hon. A. F. Kinnaird, Mr. John Shrimpton, Sir George E. Hodgkinson, and Mr. Holland. The Countess of Aberdeen appeared to enjoy administering to the happiness of her guests as much as they enjoyed their outing.

MISSION SERVICES FOR THE PEOPLE.

The annual excursion in connection with th Special Mission Services for the People, conducte on Sunday evenings at the Royal Victoria Coffe Hall, Waterloo-road, came off on Monday wee the locality of this year's outing being th grounds of Mr. W. Barber, Q.C., Pinner. Mr Barber is not only a warm supporter of thes services, but of the Temperance movement which is also supported by those connected wit the Sunday evening services. An idea of th benefits conferred by these weekly services ma be formed from the fact that the hall is fre quently crowded by labouring men with thei wives and families, who seldom enter a churc or chapel.

EVANGELISTIC MISSION.

Good stirring meetings of Christian worker and others were held at Kilburn Hall, Kilburn gate, on Bank Holiday afternoon and evenin in connection with this Mission. At the afternoo meeting, short expositions having been given b Mr. Johnston, Lord Radstock, and Mr. L. H Nott, Mr. Cohen urged his listeners to pray fo the Jews, reminding them of the special blessin promised to all who pray for Jerusalem. T him the conversion of St. Paul seemed but a typ of what will yet be in the Lord's dealings wit Israel, according to Rom. xi. Already there i a remarkable stirring and awakening amon them, especially in Russia and in London Mr. C. Russell Hurditch assured the previou speaker that prayer for the Jews was not wholl forgotten at Kilburn Hall.

The evening meeting was characterised b much and fervent prayer, interspersed wit earnest Gospel addresses by Ned Wright an Gipsy Smith, which evidently carried con viction to the hearts of many present. Dr Owles, formerly of Liverpool, spoke briefly on the Second Coming of the Lord.

At nine o'clock the meeting adjourned to th large tent at Carlton-road, singing by the way and gathering a congregation for the Gospe addresses there, which were continued till afte ten o'clock.

Meetings of a similar kind were held the sam day at Bignold Hall, Forest-gate, E.

HAMPSTEAD HEATH.

My dear Sir,—On Bank Holiday I had th curiosity to wander on to Hampstead Heath both to view the holiday amusements of th people (some fifteen to twenty thousand of whom were probably assembled), and to ascertain wha signs of Christian activity were to be found among them. I confess I was a good dea disappointed at being unable, after traversing the Heath from one end to the other of th parts frequented, and going up to every group of loiterers, among the whirligigs, shooting galleries, dancing rings, circuses, bands, &c. the several centres of interest, to find only one effort being made to preach the Gospel, with the exception of that in the tent by the railway station. This began at a late hour, and only affected a few stragglers from the thronging multitudes who pressed homewards after the fatigues of the day. I distributed some tracts chiefly to costermongers and other sellers of like description as they left the Heath, pushing their barrows before them. I met with much genera courtesy and gratitude, while now and again one of the boys would beg me for one with that irresistible wistful eagerness peculiar to the class; so that the work was full of encouragement and delight, and made one heartily wish that more had been made of a great opportunity for Christ.

Are our Bible Societies doing all they might on such occasions, to scatter the Book of book in the darkest neighbourhoods of the metropolis? Many, I am disposed to believe, would purchase the Scriptures from an open stall on a public fête day.

CHILDREN'S SCRIPTURE UNION.—Portions fo week ending August 24:—Aug. 19, Luke xiv 15-24, Aug. 20, Luke xiv. 25-35; Aug. 21, Luke xv. 1-10; Aug. 22, Luke xv. 11-32; Aug. 23 Luke xvi. 1-18; Aug. 24, Luke xvi. 19-31; Aug 25, Luke xvii. 1-19.

GOSPEL TEMPERANCE CRUSADE.

MR. FRANCIS MURPHY AT CARDIFF.

THE veteran Blue Ribbon missioner has paid a visit to this town and held Gospel Temperance Meetings in the Independent Chapel, Woodstreet. The church is capable of holding about 2000 persons. Great enthusiasm has marked the proceedings. Mr. Murphy's genial countenance and manner have won for him many staunch friends here. The meetings have been exceedingly hearty. Mr. R. Cory acted as chairman of two of the meetings, and the ex-Mayor presided at a third. Great good has been done.

MR. JOHN P. TAYLOR AT CARDIFF.

Mr. John P. Taylor, of Clayton Bridge, Manchester, held three Gospel Temperance meetings in this town on August 2nd, 3rd, and 4th. The audiences were most enthusiastic and received the speeches with great warmth. Mr. Taylor is a young gentleman of great promise. He succeeded in rivetting the attention of the people with his enunciation of straightforward and manly truth. The Temperance cause is progressing wonderfully. A large meeting is held every week in order to keep up the good work.

MR. R. T. BOOTH IN INVERNESS.

A brief visit has been paid to the capital of the Scottish Highlands by Mr. R. T. Booth. The many thousands who visited the Highland Agricultural Show had an opportunity of hearing his earnest utterances on the Temperance question. On two successive evenings there were large audiences in the Free High Church. The addresses delivered on these occasions moved the people as few have ever done in these northern parts. Mr. Booth's visit to Inverness was in connection with the annual meetings of the Highland Temperance League, held on Thursday, the 26th ult., in the Town Hall. This gathering was over-crowded, while the speaking, singing, and manifest enthusiasm showed that a brighter day is dawning in connection with Gospel Temperance in the Highlands of Scotland.

BAMPTON, DEVON.

This little village has been rejoicing in two meetings held by Major and Mrs. Evered Poole, resulting in over 200 abstinence pledges. A Blue Ribbon Committee has been formed and a room opened for the use of the new members of the Blue Ribbon Union; this will be followed by the opening of a small coffee-house, a need long felt. Several of the local gentry have donned the blue ribbon and are coming forward to assist the working men of Bampton in their efforts to carry on the Temperance work so happily started by Major and Mrs. Poole.

In this small village there are no less than fourteen public-houses—one to every 150 inhabitants. The need for Temperance work is correspondingly great; more pressing still is the need of local option that would surely sweep away the most if not all of these moral pesthouses.

GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY.

On Sunday last a well-attended meeting in support of the temperance cause was held under the auspices of the Great Eastern Railway Gospel Temperance Union, at the Bedford Institute, Wheeler-street, Spitalfields. The chairman (Mr. Nicol) announced that there was every prospect of meetings being continued in that institution, for the special benefit of railway men, each Sunday evening. A gentleman connected with the management of the Great Eastern Railway said that, while total abstinence ought to be the rule of life with people generally, upon railway employés the rule was doubly binding. At present, all along the railway line with which he was connected, at every single station, particular notice was taken of the guard of each train, though that guard might be thoroughly ignorant of the fact. The management, however, were sensible of the requisiteness of sobriety on the part of their employés, and felt that not only for the sake of those engaged by the company, but of the general public travelling by the line, total abstinence on the part of guards and others ought to be the rule.

Mr. W. Forbes leaves London on Saturday, 18th inst., on a visit to Canada and the United States.

NOTES OF EVANGELISTIC WORK.

TROIDYRHIW, S. WALES.

THIS mining village, situated in a pleasant valley, has been the scene of spiritual awakening during the fortnight's Mission of Messrs. Mateer and Parker. The meetings were held in the Independent Church, which was frequently crowded on week nights. It is believed that not a few miners and their wives have been truly converted, besides a number of young people.

DUNDEE TENT MISSION.

The services in July were conducted by Mr. James Adam, of Edinburgh, with tokens of the Lord's presence and blessing. During the last two weeks there was a marked increase of interest and in the numbers attending the meetings. In August, our tent is to be removed to the west end of the town; the services there will be conducted by Mr. Richard Weaver, and we are expecting the Lord to do great things for us. P. W.

CURLOE GREEN, SAXMUNDHAM, SUFFOLK.

A little Mission work was established here twelve months ago. Miss Harris and Miss Rendell, of London, lately conducted Gospel services, which were greatly blessed, and brought hundreds together out of their solitary places. A young brother, Mr. Barhan, from London, has addressed large assemblies in various villages. I would gladly communicate with any who would like to spend a Lord's day in the country to work for their Master. CHRISTIAN S.

BOURNEMOUTH.

A very pleasant and successful series of services on the sands, when weather permitted, and in the Assembly-rooms or Town-hall at other times, has just been concluded. The meetings were conducted by Mr. F. Hodgson Jones, of Highury; a young man staying here, Mr. Oliver, of Kilburn, also gave valuable aid. Mr. Rogers, a resident in Bournemouth, arranged a steamboat excursion on Saturday, and many ladies, young and elder, took great interest in the meetings throughout. The Children's Special Service Mission has done good service in showing to more than one generation of our children the happy and attractive side of the religion of Jesus. They are thus prepared for the much tribulation through which all must enter into the kingdom of God.

CUMBERLAND.

A fortnight's services have been held in the Mission Church, Wath Brow, in the above parish, by Mr. A. S. Haslam, Mr. J. Haythornthwaite, and Mr. G. E. Morgan, all of Cambridge University, who conducted a similar Mission last summer. The crowded attendances at each service testify of the value and appreciatian set upon them by the people, who are mostly miners and their families.

The results, as last year, are already marked and beneficial. A number of careless and Godless ones have been brought to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus, and others have become more earnest followers of the Saviour. Much prayer has been offered on behalf of the Mission, and we trust that much and lasting good will crown the effort. Open-air services have also been held each night, supported principally by Mr. Arthur Perry, of Bristol. The heartiness and sincerity which are manifested abundantly proves that God is bearing testimony to the word of his grace.

RICHARD HAYTHORNTHWAITE, Vicar.
The Vicarage, Cleator Moor, Cumberland.

PENZANCE.

Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Kaye are holding very successful services in St. John's Hall, Penzance. The spacious building is crowded to excess, and much blessing is attending their labours. The united prayers of God's people are earnestly asked.

THE POTTERIES.

William Catlin and Joseph Phillips have been on a visit to Hanley, in Staffordshire, by invitation of "Gipsy Smith." During the five days' services many persons professed to find peace in believing. On the Sunday evening 6000 people were gathered into the Imperial Circus, and about 4000 on the other evenings. Every day there were marches round the town, sometimes as many as 400 in procession. Although it was the time of "the wakes" there was not a single case of insult, such favour has the Gipsy in the sight of the people of the Potteries.

GLASGOW GREEN.

The work carried on in the tent on the Green has gladdened the hearts of the workers. The Lord has been manifestly working during the past few weeks in connection with the labours of Mr. Taylor, of London. Great success has attended the Gospel temperance meetings; as the people crowded forward to take the pledge excellent opportunity was afforded to put the question whether they were prepared also to take Christ as their Saviour. District meetings have been formed at Springburn and Kippochhill. There is need of more workers to deal with anxious souls.

MILITIAMEN IN SCOTLAND.

The Lord has signally blessed the labours of several ladies and a Bible-reader from Glasgow among the militiamen who annually assemble for training at Hamilton, Lanarkshire. A tent was erected on the grounds, and in this a meeting was held in the evenings, at which fifty to sixty were present. The efforts put forth on behalf of the men's spiritual condition have been productive of great blessing. During the day the tent was used as a reading-room, as many as 120 to 130 letters being written daily. The officer in command has borne his testimony to the good conduct of the regiment during the time they were in training. There had been a great diminution of crime, mainly owing to the influence exerted by these Christian workers.

We understand there are fourteen different regiments of militia throughout, for whom nothing has been done in the way of attending to the spiritual condition of the men. When another training season comes round it is to be hoped that this good work will be largely extended.

Requests for Prayer.

FOR a three weeks' Mission in County Antrim.——For a young girl fallen from virtue.——For the Conference at Salisbury, on September 25—27.——For a young man who says that he is converted, but never "confesses with his mouth the Lord Jesus," nor openly serves Him. He has begun to drink wine freely.——That the Lord would deliver from strong drink my dear wife, and save her and my dear children.——Will praying mothers unite in seeking the Lord's mercy for a lost child, who has left the shelter of her parents' roof and taken to a life of sin.——For blessing on services in the tent on the Green, Glasgow, by F. E. Marsh, from August 5—31.

REV. WILLIAM CUTHBERTSON, late of Markham-square Chapel, Chelsea, has accepted a cordial invitation from a congregation in Chicago.

COLPORTAGE IN ISLINGTON.—In acknowledging the receipt of a donation towards the new Bible-stall in connection with the "Volunteer Movement" in Packington-street, Islington, Rev. F. Jewell says: "Day by day our colporteur is in the streets, moving from place to place selling his books and delivering little gospel addresses whenever he can gather a company to listen, and night by night he comes in with some cheerful tale of work done for the Lord."

Letters to the Editor.

Dear Sir,—I have been so sorry to find that a writer in the "Notes and Comments" in this week's Christian finds it necessary to quote an unworthy remark from The Echo concerning the action of Dr. George Macdonald. One hardly looks for charity in a daily paper, but that it should be found wanting in one which so ably advocates the cause of religion and truth cannot hasten the coming of the Kingdom, for which we so often pray.

I can only hope that want of thought, and it may be want of knowledge of the man referred to, accounts for the paragraph whereof I have spoken. When Christians have as much of the spirit of Christ as one who, by his words written and spoken, has led so many to see in Jesus of Nazareth the manifestation of a God whom they could love with all the devotion of their hearts, they will begin to understand that "where the spirit of the Lord is there is liberty," and will not make haste to judge others in respect of those things which they themselves may not, with a good conscience, be able to countenance.—Faithfully yours, M. C. W.

Croydon, Aug. 8.

GOSPEL WORK IN POOR NEIGHBOURHOODS.

Sir,—In your paper of 26th ult. I observe, in the report of the interesting meeting for promoting special religious services for the lapsed masses of London, two statements made, one of which is noteworthy, and the other needs correction. The one is that in five parishes in Shoreditch there is not a single "Dissenting" place of worship, of which assertion I have no means of judging. But when the speaker goes on to make the general assertion that "they found from that state of things that wherever there was abject poverty free churches could not live," I can supply facts which may not only correct the mistake, but may prove suggestive and stimulating to all branches of the Church Militant which are labouring side by side in London.

Some years since, in my student days, I carried on some work in the Cowgate and Canongate of Edinburgh, so that I know those districts. At the one end you will find Holyrood Free Church, in which Mr. Balfour has built up a good congregation; next, Moray Free Church; Cowgate Free Church (in which was to be found a most interesting congregation); Cowgatehead Free Church; West Port Free Church, where Mr. Tasker and Mr. Jolly laboured so successfully that a larger church is now being built. Still further west is Fountain-bridge Free Church, while in the High-street is John Knox Free Church.

The same is the case in the most destitute parts of Glasgow, where the following Free Churches, among others, are to be found doing our Master's work more or less successfully: Barony (Free), Bridgegate, Bridgeton, Buchanan (Memorial), Cowcadden's, Cunningham, Fairbairn, Great Hamilton-street, London-road, St. Andrew's, St. James's (Iron), Wynd, &c. &c.

The United Presbyterian Churches also doing good work, and the Established Church of Scotland has entered upon a new and laudable course of erecting semi-endowed territorial churches in such districts, not "by taxes on land," but by appealing to the consciences of wealthier districts, congregations, and individuals.

Now, if the various Evangelical branches of the visible Church in London would only hold a conference, or series of conferences, and agree to take special charge of the several spiritually destitute districts, and so refrain from overlapping, the problem might in so far be nearer solution, for the plan of Dr. Chalmers, to whose words and work you refer in the first article of the same number with generous eulogy, was to plant down a fully equipped Mission church and school, with a staff of earnest and devoted workers, in the very centre of such a seething mass of destitution and ungodliness.

I write in no controversial spirit, but with the sincere desire to point out the way of coping with similar evils, which has been tried and found successful in places quite as degraded. May our Master raise up the men for the work, and may the Divine Spirit for his sake awaken the dead and slumbering! Begging the favour of insertion, I am, yours truly, M. Millar Nicolson, D.Sc.

St. Heliers, Jersey, Aug. 1.

EMIGRATION FOR WOMEN.

Sir,—The remarks in your number of July 26 call for the serious attention of Christian workers. Every one who takes an interest in the welfare of young workwomen, of whom there are about 250,000 in London alone, must see much of what Mrs. Ross so truly calls "the hopeless competition for employment"—"toiling at occupations which are not remunerative," and must grieve over the temptations which this state of things leads to.

Of course, many ladies will say, "What a pity they do not go out as servants—they would be much better off." Granted, but will these ladies take them, after working for some years at a trade? They know little of household work, are often physically weak from hard toil and insufficient food, and they have not clothes to take a situation.

Mrs. Ross suggests a remedy, if it could only be carried out on a large scale. Our great preponderance of women makes it yearly more difficult for those who are compelled to get their living to meet with employment, while our Colonies are all ready to welcome them in large numbers, to treat them with kindness, and pay them well for their services. If some of those who are working as nursery governesses for a pittance which a servant would refuse to accept, or even for no salary at all, could but make up their minds to go out to our Colonies as servants, especially if they have had practical experience of household work in their own homes, they would find it a far more independent life than their present one.

I have visited all the Australian Colonies except Queensland, have travelled through Canada, and spent nearly fifteen years in New Zealand, to which Colony I return in September, taking with me a party of young women, all of whom I hope to place out in comfortable and respectable situations on our arrival in Hawkes Bay. They go under the care of a matron, but I shall be myself on board and see them every day. By the time we land we shall, of course, be tolerably well acquainted with each other, and being with one who knows the country well, they will not feel so much the loneliness of landing as "strangers in a strange land." Not so very strange after all, if they could only realise that they would find themselves still among English people, with churches, schools, hospitals, and other things, as in the old country; only, unlike the old country, they need not dread the pressure of competition, and the unsatisfactoriness of unremunerative labour.

I could say much more as to the prospects of those who venture out to the Colonies, of the splendid climate, and the kindly hospitality and friendliness with which new comers are welcomed; but I wish also to give one word of warning. It cannot be too strenuously insisted on, that benevolent persons who ship off to our Colonies either families or individuals who, from indolence, or physical inability, or loss of character, can do no good here, must not expect them to succeed there. The same help given to the respectable and industrious would be of lasting benefit. The Colonies which grant free passages insist—and rightly too—that those whom they receive shall be steady, honest, and industrious, and such need have no fear, with God's blessing, they will do well in any of our colonies.—Yours truly, 51, Cornwall-road, W. Harriet H. Herbert.

THE RESTORATION OF ISRAEL.

Sir,—I would suggest for the consideration of your correspondent, "W. F. K.," the following passages, which seem, I think, to indicate that the process of Israel's restoration is to be, first of all, their ingathering from all parts of the world, and then, as the great purpose and sequel of that ingathering, their conversion and blessedness:—Is. xi. 11, xlix. 11, 12; Jer. xvi. 14, 15, xxiii. 3—8, xxx. 3—9, xxxi. 4—10, xxxiii. 7—9; Ezek. xx. 33—35, xxxiv. 11—14, xxxvi., xxxvii., xxxviii., and xxxix.; Hos. i. 10, 11, iii. 4, 5; Joel iii. 1, 2; Amos ix. 14, 15; Zech. viii, xiv. 1—4.

It is not by the evidence of isolated passages, or the interpretation put upon particular words, but by the general tenour and teaching of the prophecies, that the restoration, at any rate of a representative portion of the Jewish people, in unbelief, is found to be something more than an assumption.

From a careful study of the predictions in Ezek. xxxvi. to xxxix., and a comparison of other passages, it would seem that upon their restoration and before their conversion the people are to enjoy, under a monarch of their own, a brief period of great national prosperity. In Hosea i. 11, we read that "they shall appoint themselves one head," and, as Canon Hoare remarks, "when the Lord appears to reign, it will not be by the appointment of the people." In Ezek. xxxvii. we notice two distinct and successive steps in the recovery of the dry bones—(a) they come together, and flesh covers them, but (ver. 8) there is no breath in them; then (b) the breath comes into them, and they live (ver. 10). Again, in Ezek. xxxviii. and xxxix. we have Israel restored, and living apparently under a government of their own, and the description of the invasion of their land by Gog, the chief Prince of Meshech and Tubal. And it would seem to be the distress and chastisement and tribulation which ensue upon this invasion (the Armageddon of Rev. xvi.) which bring the people into that condition of terror and despair, and ultimately of prayer and supplication, in which they are ready to meet their long-rejected Messiah. (Comp. Is. lxiii. 17 to lxiv. 4, with Ezek. xxxviii. 20.)

Undoubtedly the conversion and blessedness of Israel, and the regeneration of their land, as the great end of all the promises concerning them, is the chief point of all the prophecies; but I believe the teaching of Scripture to be, (1) that that blessedness is only to be consummated after the great special tribulation through which they have yet as a nation to pass, and (2) that it can only be consummated by the return of the Lord.

May the Lord direct the hearts of his own people to search these glorious prophecies of things to come more diligently, prayerfully, and believingly. We are not left to do as we like with regard to the future of Israel. There is not a plainer duty enjoined in the Bible than that contained in Isaiah lxii., "Ye that are the Lord's remembrancers, keep not silence, and give Him no rest till He establish and till He make Jerusalem a praise in the earth." But only the children of God can recognise that sacred duty. Only those who have been on the brow of Calvary and left their sins at the foot of the cross, can ever hope to climb the heights of Pisgah and view the glories of the Promised Land. For only they can be "looking for that blessed hope, the glorious appearing of the great God, and of our Saviour Jesus Christ" (Titus ii. 13). And "to them that look for Him, shall He appear the second time without sin unto salvation."—Yours faithfully, Handsworth, Aug. 4. Wm. Phipps.

Mission Appeals.

Stoke Newington.—The building known as Clonbrock Hall in Allen-road, has been secured for Gospel Mission purposes. Before it can be used for the same certain alterations are necessary, towards the expenses of which Mr. H. A. Squire, 128, Shakespeare-road, Stoke Newington, will be glad to receive help.

Tent Meetings — Evangelistic Mission. — The recent gale has played havoc with some of these tents, three of them being completely destroyed. These must be replaced at once; an earnest appeal is made for help to repair the damage done, and to further "press the battle to the gates." The exchequer of the Mission is empty. Contributions will be gladly received by Mr. C. Russell Hurditch, 164, Alexandra-road, St. John's-wood, N.W.

SIGNOR GAVAZZI has been delivering a series of orations in different Presbyterian Churches in Liverpool on behalf of the cause of Italian evangelisation.

CONFERENCE AT PARK HALL, STIRLINGSHIRE.—A conference for the deepening of spiritual life has been held at Park Hall, near Polmont, the residence of Mr. Livingston Learmouth. The meetings were held in a large granary in connection with the farm steading. Mr. H. F. Bowker presided at the meetings, which were well attended. Addresses were given during the three days by Revs. Colin Campbell, E. H. Hopkins, Mr. Bowker, and Mr. Spencer Walton.

URGENT APPEAL.

Bankers.

Messrs. RANSOM, BOUVERIE & Co., 1, Pall Mall East, S.W.; Messrs. BARNETTS, HOARES, HANBURY, & LLOYD, 60 and 62, Lombard Street, E.C.; Messrs. BOYLE, LOW, MURRAY & Co., Dublin; THE STANDARD BANK OF SOUTH AFRICA AND ITS BRANCHES.

THIS Society has been formed for the purpose of establishing a Christian Settlement in South Africa, the intention being to continue, and, as far as it is possible (with God's help) complete, the noble work begun by those Institutions which shelter the children and orphans in this country by emigrating them to a land where, under the supervision secured by the family system (besides obtaining places for these children in Christian families residing in South Africa), it is hoped they will continue to develop in moral character, and earn for themselves the advantages of an honest livelihood.

The Government of Natal has given a tract of land in Alexandra County, on Umzimkulu River, opposite Port Shepstone, of about 3,400 acres, on most favourable terms, and will grant free passages to Natal for our settlers and children. The climate of Natal is, without doubt, one of the healthiest in the world.

Boys who have been brought up as tailors, bootmakers, bakers, carpenters, &c., will be further trained and employed in such occupations; on the other hand, boys fitted by nature and disposition for field work will be trained and educated as agriculturists.

We require for our work just now about £1 000 for our settlement or depot. We have selected a party of five Christian men (without salary) and their families to go out and prepare the place for receiving our first party of boys. Everything is ready, but we have not yet received all the funds required, and—as we believe the Lord's work must be done without running into debt—we have determined not to move in this scheme until we have the necessary funds collected.

It is urgent that we should have the sum required in hand within this month, so as to be in a position to take out the boys offered us by Dr. Barnardo, Mr. Fegan, Miss Macpherson and others in December or January, a time when much distress prevails. This will enable those honoured workers in the Lord's vineyard to receive more children from the mire of the street.

Our party of girls (most of whom are from Dr. Barnardo's Homes) will leave in a few weeks for situations in Durban, about one hundred miles north of our settlement.

Can you help us in this matter? You will observe that our Committee is composed of gentlemen of all denominations.

Donations and Subscriptions (for even the smallest sums) will be thankfully received by any of the Society's Bankers, or at the office of The Christian. All Cheques and Postal Orders should be crossed.

Offices: 115, Fleet Street, E.C.

"The Voices of the Children."

Dear Readers of "The Christian,"

Heavy expenses incurred (£3,000) in emigrating during the year over 300 Poor Boys and Girls have quite exhausted our Treasury, so that our Bank account is even now overdrawn.

Meanwhile, Twelve Hundred Little Ones needing FOOD, SHELTER, AND CLOTHING, must remain in the "Homes" during the Holidays.

The next 9 or 10 weeks will therefore be a period of great burden-bearing and much anxiety to those on whom the direct responsibilities lie. But

Are there not many of the Lord's Stewards who will regard this sober statement of facts as a call to Service?

Surely the enjoyments of life are enhanced to those who remember the necessities of the children of our streets.

Any gifts, however small, will be gratefully acknowledged by our Treasurer, Wm. Fowler, Esq., M.P., or by

Yours very faithfully, in Christ's Service,

Among His Little Ones,

T. J. BARNARDO.

YOUNG MEN IN WINNIPEG.

IN a circular-letter the President and Secretary of the Winnipeg Young Men's Christian Association state the following interesting facts with respect to the condition of their town, and appeal for help towards a suitable building for the purposes of Y.M.C.A. work:—

"Winnipeg has a population of 25,000 (some say 30,000). Probably one-half of these are young men away from home. Almost all have come from Great Britain and from the other provinces of Canada—the number from the former source has been especially great this season. Our work, therefore, is almost entirely for and among strangers. These live in lodgings, not always the most comfortable or attractive, and not affording the best moral atmosphere. There is comparatively little home life or social restraint, for, of a hundred acquaintances that a young man may form, perhaps not one will have a home. There are over 100 places where liquor is sold under license. Many of these are elegantly furnished, brilliantly lighted, and rendered more attractive and seductive by billiards and music. Theatres stand with open doors, and she whose 'house is the way to hell' is ever ready to welcome. During our long winter evenings—and summer evenings, too, less the cold—the choice of the vast majority of these young men lies between a cold and cheerless room, the street, or a warm and attractive billiard and bar-room.

"Counterbalancing these attractions, the only place of the kind in the city is the Y.M.C.A. reading room, 18 ft. by 43 ft. in size, full all the time. While good work is being done, we are much hampered for want of more and better accommodation. We have been seeking larger rooms for some time, and hope this fall or winter to better ourselves in this respect to some extent, but will not be able to secure what we really need till we have a building of our own. But an association in Winnipeg does not mean local benefit only. Thousands of young men pass through here en route to the West, remaining, some a few days, others weeks or months. Such are influenced for good or evil by their sojourn; and to-day the influence of the Winnipeg Association extends through the length and breadth of the land from Lake Superior to the Pacific Ocean (as Winnipeg is the commercial, so it is the spiritual distributing centre for this country). Nor is this influence ephemeral—these pioneers will mould the moral and religious character of the country.

"We want your assistance to provide a Christian Home—and no city has greater need than Winnipeg for such a place—for your sons, your brothers, your friends. Almost all of our citizens are young men who came here a few years since (our population four years ago was 6000, and twelve years ago only a few hundred) with very little capital. They require to do considerable building, &c. While many are in comfortable circumstances, few are wealthy. Of the ten Protestant churches in the city only one worships in a permanent building. The others are either building or expect to do so soon. The growth of our city is so rapid that church extension within its bounds is constantly before us. The influx of population into the West taxes not only our local churches but those in the East also, in order to keep pace with the Mission work which is required to provide this multitude with the Gospel."

The General Secretary is Mr. C. M. Copeland. Y.M.C.A., Winnipeg, Manitoba, North America.

A SERMON preached by Dr. Adolph Saphir in connection with the death of the late Dr. A. P. Stewart, one of the elders of the Belgrave Presbyterian Church, has been published (3d., 18, Paternoster-square, E.C.). From 2 Cor. v. 8, Dr. Saphir discourses, with his usual point and clearness, on the Christian's relation to death and the life beyond.

Notices of Books, &c.

A NEW edition has lately been published of Mr. F. W. BOURNE'S delightful biography of Billy Bray—A KING'S SON. 2s. 6d. Bible Christian Book Room. Any intending holiday-maker who lacks reading that will be at once entertaining and profitable in the highest degree, should slip a copy of Mr. Bourne's work into his portmanteau.

THE SHRINE OF KNOCK. By JOSEPH WATSON. W. Stewart & Co., Holborn-viaduct. In the form of a lively and adventurous narrative we have here a complete exposé of the notorious pretended miracles of healing at a Romish Chapel in Ireland, that, a few years since, vastly amused the sceptical world and made the judicious believer to grieve over the deceit and credulity of many of his fellow-men.

A TOURIST GUIDE TO THE CONTINENT, with map and numerous excellent illustrations, is issued by the authority of the Great Eastern Railway Company (6d., 125, Fleet-street, E.C.). Mr. Lindley, the editor, has produced a wonderfully interesting and ably written description of the leading holiday resorts on the Continent. It will be read with delight no less by those who stay at home than by travellers over the ground described.

A CRITICAL HISTORY OF PHILOSOPHY. By Rev. ASA MAHAN, D.D., LL.D. Two volumes. Elliot Stock. We have read much of these two volumes, comprising more than 860 pp. of closely printed matter, and find ourselves unable to praise without reservation, or to condemn without large commendation. We may say at once that the work is a vast storehouse of learning. While it is critical, it might be termed at the same time an Analytical History of Philosophy. The classification of systems of philosophy from the earliest ages to those of our own times is remarkably exact and comprehensive, and the arrangement is at once so lucid and complete as to make the work invaluable to all philosophical students. Nor to these only: no man can fight the battle of truth against the scepticism of a powerful party, who is altogether ignorant of the principles behind which modern unbelief entrenches itself. Believing as we do that this grave conflict is inevitable, and is fast coming upon us, we thank Dr. Mahan very warmly for the well-furnished armoury which he opens, and makes free to all Christian combatants. Nevertheless we think that the prevailing tone of the polemic scarcely adds to the value of the volumes; nor does the severe scorn and somewhat imperious dogmatism exhibited here and there. We would recommend also that in a second edition replies to matter in "The New Englander" should be otherwise framed in a permanently historical work, and that the section on Mysticism should be made more exact. But blemishes must not interfere with the judgment that the extensive learning, wide survey, and presiding purpose of the work give to it a most timely and transcendent value. It is a great and an able pioneer treatise against a false philosophy, and will very powerfully aid the reaction against materialism which has happily set in.

Forthcoming Meetings.

THE EVANGELISATION SOCIETY will send Evangelists to any part of England, Scotland, and Wales on due notice. Apply, Hon. Sec., 21, Surrey-street, Strand, W.C.

THE METROPOLITAN TABERNACLE EVANGELISTS' ASSOCIATION will send lay preachers and Evangelists to any chapel or hall of any Evangelical denomination in London. Apply, Hon Sec., 30, Surrey-square, S.E.

THE IRISH EVANGELISATION SOCIETY will send Evangelists to any part of Ireland on due notice. Apply to Mr. J. Barton, Hon. Sec., Dundalk, Ireland.

SIXTH SERIES OF WEEKLY CASES.

Notice to the Readers of "THE CHRISTIAN"
WHO MAY BE personally or relatively INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.
Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK
CASE of J— S—, of C—.—CHRONIC PHTHISIS.

The case of this young man (a servant in the family of a clergyman, now deceased) was brought under my notice by the lady in whose service he is engaged, some eight years since. "Before applying to you (Mrs. G. writes), his doctor at Red-hill said he had only enough lung to last four months, unless a miracle stopped the disease; and God did work the miracle by means of your Balsam, and for some years J. S. enjoyed tolerably good health." (This letter is dated June 25, 1883.)

"I believe (she adds) that, under God, your Balsam has been the chief means of prolonging his life, combined with the many prayers that have been offered for him."

The patient came to see me recently, suffering from the result of anxiety and overwork, which, after seven years, had caused some relapse. On minutely questioning him, I found he had sadly neglected himself, only following out my directions occasionally. Nevertheless, there were distinct indications of extensive healing processes having taken place, and (I believe) a fair hope of ultimate recovery (as far as the condition of the lungs is concerned) by again fully observing my instructions, and persevering with the medicine.

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.
Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

AUTUMN SWALLOWS:
A Book of Lyrics.
BY ELLICE HOPKINS,
Author of "Rose Turquand," "Life and Letters of James Hinton," "Work amongst Working Men," "Christ the Consoler," &c.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"There is genuine passion and not a little of vivid imagination in this volume of lyrics, which seems to give us some measure of the inward force that has gone to the making of Miss Ellice Hopkins' beneficent career. In one of the semi-epigrammatic versicles with which Miss Hopkins fills a few of the pages of the book, she illustrates the saying that "the blood is the life" with characteristic vigour, in words that might be taken as the motto of both her poetic and her unpoetic work:—

"Yesterday's living sacrifice
Is but to-day's dull carcase; rise,
Nor dare to offer the All-living death
And dead decay,
But fresh life-blood pour out, and warm new breath
Each new to-day."—Spectator.

"There is real substance in these poems—the substance of genuine thought, and of a powerful, if sombre, imagination. Her language is sometimes obscure and harsh; her verse, if it does not actually halt, is wanting in melody. For all this, her verse is of good, we may say even high, poetical quality; and it is unusually level in merit."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"'Autumn Swallows,' by Ellice Hopkins, is a collection of short poems of considerable merit. They are for the most part of an emotional character, and remind us not a little of the writings of Mrs. Browning, Miss Ingelow, and Miss Rossetti. Still there is a difference, and the authoress has established a claim to be listened to on her own account. She has a delicate fancy, an abundant vocabulary of poetical words and phrases. She takes pains with all she attempts, and does not strive to heighten the effect by coarseness or profanity."—Westminster Review.

SCRIPTURAL HOLINESS
NOT
SINLESS PERFECTION.
By CHARLES GRAHAM.

The Sword and Trowel says:—"So far as we can see, this is a sound book. If this is all that the Holiness people have meant, we cannot make out why there has been so much noise over the matter. To us these new revelations are nothing but the common-places of experimental divinity. With considerable skill and sagacity Mr. Graham has proved his title, and wheeled away much fanatical rubbish. Anything which will promote true holiness has all our heart."

"AN ISRAELITE INDEED."

"Joe C—was a dear young friend of ours; one, it might be said, as of Nathanael of old, in whom was 'no guile.' But though he had naturally this guileless spirit, it could not be said of him, until he was seventeen years old, that he was 'an Israelite indeed.' His conversion was so simple. It was just through his sister saying to him one day, 'Are you a Christian, Joe?' She was a Christian herself, and she longed for her brother to decide for Christ. He could not say 'yes,' so he was silent; but he could not rest until he knew that he was a Christian too. A few days after, when the subject was renewed, and the same question asked again, it was answered this time with an emphatic 'Yes!'"—Extract.

A Signal of Distress.

THE BOYS' HOME, SOUTHWARK.

LITTLE WANDERERS' HOME, GREENWICH. THE BOYS' ORPHAN HOME, RAMSGATE.

MR. FEGAN has been compelled through ill-health to leave town for a period of perfect rest and quiet, and is forbidden to do any mental work. He has been absent now for some weeks, and it is feared it may be some time yet before he is thoroughly restored.

His health completely failed through the constant strain of living in the Southwark Home amongst the boys, caring personally for their spiritual, temporal, and physical welfare. This unceasing supervision has been of the utmost value to the work, but has quite worn out the worker.

The result of his untiring efforts is that the work is now in a higher state of efficiency than ever before, and a state of system and discipline has been attained which it is hoped will prevent the work from suffering in any way during his temporary absence, the various departments continuing to be carried on in their usual course by his several helpers.

Funds are now URGENTLY NEEDED to maintain the 200 boys in the various Homes, and it is earnestly hoped that there will be no want of adequate support at this time, so that all anxiety as to pecuniary matters may be taken from Mr. FEGAN's mind.

Remittances should be made payable as usual to J. W. C. FEGAN, but communications relating to the admission of boys, trade orders, &c., should be addressed to

THE SECRETARY.

MENTAL AND PHYSICAL MALADIES:

THEIR CAUSE AND CURE.

A paralysed limb can be moved, and functional action induced in the body or imitated in a lifeless limb, by Electricity. Can there be a more natural hypothesis, therefore, than that Electricity is excited through the nervous mass by the operation of the will, so as to produce muscular action? The exhaustion of the torpedo's power of giving shocks is an example of what always takes place when the will has been long or powerfully exerted. The nervous apparatus ceases to supply that Electric power which stimulates the muscle, so that it may be used by the will, and the creature lies tired and torpid till restored by rest. Humboldt states that "when horses are driven into a pond crowded with Electric eels, not a single horse is killed by them on the second day, for these fish require rest and abundant nourishment in order to produce Electricity." Thus we obtain a plausible theory of weariness or weakness, through the nervous system becoming unfit to provide the proper stimulus to the muscular fibre, not so much as a machine deranged in its parts, as a machine perfect in all parts, but which cannot be worked for want of the motive power. This may arise either from insufficient bodily aliment or from undue mental exercise, resulting in a depression of the bodily powers. Rest, food, and healthy action are necessary conditions to accumulate the Electricity, since it must be produced from the sanguineous circulation; but a state of exhaustion may be induced quite as readily by thinking, as by bodily exertion; indeed, the former, when intense, is more injurious to the bodily functions than the latter. Efforts of the will in maintaining attention are of the most exhausting character, because not accompanied by a corresponding force of circulation and of breathing, as in active employment of the limbs, which promotes the healthy distribution of the blood. Therefore, we conclude that chronic physical derangements arise chiefly from nervous exhaustion.

In this condition neither the muscular nor the nervous tissues are diseased. In Paralysis there is a softening of nerve matter, and it becomes an imperfect conductor of the "will" force. Nothing of this kind is found in General Debility. The want of nerve and mental force shows itself in despondency—a state of mind exhibiting a want of confidence in the use of our mental powers, so necessary to success in every department of human labour, and to the efficient discharge of the functions of life. The lack of this quality causes a negative condition of all the organs, and, as a consequence, a weakened tone of all muscular action ensues.

The Christian.

MINISTERS: MAN-MADE & GOD-MADE.

IN several sections of the Church there is, it appears, a lack of candidates for the ministerial office and work, a fact which calls for grave and earnest consideration. At a Presbyterian Convention held a few weeks ago at Saratoga, the following remarks were made by the Moderator. They strike us as being wise and suggestive on a very important subject:—

"Why is it that we are to-day face to face with so great a calamity as a famine of the ministry?

"1. It is not the trials of the ministry.

"2. It is not the inadequate support of the ministry.

"3. It is not the inducement of brilliant prospects in other callings.

"4. It is not the intellectual demands made upon the ministry.

"5. It is not the lack of adequate provision on the part of our church for collegiate education.

"6. It is not chiefly the lack of general Christian consecration.

"The cause is the peril of truth's perversion, of losing the spirit in the form. It is the standing peril of a conquering Church, flushed with victory, and permitted of God to go to high places and do some great things."

The ministry presents few attractions to the unspiritual mind, and its prizes in the shape of earthly reward are few and far between. Success in its work can only follow in the train of earnest, self-denying toil, which in most cases has to be pursued under circumstances at once discouraging and trying to faith and patience. Hence those who enter the ministry from lower motives than love to Christ and concern for the glory of God, usually find nothing but disappointment, while the number of those impelled to it by devotion to the cause of truth is sure to be proportioned to the measure of spirituality found in the churches. If, therefore, the spirit of faith and prayer be at a low ebb, the supply of labourers for the fields of Christian service is sure to dwindle and fail.

In further commenting on this matter, the speaker used words which call attention to the great difference there is between God-made and man-made ministers. The distinction is not always recognised, nor the law of supply laid down by our Lord considered.

"What have we done with God's plan for getting a ministry? We have not exalted the sacerdotal function, but have we not abased the Divine function? We have not attempted to make ministers, but have we asked God to make them? He has said: 'Pray ye the Lord of the harvest that He would send forth labourers;' but have we not virtually said, 'That is a matter that will regulate itself by the law of supply and demand'? and what is this but another way of saying, 'Ministers will make themselves'?

"Practically we have said, 'This matter will regulate itself.' Does it not look as if God had said, 'Very well, I will let them see whether it will regulate itself.' The Holy Spirit has more and more let our young men alone about this matter, and our colleges have gone from year to year unblessed as compared with the refreshings of old, and down has dropped our list of candidates, and we are faced to-day with a ministerial famine."

The relations subsisting between the ministry and the Church require careful review. In too many quarters the minister is regarded more as the paid agent of men than as the servant of Christ, and human gifts are more relied on, and looked to as the source of success, than spiritual power. The minister who regularly labours in the same sphere, whatever his personal endowments may be, must ever be largely dependent for success on the prayers and spiritual status of the people of God among whom he dwells. If we would see those already at the work prospering in it, and also see their ranks recruited from time to time with God-sent ambassadors of the truth, we must pray the Lord of the harvest to put forth his might, and exert his gracious influence.

The Church and the world both need a larger supply of men who can say with the Apostle Paul, "Necessity is laid upon me; yea, woe is unto me if I preach not the Gospel." But this necessity can be only felt as the result of a Divine quickening and a Divine call. Let our young men hear the voice of the Holy Spirit within them saying, in the name of Christ, "Who will go for us?" and the quick response of the consecrated heart will be, "Here am I, send me." At one of the prayer-meetings at Mildmay during the last Conference a father rose and requested prayer for his eight children, who were all converted to God, that the Divine anointing for service might come upon them, so that they should all go forth into the harvest-field of Christ. This is what we want to see, parents yielding up their children, and our sons and daughters, led by the Lord, yielding up themselves to Him.

A PLEA FOR UNITY.

A DISCOURSE has lately been delivered by Dr. Newman Smyth before the General Association of Connecticut on the causes of the growing lack of ministers. After referring to some of these, he says that what we want is, fewer churches and good ministers. We want good ministers for good churches, and good churches for good ministers, and it may be that Providence is just now working a law of supply and demand which shall tend to equalise these terms to the benefit of the cause of Christ.

Dr. Smyth thinks, and thinks rightly, that Evangelical Christendom is lacking in what he calls Christian common sense. He instances towns where, in a population of three thousand persons, there are ten Evangelical churches; and again, in a population of one thousand, four churches. Similar cases abound in our own country. What is needed, the Doctor asserts, is a reorganisation of parishes. Not on the lines of denominationalism, but of sanctified common sense. Were the real religious wants of the people to be considered rather than the interests of sectarianism, there are already ministers enough to supply all the isles of the sea with missionaries, as well as to maintain the work of God at home. By such a reorganisation as he suggests, churches struggling for existence, and practically useless as contributors to the advancement of Christ's kingdom, would be allied with others in the one great object of Christian endeavour, and thus the standard of ministry and Church-life would be raised.

The result of thus raising the condition of the churches would be that greater stimulus and encouragement would be afforded to Christian young men to enter the ministry, and dearth of suitable candidates would be avoided. Never was the work of evangelising the world more enticing to earnest souls than now. This is, indeed, as Dr. Smyth declares, "a grand missionary age," and theological differences on minor points of polity and forms of worship are small and insignificant enough when compared with the call which comes from all parts to go forward in the work of Gospel proclamation, and the uprearing of the Church of Christ.

"Is it not time," Dr. Smyth asks, "that we should deny our denominational selves for the kingdom of God?" Quite time, thousands of earnest hearts on both sides of the Atlantic will reply. But we fear another Pentecost must come before the ideal condition of things thus propounded becomes real. It is something, however, to find such a proposition seriously made, and listened to with respect in the midst of an assembly like that to which the address was delivered. There is a deeper and wider yearning for concentration and unity than some other signs of the times would imply, and the discussion of such a theme is fraught, not only with interest, but practical importance. There is no reason why another Pentecost should not come, if only the faith and prayer of the Church are awakened, and put forth.

WHAT IS ATHEISM GOOD FOR?

THE utilitarian aspects of Atheism form a subject of inquiry which those who are in danger of being enticed into atheistic speculations would do well to consider. The Bishop of Manchester, in a recent sermon at Burnley, said he did not think people would get very much out of Atheism, for though difficulties of belief were perplexing, those of unbelief were still more so. This is true; and if the theme is pursued, it will be seen that in every way unbelief despoils the soul of good, and fails to benefit in any direction those who are its victims.

Mr. G. J. Holyoake has written a letter to Sir Wm. Harcourt, giving reasons why Messrs. Foote and Ramsay should be set at liberty. In it he asserts that outrage consists in the imputation of a conscious infamy of belief to others when they do not hold it, intending thereby to shock or irritate them, regardless whether they are shocked and irritated or not. This he condemns, but argues that it is a crime constantly committed by Christian preachers and writers against Freethinkers, although the law never steps in to protect the latter. It would be hard for the writer of these statements to prove his point, inasmuch as so-called freethought presents no sacred truth or hallowed sentiment to outrage. Preachers and writers on Gospel themes may speak hardly of unbelief, and doubtless do, but they cannot exceed the enormity of its sin against God, or exaggerate its consequences to the unbeliever.

Many who rank themselves among Freethinkers are vastly superior to their creed, and would utterly disown any complicity with the utterances and conduct of others who bear that name. If such are shocked or irritated by a full and candid exposure of the real nature and character of the creed with which they have allied themselves, they must lay this to the charge of their friends, and the cause they espouse, not of those who truthfully declare the matter. The sword of truth has a keen edge, and its strokes are apt to wound those whom it smites.

Infidelity has every cause to dread inquiry into its real results, and while, as we freely admit is the case, some who call themselves Freethinkers shrink from committing themselves to all the consequences of their position, yet they must not complain if the arguments on the side of faith versus unbelief press heavily upon them. It is very different in the case of the attacks of Infidelity upon the religion of Christ; that, if impartially dealt with, is indubitably on the side of righteousness and the best interests of mankind, some even of its keenest adversaries being judges.

DEGENERATION.*—1.

By Mr. HENRY DRUMMOND.

"How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?"—Heb. ii. 3.

In one of his best-known books, Mr. Darwin brings out a fact which may be illustrated in some such way as this: Suppose a bird-fancier collects a flock of tame pigeons distinguished by all the infinite ornamentations of their race. They are of all kinds, of every shade of colour, and adorned with every variety of marking. He takes them to an uninhabited island and allows them to fly off wild into the woods. They found a colony there, and after the lapse of many years the owner returns to the spot. He will find that a remarkable change has taken place in the interval. The birds, or their descendants rather, have all become changed into the same colour. The black, the white, and the dun, the striped, the spotted, and the ringed, are all metamorphosed into one—a dark slatey blue. Two plain black bands monotonously repeat themselves upon the wings of each, and the loins beneath are white; but all the variety, all the beautiful colours, all the old graces of form it may be, have disappeared. These improvements were the result of care and nurture, of domestication, of civilisation; and now that these influences are removed, the birds themselves undo the past and lose what they had gained. The attempt to elevate the race has been mysteriously thwarted. It is as if the original bird, the far remote ancestor of all doves, had been blue, and these had been compelled by some strange law to discard the badges of their civilisation and conform to the ruder image of the first. The natural law by which such a change occurs is called The Principle of Reversion to Type.

It is a proof of the universality of this law that the same thing will happen with a plant. A garden is planted, let us say, with strawberries and roses, and for a number of years is left alone. In process of time it will run to waste. But this does not mean that the plants will really waste away, but that they will change into something else, and, as it invariably appears, into something worse; in the one case, namely, into the small, wild strawberry of the woods, and in the other into the primitive dog-rose of the hedges.

If we neglect a garden plant, then, a natural principle of deterioration comes in, and changes it into a worse plant. And if we neglect a bird, by the same imperious law it will be gradually changed into an uglier bird. Or if we neglect almost any of the domestic animals, they will rapidly revert to wild and worthless forms again.

Now the same thing exactly would happen in the case of you or me. Why should man be an exception to any of the laws of nature? Nature knows him simply as an animal—Sub-kingdom Vertebrata, Class Mammalia, Order Bimana. And the law of reversion to type runs through all creation. If a man neglect himself for a few years he will change into a worse man and a lower man. If it is his body that he neglects, he will deteriorate into a wild and bestial savage—like the de-humanised men who are discovered sometimes upon desert islands. If it is his mind, it will degenerate into imbecility and madness—solitary confinement has the power to unmake men's minds and leave them idiots. If he neglect his conscience, it will run off into lawlessness and vice. Or, lastly, if it is his soul, it must inevitably atrophy, drop off in ruin and decay.

We have here, then, a thoroughly natural basis for the question before us. If we neglect, with this universal principle staring us in the face, how shall we escape? If we neglect the ordinary means of keeping a garden in order, how shall it escape running to weeds and waste? Or, if we neglect the opportunities for cultivating the mind, how shall it escape the natural retrograde movement, the inevitable relapse into barrenness and death?

It is not necessary, surely, to pause for proof that there is such a retrograde principle in the being of every man. It is demonstrated by facts, and by the analogy of all Nature. Three possibilities of life, according to science, are open to all living organisms—Balance, Evolution, and Degeneration. The first denotes the precarious persistence of a life along what looks like a level path, a character which seems to hold its own alike against the attacks of evil and the appeals of good. It implies a set of circumstances so balanced by choice or fortune that they neither influence for better nor for worse. But, except in theory, this state of equilibrium, normal in the organic kingdom, is really foreign to the world of life; and what seems inertia may be a true Evolution unnoticed from its slowness, or, likelier still, a movement of Degeneration subtly obliterating as it falls the very traces of its former height. From this state of apparent Balance, Evolution is the escape in the upward direction, degeneration in the lower. But Degeneration, rather than Balance or Elaboration, is the possibility of life embraced by the majority of mankind. And the choice is determined by man's own nature. The life of Balance is difficult. It lies on the verge of continual temptation, its perpetual adjustments become fatiguing, its measured virtue is monotonous and uninspiring. More difficult still, apparently, is the life of ever upward growth. Most men attempt it for a time, but growth is slow; and despair overtakes them while the goal is far away. Yet none of these reasons fully explains the fact that the alternative which remains is adopted by the majority of men. That Degeneration is easy only half accounts for it. Why is it easy? Why but that already in each man's very nature this principle is supreme? He feels within his soul a silent drifting motion impelling him downward with irresistible force. Instead of aspiring to Conversion to a higher Type he submits by a law of his nature to Reversion to a lower. This is Degeneration—that principle by which the organism, failing to develop itself, failing even to keep what it has got, deteriorates, and becomes more and more adapted to a degraded form of life.

All men who know themselves are conscious that this tendency, deep-rooted and active, exists within their nature. Theologically it is described as a gravitation, a bias towards evil. The Bible view is that man is conceived in sin and shapen in iniquity. And experience tells him that he will shape himself into further sin and ever deepening iniquity without the smallest effort, without in the least intending it, and in the most natural way in the world, if he simply let his life run. It is on this principle that, completing the conception, the wicked are said further in the Bible to be lost. They are not really and fully lost as yet, but they are on the sure way to it. The bias of their lives is in full action. There is no drag on anywhere. The natural tendencies are having it all their own way; and although the victims may be quite unconscious that all this is going on, it is patent to everyone who considers even the natural bearings of the case that "the end of these things is Death." When we see a man fall from the top of a five-storey house, we say the man is lost. We say that before he has fallen a foot; for the same principle that made him fall the one foot will undoubtedly make him complete the descent by falling other eighty or ninety feet. So that he is a dead man, or a lost man, from the very first. The gravitation of sin in a human soul acts precisely in the same way. Gradually, with gathering momentum, it sinks a man further and further from God and righteousness, and lands him, by the sheer action of a natural law, in the hell of a neglected life.

But the lesson is not less clear from analogy. Apart even from the law of Degeneration, apart from reversion to type, there is in every living organism a law of death. We are wont to imagine that Nature is full of life. In reality it is full of Death. One cannot say that it is natural for a plant to live. Examine its nature fully, and you have to admit that its natural tendency is to die. It is kept from dying by a mere temporary endowment, which gives it an ephemeral dominion over the elements—gives it power to utilise for a brief span the rain, the sunshine, and the air. Withdraw this temporary endowment for a moment, and its true nature is revealed. Instead of overcoming Nature it is overcome. The very things which appeared to minister to its growth and beauty now turn against it and make it decay and die: The sun, which warmed it, withers it; the air and rain, which nourished it, rot it. It is the very forces which we associate with life, which, when their true nature appears, are discovered to be really the ministers of death.

This law, which is true for the whole plant-world, is also valid for the animal and for man. Air is not life, but corruption—so literally corruption that the only way to keep out corruption, when life has ebbed, is to keep out air. Life is merely a temporary suspension of these destructive powers; and this is truly one of the most accurate definitions of life we have yet received—"the sum total of the functions which resist death."

Spiritual life, in like manner, is the sum total of the functions which resist sin. The soul's atmosphere is the daily trial, circumstance, and temptation of the world. And as it is life alone which gives the plant power to utilise the elements, and as, without it, they destroy it, so it is the spiritual life alone which gives the soul power to utilise temptation and trial; and without it they destroy the soul. How shall we escape if we refuse to exercise these functions—in other words, if we neglect?

This destroying process, observe, goes on quite independently of God's judgment on sin. God's judgment on sin is another and a more awful fact of which this may be a part. But it is a distinct fact by itself, which we can hold and examine separately, that on purely natural principles the soul that is left to itself unwatched, uncultivated, unredeemed, must fall away into death by its own nature. The soul that sinneth "it shall die." It shall die, not necessarily because God passes sentence of death upon it, but because it cannot help dying. It has neglected the "functions which resist death," and has always been dying. The punishment is in its very nature, and the sentence is being gradually carried out all along the path of life by ordinary processes which enforce the verdict with the appalling faithfulness of law.

There is an affectation that religious truths lie beyond the sphere of the comprehension which serves men in ordinary things. This question, at least, must be an exception. It ies as near the natural as the spiritual. If t makes no impression on a man to know hat God will visit his iniquities upon him, ne cannot blind himself to the fact that Nature will. Do we not all know what it is to oe punished by Nature for disobeying her? We have looked round the wards of a hospital, a prison, or a madhouse, and seen there Nature at work squaring her accounts with sin. And we knew as we looked that if no Judge sat on the throne of heaven at all, there was a Judgment there, where an inexorable Nature was crying aloud for justice, and carrying out her heavy sentences for violated laws.

When God gave Nature the law into her own hands in this way, He seems to have given her two rules upon which her sentences were to be based. The one is formally enunciated in this sentence, "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap." The other is informally expressed in this, "If we neglect, how shall we escape?"

The first is the positive law, and deals with sins of commission. The other, which we are now discussing, is the negative, and deals with sins of omission. It does not say anything about sowing, but about not sowing. It takes up the case of souls which are lying fallow. It does not say, if we sow corruption, we shall reap corruption. Perhaps we would not be so unwise, so regardless of ourselves, of public opinion, as to sow corruption. It does not say, if we sow tares we shall reap tares. We might never do anything so foolish as sow tares. But if we sow nothing, it says we shall reap nothing. If we put nothing into the field, we shall take nothing out. If we neglect to cultivate in summer, how shall we escape starving in winter?

Now, the Bible raises this question, but does not answer it, because it is too obvious to need answering. How shall we escape if we neglect? The answer is, we cannot. In the nature of things we cannot. We cannot escape, any more than a man can escape drowning who falls into the sea, and has neglected to learn to swim. In the nature of things he cannot escape, nor can he escape who has neglected the great salvation.

Why should such fatal consequences follow a simple process like neglect? The popular impression is that a man, to be what is called lost, must be an open and notorious sinner. He must be one who has abandoned all that is good and pure in life, and sown to the flesh with all his might and main. But this principle goes further. It says simply, "If we neglect." Any one may see the reason why a notoriously wicked person should not escape; but why should not all the rest of us escape? What is to hinder people who are not notoriously wicked escaping—people who never sowed anything in particular? Why is it such a sin to sow nothing in particular?

There must be some hidden and vital relation between these three words, Salvation, Neglect, and Escape—some reasonable, essential, and indissoluble connection. Why are these words so linked together as to weight this clause with all the authority and solemnity of a sentence of death?

The explanation has partly been given already. It lies still further, however, in the meaning of the word Salvation. And this, of course, is not at all Salvation in the ordinary sense of forgiveness of sin. This is one great meaning of Salvation, the first and the greatest. But this is spoken to people who are supposed to have had this. It is the broader word, therefore, and includes not only forgiveness of sin but salvation or deliverance from the downward bias of the soul. It takes in that whole process of rescue from the power of sin and selfishness that should be going on from day to day in every human life. We have seen that there is a natural principle in man, lowering him, deadening him, pulling him down by inches to the mere animal plane, blinding reason, searing conscience, paralysing will. This is the active destroying principle, or sin. Now to counteract this, God has discovered to us another principle which will stop this drifting process in the soul, steer it round, and make it drift the other way. This is the active saving principle, or Salvation. If a man find the first of these powers furiously at work within him, dragging his whole life downward to destruction, there is only one way to escape his fate—to take resolute hold of the upward power, and be borne by it to the opposite goal. And as this second power is the only one in the universe which has the slightest real effect upon the first, how shall a man escape if he neglect it? To neglect it is to cut off the only possible chance of escape. In declining this he is simply abandoning himself with his eyes open to that other and terrible energy which is already there, and which, in the natural course of things, is bearing him every moment further and further from escape.

From the very nature of Salvation, therefore, it is plain that the only thing necessary to make it of no effect is neglect. Hence the Bible could not fail to lay strong emphasis on a word so vital. It was not necessary for it to say: How shall we escape if we trample upon the great salvation, or doubt, or despise, or reject it. A man who has been poisoned only need neglect the antidote and he will die. It makes no difference whether he dashes it on the ground, or pours it out of the window, or sets it down by his bedside, and stares at it all the time he is dying. He will die just the same, whether he destroys it in a passion, or coolly refuses to have anything to do with it. And as a matter of fact probably most deaths, spiritually, are gradual dissolutions of the last class rather than rash suicides of the first.

This, then, is the effect of neglecting salvation from the side of salvation itself; and the conclusion is that from the very nature of salvation escape is out of the question. Salvation is a definite process. If a man refuse to submit himself to that process, clearly he cannot have the benefits of it. As many as received Him to them gave He power to become the sons of God. He does not avail himself of this power. It may be mere carelessness or apathy. Nevertheless the neglect is fatal. He cannot escape because he will not.

(To be concluded.)

EMIGRATION.—Mr. J. E. Boyd, the Chairman (pro tem.) of the Association for Promoting State-directed Emigration, has forwarded to Sir C. Tupper, High Commissioner for Canada, a copy of the prospectus of the Association, with a request that the Government of Canada will inform him of their views on the subject of the proposed experiment of removing 10,000 families from London to Canada. Sir C. Tupper writes in reply that the Canadian Government will in all probability be glad to co-operate in the work of the Association, and quotes the following telegram from the Minister of Agriculture: "Common and agricultural labour wanted in Manitoba and throughout the Dominion. Pacific works in West and North Lake Superior require 10,000 labourers." From a list just issued by Mr. Vere Foster of the contributions to his Irish female emigration fund, it appears that through this agency alone no less that 19,000 girls have been assisted to emigrate. These girls, Mr. Foster says, have already sent home to their friends upwards of £25,000.

MR. PHILIP PHILLIPS AND SON.

THE "Singing Pilgrim" and his son have just completed fifty successive Services of Sacred Song in Rev. T. G. Smith's Evangelical Church, Amsterdam. A few earnest Christians of influence and wealth invited Mr. Phillips to give these services, believing they would do good, and at the same time counteract some of its demoralising influences and amusements, which generally accompany an International Exhibition.

The church is situated quite near the great Exposition Buildings. After the first week's efforts, the large auditorium was filled nightly with expectant audiences, who came, some to enjoy, and some out of curiosity, to hear the Gospel sung as well as preached. The songs were well translated by that noble Christian worker, Rev. C. S. von Schiltema, and freely distributed amongst the congregation in book form. Preceding each song, an earnest appeal was made, in keeping with the sentiment of the verses, designed to touch some unbelieving heart. This was often followed by prayer for God's blessing on the Word. Exhortation, Scriptural passages, and prayers, were blended with song night after night. That the efforts were blessed of God is evident, from the fact that nearly 200 persons professed conversion.

Many have expressed the desire that these services may be again repeated in Amsterdam. Mr. Phillips' birthday occurred on the day following the completion of his engagement, and he was visited by a "surprise party" in Baarn, at the villa of H. Oyens, Esq., where he and his family were most hospitably entertained while in Holland. The party consisted of some three hundred ladies and gentlemen, with a band of music, to wish him "Many returns of the day." It almost overcame the "Singing Pilgrim" to look into the faces of this large company assembled on the lawn, who had come over thirty miles from Amsterdam to wish him "God speed," presenting to him, as an appreciation of his services, a most beautifully illuminated address, signed by five hundred friends, in the form of an album bound in silver and gold.

Mr. Phillips and his son return to their home in New York about September 20, where they will remain at their work—the ministry of sacred song.

DR. BARNARDO'S HOMES.

IN a recent communication Dr. Barnardo says: "The English Homes now contain 1200 poor children, and about 70 fresh cases are brought to the Home every week. No case if really destitute is ever denied, irrespective of age, sex, religion, or physical condition. Among the latest receptions were two poor crippled children, for whom admission was sought in vain elsewhere. The months of July, August, September, and October are always the most trying to the home finances during the year, owing chiefly to the absence from their usual homes of the great body of supporters. This year the emigration expenses have increased the difficulties of the situation, and already the bank account is overdrawn."

The power of the workers to accomplish their onerous and important duties would be greatly increased if they had not to contend with the difficulties of income. Help is therefore urgently needed, and may be addressed to T. J. Barnardo, 18, Stepney-causeway, London, E.

ALCOHOL AND SOCIAL PURITY.—Mr. Henry Marks devotes himself to lecturing on "Alcohol: Its influence on the life of Woman from the cradle to the grave." Those who are desirous of securing his services should address to him at 20, Queen-street, Edgeware-road, London, W.

THE GOSPEL FOR THE HEATHEN.

AN ADDRESS DELIVERED AT CAMBRIDGE.

By Rev. H. C. G. MOULE, M.A., Principal of Ridley Hall, Cambridge.

FEW of us can have failed to meet with the opinion that considerable differences are to be made, in different missionary fields, in the presentation of Christian truth; that to the native audience of one region it will be well, almost as a matter of scientific certainty, to produce one type or class of revealed truths, and another to another; that both the method and the matter of preaching which is needful or advisable for Western Africa, for example, will be by no means so for Western India, or for Persia, or Japan.

The opinions to which I allude are not those of men who are themselves shaken in their belief in Divine Revelation, I mean in the Divine Scriptures as the finally authoritative Word of God. To such persons it is easy, if not necessary, to hold that religious needs and religious teaching may be, or must be, as various as national habits, or grades of civilisation, and that an ancestral religion, however unlike that which Christians hold to be revealed, may be as much and as properly a life-long part of a man's self as his native tongue. I am speaking now of opinions held by men who are assured, on the whole, that the Scriptures are divinely given, and that Christianity is not a religion, but the religion for the human soul. Many such persons, able, earnest, pious, and sometimes highly and widely influential, hold that serious modifications must be made by the missionary, in his presentation of the Gospel, according to differences of race and culture, and the like.

I believe I may not unfairly represent some at least of such thinkers by giving their view as follows:—

"The Gospel is, indeed, the Truth. But it is also, from another point of view, a complexity of truths. It is many-sided. To think that one, or two, or three great doctrines make the Gospel is a serious mistake; for many more than three, or than thirty, combine in the total. On the other hand, it is a serious mistake to think that any one truth in particular is to be invariably presented to every race, or to every soul, as the leading and ruling truth of the system. To quote particular examples: the doctrine of the acceptance of the guilty for the Redeemer's merits may be, indeed, one great doctrine, but it is not therefore the doctrine. Entirely co-ordinate with it, and quite as much entitled to a primary place in its turn and measure, is the truth of the holy Incarnation, the taking of manhood into God by the Eternal Son, with all its amazing suggestions, in a large and general way, of the possibilities of a redeemed humanity, and of the nearness to God of man as man. Or again, the need of a new birth of the soul, not in a ceremonial sense only, but spiritually and experimentally through the Word, may certainly be a Scripture doctrine; but so, also, is the true theory of the ministry and of the sacraments. And this latter may need to be the primary point of the missionary's teaching, in some given case, quite as much as the former. Or again, the doctrine of sin, the depravatio of human nature in relation to the will of God, this "infection of nature" which appears to run, with all the stern certainty of a physical law, co-extensive with mankind, may certainly be a Scripture truth. But man has many aspects besides that of a sinner, a guilt-laden criminal. He is a sufferer, a diseased patient, a victim of hostile oppression by unseen powers, an aspirant after better things; and he may need, and very often does need, to be dealt with rather under these latter characters than under that former.

"Remember again, how large, in point of fact, have been the variations of doctrine within the Christian Church; what schools and kingdoms of thought and teaching there have been. Think of the difference between the theological thought of Eastern and Western Christendom of old, the difference between an Origen and an Augustine, for example; or, in latter days, the difference between a Luther and a William Law. Consider this when you import Christianity into new regions, and deal with races as different as the African and the Afghan, the Chinese and the Red Indian. May not one phase of doctrine be the Gospel to the one, another to the other?"

I trust I have not misrepresented the class of thoughts which I have in view. And I would avow a cordial agreement with much of the meaning of some sentiments given above. Nothing is more alien to the Gospel than seriously disproportioned teaching; and no one doctrine or leading truth can we safely preach alone and isolated to any race, or assembly, or person, in continuance. Again, it would be as unscriptural as it would be unreasonable to neglect, in Christian teaching, the characteristics of race, and traditional habits of belief and thought; to say what we have to say in precisely the same manner and phrase to whomsoever we may be speaking of the Gospel. And, happily, it is not likely that any man possessed of the strength of thought and character almost necessarily involved in the deliberate resolve to be a missionary, and trained in any true measure for Christian work, will at all seriously commit this mistake. If he really lives amongst a people, there is little fear lest he be too insensible to their mental and spiritual characteristics. Strong influences will come in upon this mode of teaching, whether he welcomes them or not, from the race which surrounds him and penetrates his daily life. He will, and our experience of true missionaries says that he does, become a Hindu to the Hindus, a Mohammedan to the Mohammedans, and that in a very marked and interesting degree; that is, his way of presenting, illustrating, and enforcing truth will be deeply influenced by the race to which he goes as the ambassador of Christ.

But now I feel compelled to speak strongly in the other direction. I hold that there are limits, and those, too, very strong limits, and soon reached, which must restrain the missionary in these adaptations and accommodations, and bring him back continually to the thought that if he has to adjust his message, he has, above all, to deliver it; and that the message, in all its grand essentials, is adjusted already and for ever by the Lord. In this respect he is to speak, "whether they will hear, or whether they will forbear." He is not to wait till he has adjusted away all stumbling-blocks for the Jew, and all follies for the Greek. He is a steward of mysteries; he must dispense them as his Lord prescribes.

Let me enforce this reflection by a few general remarks.

(1) The Gospel, though it is indeed under many aspects multifold, is a grand organic whole of Truth. Its parts not merely coexist; they have vital connections, and relations of divinely-measured proportion, towards each other. No truth is per se unimportant; but some truths are per se so supremely important that if they are dislocated the system is vitally injured. The faithful messenger of the Gospel will always bear this in mind, cordially and earnestly. This will leaven his work all throughout. Whether or no he will be always explaining this, he will be always remembering it. He will direct his march, and draw his lines, with a steady view to the supremacy of paramount Christian truth.

(2) I venture to assert that the Scriptures leave the missionary in no doubt what, on the whole, the paramount truths are. I venture to assert that, Scripturally viewed, the central object in the Christian field is the Cross of Calvary; the Cross of Atoning Sacrifice, and the truths which group around it; the Cross, and not (let me speak with reverence) the blessed Incarnation. Do not let me be so greatly mistaken as to seem to think the Truth of Bethlehem a matter of less than Divine and vital preciousness. No; for without Bethlehem who can really understand anything of the majesty and the mercy of Calvary? But I mean that in the proclamation of the Gospel the central thing is Calvary. From the point of view of the proclamation, Bethlehem is for the sake of Calvary, not Calvary for the sake of Bethlehem. Justification, not the Incarnation, is the burthen of the message; justification with its vitally connected truths of regeneration by the Spirit, and that true sanctification of the inner man procured for his people by the Crucified, which is the glorious terminus ad quem, on man's side, of the whole Gospel. To put the matter again somewhat otherwise: the Gospel, as a matter of fact, addresses man primarily, not as an unfortunate, not as a perplexed thinker, not as an aspirant after goodness, but as a sinner, a guilty, sentenced rebel against an eternal law and King. Its great business, as indicated in Scripture, is to make man spiritually aware that he is such, and that the only means of mercy is the sacrifice of Calvary embraced by faith; spiritually aware, too, of the profound motive, residing in that sacrifice so embraced, to the "sanctification, without which no man shall see the Lord."

(3) This is abundantly illustrated in Scripture doctrine, and in the narratives of the New Testament. How large, how vast an element in the prophecies and types is spent upon the truth of the Sacrifice, the Blood! Alike such rites as the Daily Sacrifice and the Atonement ritual, and such Scriptures as Psalm xxii. and Isaiah liii., point to the Cross in a way in which, I venture to say, no other truth of Christianity is pointed to. And in some most memorable passages of the New Testament the principles and aims of missionary work are made to take just this direction. To Paul, at his conversion, the glorified Saviour says (Acts xxvi.) that He sends him to the Gentiles with—what main purpose? "That they might receive remission of sins, and inheritance among the sanctified, by faith that is in Me." And Paul, in his turn, in the important passage, Gal. iii. 8, describes thus the grand purport of Old Testament foreshadowings of the Gospel: "The Scripture foresaw that God would justify the heathen by faith." So it ever is. "I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me." "We preach Christ crucified, to the Jews a stumbling-block, and to the Greeks, foolishness" (may we say, to the Asiatic a scandal, and to the European folly?), "but to us who are called" (that term of such rich and deep meaning in the Epistles), "Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God." "I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, that Christ died for our sins, according to the Scriptures." "I saw a great multitude of all nations before the throne and before the Lamb; they have washed their robes in the blood of the Lamb; therefore are they before the throne."

I recently read, in Christ Church, Cambridge, the inscription on a tablet erected to the blessed memory of two youthful saints, the Rev. and Mrs. R. C. Paley, who, thirty years ago, at the age in each case of twenty-four, laid down their lives for Africa and the Lord. The beautifully-worded epitaph recorded how they went forth, "determined to know nothing among the heathen save Jesus Christ and Him crucified." It was a profoundly right resolve; and so it would have been had they gone to Lahore, or Hangchow, or Cairo, instead of to Abeokuta. It would have been, anywhere and everywhere, their sacred duty to aim, with all the simplicity, directness, and promptitude possible, at leading the souls around them to a sinner's sense of the need of the blood of the covenant, and a believer's sense of the present spiritual power of its justifying efficacy.

I do not say that it would have been their wisdom, whether in India or in Africa, to speak of nothing but pardon. Seldom is that the wisest way, in any age or region. But, taking Gospel pardon in all its holy depth of meaning, the righteous acceptance of the guilty for the Substitute's sake, the adoption and regeneration into sonship of the rebel outcast, under the covenant sealed with blood, I mean that it would have been their wisdom to make that at once and always the goal towards which their teaching should have directly and eagerly tended: the central light which could not but shine through all the rest. For thus I am sure the Apostles worked; this was the main commission of the Lord to converted Paul. This is the Gospel of which in one verse (Rom. i. 16) the Scripture indicates those two things, so profoundly significant in connection, that it needs an effort not to be "ashamed" of it, and that "it is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth." Religion has much, very much, to speak of besides "repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ;" but what else it says is not yet adjusted aright until repentance and faith are realities in the individual soul, whether it be the soul of the Bushman or that of the Brahmin.

There is such a thing as a distorted and isolated preaching of the Cross; but there is also such a thing as a practical banishment of the Cross from the central place in teaching. It is a real risk at home; I fear many a pastor, claiming to be an Evangelical, talks about "the less need now than formerly to put the Atonement into the foreground." It would be disastrous if this should come to be common in the work of our missionaries abroad.

We all remember the experience of the devoted Moravians in Greenland. After years of fruitless labour on other lines, at length, to their surprise and joy, the story of the crucifixion melted the souls of their heathen visitors. Beside this it is interesting to put two incidents from our last two C.M.S. Reports. That of 1882 tells us of the deep emotion of the students in an Afghan school as the missionary simply read over with them that same "old, old story" of Calvary. The last Report records the blessed death of a Brahmin convert in a Calcutta hospital, who departed full of the peace and joy of a soul which had found in the Lord Jesus a long-sought deliverance from the crushing load of unpardoned sin. "I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me."—Church Missionary Intelligencer.

TENT WORK IN YORKSHIRE.—A small tent, used thus far through the summer in the city of York, may be placed at the disposal of others, free of cost, willing to superintend evangelistic work in it for a few weeks. For particulars apply to C. Russell Hurditch, 164, Alexandra-road, St. John's Wood, London, N.W.

CHRISTIAN "COMMERCIALS."

AT the Noon-day Prayer-meeting, in Aldersgate-street, Mr. Thatcher, Secretary of the Commercial Travellers' Christian Association, recently gave a brief account of this Association. He told of the blessing that had resulted from the placing of copies of the Word of God in between nine and ten thousand commercial hotel bedrooms, of the large use made of the libraries set up in the commercial rooms, especially by the younger travellers, and of the Christlike work done by the Beneficent Fund, in assisting distressed travellers or their families.

One specially sad case that had come under his notice on the previous day was related. A lady, who had just lost her husband, a highly respectable and respected commercial traveller, called at the office of the Association and told of her loss. She seemed quite broken down with grief, as she added, "Now my little baby lies dead at home. I must bury her to-morrow, and I have no money to pay the undertaker. I have sold everything I could; I am sure I do not know what else I can sell." The Secretary was able to give her the assurance that the Committee would pay the funeral expenses of her departed little one.

The Association has recently made itself a medium between employer and employed, and already introductions have been effected by this means. The primary object of the Association is to unite together Christian commercial men on the road, and to win souls for Christ; its subsidiary object is to help the class it represents in all the circumstances of their peculiarly arduous lives. The office of Mr. J. W. Thatcher, Secretary, is 186, Aldersgate-street, E.C.

WORKERS AT THE HOME OF INDUSTRY.

MANY friends of the China Inland Mission met at the Home of Industry at the usual monthly meeting for workers last week, to commend to the Lord in prayer the missionaries who are leaving this month and next for China. Mr. Dobbin presided, and said he trusted one result of the meeting would be that the hearts of God's people would be more and more drawn out to the perishing heathen.

Mr. Pearse, who, with his wife, returns to China next month, spoke of the difficulties and dangers to which they were exposed—danger to the missionary's own spiritual life, the immense amount of pride and superstition that had to be overcome, the opium traffic, the lives led by many Europeans abroad.

Miss Muir, who has been a worker in the "Bible Flower Mission" at the Home of Industry, told of the links in the chain that had led her to offer herself for Mission work in China. (1) As a child she had the desire; (2) a missionary box was always on her mother's mantlepiece; (3) an inscription in Chinese characters (that she saw at a meeting) "Come over and help us;" (4) the visit of Mrs. Stott, when she was fourteen years old, who made the remark, "You young ones ought to be training for China in cookery, housekeeping, &c.; (5) two verses in Proverbs xxiv. 11, 12, "If thou forbear to deliver them that are drawn unto death," &c.

Mr. Cameron urged that the children should be taught to take an interest in foreign Missions, that they might fall in love with it. He told how he himself, through having missionary papers given to him as a boy, had been led to pray that he might be a missionary. It is God's work to convert souls, but it is our work to preach. He urged on the many young ones present whom he thought might go, to give themselves to the Lord in this blessed service. He told of a curious plan he had adopted in China of getting a congregation in the open air. He would stand still on a stone and open a book. The curiosity of the people would be aroused, and one after another would come and peep over his shoulder until he had gathered quite a small crowd, when he would speak to them.

Mr. Dick and Mr. Rendall, who are going out to China for the first time, both said a few words, and all were commended to the Lord in prayer.

BY THE SEA.

By WILLIAM LUFF.

A STRANGER passed with careless air:
Picked up a peeble here and there:
Felt on his brow the wreathing spray;
Looked o'er the waves, then went his way.

A shoeless urchin passed along:
Escaped the fashionable throng,
He waded where the angry deep
In rocky cradles sank to sleep.

A bather came: he laid aside
His costly garments and his pride;
Then plunging down, swam in that sea
Where none was happier than he.

A pleasure seeker launched his boat,
O'er that bright sunny scene to float
Anon, a fisherman came by,
And sailed till lost to watching eye.

The shoeless urchin homeward hied:
The bather left the dancing tide:
The pleasure-lover tired his hand:
The fisher sought again the land.

At length, I saw a bark go out,
With snowy sail and ringing shout.
I watched her till she passed away:
Waves were her playmates many a day.

She came not to that shore again:
For far across the tossing main,
She sought a harbour on the strand
Of a far richer, sunnier land.

O Sea of Love! some pass thee by,
Some wade, some bathe, some in thee lie,
Some seek their pleasure, some their gain,
Then leave thy fair eternal main.

Oh be it mine to live in thee,
A trader on thy boundless sea,
Seeking the far eternal shore,
Returning to sin's beach no more.

By MARGARET S. MACRITCHIE.

LET the sea roar like the crashing of thunder,
The heart of the billows move heavy and deep,
The triumphing waves dash the grey rocks asunder,
And seething white foam-flakes exultingly leap:
Let the sea thunder till time pass away—
The strength of Jehovah abideth for aye.

Let the sea roar in its angry commotion,
Its pitiless conquests, its power, and its pride;
Oh, changeful, fair breast of the treacherous ocean
A Greater is reigning—the Lord of the tide:
Let the sea thunder from shore unto shore—
The might of Jehovah abides evermore.

Let the sea roar; but a silence is nearing—[dumb,
The waves shall be still, and their moaning be
And storm-driven spirits, now heavily steering,
Shall draw to the haven where change cannot come:
Let the sea thunder through earth's troubled riot—
In heaven with Jesus the weary are quiet.

Let the sea roar; but oh, heart nigh to breaking,
Why hath the surging disquieted thee?
Though angry the billows, this comfort be taking,
He lives who passed over a terrible sea!
Tempests are meeting; yet trust in Him still
Who husheth the wild winds to peace at his will.

Let the sea roar; and my soul! be thou lifting
Thy choiring Hosannas, most joyful, most sweet!
The rocks of unfaith let thanksgiving be rifting,
Till all earth re-echo "Te Deum" complete.
Let the sea thunder; oh, tossing waves, sing!
Tell out in your music the praise of our King.

FREE CHURCH, GAUBERT, FRANCE.—We insert the following at the request of Mr. Donald Matheson, who is deeply interested in this Mission: "Mr. and Madame Kruger desire to thank all the dear friends in England and Scotland who so kindly helped her in her late visit to this country. She wishes them to know that during the three months spent here she collected £624, and spent of this sum £30 2s. in travelling expenses, thus obtaining all that was needed to supplement the contribution of the poor people of Gaubert in rebuilding their church."

REMINISCENCES OF RAILWAY TRAVEL—3.

CHILDREN, and especially the dear babies, have often formed an important element in my experience of railway travelling. However much you may feel of hindrance in accosting grown-up people, you cannot have that difficulty with children, who are only too glad of the notice of those whom they can at once feel to be friends, without the suspicion or reserve which too often belongs to their elders.

The close contact into which one is brought in a railway carriage, greatly favours one in engaging the attention and winning the affections of the little ones, to whom the knob of a stick or umbrella is a great attraction. Often confidence increases so that you can relieve the weary arms of a mother for a time on a long journey. But beyond this is the opportunity of converse with the mother, whose heart is opened by the notice taken of her children; an instance of this may help to secure the regard to the little ones which my experience leads me to plead for.

One summer's day I found myself travelling with a young lady whom I knew distantly as the wife of an artist. She had with her four or five young children, who were full of glee at the prospect of seeing their father, who was painting in the country. While holding one on my knee that he might look through the window, I began a conversation with the mother and asked what she thought our Lord meant, when He said that we must be as little children in order to enter the kingdom of heaven. She expressed utter ignorance on the matter, and I proposed that we should beguile the time by considering it. As the result was important I shall try to recall the substance of my remarks.

First I suggested that it was not the character or disposition of little ones so much as their condition and circumstances. I appealed to her if the babies even did not soon begin to display a corrupt nature in self-will, &c., and therefore we must look to their condition, as showing what we must realise in order to enter the kingdom of heaven.

The first thing in that was the feeling that the infant was her own. It derived its existence from her and belonged to her, and so where God is seeking poor lost sinners, such as we are, He is seeking his own (as we see in Luke xv.). Therefore we are to feel that He has that regard for us as His creatures that you have for your child whom you clasp to your heart in maternal love.

Another thing about your baby is that it has no resources of its own; it entirely depends on you for all its needs, and finds in your love a supply such as love only can give. Here again we have the way of life illustrated. We must come to God in this dependent and helpless condition, having no resources in ourselves, but looking for life and salvation only through his love in the gift of Jesus. As you would make any sacrifice, sooner than harm should come to your little one, so we have to believe that "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but have everlasting life." "He spared not his own Son but delivered him up for us all."

After about an hour's conversation we separated, and some little time after I had the happiness of receiving a letter from her (she having removed to Scotland), which contained such expressions as these: "Till you spoke to me on that railway journey about my children and God's love, I had never had a serious thought, but I have now come to know my Saviour and to love Him." After this I had letters telling me of the death of two of her little ones and the comfort she had in God; and lately I have heard of her own peaceful departure.

I have met with many other intances of this way of reaching a mother's heart, and trust the narration of this incident may lead servants of Christ to try it and to follow their Lord's example in taking an infant for a text. J. R.

For the Young.

ALONE IN LONDON STREETS.

ALONG one of our busy London streets, a few weeks ago, some children were running home from school. Very little ones most of them were, who evidently had not reached as yet any of the higher "standards"; indeed, some were so small, that if they had belonged to richer parents, they would still have been in the nursery, and not subjected to the various small hardships of school-life. However, the children of the poor have early to learn that valuable lesson of "shifting for themselves." These little people seemed very well able to avoid the dangers of the streets. They clattered along, their small boots making much more noise on the pavement than a good many bigger ones, shouting to their neighbours, whistling, talking, laughing, crying, and behaving generally as children usually do, when released for a time from the restraints of school.

As they went along they gradually separated to their several homes, and the little stream of noisy child-life at last dwindled down to one small girl of about seven or eight years old, who went on her way by herself, walking slowly and deliberately, and not paying much attention to any person or thing around her. I wonder what she was thinking about as she trotted along with that grave look on her little face, and her bare arms wrapped in the thin shawl that was drawn ever her shoulders. Perhaps she was recalling something of interest, which had happened at school that day, or meditating over something that might occur to-morrow; perhaps she was thinking of a nice book she had just read, or a new game she meant to play.

Whatever might have been the subject of her thoughts, poor little woman, they suddenly received a most unexpected termination. She was brought back to the busy life that was going on all round her, and which she had not heeded hitherto, by a loud shout, a great noise of rumbling wheels, and a clattering of horse's hoofs, and the next moment she was knocked down by a passing vehicle, the wheel of which went over her arm. Oh, dear! what a cry she raised of terror and pain; and in less than a minute, quite a crowd of people had gathered around her, as she stood there with one side of her face covered with mud and the poor little arm, cut and bleeding under the shawl.

"What's the matter?"

"Has she been run over?"

"Is she hurt much?"

"Take her to the doctor's."

"It's perfectly marvellous how people can let such little ones run about by themselves, as they do."

These, and various other remarks of a similar nature, kept passing from one to another among the crowd. Then a tall policeman, with a kind face and a large brown beard, seeing something was the matter, pushed his way through the people, and went straight up to the little girl. "Broken arm," was his verdict, as he gently lifted the shawl. "Does anyone know where she lives?"

No, not anyone. "Where is the nearest doctor?" was the next question. "Just round the corner," said an errand-boy. The policeman stooped down, lifted the little girl, all dirty and muddy as she was, into his kind, strong arms. "There, there, little lass! don't cry any more. You are going to the doctor's, and he'll soon set the arm to rights for you."

She was too full of pain and fright to make any objection, though at any other time no doubt she would have been terrified at the idea of being carried off by a stranger, and that stranger a policeman, a personage who generally inspires great awe among the children of the London poor. She allowed him to take her away without any renewal of her cries.

Just as these London streets are so full of danger to the little unprotected ones who run about without anyone to take care of them, so is the path of life attended with numerous snares and perils to those who walk in it. People do not always think about these dangers as they go along, but they are there all the same, and though they may forget them and get their minds filled with other things, yet before they know it, they are tripped up and fall; some danger, which they had quite forgotten, has come upon them. They want, then, to be helped, comforted, and healed; and who is so ready to come to our aid when we are in sorrow, as our tender and sympathising Lord? He is the Great Physician who healeth all our diseases, and if we will but trust ourselves to his almighty arms, He will save us and heal us from all our sins, many though they be.

If you had to go anywhere, and you knew there were dangers in the way, would you not prefer to have someone go with you who knew all about them, and was able and willing to take care of you, than choose to go by yourself, and encounter all these dangers alone? Yet how many children, and older people too, try to guide themselves through the perils and difficulties of life, and entirely refuse to take the Lord Jesus with them. They think they can take care of themselves, and that they are quite wise and clever enough to keep out of danger. Take Jesus as your guide and protector, and at once, seeing your error, give yourself up to Him for pardon and salvation; then, indeed, you will be safe "from all danger, while under his wings." Until you have done that, you are not safe for a moment, trusting to your own strength and wisdom. Emily M. Fox.

THE EARTHQUAKE AT ISCHIA.—A Naples correspondent of The Times writes: Sixteen orphan children were brought over last week by one of the steamers. The Duchess of Ravaschieri took seven and Madame Oscar Menrdicoffre nine, placing them in establishments maintained at their own expense. The conduct of these ladies and others associated with them has been beyond all praise. Indefatigable in their exertions, they have gone backwards and forwards, nursing the wounded, feeding the hungry, and clothing the destitute. There have been many noble instances of virtue; but, at the same time, as always happens, many incidents disgraceful to humanity. I have already reported two or three. The plunder has been on a large scale, principally by the natives who knew the families and where their valuables were deposited. Some artisans of Forio who were called on to work for a daily wage refused, but the colonel in command insisted.

WITH THE "SHORT BLUE" FLEET.

THROUGH the kindness of Messrs. Hewett & Co., the extensive smack-owners, I was recently privileged to pay a visit to the "Short Blue" fleet at work in their trawling grounds in the North Sea. I went on board one of their fish-carrying screw steamers, capital sea-boats, but by no means fitted up for passengers. Few landsmen can appreciate what a visit to one of these fishing fleets means, when the North Sea is at all angry; it is hardly a trip one would care to recommend as a holiday excursion. But being a tolerable sailor and longing to be amongst these dear isolated fellows with the glad tidings of salvation, my mind was made up to "rough it;" so that many little inconveniences were soon forgotten.

It had been arranged that we should go on board the Thames Church Mission smack Ensign, on our arrival there, but an unforeseen circumstance caused her return beforehand. This somewhat shortened our stay. Still we—and not we alone—have reason to praise God for the visit, short as it was.

The importance of the Deep Sea Mission work can hardly be overstated. It appears there are some seven or eight fleets pursuing their hazardous calling in all weathers. The usual course is eight weeks afloat and one week ashore. Up to the present the Thames Church Mission has been able to reach only two of these fleets, the "Short Blue" and the Grimsby. Another fine smack, the Cholmondeley, is nearly completed, and will soon follow the others on their twofold errand of Christian love and humanity, viz., as Gospel-ship and medical dispensary. Others, we believe, will be added as the Lord touches the chords of sympathy for these long-neglected fishermen. Were Christians fully alive to the need that exists, or could they hear, as we did, the many hearty prayers and thanks to God for blessings already received through the Ensign, from the lips of brave fishermen, there would soon be a Mission vessel with each fleet. Many a "God bless the people at the Mission for sending the Ensign!" did we hear go up. And they meant it, every word of it.

The "Short Blue" fleet is composed of about 200 sail, each smack being manned by six or seven men and lads. At the time of our visit several were at home, still there was a muster of some 160 sail. There are two "Admirals" to this fleet, each taking the command for a month alternately, and these men, from their position, naturally possess considerable influence for good or evil. We had an interesting interview with one of these "Admirals," who promised to come on board to the service next day, and would no doubt have done so had the weather been more favourable. One of them, we were glad to hear, is a thorough-going Christian sailor.

It was a cheering sight on Sunday morning to see several Bethel flags flying, each of them indicating that the skipper was not ashamed to confess Christ. And this means something amidst the unrestrained Godlessness and profanity so frequently to be met with. The captain of our steamboat very kindly steamed up to the smack flying one of these Bethel flags, on board of which we heard a service was to be held. Six or seven from the steamer accompanied us on board the smack, where we found about twenty-five fishermen and youths comfortably seated in the hold upon fish boxes, and singing most heartily selections from Songs and Solos. These dear men can sing, although they may not be careful about a note or two either way. There was a whole-soul-ness in their natural music that was at once impressive and genuine. Both before and after the address which we were privileged to give, several of the skippers prayed most earnestly, and not one of them forgot the Thames Church Mission.

During the dinner hour the wind freshened, and the sea became too "lumpy" to expect an outside congregation, so that we spent the afternoon and evening with the crew over the Word, as they could be spared from duty on deck. All were already abstainers. The skipper and mate were earnest Christians; the others unconverted, and making no profession whatever. The first to surrender to the power of the Word of God was a bright, intelligent fellow of about nineteen or twenty, the son of a Christian widow, and, we were told, the child of many prayers. He had been a very wild youth, and through his tears and sobbing every now and then broke forth, "Oh, I'm such a great sinner; you don't know how wicked I've been, sir." He wondered if God would forgive and save him. We all knelt down together, the skipper and mate praying earnestly for him, and it pleased the Lord in due time to open his eyes to see Jesus. The tears were soon dried up, and this dear fellow was rejoicing in the knowledge of sins put away for ever, and the possession of eternal life.

Several times in course of the night he said to us, "What should I have been still if that breeze had not kept you on board? I thank God for sending that breeze." "I have been up to every kind of wickedness, and I've been twice in prison; but the Lord has pardoned me and saved me; bless the Lord for his kindness to me!" "I will write to my mother and tell her what the Lord has done for me." To the praise of the Lord, be it added, in course of the evening the other three, one by one, became exercised as to their condition, and after a time sweetly confessed Christ. One of these was the skipper's brother-in-law, for whom, he told us, he had been praying for years past. A letter from this skipper has since reached us to say, "All my crew are now resting on the Rock Christ Jesus our Saviour."

Thus ended our first Sunday with the "Short Blue" fleet, save one little incident. At midnight, with the wind blowing half a gale and the water frequently washing the deck, we were struck with the incessant singing of hymn after hymn, as if there were one spot at least, not far distant, where there were peace and joy rising above the commotion of the elements. It was the dear fellow who first found the Lord, sweetening his midnight watch at the helm, as he sang again and again some verses familiar to sailors, such as—

> "The winds and the waves shall obey My will!
> Peace . . . be still! . . .
> Whether the wrath of the storm-tost sea,
> Or demons or men, or whatever it be,
> No waters can swallow the ship where lies
> The Master of ocean and earth and skies.
> They all shall sweetly obey My will:
> Peace! be still! Peace! be still!"

We said to the skipper, "He must have known many of these hymns before." "He knew the words, no doubt," said the skipper, "but he never sang like that before, bless the Lord."

These brave fishermen are beset with many dangers besides the winter storms, which every year bring sadness to many homes. Upon the arrival of the steamer from London a number of small boats are speedily alongside, collecting boxes in which to pack the fish. A similar operation takes place when the boxes are full. They must be delivered; and rough indeed must be the weather that keeps them from venturing to the steamboats. In bad weather this is always attended with great risk. Many poor fellows are lost every year while thus engaged. "I have seen," said one of the steamboat men, "two boats upset and six men in the water alongside at one time, all drowned, no one being able to lend a hand to save them." Little do the public hear of these things, and yet they are said to be of not infrequent occurrence in these deep waters.

Another source of danger comes from what may be fairly called the curse of the fleet, known by the fishermen as the "Coper." This is a Dutch smack, fitted up for fishing like the others, but really a grog-shop. The great inducement to visit the "Coper" is to obtain tobacco, which they sell to our fishermen at 1s. 6d. to 2s. a pound. This is the bait. Behind it are the coarse, fiery spirits, which are sold at an equally low rate. These coarse spirits have a maddening effect, and those who imbibe them at all freely generally become helplessly drunk or quarrelsome; hence drunken fights and brawls are by no means uncommon. Our authority, already quoted, told us he had seen "ten men in the sea at once, over a fight," of whom "four were drowned." The owners and admirals of this fleet are most anxious to dispense with the "Coper," but seem to think there will always be a hindrance, unless some means can be devised of supplying to the fishermen tobacco from bond, that is, duty-free. This may not be desirable in some respects; but it is a question whether of "two evils" it is not in this case better to "choose the lesser."

All the fishermen and sailors we spoke with seem very grateful for the books, tracts, &c., sent to them through the Thames Church Mission, but are longing for a more abundant supply, which we feel quite sure the secretary, Mr. E. J. Mather, would be only too pleased to convey to them. As the cold weather will soon be here again, may I be also allowed to put in a plea for woollen cuffs, comforters, and anything else of the kind likely to mitigate the severity of our North Sea winters. 1500 pairs of cuffs and 700 comforters were dispensed from the Ensign last winter. A variety of useful patterns may be seen at the office of the Thames Church Mission, 31, New Bridge-street, E.C., and at their stall in the Fisheries Exhibition.

One word as to the medical aspect of this Mission. Fishermen were everywhere loud in their praises of the great boon the medicine chest on board the Ensign was to them. Many cases of accident or illness, which formerly would have had to be sent on to London, are now attended to on the spot.* An illustration of this occurred as we were leaving for home. A fine young sailor was taken ill. The Ensign had been searched for, but had gone into port to refit. Nothing, therefore, was left but to bring him to one of our London hospitals. Taken in time, the medicine of the Ensign would probably have relieved him. As this could not be procured, he had to be brought a rough journey of thirty-six hours, all the while suffering intense pain.

Truly the work of this Mission seems so much like the work of our blessed Master, that we feel sure it needs but to be more fully known to commend itself to every Christian heart. Its operations are thoroughly evangelical; its chief aim to win souls for Christ. W. C. MILES.

We are very glad to have good accounts of the Mission work recently begun among the Grimsby fleet by the smack Salem. The third Mission vessel, the Cholmondeley, will be set apart for her noble work by a special service in the shipbuilder's yard at Bideford on 23rd inst., after which she will proceed to the North Sea. The graphic sketch given above by Mr. Miles will, we trust, deepen the desire amongst landsmen to help on this splendid work. We are sorry to learn that Mr. Mather, the secretary of the Mission, is feeling the effects of the severe strain caused by a close devotion to the furtherance of its operations in their recent developments; we bespeak for him the prayerful sympathy of our readers.

* No fewer than 102 cases were treated on board the Ensign during her last eight weeks' voyage.

MALTA.—A correspondent writes: "I have been lately reading in THE CHRISTIAN of Mission work, and of the spread of the Gospel in almost every part of the world except in this little island, where I happen to be at present quartered. Yet there are few places that need it more. A more bigoted, superstitious, and priest-ridden people I do not think exist. The island is literally swarming with priests, their number being out of all proportion to the population. They are the most determined opponents of all progress, it being, of course, to their interest to keep the people ignorant. There are clergymen of all denominations here, but they dare not preach the Gospel to the Maltese."

[We trust some other friend residing in the island may be able to qualify this statement.]

Notes and Comments.

IT is impossible to read without the deepest regret the statement made in the various papers that the Eagle Tavern, City-road, has been re-opened as a licensed public-house.

By an inadvertence, a Note in our issue of August 2 spoke of a deficiency in the ranks of candidates for the ministry, in connection with the Wesleyan Methodist Connexion. We are glad to find that this is not the case, and take this opportunity of correcting the impression given by our reference to the subject.

At the meetings of the Welsh Baptist Union, held last week at Ebbw Vale, it was thought advisable that the condition of licensed victuallers' Church membership should be taken into serious consideration. A deputation was also appointed to attend at the Connexional College to secure the co-operation of the students in total abstinence work.

Dr. Boyd, the late Dean of Exeter, appears to have had the interests of his brethren in that diocese very near his heart. He has left no less than £40,000 to be expended on their behalf, £15,000 of it being for the augmentation of poor livings within the area of the diocese, and £10,000 for the University education of sons of its necessitous clergy.

In our issue of July 19, we reproduced an article from a St. Petersburgh paper, stating the details of an Imperial decree giving increased toleration of worship and other privileges to those who, from conscientious motives, have separated from the State Church. It would appear, however, from the recent correspondence of The Times, that the concessions made are more apparent than real. The writer says:—

"The ever-growing body of Dissent is now calculated at fifteen or sixteen millions of souls, including but a small proportion whose religious tenets and practices can be considered pernicious to the community at large. But of this large number only one million, it is believed, will enjoy the benefits of the new law, a difference being made between the so-called registered and unregistered Dissenters—that is to say, between those hitherto recognised as Dissenters by the authorities and those not so recognised and still performing their heterodox rites in secret. About fourteen millions of Dissenters, it appears, are still registered as members of the Orthodox Church, and these will not be reached at all by the law in question. The discovery has produced great disappointment, and several of the more Liberal organs of the Press have raised their voices, feeble though they be, against this less than half measure of religious toleration."

The work carried on in our chief places of seaside resort by the Children's Special Service Mission is one to be viewed with the greatest satisfaction and hope. The writer attended one of the meetings held the other day on the beach at Brighton; the evident interest of the children in the proceedings from first to last was highly gratifying, and full of promise as to good results. A number of adults were also attracted by the singing of the little ones, and listened with marked earnestness to the words of truth which were spoken, and which were all the more powerful for their simplicity. With all our hearts we bid "God-speed" to this especially useful and delightful work for the gracious Master, who said "Suffer little children to come unto Me." May the labourers in this important field be abundantly strengthened and blessed in their good work wherever they go.

The Strome Ferry Sabbatarians will not have suffered in vain if their vigorous protest against the desecration of the Lord's day, and severe sentence of imprisonment on account of it, leads their fellow-countrymen and others to a more faithful maintenance of the principles of their forefathers in relation to Sabbath consecration. There are signs that it is so; many in Edinburgh and elsewhere, we read, have begun to ask with deepening earnestness if it is not time that effort be made to put a stop by legal means to the growing evil of Sabbath-breaking by the railway companies.

Per contra, we may quote the following paragraph from an interesting letter on "Bonnie Scotland," The Christian World, Aug. 9, from the pen of its gifted contributor "Marianne Farningham":—

"We were glad of the Sunday's rest in Callander. Everybody went to church, and the very atmosphere seemed full of religion and repose. We enjoyed hearing, for the first time, the singing of some of the psalms of the Scotch version, though the fact that everybody sat to sing, except the members of the choir, was a little surprise to us; we enjoyed the addresses of the Rev. T. Bryson, who told us more of China than we could have learnt in a year from books; we enjoyed the eight o'clock evangelistic meeting, held in the pretty hall given to Callander by a lady who is intensely interested in the highest welfare of the people; and almost as much we enjoyed the music of the River Teith, and the lights and shades upon Ben-ledi."

The Crown Prince of Germany has just presented to a new church on the Island of Rügen, a splendid Bible containing his autograph, and underneath it, in his own writing the words, "The letter killeth but the spirit giveth life." The Crown Princess has also written on another page the words, "Understandest thou what thou readest?" It is said the rigidly orthodox people to whom the Bible has been given are offended at the texts quoted, regarding them as a rebuke of their bigotry and intolerance. They are admirably chosen, in any case, as prefixes to Bible study, and may be profitably meditated on by all Bible readers.

The Outlook of the 17th inst. has a very weighty article on Sunday-schools. It says: "A Christian Church will be found to be healthy and strong in proportion to the fidelity with which it discharges its duty to the young; for where spiritual life has been fullest the claims of the Church's children have always been most clearly recognised." These are wise and timely remarks, and every Church would do well to take them to heart. At the same time, parents would do better by giving more attention to the Christian training of the little ones at home. Sunday-schools happily abound, but we fear that parental control in many cases is, unhappily, on the wane.

We understand that one of the principal questions for discussion at the American Episcopal Methodist Conference, to be held in May, 1884, at Philadelphia, concerns itinerancy. The point to be considered is whether the duration of the pastor's sojourn in one church shall be limited, as at present, to three years, or be altogether removed, or whether the nominations now made by the Bishops shall become strictly annual. The Central Christian Advocate has established a sort of consultation on this subject amongst its readers, and published recently the views of 37 pastors, doctors, and distinguished laymen. The greater part of these are opposed to the removal of any limitation, but would agree to the extension of the pastorate by a year or two.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has declared himself very thoroughly on the Temperance question by writing a letter for circulation by the Church of England Temperance Society, commending it to widespread sympathy and help "in its new and necessary attempt to reach particular classes of the community."

A lady correspondent in Ireland writes to us as follows:—

"Many Christian ladies of England are willing to go abroad as missionaries and travellers, but how few there are who come to our beautiful but neglected Ireland! I trust there will be many who will freely give themselves up for the good of Ireland, even to the point of self-denial, like Miss Havergal, who wished to do the hedge and ditch work. Sisters and brothers of England! come and proclaim the glorious Gospel to the Roman Catholics. They will listen to the name of Jesus."

The Shapira MS. of Deuteronomy is being subjected to close and rigid scrutiny, and an official report as to the result may be expected very shortly. Mr. Gladstone has visited the library of the British Museum, where he carefully inspected the rolls, and with Dr. Ginsburg received from the discoverer a relation of all he knows as to its origin and history. The MS. consists of forty strips of what appears to be goat-skin. Two strips are now open to the inspection of the public in the MS. Room of the Museum.

It comes upon us almost as a surprise to find that Miss Ellice Hopkins, amidst all the activities of her beneficent life, has been able to cultivate the poetic faculty to a high degree. The lyrics just published by Messrs. Macmillan & Co., in a volume entitled Autumn Swallows, are the production of a true and sanctified genius. For rugged pathos, imaginative power, clear vision, and richness of expression, these poems will entitle the authoress to hold an honourable place among the bards of her generation. An earnest purpose, a sympathy with the higher harmonies of nature, and a restful faith breathe throughout. We quote the following stanzas as a specimen:—

THE DEVIL'S COIN.

Take not the devil's coin, beware!
He shows thee but sin's smiling face;
The back of sin he hides with care,
Lest thou refuse his proffered grace.

Turn thou the golden bait right round,
Look well upon the further side;
The sin passed through, and thou discrowned,
To death betrayed by life that lied.

No smiling face is now to see,
A man, lo! with a dragon fights;
A loathly hydra, loosed by thee,
Thy surfeit-maddened appetite.

Oh, well for thee if to thy hand
Come some Ithuriel spear to slay;
And bid thy writhen manhood stand,
Scathed, but to beasts no more a prey.

We are glad to be able to inform our readers that Messrs. Moody and Sankey have determined to spend a few weeks in Ireland before entering upon the London campaign. They expect to reach Cork early in October, and will spend some days there. Limerick and Waterford will also probably be visited. Other towns are anxious to secure their services, but we fear the friends in them will be disappointed, as the London meetings are arranged to begin on the first Sunday in November, at Islington. We trust our readers will continue to remember these brethren in prayer. To God alone we must look for such a revival in the Churches as will help on the extension of the Redeemer's kingdom throughout the earth.

It is asserted that there are no less than orty-seven trains from Waterloo Station on undays to Kingston and intervening places, hile fifty trains arrive at the terminus on ie same day. Similar facts might be cited connection with many other lines of rail-ay throughout England, and the evil grows ather than lessens, so that thousands of ailway employés, instead of finding the ord's Day a season of rest, find it one of oil and care. It is time that pressure was rought to bear upon railway directors as to his God-dishonouring state of things. The Church of Christ is not sufficiently awake to he evil.

As the result of his recent investigations n Canada and the United States with respect o emigration prospects, Mr. W. H. Newett, f Manchester, warns young men in this ountry against accepting the specious offers f advertising agents to place them on merican farms for premiums of fifty to a undred pounds. The demand for labour in onnection with farms is very great and no remium is asked for. Mr. Newett says that lerks emigrating from this country are not kely to succeed, in most cases, unless they re willing to accept whatever occupation ffers itself. Energetic young men, willing o spend a year or two in training on farms n the Western States or in the North-west erritory, in all likelihood will soon find hemselves in prosperous circumstances.

The duty of Church members to do what hey can to promote the spiritual prosperity f the churches with which they are identi-ed is well illustrated by an incident related y Rev. H. P. Hughes, at the Wesleyan Conference the other day. He said a very listinguished layman was complaining bit-erly to an equally distinguished minister, hat while the Salvation Army could secure n attendance nightly of 500 persons, at he week-night services in his own chapel here were never more than fifty. It came ut in the conversation that he himself ever went to his own chapel, but went to he Army meetings instead. Mr. Hughes ustly argued that if men would throw the ame earnestness and interest into the work f their own church, they would witness the ame results.

Church membership is either a mere farce, r else it involves solemn and important esponsibilities. The New Testament cer-ainly enforces the latter aspect of the ques-ion, and we shall never see Christian Church life developed as it ought to be and ight be, until individual responsibility is nore realised, and personal influence more niversally exercised in the direction of re-ival and increase.

A deputation from the London Missionary Society has been received during the past week by Earl Granville, in reference to events in Madagascar. The interview was strictly private, but its object was to lay before his lordship the contents of the latest correspondence the Committee has received from its agents there, especially that bearing upon the arrest, by the French, of Mr. Shaw, one of the Society's representatives n the island. It is satisfactory, in the nterests of Mission work generally, to know hat Government is taking Mr. Shaw's case nto its serious and special consideration. While in no way agents of the State, or de-pendent upon it for support, it is well for it o be understood that the interests of our missionaries abroad are regarded with con-cern, and there is a readiness to protect them, if need be, by the powers at home.

A letter appeared in The Christian World of last week from Miss Howitt, the daughter of William Howitt, author of "The History of Priestcraft," confirming the truth of the report that she had joined the Romish Church. She declares that on investigation she was led to believe "that the character and teaching of Christ are far more reflected in the life and "spiritual exercises" of Ignatius Loyola, than in the life, writings, and utterances of Martin Luther." She claims to have it believed that her conversion to Rome has been brought about by prayer and the study of the Scriptures, and to have found joy and peace by surrendering herself mentally and spiritually to the Pope, as the Vicar of Christ.

The mental processes by which these conclusions were reached do not appear to have been either deep or logical; on the contrary, Miss Howitt's reasoning, in her letter, while singularly modest and simple in its style, is nevertheless weak, and lacking in perception. She has evidently overlooked the dark side of Popery altogether, and mistaken the zeal and piety of some of its best specimens for a sample of the real nature of the system. How the teaching of Paul can have convinced anyone who is really acquainted with it that if we are to be Christ's sheep we must be committed by Him to Peter, is a problem we confess ourselves unable to solve. Paul certainly believed Christ was able to keep that which was committed to Him, without handing it over to another. It is a poor discovery to have made, that the Pope is a surer guardian than the Saviour.

The state of things in Europe at the present time is calculated to fill the mind with apprehension and alarm. Spain is evidently full of disquietude and secret discontent, while the riots in Vienna and Pesth indicate a spirit of revolt which threatens evil in a very ominous manner. The growth of anarchy and rebellion against all governmental authority is fearfully rapid, and it is impossible to tell where it may next break out. At home, as well as abroad, the forces of Socialism, Communism, and Fenianism are at work, undermining all the foundations of civil order, social concord, and sacred belief. To exaggerate the gravity of the fact is difficult, to ignore it as a striking and significant feature of the times is impossible.

The tendency on all hands is towards surrendering power into the hands of the people. To quote the prophetic word, the iron mixes with the clay in a remarkable manner, although "they do not cleave one to another." Kings and Governments have not ruled in the fear of God, nor regarded their prerogative as a trust from Him to be exercised for the good of their people. Even in our own land, which compares in some respects so favourably with other nations, the cry of the poor and the weak goes up to God in an unceasing wail. The rulers of all nations bid for popular favour, but do not gain it in any sense strengthening to themselves. The popular will is not to amalgamate with monarchy by submitting to its rule in modified forms, but to do without it altogether. The result is lawlessness, disintegration, and restlessness, leading to general uneasiness and sense of insecurity. The only consolation and confidence is that "the Lord on high is mightier than the noise of many waters, yea, than the mighty waves of the sea."

It would be well if the Governments of Europe were led by the prevalence of discontent and social upheaval to inquire how far, by the neglect of home legislation, and by permitting oppression and injustice to continue where they might be remedied and removed, they are responsible for much which causes these evils to prevail. Class legislation has not a little to do with it in many quarters. The poor and down-trodden have rights to be respected, and these are too often overlooked, while the interests of the rich and great are studiously consulted.

The public are indebted to Dr. Ginsburg for a very happy suggestion, which has led to the bringing together in one room of the British Museum, of a collection of memorials of Luther. Just now these will be viewed with great satisfaction by multitudes of people, and their exhibition in one group will lend much aid to the movement for celebrating the fourth centenary of the great Reformer. A specially interesting feature of the collection is a series of woodcuts representing him at various ages; rare editions of his translations of the Scriptures, books bearing his autograph, and, not least, the identical "Pontifical Indulgence" sold by John Tetzel are also included. The whole are an intensely interesting and instructive set of mementoes.

Among the relics of the past stored in the Markish Museum at Berlin is Martin Luther's own Bible. Written on the title-page are the words, "If Thy Word, O Lord, did not comfort me, I should perish in misery. 1542, Mart. Luther, D." Rarely, indeed, does so much interest and importance attach to a particular copy of the sacred volume as to this. It was not only the means in the hand of God of illuminating the mind of Luther; but, through him, of rescuing the whole world from the darkness of Papal ignorance and error.

Among the last words of Rev. Thomas Binney were these: "It is a grand thing to have been a Christian minister; but if I had to begin my ministry again I would preach one thing more than ever I did, and that is righteousness of life." This was by no means because of any lessening of the great preacher's hold on the doctrine of justification by faith; to the last he rested solely on Christ for salvation, even as he had preached Him in all the fulness of His saving power. But as he drew nearer eternity, he saw the beauty of holiness more clearly, and felt the need of it more strongly, so that he realised increasingly the importance of setting it before men as the great object of life.

There is danger of contending earnestly for rigid orthodoxy of creed apart from equal concern to ensure practical conformity to it in life. The value of a man's belief to himself is the extent to which it corrects the evils of his nature, and conforms him to the will of God. It is in vain we hold the truth if we hold it in unrighteousness. The Gospel condemns in toto all complicity with evil, and the power of the Cross of Christ is nowhere seen to be more supreme than in its conflict with sin in every form. It ensures death to sin on the part of all who spiritually know its influence. "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh, with its affections and lusts." To be a Christian is not simply to endorse Christianity, but to be righteous as He, our Lord, is righteous.

The programme of the Church Congress, which falls to be held at Reading, October 2—5, has been issued. It includes such topics of general interest and importance as: "Recent advances in Natural Science and Biblical Criticism in their relation to the Christian faith;" "Woman's Work;" "Purity;" "The Prevention of the Degradation of Women and Children;" "Sunday Observance;" "Personal Religion," &c. Remarking on the selected list of readers and speakers, The Rock says:—

"Putting aside Bishops, the list is more decidedly High Church than we have noticed for many years. There are several names of well-known Evangelical clergymen; but the names of the most pronounced champions of the Protestant cause are conspicuous by their absence. There is not one. On the other hand, of ultra-Ritualists we find a superabundance. The selections which have been made will certainly confirm in their opinion those Evangelicals who hold that participation in Church Congresses is a mistake. It seems to us that this forthcoming meeting is not unlikely to result in a change. Either the annual Congress will become really representative, or it will become so decidedly partisan in its character as to lose all claims on public respect."

We notice that four gentlemen are appointed to read or speak about as many different aspects of "Woman's work," but no woman's name appears in the list. Seeing that there are plenty of sisters well qualified to discuss in public the subjects in which they have such a personal and practical interest, this arrangement seems to be of doubtful wisdom.

We observe numerous complaints in the newspapers that the arrangements of the new Parcels Post are working grievous injury to the rural carriers. Not only has no increase of wage been granted in recompense for this serious addition to their labours, but they are prohibited from carrying small parcels of such articles as medicine, &c., which formerly proved a source of addition to their slender incomes. While grateful for the fresh convenience of transit afforded by the Parcels Post, we scarcely think the nation is prepared to accept even that boon at the expense of injury to some of its worst paid and hardest worked servants.

We would direct the special attention of our readers to the powerful exposition that occupies our "Pulpit" columns this week. It is extracted from Mr. Henry Drummond's recent work, Natural Law in the Spiritual World, which we are glad to know has already reached its third edition. Our readers may recollect that Mr. Drummond is now on a scientific tour of inspection in the Mission fields of South and Central Africa. A private note from him, dated Zanzibar, July 17, en route, states that the journey had been a very pleasant one thus far. The party, including missionaries for Blantyre, Livingstonia, &c., expected to reach Quilimane in a week from the date of writing.

What could we possibly say that would give weight or urgency to the simple, irresistible eloquence of these sentences from a letter sent to us by our much esteemed sister, Miss Mittendorff, of the Kindergarten, Clayton House, Epsom?

"I know you will be sorry to hear that for several months now the means have come in very sparingly, and at present I am obliged again to sell my own things in order to get the daily bread for my 100 children. Will you kindly put a short statement of this into your paper. You have done it formerly in your own way."

A writer in the Pall Mall Gazette describes what he saw on Sunday week on "Mile End Waste," that "island in the river of traffic" that flows down the great East-end thoroughfare. City missionaries, Salvation soldiers, infidel and political demagogues, and many others who think they have a message of some sort to deliver, take their stand on the "Waste," and are, for the most part, patiently and impartially listened to. The writer was particularly struck by "the toleration, by earnest men, of opinions they abhor." He thus sums up his general impressions:—

"There is a very decided movement towards Socialism, and away from all sorts of conservative resting-places. Christianity (as represented by most of its missionary adherents, and not by its founder) has lost its hold almost entirely upon the better sort of working men. On the other hand, objections to theism are less violently dogmatic. The first of these changes may be the temporary result of depressed trade; the latter may be due to the fact that the voice of the moderates on both sides has made itself heard. But perhaps Dean Stanley's remark that the Church of England is not represented by the inferior talk of diocesan councils is equally applicable here. 'The best men do not speak'—at least, those who do speak are not, perhaps, representatives of their body—with all due deference to the mysterious working man and the orators of Mile-end Waste."

We are altogether unable to grasp the point involved in the writer's vague, parenthetical description of the Christianity that, as he so glibly asserts, has lost its hold on the better sort of working men. If, as he surmises, this is only "the temporary result of depressed trade," Christianity after all would have little to fear. But we are by no means prepared to admit the statement. We fancy that some of our open-air preachers who visit the Mile-end Waste much more frequently than this rash journalist, could tell a very different story.

The Methodist Free Church Assembly has resolved to adopt a plan for special evangelistic effort throughout the circuits of the whole Connexion. One or two ministers are to be set apart for the work, and also lay preachers of approved character and suitable gifts, who shall go from circuit to circuit, holding services of a purely Gospel character. The idea is an excellent one, and likely to be productive of great good. The meetings of the Assembly this year at Rochdale appear to have been specially successful in every way. The net increase of members reported for the year was 1,435. In connection with the Temperance League annual report it was stated that out of 340 ministers in Home Circuits 300 were known total abstainers.

The spirit of animosity against the Jews continues to advance in some parts of Europe, greatly to the discredit of the Powers under whose jurisdiction it is allowed to prevail. The Jewish World calls attention to the fact that Jewish manufacturers and mill-owners in Russia, as well as all Jewish proprietors of industrial establishments, are by law prohibited from employing Christian labourers in their works. This fresh piece of oppressive legislation is a blow aimed at Jewish manufacturers, to remove them from the field of competition, and cannot fail to bring ruin to many hitherto prosperous and important firms. Truly the seed of Abraham are a people scattered and peeled, and the Gentile world has a heavy charge to answer before God for its treatment of them. Christian hearts cannot fail, as they see these things, to cry, "Oh that the salvation of Israel were come out of Zion." We have cause indeed to "pray for the peace of Jerusalem."

Mr. Francis Murphy, with some of th members of his family, will sail for th United States, per City of Rome, leavin Liverpool on Sept. 5. Previous to his depa ture from our shores Mr. Murphy will atten several farewell gatherings in Scotland, whe his labours in the cause of Gospel Tempe ance have been much blessed. On Tuesda afternoon next he will meet the Dunde friends at a social gathering in Lamb's Hote and in the evening a valedictory meetin will take place in the Kinnaird Hall.

It is many a day since we have read leading article in The Times with suc genuine and heartfelt satisfaction as that o the death of Dr. Moffat, which we reproduc in another page. Christians have often bee grieved at the attitude taken by the leadin journal with respect to religious and especiall missionary subjects; an utterance like th goes far to atone for such offences. I will be a great day for the world whe statesmen at the head of all civilised coun tries come practically to recognise the trut of the closing paragraph of this magnificen testimony.

We inserted in our last a letter fro "M. C. W.," respecting our note on the fac that Dr. Macdonald took the part of Macbet in a dramatic costume recital on a recen Saturday, and preached in Islington Chap on the following Sunday. The comment o the Echo was to the effect that the connectio between the Church and the stage grow closer and closer, which we admitted and de plored. The principle laid down by "M. C.W. is that Christian charity forbids the expres sion of an adverse opinion in such a case. W must declare our utter dissent from such principle. The argument amounts to this One who has much of the spirit of Chris has, "by his written and spoken words, le many to see in Jesus of Nazareth the mani festation of a God whom they could lov with all the devotion of their hearts"; there fore, it is a want of charity to point out a inconsistency in him. On the contrary, th higher such a one stands in the estimatio of Christians and of the world as a represen tative of the Spirit of Christ, the mor mischievous will be any inconsistency i him. It is not, indeed, our province t judge individuals, but it is our province t express an opinion on the public actions o public men, on account of the good or ev which they exercise on others.

The world in the Church is the great secre of the spiritual declension which is acknow ledged on all hands to be prevalent, an anything which tends to remove the wall o separation which should stand between th Church and the world is, from our point o view, to be condemned. The Stage and th Pulpit are not at one in their mission; the stand in the way of each other's progress and the pulpit can only lose power, instea of gaining it, by allying itself with the stage Our assertion of these facts is in no way a inroad on individual conscience, but a muc needed protest against the growing ten dency to unspiritual methods which prevail Our correspondent implies that the Scrip ture statement, "Where the Spirit of th Lord is there is liberty," justifies the Chri tian minister in appearing on the stage. W may be narrow-minded, but we do not thin it does.

Miss Luckes, the Matron of the London Hos pital, has published in pamphlet form a lecture o Home Nursing, delivered by her on June 1 (Kegan Paul & Co. 1s.)

"LOVEDALE," SOUTH AFRICA.

OVEDALE has now become almost a household word in Christian homes whose atmo-here is pervaded by a missionary spirit, and it ay therefore not be uninteresting to hear from e pen of one who has seen it some particulars garding its organisation and method of work.

The name—Lovedale—has been given to it in nour of Rev. Dr. John Love, so well known as cretary to the Glasgow Missionary Society.
lies about 700 miles north-east of Cape Town,
a small river which once formed the boundary Kaffraria proper, prettily nestling among assy hills, and shaded by many beautiful trees.
s institution consists of two main departments, e male and the female, the buildings being at suitable distance apart, with the dwelling-house the Principal between, and the work carried in both is educational and industrial.

The essential aim of the whole is not merely to vilise but to Christianise. We believe that vilisation apart from Christianity would not be unmixed blessing to Africans, and that an ucated Kaffir can become a great power for il. The conversion of the individual soul to od is therefore the one thing specially desired, d the effort for all else is subordinate.

ITS OCCUPANTS.

As we stand at Dr. Stewart's door we see a ry large, handsome, collegiate-looking build-g, which we are told consists of boys' class-om, library, and book shop. If we turn to r right we come to the boys' boarding depart-ent; if we turn to the left we come to the rls'. Some of the boarders pay £20 per annum, hers £12, but by far the largest proportion, £8.
nd here we remark that all pay something,
r without the native help arising from fees it ould be impossible to carry on the place on its esent scale. The native payments for this year ill amount to £1500 or £1600. The highest oint they reached was in 1876, the year before e last war, when they amounted to £1650. One ject of allowing Europeans to join the classes to aid the work by means of their fees. They y £40 for board and education. The average mber of boarders is from fifteen to twenty.
has been higher, but as the means of educa-
on spread, and schools multiply in the Colony, is source of income will fall off. That change beginning, and we should not trouble ourlves with the European element were we able to do without it. "Our poverty, and not our will, nsents." However, there is good precedent, r Carey in his early days, and from the same use, did the same. Our inference is clear. If e education were not of a certain quality, uropean colonists would not send their sons.

ITS INDUSTRY.

The curriculum of education comprehends the ementary school, the literary and the theoloical course, each of which occupies three years.
The trades taught are carpentering, waggon-aking, printing, bookbinding, and blacksmiths' ork, the numbers for last session of 1881 being 9. About 100 of these must be reckoned oung men and young women rather than boys
d girls, in the strict sense of these words. On Vednesday, at noon, all work is suspended for rayer. As the bell rings the mid-day hour, ooks and tools are laid aside, and everyone sets t for the native church, where service is held ll one o'clock. Surely the hour of prayer, in the iddle of the week's stir and tumult, is a fitting freshment for weary workers.

The industrial department consists of laundry-work, dressmaking, tailoring, &c., all done according to orders received and paid outside, the domestic work of the school being accomplished by the girls in turn. Early rising is a very prominent feature of this establishment, its great aim being to fulfil all the household duties by nine o'clock, when every girl is expected to be at her class. A girl from the industrial department superintends the cooking necessary for the one o'clock dinner, thus learning a little of that necessary branch of education for her own benefit, as well as avoiding the necessity of another leaving her classes for the purpose.

Saturday is the day when boys who have sisters, relatives, and friends in the girls' school are allowed to meet with them. As we do not think that nature ever meant the complete isolation of sex, the door of the girls' school is thrown open from three to five o'clock in the afternoon to all boys having "a pass" from their boarding master. The two hours seem to glide away all too quickly, but the rule has to be strictly kept.

ITS SPIRITUAL BENEFITS.

On Sundays all the Kaffir-speaking boys and girls attend the native church at the gate of the avenue, at 10.30, while a Dutch service is simultaneously conducted in the Lecture Hall. Sunday-school, for the benefit of the natives around who are not in the institution, is held at the former place at 9 a.m., some of the boys, and two of the girls, being teachers, while a few little ones are scholars. At the same hour there are classes for the institution boys, held by the boarding master. Attendance at afternoon Church Service is optional.

The Girls' Sunday-school is at four o'clock. This has been found most successful and interesting. At 7.30 p.m. all must attend the evening service, conducted usually by Dr. Stewart. This is perhaps the best part of the day. It is a great sight to see the mass of boys and girls assembled to worship God. To me, a stranger, the very singing of the old familiar hymns was most touching; and when those we specially considered missionary songs were chanted forth in my ear for the first time, from the lips of the veritable individuals who were once heathen themselves, I thought, surely this must be re-echoed in heaven, and find its entrance into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth.

On Sundays some of the young men go out in companies to the heathen kraals round about, there to tell the same "old story"—ever new—that they themselves are hearing every day.

We have often wished that money could altogether be disconnected from schemes for Christian usefulness, but perhaps it is well that such can never be the case, otherwise they would become individual charities, instead of the united efforts of those who give their lives, combined with those who give of their substance, for the spread of the Gospel.

ITS SUPPORT.

How, then, is Lovedale supported?

The income and expenditure of the institution are large, on account of the existence of industrial departments. But by expenditure is not meant absolute outlay which cannot be recovered. Still, the money has to be found, laid out, and waited for to come back in six or twelve months. In round numbers, the following may be taken as the present income and expenditure for 1882:—

1. Work Department, including Farm and Girls' Industrial Division	£5,120
2. Fees, Native and European	2,480
3. Government Grant for all Purposes—Educational, Industrial allowances, &c.	2,750
4. Ladies' Society—Special Contribution £20 included	200
5. Foreign Missions' Committee	1,450
Total	£12,000

It will be noticed that from one-half to two-thirds of this large income is drawn from work done. A portion, however, has to be deducted as accomplished by one department for another. But as that belongs to inevitable expenditure, it would have to be done from outside if not by the institution itself. With a place constantly growing, and requiring outlay in the shape of more stock—as wood, iron, paper, books, domestic utensils, implements of all kinds, the expenditure is always equal, and often over the income. This is made up in part by another source of revenue—voluntary contributions. Till within the last two years these never produced any appreciable effect on either side. But lately two large gifts have materially equalised the accounts. We regard them as sent by Him to whom the wealth of the world in reality belongs.

RESULTS.

Lovedale has sent five native pastors, all of them well-educated, intelligent men, to native congregations, which are, more or less, contributing to the support of their own ministers, and five others are in course of preparation. But for Lovedale there would, in all probability, have been no Livingstone and no Blytheswood Institution in the Transkei. Religiously and spiritually we would wish the results far greater than they have been; but if every year tells of some brought into the kingdom of Jesus Christ, surely "the redemption of a soul is precious," and the day of small things ought not to be despised.

The relation of Christian education to the general evangelisation of the world may be misunderstood by a portion of the Christian public at home. But those who have gone down into the field and have faced and fought the battle against ignorance, superstition, and heathenism in all its depravity, maintain that to select a few for education is not the way to organise a native ministry. We shall never leave behind us Christian churches self-supporting, and able to aid in the further advance of Christianity, if the bulk of their members is allowed to remain ignorant, unintelligent, and poor. And without education this must be the result, even after a generation of missionary labour, in any part of Africa at least. It is better to Christianise the Africans than to crush them, and the day is coming, whether we live to see it or not, when even the Dark Continent shall have its native universities.

As the continent opens up there will be an ever-increasing demand for such native evangelists, and the evangelisation of that vast area which is expressed in the words "Central Africa," can only be effected by the extensive employment of that class of agents. Only with this object in view could the resources of Lovedale be fully utilised, and its present expenditure and method justified.

Though no public statement has been made, it is believed that this is the real object, and that as soon as it may be safe to begin the process, a gradual change will take place, by which some of the lower school work will disappear, and higher work take its place.

What is wanted now is the authorisation from home and further assistance; for without this, and by any sudden change, the results might be that we should have Lovedale neither what it was nor what it was intended to be.

HOSPITAL SATURDAY FUND.—Arrangements are being perfected with a view to securing a greater street collection on behalf of this fund on the 1st of next month than has hitherto been realised. No fewer than 30,000 collecting-sheets have been issued to the various workshops of the metropolis, and to police, postal, railway, and other officials, and boxes will be placed on board all the Thames ferry-boats, and will be placed under the especial charge of the captains.

THE LUTHER COMMEMORATION.—A numerously attended and influential meeting, representing many of the most prominent religious societies in London, convened by circular, was recently held at Exeter Hall, to consider and make arrangements for the fourth centenary of the birth of Martin Luther. The following decisions were arrived at: To issue a special appeal to the Protestants of the United Kingdom upon the subject; to hold meetings on several successive days, beginning with November 10, being the date of Luther's birth; to hold meetings for prayer, sermons, general and special, in the churches and chapels throughout the country; also a conference at which papers should be read on the work and life of Luther, the principle, character, and effects of Romanism and the blessings of the Reformation.

FUNERAL OF DR. MOFFAT.

ON Thursday last, the mortal remains of this veteran soldier of the Cross were laid in their last resting-place in Norwood Cemetery. A large concourse of friends and mourners assembled to show their respect for the deceased, the leading missionary societies, as well as various religious bodies in this country, being well represented.

In the service at Tulse Hill Baptist chapel, Rev. J. C. Harrison delivered an address, in which he took a comprehensive survey of the life, character, and labours of Dr. Moffat. After speaking of "entireness of consecration" as one great feature that marked his missionary career and made him "a king amongst men," and also of the "personal fascination" which produced such wonderful effects upon the heathen, he dwelt upon Dr. Moffat's "perfect disinterestedness," illustrated by the fact that so long as he had just enough to sustain him he seemed never to covet anything more; his wonderful catholicity, which made him love all good men and rejoice in every good and great work, there being no littleness or bitterness seen in him, though he had indomitable firmness when the Gospel was in question; his guileless simplicity, combined with abundant shrewdness and a great deal of mother wit, and his astonishing faith in the power of the Gospel—a faith which gave wonderful beauty and consistency to his whole character. Mr. Harrison read a letter written by the Doctor only fourteen days before his death, which he characterised as "breathing the old loyalty to the London Missionary Society;" the speaker expressed an earnest hope that some of the young men who were present would endeavour to imitate his Christian heroism, and be inspired by his earnest missionary spirit.

At the grave, Rev. J. G. Rogers delivered an address, in which he pronounced a eulogium on the deceased similar to that of Mr. Harrison in the chapel, and also one on the late Mrs. Moffat, whom he described as having sympathised in all Dr. Moffat's cares, and entered into all his hopes, his sorrows, his vicissitudes, his troubles, and his fears, and who, he added, was a true-hearted and noble-minded woman, a grand example to the wives of missionaries, as Robert Moffat was a grand example to missionaries themselves; so true, so noble, so courageous, so heroic, was that great apostle of South Africa.

Those who have not read any biography of Dr. Moffat may be glad to know that a succinct and comprehensive sketch of his life and work is published by Messrs. Dyer Bros., Amen-corner, E.C.; price 1d.

(From The Times of Friday last).

"Dr. Robert Moffat, who was yesterday laid in the grave, has left an abiding name as a pioneer of modern missionary work in South Africa. He was born in 1795, a year memorable as that of the foundation of the London Missionary Society, and in 1816 he entered on his career as one of the Society's missionaries. His first purpose was to proceed to the South Seas, but his final choice was the vast and as yet unexplored field of the central region of South Africa. His chief work was among the Bechuanas. His picture of what they were when he first knew them would hardly now be recognised, so entirely have they changed under the new influences which Moffat was among the first to bring to bear upon them. He found them mere savages, idol-worshippers, constantly at war among themselves and with their neighbours, ignorant of the arts of agriculture, and in the utterly degraded state for which we must seek a counterpart now in the more distant tribes whom the message of civilisation has not yet reached.

"It was Moffat's mission to civilise as well as to instruct, to free those with whom he was brought in contact from the curse under which they seemed to lie, to raise them to a higher life, and so to fit them to become recipients of the sacred message of good tidings which it was his main ultimate purpose to announce. His success within the limited field to which he confined himself—a field which has been now far overpassed by the subsequent labours of other devoted men, most notably by those of his own son-in-law, David Livingstone—was very marked. His first care was to make himself thoroughly master of the language of those to whom he was sent. For fifty years, he has declared, he had been accustomed to speak the Bechuana tongue; he reduced it to written characters, and, as an agent of the British and Foreign Bible Society, translated the Scriptures into it. The Bechuanas, under Moffat's guidance, became new men. Mission work grew and spread among them; what Moffat had begun to do was taken up by other hands; a permanent body of native pastors was created from among the Bechuanas themselves, and the whole region was raised out of the savage state in which Moffat had found it, and became in no small degree civilised as well as Christianised.

"To effect this, and to make it possible for others to effect it, was the chief business of Moffat's working life. He went out to South Africa in 1816. He left it finally in 1870. During that long interval the dark continent was attacked and explored in all directions. Scientific travellers and missionary travellers were busy pushing their way into regions to which Moffat had never penetrated. It is Moffat's honour to have been among the first in the field, to have laid, as it were, the stepping-stones by which his successors have been able to outstrip him; to have borne the burden and heat of the day in early missionary work, and at once to have given an example of devotion to his noble cause, and to have furnished proof that the ground was not barren, and that even in South Africa the good seed might be trusted to spring up, and to bring forth abundant fruit.

"It is the fashion in some quarters to scoff at missionaries, to receive their reports with incredulity, to look at them at best as no more than harmless enthusiasts, proper subjects for pity, if not for ridicule. The records of missionary work in South Africa must be a blank page to those by whom such ideas are entertained. We owe it to our missionaries that the whole region has been opened up. Apart from their special service as preachers, they have done important work as pioneers of civilisation, as geographers, as contributors to philological research. Of those who have taken part in this, Moffat's name is not the best known. Moffat, it may be said, has laboured, and other men have entered into his labour. Livingstone has come after him, and has gone beyond him, and has linked his memory for ever with the records of the South African Church. Speke and Stanley have become household names where Moffat has been unknown or has been forgotten. In his own simple words, it never occurred to him, while working among the Bechuanas, that he should obtain the applause of men. His one care was for those among whom he had cast his lot. He was an enthusiast, of course—a man would be worth little for missionary enterprise if he were not this at all events. But he was an enthusiast with a clear sense of the right means to employ for the accomplishment of his unselfish task. He had a message to deliver of love and of peace, and he must prepare men to receive it by instructing them in the arts of peace.

"The progress of South Africa has been mainly due to men of Moffat's stamp. In him, as in David Livingstone, it is hard to say which character has predominated, that of the missionary proper or that of the teacher and guide. Certain it is that apart from the special stimulus they felt as proclaimers of the Gospel message they would never have thrown themselves as they did into the work to which their lives were consecrated. It was by no zeal for the spread of civilisation on its own account that they passed weary years labouring and teaching among savage tribes, amid dangers of every kind, amid privations of which they themselves made light, but which only a sense of their high spiritual mission could have prompted them to face and undergo.

"It would seem, indeed, that it is only by the agency of such men as Moffat and his like that the contact of the white and black races can be anything but a curse to the blacks. Even the arts of civilisation are of little avail by themselves. In some parts of the world their chief result has been to furnish the savage with means of enjoyment which have proved fatal to him. In others, the black man has been looked upon as fair prey. H has been forced into contact with a race superi to his own, not that he may learn from them, b that he may serve them; not that he may be raise to their level, but that he may be brought down something even lower than before. It is the mi sionary alone who seeks nothing for himself. H has chosen an unselfish life. If honour comes him, it is by no choice of his own, but as th unsought tribute which others, as it were, for upon him. Robert Moffat has died in the fulne both of years and of honours. His work has bee to lay the foundations of the Church in the centr regions of South Africa. As far as his influen and that of his coadjutors and successors h extended, it has brought with it unmixed goo His name will be remembered while the Sout African Church endures, and his example wi remain with us as a stimulus to others, and as a abiding proof of what a Christian missionary ca be and can do."

BURNING THE SCRIPTURES IN SPAI

AS we read a paragraph in one of the dai papers last week with this heading, w wondered whether or not we had got back to th dense darkness of the middle ages. Let th strange story speak for itself:—

"On the festival day of St. James—the patro saint of Spain—the 25th of July last, 1300 copi of the Gospels were committed to the flames the Custom-house at Barcelona. The Liber (Spanish paper) gives the following explanatio of the strange proceeding: 'In the year 18 a book was printed for the Protestant schools Gracia (a suburb of Barcelona), with the titl "A Simple Method of Teaching to Read an Reckon." Many copies were sent to Londo but through a mistake one or two thousand we sent back to Spain. The owner claimed them the Custom-house, but when, after much corr spondence on the subject, an exorbitant duty w demanded, he left them where they were. The were to have been sold, but the Custom-hou people said that a religious question was in volved, and therefore they sought the advice the Town Council. This body decided that th sale could not be authorised without a violatio of the 11th Article of the Constitution (whic grants the smallest amount of toleration to Pr testants), consequently it appears that ev arithmetic, if it is not intended for Rom Catholics, is opposed to Roman Catholicism, t State Religion. The book contains no doctrin of any particular sect. It is merely a readin book, with lessons on arithmetic, and the pa sages for reading are the Holy Gospels, witho note or comment. So, by order of the author ties, the Holy Gospels were publicly burnt Barcelona. Unfortunately, this fact will proclaimed throughout Europe, for when t English Consul presented himself at the Custo house and offered to pay all costs, in order th the books might be sent back to England, was told that it was too late. Any commenta on this occurrence would require more space th its narration. The narration is sufficient show our readers how religious toleration is u derstood here.'

"A Barcelona paper, the Publicidad, spea even more strongly on the subject: 'We a such barbarians here that we burn the Ho Gospels merely because they might be read Protestants.' And further on, in an ironical to 'We congratulate the director of the Custo house in Barcelona on the happy idea of havi selected the day of our patron saint (St. Jam for the celebration of this auto-da-fé. In hono of the Knight on the White Horse the Catho churches in Spain raised clouds of incense, a the Catholic State in Spain sent up clouds smoke through the burning of the inspir writings of Matthew and John. . . . The G pels were burnt for the simple reason that th were apparently intended as a reading-book Protestant schools. As Spaniards we blush wi shame, as Liberals we are enraged, as freem of this nineteenth century we turn for consol tion to an approaching future.' The same pa gives a description of the proceeding, and ad 'We went away sad at heart, and thinking what enlightened Europe would in a few da be saying about unhappy Spain.'"

MR. MOODY IN VACATION TIME.

"WILL you preach to your old friends in Northampton this summer?" was the uestion we asked of Mr. Moody on his return om the eighteen months' tour in the British les last spring. His answer was, "I am going ome to rest. I am tired, I will make no pro-ise." When he told us of continuous labour r a year and a half, and his need for recrea-on and study, we felt it cruel to press our quest, though his home is but a few miles from rs. We saw that it would be true kindness let him alone, and that "meetings," "con-entions," "convocations," should be tabooed pics this summer.

Recently we passed a Sabbath in the quiet amlet of Northfield, and heard most apprecia-ve words of the Evangelist from old friends d neighbours. He is a rare exception to the le that "a prophet is without honour in his n country." Here young and old love him, d give a warm and sincere welcome, not to e preacher of world-wide fame, but to their d friend and neighbour, who comes back to the rm which he ploughed in boyhood, as simple his tastes and manners as when he left. He interested in all that pertains to his native wn, attends the weekly prayer-meetings of the urch, gathers the children on Sunday after-oons, and talks to them with such tender, im-ressive earnestness as to make them long for e nobler life of which he speaks. When not his study he is out on duty, planning, devising w to increase and strengthen the growing wer of "Northfield Seminary" and "Mount ermon School," one for girls, the other for ys, three miles apart, and separated by the arming Connecticut River and its beautiful alley. The Seminary is a marked success. t has outgrown its accommodation, and needs ldditional buildings. The Recitation Hall must e enlarged; pianos, additions to library, scien-fic apparatus, are greatly needed, funds must e had to replace furniture and keep the grounds order. There is no debt and no permanent nd. The school is not an experiment; it has roved its need for just such an institution.

"I will meet you at half-past five in the orning, and take you to breakfast with the ys at Mount Hermon," said our friend as we ade him good-night. On expressing surprise t his rising at such an early hour, a tired man eking a brief respite for the great work just efore him in London, he lightly replied, "Oh, I eep seven or eight hours a day now, and when reaching six hours is my rule." In the early orning we found some forty bright, sunny-uled boys, on a farm of 400 acres located on a entle slope, as fair and beautiful as distant hills, overed with pine and hemlock, and a broad alley laden with such luxuriant crops, could ake it. Twelve of these lads are from Man-nester and four from Liverpool, and they emed as happy as the birds that trilled their orning songs in the maples. This great arm has been in an old family for a cen-ury, and had not been in the market till just he moment Mr. Moody was ready to secure it. The lads work only about three hours a day, and et they are valuable assistants in farm labour. ast year 175 barrels of apples were sold, and 00 more stored in the cellars for family use, 80 o 90 tons of hay were stored in the ample barns; nd 130 lbs. of butter made each week shows hat the farm can do. Said the head farmer to e, in reply to the question, "How about these oys? Are they not more of a bother than a elp?" His reply, with a merry twinkle of the ye, was, "Well, they are improving! When hey first came here they couldn't tell beans rom cucumbers, or witch-grass from corn!"

Hon. E. A. Hubbard, one of the foremost ducational teachers in Massachusetts, a man of are experience, has been secured to take the eneral management of the school. Four new uildings will be ready for occupancy in Sep-ember, and then eighty boys can be accommo-lated. The purpose of the trustees is to make his a thorough English school, and to provide careful training for the religious, intellectual, and physical nature of the pupils. The low price of board and tuition, one hundred dollars a year, the class of lads gathered here who are unable generally to advance even this small sum, inadequate to meet the expense, must of necessity be met by friends of this school. With all the care of planning for the buildings, digging wells, reservoirs, securing competent teachers, driving, working, studying, preaching, the readers of THE CHRISTIAN can form some idea of how a tired man rests in America!

CHOLERA IN EGYPT.

A FRIEND writes from Cairo, dated August 4th:—

"All this household well, thank God. Surely our exemption must be in answer to prayer, for we are exposed to the contagion on all sides. Mercifully, too, we are given to 'trust and not be afraid,' for thousands are attacked, and die as the result of fear. It is a mysterious disease; even fear develops the germ, whatever that may be. We pray that Europe and our dear England may be spared. The true number of those who have fallen victims up to date in Egypt is from twenty to thirty thousand. Even the returns of the army of occupation are inaccurate. But amongst the natives thousands die and are thrown coffinless into a hole on the surface of the ground, and no official is any the wiser. Of course this is less the case in such a city as Cairo, but to a certain extent it goes on here also."

GLASGOW ORPHANS.

IN his last letter to the Daily Mail, Mr. Quarrier, 318, St. Vincent-street, Glasgow, says:—

"Our friends will rejoice with us that we are once more home again after crossing the Atlantic with our rescued band; we ask them to join with us in thanksgiving to our Heavenly Father for journeying mercies all the way. We arrived in Glasgow on Monday, 6th inst., after a pleasant passage. The boys' party, who went in April, as well as the girls whom I took away on June 7, numbering in all nearly 200, have been placed out in comfortable homes, with the exception of about twenty, who have had to be delayed, but will be sent to the homes awaiting them soon. The applications for the children were more than double the supply. We visited amongst former years' children, and quite a number came to see us at the Home. From all I have seen and heard, the boys and girls, as a whole, are doing well, and quite keep up the high standard of ninety-five per cent. of those who have been sent out during the past twelve years doing right. We bless God for the outlets which Canada affords for the perishing little ones who come seeking help from day to day.

"Since my return there have been at the City Home every day quite a number of needy cases, and the sin and sorrow and suffering we have witnessed since is quite enough to call forth the energy of every true citizen to lessen it. I am resolved, with God's help, to try more and more to mitigate the sufferings of the needy, and to increase the usefulness of the Homes in the coming year more than in any past. This cannot be done without increased means, and we are sure that the Lord's children who delight to honour Him with their substance will not fail in giving to the work which He has so signally set his seal to in the past. We are thankful to our helpers throughout the country for the practical aid given in our absence. Donations in money, clothing, and provisions will be duly acknowledged."

THE INTERNATIONAL LEAGUE OF PEACE AND LIBERTY has addressed a circular to the European and American Peace Societies announcing that the orders of the day at the assembly of September 16 next will include the following: The neutralisation of Denmark, Sweden, and Norway, the neutrality of the Danube, and the neutralisation of the Congo.

A THOUSAND MILLION SOULS.

By REV. L. H. WILSON.

DYING, dying, dying!
In deep and dark despair;
In speechless sorrow lying,
In wan and weary care.
No God, no Christ, no hope,
In rayless gloom they grope,
And dying, dying, dying.

'Mid China's peopled plains,
Or Greenland's frozen snow,
Where India's temple fanes
In glittering splendours glow,—
And many an ocean isle
'Mid nature's sweetest smile,
One night of horror reigns.

Yes, dying, dying, dying,
As hopeless wanderers die,
No gleam of light descrying
Along the darkened sky.
No Christ to them made known,
No blood which doth atone
For sins of deepest dye.

And must they die unsought?
Die, in their voiceless grief?
Die, 'mid their woes, untaught?
Die, like the withered leaf?
And in their hour of need
Shall none give willing heed,
Or send the craved relief?

No, no, it must not be—
Rise, sluggish Church of God,
The Saviour calls to thee
"Through all the earth abroad,
Go, ere the years are flown,
And there my love make known,
Wherever man hath trod."

—Gospel in all Lands.

["Our great desire is to awaken the people of God to the unparalleled opportunities of our own age, and the need of a movement more deep and wide, more earnest and self-denying, more bold and aggressive, than anything that has yet been attempted to reach the neglected at home and evangelise the mighty generation abroad—the thousand million souls, who are dying in Christless despair at the rate of 100,000 a day."—Missionary World.]

WORK AMONG CHINESE WOMEN.

IT gives me great pleasure to acknowledge, through THE CHRISTIAN, the receipt, from some unknown friend, of the gift of £1 for the work in the Bridgman Home, Shanghai. This contribution is very welcome, not only because of our need—for our opportunities for usefulness among the women and girls of China are limited only by our means—but far more because it brings with it the proof of loving sympathy from some dear Christian in England, with the union spirit of this American Home.

We have come here as the representatives of "The Woman's Union Missionary Society of America," whose privilege and honour it has been to demonstrate the possibility of woman's work for woman in heathen lands with such success as to lead to the organisation of "Women's Boards of Missions" in all Evangelical denominations in America. We bring with us no name but the name of Jesus, and we feel that we may justly expect the co-operation and aid of Christians of every name who love our Lord in sincerity and truth. We shall most gratefully receive the gifts of any who desire through us to help in bringing their sisters in China "out of darkness into light."

Shanghai, June 26. MARY PRUYN.

A NOBLE RUSSIAN CONVERT.—La Confession d'un romancier Russe, is the heading of an article by the special Paris correspondent of the Journal de Genève of August 5, having reference to a book entitled Ma Confession, by Count Tolstoï, a Russian of noble birth and great intelligence. He searched for truth and peace, but nowhere could he find them except in the "doctrine of Jesus," and in order to justify his religious views he wrote a large work, which the police would not allow to be printed in Russia, and is still in manuscript.

OBITUARY.

REV. DR. KNOX, BELFAST.

THE Presbyterian Church in Ireland has sustained a heavy loss by the death, last week, of Dr. Knox, one of its most energetic and highly respected ministers. In a memorial notice The Belfast Witness says:—

"Dr. Knox took an early and an active part in the organisation of the Pan-Presbyterian Council, and in the efforts of that Council to bring all the scattered sections of the Presbyterian Church into harmonious action and more vigorous co-operation for the extension of the kingdom and the Church of Christ. It was chiefly at his suggestion and solicitation that the third meeting of the Council was arranged to be held in Belfast next year. It was whilst engaged in this last great and good work that Dr. Knox received that shock to his system which has ended in his death. The meetings at Philadelphia in 1880 imposed a heavier strain on his physical system than it could bear. He came home far from well, and he never regained his strength. During the last few weeks he had had very severe suffering, and the full consciousness that his work was done and that his end was drawing nigh. These sufferings he was enabled to bear with unruffled resignation; and whilst death was deprived of its sting, he could look beyond and rejoice in the hope of the glory of God."

MRS. CARR, CARLISLE.

It is with much sorrow that we announce the departure from amongst us of our beloved sister, Mrs. James N. Carr (E. J. Carr), of Cavendish Mount, Carlisle She fell asleep on the 13th inst., after a protracted illness of four months, during which time, in spite of fluctuations of hopes and fears, the general impression of friends was that she would recover. A sudden increased weakness on Monday week alarmed her friends, and at three o'clock in the afternoon she peacefully fell asleep. The word "lovely" was the last she was heard to speak, about an hour before the close.

Her sweet Christian personal influence on all with whom she came in contact was the leading characteristic of her life. Her hymns and other writings, known to many, are a sweet testimony to the preciousness of Christ, and have been greatly owned and blessed of God. She was always an earnest helper of her husband in his extensive evangelistic labours, and in the smallest details of life, as well as in various branches of what may be called more definite work, she was ever a "sweet savour of Christ unto God." When such are removed their place down here cannot be supplied, but as one after another is called home the watchword is more loudly sounded in the ears of those who remain, "Occupy till I come."

JOHN HAY, THE CHILDREN'S FRIEND.

Many who are living, or have lived during the last generation, in the Highlands of Scotland, will have heard with sincere regret of the death of Mr. John Hay, of the North-east Coast Mission. The Inverness Courier has the following notice of this indefatigable Christian worker: "Mr. Hay was a man of singularly guileless and kindly character, always going about doing good, taking a special interest in the poor, and seeking to help them in their arduous struggles. He settled in Inverness as a photographer in 1856. For some time he had the field to himself, and was successful, but his benevolent disposition led him literally to distribute all his means. Mr. Hay took long journeys through the country prosecuting his business, and at the same time doing evangelistic work. During the past nineteen years he has acted as agent for the North-east Coast Mission, labouring with untiring zeal and earnestness in the humbler districts of the town. His unselfish and transparent character ensured him a welcome wherever he appeared."

A friend who knew the deceased intimately gives us some additional reminiscences: "He laboured much amongst the children, the sick, and the bereaved. His pockets were always full of little cards or tracts, and very few escaped his watchful eye. One of my children asked me, 'What is the man's name who puts his arm round your neck, and asks you if you love Jesus?' The reply was immediate, 'John Hay.' He went to the towns and villages scattered through the highlands and islands of Scotland with his camera, &c., and whilst engaged in his daily calling he always found time to get the children and others into some schoolroom or meeting-place, to sing hymns and store their memories with anecdotes and illustrations of the one great theme, 'Christ and Him crucified.' The Bible-woman in Inverness was visiting a dying child, and asked her, 'Do you know the Lord Jesus?' 'No,' said the child, 'but I know John Hay.'" Happy those who by their humility of demeanour and untiring activity in deeds of kindness have their names thus closely associated with 'the Name that is above every name.'"

SCOTTISH NOTES.

BRAEMAR, N.B.

LAST year Prof. and Mrs. Blaikie, of Edinburgh, paid a visit to this village, which is largely frequented by tourists. They planted a Gospel Temperance Mission, which has now a large membership; three-fourths of the children are members of the Band of Hope.

BETHANY HALL, GLASGOW.

Mr. Richard Hill is labouring in this necessitous district of Glasgow; numbers have been led to confess their sin, and have found peace in the Lord. Prayer is asked that the Lord may continue to give a blessing on the efforts put forth.

GLASGOW NOON PRAYER-MEETING.

This blessed "Rest at Noon" continues to be well attended, and proves indeed a precious hour to many. Of the twenty-six leaders for August, fifteen of them are business men, who find it seasonable to retire from the whirl of business to conduct and enjoy a sweet hour of prayer.

FORRES, N.B.

Mr. John Thomson, the fisherman Evangelist, has been holding a series of meetings at this place, which have proved a great blessing to the unsaved, as well as a season of spiritual refreshment and fellowship to Christians. One evening no less than five ministers took part in the services. The work is not only being carried on in large centres but also in quiet towns and villages.

SCARBOROUGH.—Mr. E. Arrowsmith, assisted by about twelve undergraduates, has been holding services here for children and young people since Aug. 1, in the mornings on the north and south shores, and in the evening in the South Cliff Lecture-hall. Earnest prayer is asked for this fashionable and worldly place, where there are so many attractions that keep the young from the services, and "the fear of man" is indeed seen to be a snare. But notwithstanding ridicule, &c., good numbers attend daily, and God is owning and blessing the meetings, which are to be continued till September 9.

ZENANA WORK.—The following extract from a speech of the famous Surendra Nath Banerjee, says the Calcutta Indian Witness, bears incidental, but for that very reason the more valuable, testimony to the power of lady missionaries in zenanas: "I live in a village, and therefore am to some extent able to gauge the influence which ladies working in a noble cause are oftentimes able to exercise. There are Christian ladies in connection with Zenana Missions, and there is one such Mission in the village where I live. I may truly say, speaking of this Mission, that it has shattered to pieces the fabric of Hindooism in the village, and has created a revolution in our domestic circles. The work of construction may not be so perfect; but the work of destruction is all but complete. Therefore, we have this fact clearly established, that European and Eurasian ladies, although they are strangers to our language, and strangers to our manners and customs, yet, when they become missionaries in a good cause, are able to effect a mighty revolution in our homes."

WORK AT WALTON-ON-NAZE.

DEAR SIR,—While the dwellers at the Home of Rest here were thinking of what could be done to reach the many who come during the season, Mr. John B. Bain came to spend his holiday. It was put to him by the friends at the Home whether something could not be done for the people. He began a morning service on the sands, and from the beginning God has granted His blessing. He began with the young, but soon the old came too, until now there is a large gathering daily; many have come to thank us for the help received. We know of conversions, and the work deepens. The people are most willing to be talked to alone, even on the sands.

The Bible readings conducted by Mr. Bain in the Home of Rest have been very helpful to the Lord's children, and we know of one unsaved one who was led to decide for Christ at one of the readings. Mr. Bain left us on the 22nd Aug., but we feel the work should not be allowed to drop. Anyone would receive a warm welcome who might be led to come here to carry on the work, were it only for a few days.

The Home of Rest is now full of poor, deserving women, needing rest and change of air, who have much valued these meetings. Help is earnestly asked for the support of this Home.

Walton-on-Naze. CATHARINE MOORE.

A MODEL FOR CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

NOTES OF AN ADDRESS ON JOHN THE BAPTIST.

By GAWIN KIRKHAM.

THE following points were specially noted: (1) His call: He had a divinely-given name John signifying Jehovah's gift, and was the subject of prophecy 700 years before he was born. Parents did well to watch the tendencies of their children, that they might by God's blessing find out what they were best fitted for. (2) His place: "In the wilderness." Our place was outside the camp (Heb. xiii. 13). Moses had to be taken to the desert to be educated for his life-work. The Lord cannot use us till we are separated from the world. (3) His mission: To prepare a people for the Lord. The purpose of the Gospel is not to convert the world, but to gather out a people for the Lord. The effect of the Gospel is two-fold: it is a savour of death unto death or of life unto life.

(4) His message: Repentance and faith (Matt. iii. 2). He also used strong language about "the wrath to come," and "unquenchable fire." It seemed to be an omission in much of the present day preaching, i.e., repentance, and also the judgment side of Divine truth. (5) His habits: Simple plain clothing, and plain fare. He was an example of self-denial, and a model for total abstainers—in that he drank neither wine nor strong drink. (6) His character: "Great in the sight of the Lord." But this greatness was only attained by true humility. "He must increase, but I must decrease." He regarded himself as only "a voice." Yet there was singular faithfulness and boldness and also love and zeal. "He was a burning and a shining light."

(7) His power: "Filled with the Holy Ghost." This filling led him to testify of Jesus. And a beautiful side-light was thrown upon his influence by the people beyond Jordan (John x. 41), who said "All things that John spake of this man (Jesus) were true." We might not be gifted, but our memories would be cherished in proportion as we had given a true portrait of Jesus in our preaching. (8) His success: Some feared him, like Herod, while others were converted by him, like the two disciples (John i. 37).

CLIFDEN, CONNEMARA.—Through the recent troubles in this part of Ireland the good hand of our God has been upon one institution, amongst others, where girls are trained for service, and in sound Scriptural truth. It has stood as a witness for Christ for about twenty years, and supported entirely by voluntary contributions. A debt now rests upon it of £136, which must necessarily cripple its operations, unless paid off. Help will be gratefully received by Mrs. M. A. D'ARCY, Glen Terne Clifden, co. Galway, Ireland.

Letters to the Editor.

RESTORATION OF ISRAEL.

Dear Sir,—Any difficulty that may arise on the uestion of Israel being restored to Canaan in unlief, may be removed by bearing in mind the riptural distinction between the two nations, udah and Israel.

The latter portion of the prophecy of Zechariah early points out that Judah will be delivered from e destructive power of the nations that come ainst her by the personal event of "Him whom ey pierced" (Zech. xii. 10), and on whom, like eir prototype Thomas (John xx. 29), they will lieve when they have seen Him; consequently ey must have returned to Palestine in unbelief; nd they will, on their conversion, answer the uestion in Isaiah lxvi. 8, "Shall a nation be rn at once?" after having endured their unaniously self-imposed imprecation (Matt. xxvii. 5), and passed through "The time of Jacob's ouble" (Jer. xxx. 7).

On the other hand, as pointed out by your rrespondent in The Christian of Aug. 2 (Ezek. xxvi. 23—31), "W. F. K." shows that the reoration of Israel will be simultaneous with their piritual renewal. It will help the apprehension f these truths by remembering that Israel, as a ation, had no part in the crucifixion of the Lord esus Christ, and therefore will nationally escape he tremendous retribution. The distinction of he two nations in their separation from each other also poetically shown in Zech. xi. 7, 10, 14, where he two staves, "Beauty" and "Bands," are both nt asunder. These "staves," or "sticks," as ey are called in Ezekiel, will eventually be inseparably reunited (see Ezekiel xxxvii. 16, 17, 22), nd then John x. 16 will be fulfilled, "There hall be one fold and one Shepherd." The present anished Israelites are probably "the other sheep" o which allusion is made.

Ludlow. Henry Meymott, Surgeon.

Sir,—This may be called the greatest of all uestions, as it embraces nothing less than the rocess of the world's redemption. If "W. F. K." ill study the grammatical construction of Isaiah ii. he will find a key to the prophetic method. here, events distant 750 years are predicted in l tenses and in obscure phrases, far more difficult han those quoted by him. The explanation is hat God dwells in an eternal now—his gifts and allings are without change of purpose in Him; rophecy, therefore, is but history written beforeand.

As to the general question, it is to be affirmed hat the mere return of any number of Jews to alestine would not constitute, in the scriptural ense, the restoration of Israel. So long as the Jews eject Christ they are themselves rejected. That ey will continue to reject Him, until the day that is feet stand on the Mount of Olives (which is efore Jerusalem on the east) is clear from the ollowing considerations. When Christ comes into he air, believers, living and dead, are changed nd caught up to meet Him. All others are left—he Jews are left; therefore they are then unbeevers. On his return to the earth He finds the eturned (not the restored) Jew in dire conflict and istress—the city taken, the houses rifled, the omen ravished, and half the city captive. Then, nd not till then, is it that they as a nation shall ook on Him whom they have pierced, and mourn; is then and thus that a nation shall be born in a ay.

The true restoration only then begins: "I will end those who escape of them unto the nations hat have not heard my name nor seen my glory, nd they shall declare my glory among the nations; nd they (the nations) shall bring all your rethren for an offering unto the Lord out of all ations, to my holy mountain Jerusalem, saith the ord." (For details read Isaiah xlix., and for esults read Isaiah lx. and lxv., and Zech. viii.)

The subject is capable of great expansion, and any extended quotations might be presented, ut this will probably suffice to meet the difficulty entioned by your correspondent. Otherwise I uppose that even The Christian itself could ot contain the letters that might be written.—Faithfully yours, Eboracum.

Notices of Books, &c.

Gospel Leaves.—This is an illustrated packet of new tracts, by the well-known tract writer, Mr. Cheyne Brady. There are twelve different sorts; each tract is striking, well illustrated, and calculated to arrest attention. The Drummond Tract Depot, Stirling, 6d. per 100.

A Guide, A Comforter. Arranged by M. A. Wilson. F. Warne & Co. This little book can be used either as a diary or birthday text-book. It contains brief passages for every day in the year and a short motto, which in some cases is a line of poetry, such as "Keep me, mighty Saviour, in the narrow way." It is neatly got up, and likely to prove useful.

Mine Own People. By L. M. Grey. Macniven & Wallace. This well-written and interesting story will be read by young and old with pleasure and profit. We advise our young friends especially to make the acquaintance of Marion Grant, the heroine of the narrative. The book is full of quiet insight into character; there is much true humour in its pages, and the story is characterised by freshness of style from beginning to end.

Great Preachers and Famous Orators is a threepenny pamphlet, by Rev. G. Wilson M'Cree (Elliot Stock), containing brief articles on such men as George Whitfield, Robert Hall, Dr. Leifchild, James Sherman, Thomas Binney, Bishop Wilberforce, Dean Stanley, and Dr. Norman Macleod. It is vigorously written, and will prove useful to those who are unacquainted with the histories of these eminent men.

Travellers by rail who wish to embrace the many opportunities afforded them of dropping a suitable Gospel message into the hands of a railway employé would do well to furnish themselves with a few packets of the Railway Tracts, published by the Railway Mission, 186, Aldersgate-street, E.C. (6d. per packet of forty). In the packet will be found Dr. Pentecost's graphic story, "I dreads de Process," and a tract by Lady Hope.

The Churchman's Family Bible. Edited by the Bishop of Bedford. Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge. Parts I. and II. of this serial are before us (price sixpence each). We confess we are not fond of the idea that seems to have prompted the publication of the work. The expository notes on the whole are good, though there are not a few of them that teach Sacramentarianism pure and simple. It is rather amusing to find that in illustrating the story of the Good Samaritan, the "beast" is represented by an ass in one case, and on the next page by a horse!

The Present Truth. By C. H. Spurgeon. 3s. 6d. Passmore & Alabaster. This is a volume of sermons, selected from those preached by Mr. Spurgeon at the Metropolitan Tabernacle on Sunday and Thursday evenings. It is the third of a series that are being issued by the publishers at intervals. Thank God for such mighty discourses! Even the quiet perusal of them thrills the soul and sets the spiritual pulse a-beating with holy impulse and desire; what the results of hearing them spoken have been, we suppose will never be known till "the day shall declare it." They are mainly evangelistic. Each discourse has the genuine Gospel ring that proves it to have been coined in the mint of heaven. No better gift-book could be suggested for an unconverted or backsliding friend. We hope to find space for some extracts in an early issue.

Church Praise, with Tunes. Nisbet & Co. This volume was authorised for use in the congregations of the Presbyterian Church of England by the Synod of 1882, and has been published under the auspices of a committee consisting of a number of eminent men in that Church, among whom Dr. Oswald Dykes is specially mentioned as having rendered, together with the Rev. James Bonar, of Greenock, valuable literary assistance. A more complete manual of church praise can scarcely be desired, whether we have regard to the number and variety of the tunes, or the general character of the hymns selected. The greatest care appears to have been taken to fix tunes suited to the words connected with them, while alternative tunes are given in many cases, so that rigid monotony may be avoided. The fact that the compilers have had the advantage of critical aid in their work from so famous and skilful a musician as Dr. Edward Hopkins, ensures scientific accuracy and precision to their production. Some tunes have been entirely re-harmonised by him, and others composed specially for this book. The placing of expression marks to the hymns is an admirable feature of the work, and if attended to these cannot fail to secure an effective rendering of the words by the choir, and also by the congregation generally. The indices are copious, clear, and well arranged, while the typography is in every way excellent. After carefully looking through the volume, and testing it in various ways, we express our conviction that it is a really valuable contribution to the important department of Christian service which it aims to promote. Our Presbyterian friends in all parts are waking up to see the need of greater attention to the praise portion of their worship, and we congratulate them on so successful an effort as has thus been made on its behalf, and predict for this elegant manual of sacred songs a career of extensive usefulness and prosperity.

We have also received the following:—

Books.—From Jas. Spiers: Things New and Old, by Jas. Spilling; The Spiritual World, and our Children there, by Rev. C. Giles.

From Hodder & Stoughton: Life: Is it Worth Living? by Dr. Marshall Lang.

From National Temperance Depot: The National Temperance Reader.

Pamphlets.—Conditional Immortality, by Rev. R. B. Girdlestone; The New Godiva, by E. R. Chapman, published by Isbister & Co.; Irish Congregational Magazine, from W. W. Cleland, Belfast; Godliness through the Truth, by W. Morris, M.D., Elliot Stock; Old Friends and New Faces, by G. Wilson McCree, published at 337, Strand.

Magazines.—Irish Church Missions, Young England, Biblical Treasury.

Reports.—Pure Literature Society, Irish Evangelical Society, Smyrna Rest.

THE LAND AND THE PEOPLE.—A lady in Sacramento, California, thus writes to Mr. W. Greene: "I have been much interested in reading of your visit to Jerusalem, in The Christian; also about your plan of buying land to help Jesus' brethren after the flesh. What blessings we Gentiles have every day through that people! The precious Bible, with all its attendant blessings, comes to us through them. Oh for grace to help them now in their great need, and thus to hasten on the day of deliverance, when Jesus will come and deliver a groaning creation. You mention your purpose to print something in detail and send to friends; please send to me. I want to help to pay for that land. I am not rich, but the widow's mite is so acceptable to God. Things are ripening fast, and Jesus is coming. 'Come quickly,' is the response of my longing heart."

TEMPERANCE IN KANSAS.—At a great Temperance gathering recently held at Ocean Grove, U.S., Ex-Governor John P. St. John, of Kansas, is said to have held his immense audience for over an hour in discussing the civilisation of the age and the curse of the liquor traffic. Referring to Kansas, he said that in sixty-five counties out of eighty in the State the prohibitory law is enforced as well as any other criminal law on the statute-book. Half the dram-shops of the State have been closed; one thousand out of the two thousand existing one year ago have ceased to exist. Every distillery has been closed, and more than half the breweries, and the other half are being prosecuted. One brewery has been converted into a conservatory, and now the odour of the flowers takes the place of the odour from the brewery. The State has increased in taxable wealth over 30,000,000 dollars under prohibition, school-houses and churches are being established all over the State, and every material industry is being advanced. More than all that, we have restored peace, prosperity, and happiness to thousands of homes. The temperance sentiment is stronger to day than at any former period of our history.

MRS. HAMPSON IN MELBOURNE.—In its issue of June 30 The Southern Cross thus speaks of the Mission services of this evangelist, which had been concluded in Melbourne: "Mrs. Hampson's Mission has been one of the most remarkable series of evangelistic services yet seen in Victoria. She landed in Victoria a few weeks ago almost absolutely unknown, or known only by vague reports from New Zealand. Already her name is a household word all over the Colony. No other speaker that has yet visited Melbourne has, perhaps, ever drawn such audiences, or held them so absolutely when drawn. When has ever been witnessed the spectacle of crowds waiting at the doors of the vast Town Hall to find entrance on a wet winter evening two hours and a half before the time appointed for a religious service? The mere overflow of the central meeting has more than once flooded several of the halls near. At the last service, the adults present were besought repeatedly to leave the building, and give the children, for whom the service was held, a chance of entering; and the sight of the vast audience of children was one of the most touching and striking spectacles ever witnessed in Melbourne. On one evening the Town Hall, after the main audience had departed, was almost entirely filled again by persons who presented themselves as seekers."

HOSPITAL WORK IN MELBOURNE.

A VERY excellent report of hospital visitation in Melbourne by the Presbyterian chaplain appears in a late number of The Southern Cross. After quoting some cases of special interest, he says:—

"I have often been struck, as I think everyone who has had much experience in hospital visitation must have been, with the immense advantage of early religious instruction. Even after a long life of godlessness or carelessness, a text of Scripture, or a simple earnest appeal, will sometimes recall the scenes and impressions of childhood or youth most vividly to the mind. 'Ah, that reminds me of long, long ago,' said an old Scotchman to me one day, as he burst into tears, after listening to some words of warning and counsel, 'but I have been living in the service of the devil for forty years.' He told me that he had never once, during all that period, been inside the walls of a church.

"The people whose religious interests we seek to promote represent many phases of human life. Not a few have seen better days, and have experienced great reverses. Many have fallen from positions of competency, and some even of affluence. A man died in the Benevolent Asylum the other week whose face was well known in the streets of Melbourne a few years ago, driving his carriage and pair. A patient at present in the Melbourne Hospital assured me that he could have drawn £40,000 out of his business some years since, and still have left capital enough to carry on. And it is no unusual thing to meet with professional men in the Immigrants' Home. From these causes, and from a variety of other circumstances, many are to be met with in a state of mind favourably disposed to listen to the hopes and promises of the Gospel, and I have good reason to believe that the efforts of the association have been largely blessed to many who, from their own experience, have been able to attest the truth of Solomon's verdict, 'All is vanity and vexation of spirit.'

"A number of young ladies visit the hospital wards of the Immigrants' Home in the daytime as a flower mission, and their services are much appreciated. These visits not only break the monotony of the unfortunate and afflicted inmates, but the kind words and gentle messages, as well as the sweet 'Songs of Zion' which are sung, spread cheerfulness around."

EXPLANATION.—The clergyman who recently made a statement in our columns about Rev. She Jee Hu wishes to say that that gentleman has paid part of the money owing at Nottingham, and states that he will discharge the remainder of his debts. Our informant is also glad to find that Mr. She Jee Hu's letters from the Bishops are genuine.

SOUTHAMPTON CONFERENCE.—The meetings for conference organised at the Deanery for several years past by Canon Wilberforce, commenced on Thursday last, and continued till to-day. Our expected report of last week's proceedings had not reached us up to the time of going to press, but we hope to give a detailed account in our next issue. Morning, afternoon, and evening meetings have been held, at which Canon Wilberforce, Lord Radstock, Revs. H. Pelham Stokes, J. Lewis, Mr. C. R. Hurditch, and others, have taken part. There have been large attendances, and inquiry meetings have been held after the evening service, at which many were present.

EMIGRANTS AT PLYMOUTH.—Will you kindly permit me to ask your readers for tracts to distribute among passengers, emigrants, and seamen? I find, in looking through my journal, that since April there have left some sixty sailing and steamships from Plymouth, each taking on an average some 300 emigrants and paid passengers to New Zealand, Australia, and Africa. Having been in this work at Plymouth for the last fourteen years, I can say that the demand far exceeds our local supply. It is a most interesting work, and the emigrants most gladly receive the tracts. Any back numbers of THE CHRISTIAN will be gladly received. J. P. NOBBIE, Seamen's Missionary.
Plymouth.

DEAF AND DUMB.—The International Congress for improving the lot of the deaf and dumb was opened at Brussels last week, under the presidency of Canon de Haerne, member of the Belgian Chamber. It is attended by delegates from several countries, including England. An interesting exhibition of objects, exclusively the work of th deaf and dumb, will be opened in connection with the Congress at the Palais des Beaux Arts.

PORTSMOUTH SEAMEN'S MISSION.—Will the readers of THE CHRISTIAN again kindly send small book bags—seven by eight inches; also Gospel books, British Workman, and tracts for the troops and sailors sailing next month for India and elsewhere. I may add that very shortly the comforters and cuffs will be greatly valued by the fishermen and merchant seamen. These little presents made by lady friends are of great use to me in getting at the men. H. COOK.
Bellevue-place, Stoke-road, Gosport.

CLIFTON CONFERENCE.—Mr. Ormiston has issued the usual invitation to the twenty-first annual Christian Conference at Victoria Rooms, Clifton, on October 2 and 3. The subjects to be considered at the morning and evening meetings are, "The sonship of Christ, and the sonship of the saints, viewed in relation to the purposes of the Father." The afternoon intervals will be devoted to Bible reading, home and foreign missionary addresses. Hospitality will be provided for those who signify their intention to be present by September 22, either to Miss Woolcombe, 10, Yorkplace, Clifton, or to Rev. James Ormiston, 14, Arlington-villas, Clifton, Bristol.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS IN FRANCE.—A comparison between the operations of the English and French Societies for the Protection of Animals has recently been made by a French writer, which does not redound to the credit of the latter. In a tone half humorous, half complaining, this critic says: "There exists in France a Society for the Protection of Animals. It is, no doubt, animated by the best intentions; unfortunately for the animals it ought to protect, it does not go farther. In spite of the Society, horses are maltreated as much as before. Vivisection is practised more than ever, and our population rejoices still in the disgusting spectacle of bull-fights." After contrasting this with the excellent results achieved by the English Society for the Protection of Animals, M. Besnard concludes by urging the French Government to take in hand and make more useful a society which until now has no merit at all except in its title and aspirations.

UNION HALL MISSION.—DEAR SIR,—During the past three months we have been much cheered in our work for the Lord in the tents. At Kensalgreen a really good work has been done. On Bank Holiday it was a grand sight to witness so many Christians giving themselves to labour for Christ amidst the thousands of holiday pleasure-seekers. Services were held afternoon and evening, and all realised the Lord's near presence. I regret to say that last week through the high winds which prevailed this tent came down, much damaged. Two of the halls have also been damaged by the storm, and need repairs. The Lord is giving cheering seasons in the tent at Fulham, where our brother, Mr. Lane, is still preaching nightly, large numbers attending. Mr. J. E. Hawkins is holding services in one of the tents at Pinner; we trust with favourable evidences of blessing from God.—Yours in the Lord's service, ROBERT BILKE.

"The Voices of the Children."

Dear Readers of "The Christian,"

Heavy expenses incurred (£3,000) in emigrating during the year over 300 Poor Boys and Girls have quite exhausted our Treasury, so that our Bank account is even now overdrawn.

Meanwhile, Twelve Hundred Little Ones needing FOOD, SHELTER, AND CLOTHING, must remain in the "Homes" during the Holidays.

The next 9 or 10 weeks will therefore be a period of great burden-bearing and much anxiety to those on whom the direct responsibilities lie. But

Are there not many of the Lord's Stewards who will regard this sober statement of facts as a call to Service?

Surely the enjoyments of life are enhanced to those who remember the necessities of the children of our streets.

Any gifts, however small, will be gratefully acknowledged by our Treasurer, Wm. Fowler, Esq., M.P., or by

Yours very faithfully, in Christ's Service,

Among His Little Ones,

T. J. BARNARDO.

CHURCH PAROCHIAL MISSION SOCIETY,

Office—21, John Street, Adelphi, London, W.C.

TENT SERVICES.

The above Society is now prepared to enter into arrangements with the Parochial Clergy for conducting Tent Missions in country and seaside places during the summer months, and will pay the necessary expenses incurred.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND SCRIPTURE READERS' ASSOCIATION.

Offices—56, HAYMARKET, S.W.

Patron—THE ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.
Vice President—THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, K.G.
Treasurer—Sir WALTER R. FARQUHAR, Bart.

This Society is employing 120 earnest men as Scripture Readers, labouring amongst the Poor of London and the suburbs, by carrying from house to house the Word of God. Funds are very urgently needed to maintain and extend this most necessary religious and social work amongst the masses.

T. MARTIN TILBY, Lay Secretary.

The Things that God Uses.

AN ADDRESS TO CHRISTIANS.

By D. L. MOODY.

'People say they have no strength; but the trouble is that they have too much. It is when we become as nothing, and are emptied of our own strength, that God can take us up and make use of us. He will do the work, and He shall have the glory."—Extract.

WHO MAY BE personally or relatively
INTERESTED IN THIS MATTER.

Mr. Congreve will give ONE RECENT CASE, NOT PUBLISHED BEFORE, in this journal EVERY WEEK.

CASE FOR THIS WEEK
CASE of a YOUNG WOMAN at STALYBRIDGE.

The case of this patient was brought under my notice by Rev. Charles Rushby, minister of the Wakefield-road Church, as one of Consumption, deserving all the sympathy and help that I could give. I sent her medicine at reduced charges, and advised her fully.

On the 1st of June Mr. Rushby writes: "I have great pleasure in informing you that what change of air and the doctor failed to accomplish, your medicine has been successful in doing—that is, effecting a cure of the young woman, member of my Church.—43, Durham-terrace, Stalybridge."

After this he wrote me on behalf of a poor widow, and several in the neighbourhood were benefitted under his personal knowledge.

Note.—Mr. Congreve's Son-in-law, J. ALEX. BROWN, M.R.C.S., L.S.A., is now associated with him.

Days of Consultation.—TUESDAY, THURSDAY, and SATURDAY Mornings ONLY, at Coombe Lodge, Peckham. Patients from any long distance should choose either of the two former days.

J. THEOBALD & COMPANY'S SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENTS.
POSITIVELY THE LAST MONTH OF OFFERING AT THESE EXTREMELY LOW PRICES.

THE COMBINATION TELESCOPES.
R. A. PROCTOR, Esq., the Eminent Astronomer,

Writing in Knowledge for July 6, 1883, says of our No. 3 Combination Telescope: "We have received from Mr. Theobald one of his singularly cheap telescopes, which we have had excellent opportunities of testing during the last few weeks at the sea-side. It is an excellent instrument—a perfect marvel for the price. It comes sharply and cleanly into focus, has a uniform field, and gives clear and good definition. We have not yet tried it on many double stars, not having a suitable stand. But it has done well with those we have tried. This little telescope will be found to give very pleasing miniatures of the lunar views described by F.R.A.S. We hope soon to test the work of this capital little telescope on Jupiter and Saturn, and will report the results in due course."

OVER 5,000 SOLD IN FOUR MONTHS.

The instrument, without the additional parts, has six best lenses, of such remarkable definition that it will distinguish hills at 25 miles, flags at 20, windows at 10, and time by a church clock at 4 to 5 miles distance. In addition to this, there is a separate powerful astronomical eye-piece which can be attached, and enables the owner to examine the stars. Jupiter with his four moons, and, by adding the sun-glass, also supplied, the spots in the sun. In clear weather the astronomical eye-piece can be used instead of the day one for ordinary purposes, thus giving much greater power, as, while the day eye-piece magnifies 146 times superficial, the astronomical one magnifies 324. The Telescope is made with three brass drawers and black morocco body, shuts up from 17 to 6 inches, and is enclosed with the extra parts in two neat cases, and will be sent, carriage free, for 12s. 6d. No. 2 size, opening to 24 inches, closing to 8½, object-glass 16 lines, giving much more extended view, far clearer and longer definition, and less trying to the eyes, astronomical eye-piece also half as large again, and much greater power, 22s. 6d., carriage free. Or No. 3 size, having 19-line object-glass, closing to 10, opening to 27 inches, an intensely powerful glass, specially recommended, with very powerful astronomical eye-piece, 29s., carriage free. Owing to continual inquiries for a still larger glass, we have just got ready a No. 4 size, with 22-line object-glass, which naturally gives a much wider field, and is also of still greater power, and for astronomical purposes especially much more effective. This instrument is no longer when closed than the No. 3, being made with four drawers, and when fully opened is 30 inches long, and with astronomical eye-piece also of extra power in proportion. Price, carriage free, £2 2s. Carriage to India, 2s. extra on No. 1; 3s. on other sizes. To all other parts 5s. extra on any size, except Canada and America, which is 8s.

Black Table Stands, with double motion, 4s. 6d.; superior, in maple wood, 6s. 6d.; Garden Stands, 17s.

All orders must be sent within 28 days, except from abroad, and be accompanied by Coupon.

THE ACME FIELD GLASS.

There are no glasses so highly recommended for power and cheapness as those sold by us. Why is this? Simply because we lay ourselves out specially for this line of business: we determine that we will get glasses of a quality so high and a price so low as to defy competition. The consequence is, we sell thousands where an ordinary optician would sell 10 or 20. Any person calling at our establishment can have over 3,000 glasses to select from, while to keep a stock like this would ruin half a dozen ordinary shopkeepers. Travellers, tourists, and sailors alike speak loud in their praise. They are taken out by enterprising ship captains, and sold for double and treble our prices to passengers on board and travellers across the water.

THE MINIATURE ACME, No. 2.

Specially made in answer to many inquiries. The same size as the 15s. 6d. glass, but with twelve lenses. Gives a much larger view and far greater magnifying power than the 29s. size. An intensely powerful and clear glass. Price 37s., carriage free. Carriage to India on any of these glasses 2s. extra, all other foreign places, 5s. Only an immense sale for these Glasses will pay us at these prices.

All orders to be sent within 28 days, except from abroad, and to be accompanied by coupon.

THE POPULAR EDITION OF

CRUDEN'S COMPLETE CONCORDANCE

To the OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS.

Strongly Bound in Cloth Boards, PRICE FIVE SHILLINGS

Presentation Edition, handsomely bound in Cloth, price 7s. 6d.

THE POPULAR EDITION

Of CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE (Published by MORGAN & SCOTT) contains a carefully revised and much extended List of the PROPER NAMES of the OLD and NEW TESTAMENTS with their Meanings in the Original Languages, by Rev. ALFRED JONES, M.A., Author of "The Proper Names of the Old Testament Scriptures Expounded and Illustrated."

Mr. D. L. MOODY, after having recommended the purchase of a good Bible, says, "Next I would advise you to get CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE and a Scripture Text Book. These books will help you to study the Word of God with profit. If you have not got them, get them to-morrow, for every Christian ought to have them."

"TELL JESUS." Recollections of EMILY GOSSE.

By ANNA SHIPTON.

Cloth neat, 1s. 6d.; cloth, Gilt Edges, 2s. (post free).

"Presents us with notices of a life spent in loving, intimate, and uninterrupted communion with a personal Lord. . . . We have read the book with deep interest. We would that indolent professors might read it and be quickened, and that suffering saints might read it and be comforted."—Christian Times.

"In this delightful narrative of Christian experience we have an example of working for Jesus and being happy, of suffering bodily affliction and being happy, and of dying and being happy."—Wesleyan Times.

"Will be read with interest by all who care to know more of a character of the rarest and most beautiful Christian type."—Christian Work.

"The sentiment of this book is illustrated in a pleasing narrative, in which its influence upon the experience of an eminently pious friend of the author's, and of her own, is admirably pourtrayed. It is calculated to produce a certain impression upon the hearts of true Christians that will be greatly beneficial to them."—Sword and Trowel.

THE NUMBER "SEVEN" IN SCRIPTURE.

Compiled by S. A. BLACKWOOD, Esq., C.B.,

Paper Covers, 1s.; Cloth Limp, 1s. 6d.; Presentation Edition, Cloth Boards, Bevelled, Gilt Edges, 2s. 6d.

"I do not presume to offer an opinion as to the purpose with which the number seven has been so prominently interwoven with the Scriptures. That there is some purpose, however, I can hardly doubt; for the use of the number is far more than merely mechanical or artificial. It runs through the whole of the Bible, commencing with the institution of the seventh day—or Sabbath—in Eden, and concluding with the various series of 'sevens' in the Apocalypse."

SCRIPTURE READERS' SOCIETY FOR IRELAND.
Supported by Voluntary Contributions.
President—
The Right Hon. the EARL of SHAFTESBURY, K.G.

Established 1822, for the purpose of employing humble Christian men, well versed in the Scriptures, to visit from house to house throughout the country, and visit all denominations. Irish speaking Readers are sent to Irish-speaking districts when required. The work is carried on in a spirit of love.

Subscriptions or Donations will be thankfully received by the Secretary, Capt. KEARNEY WHITE, 27, Lower Fembroke-street, Dublin; or at 6, Paternoster-row, London.

The Earl of Shaftesbury says in his last letter to the Secretary:—Many thanks for your kind letter, and many thanks to Almighty God for the good intelligence you give me about your Scripture Readers in Ireland. I wish I could more effectively assist you. Your letter is the best thing that I have seen or heard from Ireland.

I enclose my donation, and only wish it was more.—Yours, SHAFTESBURY

MENTAL AND PHYSICAL MALADIES:

THEIR CAUSE AND CURE.

What are termed General Debility and Nervousness, are among the most real and serious ills to which man is subject. They induce a morbid state of the mind; while the sufferings of the patient arise not so much from the absolute amount of pain—for this is very trifling—as from the extreme sensitiveness of the mind to all uneasy feelings. There is a morbid dread of disease—a tendency to watch the shifting symptoms, and perhaps an unusual acuteness in the senses; hence the amount of suffering experienced is almost incredible. The distressing anticipation of serious results, which is of itself sufficient to produce the dreaded effect; the inability to exercise the mental or physical powers, although the absolute necessity for it is recognised as much by the patient as the physician; the conscious loss of power, both mental and physical, with its accompanying melancholy view, and sometimes intense disgust of life and its surroundings, are all forms of this ailment, well known to the medical profession, and with which, in many cases, they find themselves utterly powerless to cope. The picture is not overdrawn; although these may appear, at first sight, startling, or even exaggerated statements, if careful inquiry is instituted, the whole will be found too true.

Mr. W. WOOD, Halstow, Sittingbourne, Kent, writes, August 9, 1883:—

"Having read an article upon the cause and cure of mental and physical maladies, I was led to apply to you respecting my wife, who had been suffering for many years from hysteria, the attacks being so violent as to cause serious apprehension of her dying during the paroxysms. Almost choked, she would swoon into a state of semi-unconsciousness, on recovering from which she would be convulsed and cramped in the whole of her limbs in a manner painful to witness. Since adopting your treatment the hysteria has left her, and she is now in a better state of health, rendering life altogether enjoyable.

"I have also great pleasure in stating that I have found great benefit myself under the treatment, having been for several years wanting nerve power, which frequently deprived me of the power to walk.

"Now after an experience of 14 weeks I am thankful to be able to testify to the marvellous effect produced in so short a time; my health re-established, can follow my occupation as formerly, all former energy has returned, and although in my 70th year, I can go through the day without fatigue, and can, therefore, with confidence recommend the adoption of the same treatment to any person suffering from nervous debility, and in fact several persons have adopted it through my recommendation."

Mr. Garratt will always be happy to confer with any scientific or medical gentleman, either personally or by letter, upon any phase of the subject, or any case for treatment, and will send a private list of 850 names as referees to any address.—B. ORDIAL CHRISTIAN EVOLUTIONIST.

HE Rev. Henry Ward Beecher has lately declared his present theological tion in the following words:—

I am a cordial Christian evolutionist. I do agree, by any means, with all of Spencer—his osticism—nor all of Huxley, Tyndall, and their ol. They are agnostic. I am not, emphatic-

But I am an evolutionist, and that strikes he root of all mediæval and orthodox modern logy—the fall of man in Adam and the ritance by his posterity of his guilt, and, by equence, any such view of atonement as has constructed to meet this fabulous disaster. have not fallen as a race—men have come up. great disaster met the race at the start."

tatements more diametrically opposed to positive and oft-repeated assertions of Word of God than are contained in these ences could scarcely be made, and it is se for thankfulness in one sense that so k an avowal of his real sentiments should e been given by the great American cher. There are many who admire his ius, and who have been ready to regard want of orthodoxy as more verbal than , and as owing to eccentricities of style expression rather than to lack of pathy with the inspired truths of the pel. Such may now see whither Mr. cher would lead his followers.

o deny the fall of man in Adam is to away with the very basis of redemptive h. If he has not fallen, then of course he ls no Redeemer; salvation by grace all its reflection of the glory of God in face of Jesus Christ, is a myth, and the pel which reveals it a cunningly-devised e. But what, then, becomes of the riences of those countless multitudes in y age who have gone to the Saviour in he bitterness of a broken and contrite t, and found relief only by trusting in , and being cleansed through his blood? re all the hosts of the redeemed been mis- n, and is their song before the Throne, as sing with sweet accord, "Worthy is the b that was slain," a mere sentiment? t the Church of to-day resign its faith in st and Him crucified because of a newly- overed doctrine of evolution? Surely

Spite of cordial Christian evolutionist ries, and all other human speculations vain philosophisings, "the foundation of standeth sure;" the doctrine that their ors and defenders count foolishness, re- ns "the power of God and the wisdom of ." But there is reason for concern when e who, by force of ecclesiastical position intellectual ability, command great influ- over others, thus ignore the faith, and to overturn the teachings of the inspired d. Many are content to take their fs from others, instead of searching out truth for themselves. Great thinkers great names have more weight with e people than even Apostolic epistles or pel records. It is sad that it should be with any who profess to believe in a Divine revelation, and in the right of private judgment concerning its contents; but so it is, and such men as Mr. Beecher and others who with him do not hesitate to remove the old waymarks of the Christian faith, are sure to draw after them many who put confidence in human teachers as leaders of their thought and guides to theological belief. This, of course, can only be prevented by inducing men to think for themselves, and to search the Scriptures for themselves, after the example of the Bereans, who compared the teaching they received with Holy Writ, determined to be guided by the result as to whether it should be accepted or not. And surely such assertions as those quoted above demand serious and earnest examination by any who are in danger of being led to regard them with favour or endorsement. It is, indeed, perilous ground to go upon: quicksands such as wreck and sink the hapless bark which strikes upon them are there, whirlpools and rapids are near in which the boldest adventurer may, and most probably will, be carried away.

The famous Brooklyn orator proceeds in his letter, from which we quote, to declare his conviction that "the advance of science will inevitably sweep away such rubbish from the belief of men," the rubbish being the doctrines of the Fall and the orthodox theory of atonement by blood, and their correlatives. And what does he promise or anticipate in their stead? "A higher spirituality—a belief that shall have its roots in science, and its top in the sunlight of faith and love." But, we would ask, can there be a higher spirituality than that which is developed out of the faith of Christ, inwrought and quickened by the Spirit of God? Is science better fitted to bring forth spirituality than the grace of God? Is rooting our belief in science a surer way to Christian fruitfulness and holiness of life than rooting and grounding it in the Son of God? "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is"—not science, not evolution, but "Jesus Christ."

Mr. Beecher dignifies his evolution theory with the name of Christian, although a greater misnomer could not be applied to it; assuredly it has no place in Christ's system of truth, but is subversive of Christianity as taught in the New Testament, striking at the root, as he himself tells us, of all orthodox theology, and of any theory of atonement adapted to meet the case of men as fallen and sinful. Be it remembered that this evolution which is to displace the Gospel is a mere speculation of men, having no defined basis of proof, disowned by men of science as widely as it is received (and perhaps more so). It is passing strange that while in the scientific world the theory is being viewed with disfavour by many men of highest eminence, and its acceptance regarded by them as hazardous and premature, there should be found in the Christian Church those who endorse and deify it as superior to the Gospel itself, and others who eagerly seek for a place in their creed where it may be safely set side by side with Christian faith.

We know that to write thus is looked upon by such believers as narrow and lacking in charity; but, warned by the signs of the times, and moved with concern and alarm for unstable and unwary souls, lest they be beguiled and led away from the path of truth, we can but declare war with such soul-destroying error as Mr. Beecher's latest testimony avows, and point out the unsoundness, because unscripturalness, of his position. "To the law and to the testimony; if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them."

THE ADVANCE OF RITUALISM.

IT is a sad sign of retrogression from Reformation principles to find that Ritualism advances in our Protestant country with such rapid strides as the following statistics from The Church Advocate indicate:—

"In the year 1869 there were 41 churches in London where there was "Choral Communion;" now there are 172. In the same year there were 186 churches where there were "Saints Days' Services;" now there are 482. In the same year there were only 14 churches where the officiating clergy were arrayed in 'Eucharistic Vestments;' now there are 37. In the same year 'the surplice in the pulpit' was not seen in any church in London; now the 'priestly robe' is worn by the clergyman preaching in no less than 686 churches. In the same year ('69) there were 8 churches made fragrant with the perfumery of incense; in 1867 there were 18 such churches, and now there are 60. Up to the year 1873 'floral decorations' were unknown; now 358 churches are adorned with flowers. In 1873 'altar lights' were unknown; now there are 64 churches where such are to be seen. In 1874 the 'Eastward Position' was first adopted in 74 churches; now in 304 churches. In the year 1876 there were 37 churches where there were 'candles on the altar;' now there are 51."

Those who are much acquainted with our provincial towns and country districts know that similar facts are commonly witnessed in them, so that London cannot be cited as exceptional in its Romish proclivities. The need for reformers possessed of Luther's spirit is great, even in these days of light and learning. Let us hope, pray, and labour that the effort to employ the coming autumn and winter months in connection with the Luther commemoration may tell powerfully on the people in favour of thoroughgoing Protestantism as opposed to semi-popery and Anglican priestcraft.

Sunday-school teachers, and, indeed, all who can influence the young, should take up this matter. Evangelical truth will not suffer through extra and special attention being just now given by Christian workers to the inculcation of sound, scriptural, and therefore Protestant principles. What is wanted is to show that evangelical truth is at utter variance with Ritualism and sacerdotal assumption. The claim set up by some prominent Ritualists to be in sympathy with the Gospel of Christ in its true and apostolic teaching and spirit, is false in its nature. "Christ all and in all" as a creed, is as far from Ritualistic doctrine and practice as east from west.

DEGENERATION.*—2.

By Mr. HENRY DRUMMOND.

"How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation?"—Heb. ii. 3. †

(Concluded from our last.)

TURN now to another aspect of the case—to the effect upon the soul itself. Neglect does more for the soul than make it miss salvation. It despoils it of its capacity for salvation. Degeneration in the spiritual sphere involves primarily the impairing of the aculties of salvation and ultimately the loss of them. It really means that the very soul itself is destroyed piecemeal, until the very capacity for God and righteousness is gone.

The soul, in its highest sense, is a vast capacity for God. It is like a curious chamber added on to being, and somehow involving being, a chamber with elastic and contractile walls, which can be expanded, with God as its guest, illimitably, but which without God shrinks and shrivels until every vestige of the Divine is gone, and God's image is left without God's Spirit. One cannot call what is left a soul; it is a shrunken, useless organ, a capacity sentenced to death by disuse, which droops as a withered hand by the side, and cumbers nature like a rotted branch. Nature has her revenge upon neglect as well as upon extravagance. Misuse, with her, is as mortal a sin as abuse.

There are certain burrowing animals—the mole, for instance—which have taken to spending their lives beneath the surface of the ground. And Nature has taken her revenge upon them in a thoroughly natural way—she has closed up their eyes. If they mean to live in darkness, she argues, eyes are obviously a superfluous function. By neglecting them these animals make it clear they do not want them. And as one of Nature's fixed principles is that nothing shall exist in vain, the eyes are presently taken away, or reduced to a rudimentary state. There are fishes also which have had to pay the same terrible forfeit for having made their abode in dark caverns where eyes can never be required. And in exactly the same way the spiritual eye must die and lose its power by purely natural law if the soul choose to walk in darkness rather than in light.

This is the meaning of the favourite paradox of Christ, "From him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath;" "take, therefore, the talent from him." The religious faculty is a talent, the most splendid and sacred talent we possess. Yet it is subject to the natural conditions and laws. If any man take his talent and hide it in a napkin, although it is doing him neither harm nor good apparently, God will not allow him to have it. Although it is lying there rolled up in the darkness, not conspicuously affecting anyone, still God will not allow him to keep it. He will not allow him to keep it any more than Nature would allow the fish to keep their eyes. Therefore He says, "Take the talent from him;" and Nature does it.

This man's crime was simply neglect—"Thou wicked and slothful servant." It was a wasted life—a life which failed in the holy stewardship of itself. Such a life is a peril to all who cross its path. Degeneration compasses Degeneration. It is only a character which is itself developing that can aid the evolution of the world, and so fulfil the end of life. For this high usury each of our lives, however small may seem our capital, was given us by God. And it is just the men whose capital seems small who need to choose the best investments. It is significant that it was the man who had only one talent who was guilty of neglecting it. Men with ten talents, men of large gifts and burning energies, either direct their powers nobly and usefully, or misdirect them irretrievably. It is those who belong to the rank and file who need this warning most. Others have an abundant store, and sow to the spirit or the flesh with a lavish hand. But we, with our small gift, what boots our sowing? Our temptation as ordinary men is to neglect to sow at all. The interest on our talent would be so small that we excuse ourselves with the reflection that it is not worth while.

It is no objection to all this to say that we are unconscious of this neglect or misdirection of our powers. That is the darkest feature in the case. If there were uneasiness there might be hope. If there were, somewhere about our soul, a something which was not gone to sleep like all the rest; if there were a contending force anywhere; if we would let even that work instead of neglecting it, it would gain strength from hour to hour, and waken up one at a time each torpid and dishonoured faculty, till our whole nature became alive with strivings against self, and every avenue was open wide for God. But the apathy, the numbness of the soul, what can be said of such a symptom but that it means the creeping on of death? There are accidents in which the victims feel no pain. They are well and strong, they think. But they are dying. And if you ask the surgeon by their side what makes him give this verdict, he will say it is this numbness over the frame which tells how some of the parts have lost already the very capacity for life.

Nor is it the least tragic accompaniment of this process that its effects may even be concealed from others. The soul undergoing Degeneration, surely by some arrangement with Temptation planned in the uttermost hell, possesses the power of absolute secrecy. When all within is festering decay and rottenness, a Judas, without anomaly, may kiss his Lord. This invisible consumption, like its fell analogue in the natural world, may even keep its victim beautiful while slowly slaying it. When one examines the little Crustacea which have inhabited for centuries the Lakes of the Mammoth Cave of Kentucky, one is at first astonished to find these animals apparently endowed with perfect eyes. The pallor of the head is broken by two black pigment specks, conspicuous indeed as the only bits of colour on the whole blanched body; and these, even to the casual observer, certainly represent well-defined organs of vision. But what do they with eyes in these Stygian waters? There reigns an everlasting night. Is the law for once at fault? A swift incision with the scalpel, a glance with a lens, and their secret is betrayed. The eyes are a mockery. Externally they are organs of vision—the front of the eye is perfect; behind, there is nothing but a mass of ruins. The optic nerve is a shrunken, atrophied, and insensate thread. These animals have organs of vision, and yet they have no vision. They have eyes, but they see not.

Exactly what Christ said of men: they had eyes, but no vision. And the reason is the same. It is the simplest problem of natural history. The Crustacea of the Mammoth Cave have chosen to abide in darkness. Therefore they have become fitted for it. By refusing to see they have waived the right to see. And Nature has grimly humoured them. Nature had to do it by her very constitution. It is her defence against waste that decay of faculty should immediately follow disuse of function. He that hath ears to hear, he whose ears have not degenerated,* let him hear.

Men tell us sometimes there is no such thing as an atheist. There must be. There are some men to whom it is true that there is no God. They cannot see God because they have no eye. They have only an abortive organ, atrophied by neglect.

All this, it is commonplace again to insist, is not the effect of neglect when we die, but while we live. The process is in full career and operation now. It is useless projecting consequences into the future when the effect may be measured now. We are always practising these little deceptions upon ourselves, postponing the consequences of our misdeeds as if they were to culminate some other day about the time of death. It makes us sin with a lighter hand to run an account with retribution, as it were, and delay the reckoning time with God. But every day is a reckoning day. Every soul is a Book of Judgment, and Nature, as a recording angel, marks there every sin. As all will be judged by the great Judge some day, all are judged by Nature now. The sin of yesterday, a part of its penalty, has the sin of to-day. All follow us in silent retribution on our past and go with us to the grave. We cannot cheat Nature. No sleight-of-heart can rob religion of a present, the immortal nature of a now. The poet sings—

> "I looked behind to find my past,
> And lo, it had gone before."

But no, not all. The unforgiven sins are not away in keeping somewhere to be let loose upon us when we die; they are here within us, now. To-day brings the resurrection of their past, to-morrow of to-day. And the powers of sin, to the exact strength that we have developed them, nearing their dreadful culmination with every breath we draw, are here, within us, now. The souls of some men are already honeycombed through and through with the eternal consequences of neglect, so that taking the natural and rational view of their case just now, it is simply inconceivable that there is any escape just now. What a fearful thing it is to fall into the hands of the living God! A fearful thing even if, as the philosopher tells us, "the hands of the Living God are the Laws of Nature."

Whatever hopes of a "heaven" a neglected soul may have, can be shown to be an ignorant and delusive dream. How is the soul to escape to heaven if it has neglected for a lifetime the means of escape from the world and self? And where is the capacity for heaven to come from if it be not developed on earth? Where, indeed, is even the smallest spiritual appreciation of God and heaven to come from when so little of spirituality has ever been known or manifested here? If every Godward aspiration of the soul has been allowed to become extinct, and every inlet that was open to heaven to be choked, and every talent for religious love and trust to have been persistently neglected and ignored, where are the faculties to come from that would even find the faintest relish in such things as God and heaven give?

* From Natural Law in the Spiritual World. Third Edition. 7s. 6d. Hodder & Stoughton.

† It occurs to us to remark that it is not neglect of ourselves or of our powers that the Holy Spirit speaks of through his Apostle, but the neglect of "so great salvation."

* Rather, he who, having been born again, has a spiritual sense of hearing which by nature he did not possess.—Ed.

These three words, Salvation, Escape, and Neglect, then, are not casually, but organically and necessarily connected. Their doctrine is scientific, not arbitrary. Escape means nothing more than the gradual emergence of the higher being from the lower: and nothing less. It means the gradual putting off of all that cannot enter the higher state, or heaven, and simultaneously the putting on of Christ. It involves the slow completing of the soul, and the development of the capacity for God.

Should anyone object that from this scientific standpoint the opposite of salvation is annihilation, the answer is at hand. From this standpoint there is no such word.

If, then, escape is to be open to us, it is not to come to us somehow, vaguely. We are not to hope for anything startling or mysterious. It is a definite opening along certain lines which are definitely marked by God, which begin at the Cross of Christ, and lead direct to Him. Each man in the silence of his own soul must work out this salvation for himself with fear and trembling—with fear, realising the momentous issues of his task; with trembling, lest before the tardy work be done the voice of Death should summon him to stop.

What these lines are may, in closing, be indicated in a word. The true problem of the spiritual life may be said to be, Do the opposite of Neglect. Whatever this is, do it, and you shall escape. It will just mean that you are so to cultivate the soul that all its powers will open out to God, and in beholding God be drawn away from sin. The idea really is to develop among the ruins of the old a new "creature"—a new creature which, while the old is suffering Degeneration from Neglect, is gradually to unfold, to escape away and develop on spiritual lines to spiritual beauty and strength. And as our conception of spiritual being must be taken simply from natural being, our ideas of the lines along which the new religious nature is to run must be borrowed from the known lines of the old.

There is, for example, a Sense of Sight in the religious nature. Neglect this, leave it undeveloped, and you never miss it. You simply see nothing. But develop it and you see God. And the line along which to develop it is known to us. Become pure in heart. The pure in heart shall see God. Here, then, is one opening for soul-culture—the avenue through purity of heart to the spiritual seeing of God.

Then there is a Sense of Sound. Neglect this, leave it undeveloped, and you never miss it. You simply hear nothing. Develop it, and you hear God. And the line along which to develop it is known to us. Obey Christ. Become one of Christ's flock. "His sheep hear his voice, and He calleth them by name." Here, then, is another opportunity for the culture of the soul—a gateway through the Shepherd's fold, to hear the Shepherd's voice.

And there is a Sense of Touch to be acquired—such a sense as the woman had who touched the hem of Christ's garment, that wonderful electric touch called faith, which moves the very heart of God.

And there is a Sense of Taste—a spiritual hunger after God; a something within which tastes and sees that He is good. And there is the Talent for Inspiration. Neglect that, and all the scenery of the spiritual world is flat and frozen. But cultivate it, and it penetrates the whole soul with sacred fire, and illuminates creation with God. And last of all there is the great capacity for Love, even for the love of God—the expanding capacity for feeling more and more its height and depth, its length and breadth. Till that is felt no man can really understand that word, "so great salvation," for what is its measure but that other "so" of Christ—God so loved the world that He gave his only begotten Son? Verily, how shall we escape if we neglect that?

A DARK PICTURE OF AN ENGLISH TOWN.

[A recent number of The Droitwich Guardian contains the following painful description of that locality.]

A VISITOR to the Droitwich Baths the other day, while enjoying one of the many beautiful walks in the suburbs of the town, was suddenly met by a number of women, girls, and boys, each having a zinc pail or some such utensil on his or her arm, and as they came along, singing ribald songs, swearing, and indulging in rude chaff; their attire was of the most motley character, filthy in the extreme, many females wearing articles of masculine character, and in their manner and appearance defying the identification of their sex. Upon his return to town, his inquiry was as to where these poor creatures found a home, and who was responsible for the open depravity of their conduct; we were with shame obliged to admit that they were denizens of our borough returning from pea-picking, that we had four clergymen of the Church of England resident in our midst, that with but one exception little was being done by them to inculcate ideas of cleanliness or godliness among those committed to their charge; nay, more, that by their conduct and example, they have lost what chance of influence for good their position as ministers of the Gospel gives them, that instead of originating and assisting in the formation of agencies for the teaching better morals and manners to these poor labouring people, they oppose and otherwise hinder those who endeavour to do what is within their power for improving the condition of those among whom they live.

We venture to think there is no town in England in which the poorer classes are so neglected as they are in this our town of Droitwich; what efforts are the clergy making to counteract the evil influences by which the majority of their parishioners are surrounded? Can they do nothing to induce the managers of the Salt Company to dispense with female labour, as has been done by Mr. Corbett, at Stoke? We know we are advocating an unpopular measure. We know we are only following in the footsteps of the worthy Archdeacon of Worcester, who years ago endeavoured to bring about the change, and who met with much abuse and insult for his pains. We believe the question is less likely to be misunderstood now than it was then. The system has now been in operation at the neighbouring Stoke Works sufficiently long to afford opportunity for judging of its working. The women who are, or think themselves, the most concerned in the change, would now, we think, be found among its advocates; they would have time to attend to their homes and families, the young girls now so early brought in contact with contaminating influences would be kept at home under maternal care, or would be sent into respectable household service, or other employment befitting their sex; while the men would be the gainers in the increased comfort of their homes, and the incentive to frequent public-houses at night would be removed; they would soon find that even if they had to pay somewhat more for the assistance they now receive from the females of their family, they would be able to employ their lads, and get the work as well done.

Why will not our clergy use their influence in obtaining this much to be desired alteration?

Again, can nothing be done to stop the use of obscene language in our streets? We are sorry to say it is not always the lower class who are the biggest offenders; there are men in authority who seem unable to give an order to their subordinates without an oath; there are certain thoroughfares where females hardly dare walk for fear of their ears being polluted by language of the vilest. These men who render our streets unpassable are well known to the police; why are they not summoned, and an example made of them? Is it not a fact that the present head of the Corporation recently refused the use of a field to a cricket club because of the profane language and rough horseplay indulged in by its members? It was only last week we heard of visitors threatening to leave their lodgings because of similar conduct by the members of the Church of England Temperance Club in the field recently acquired by them as a practice ground.

We know of a class of girls recently got together by ladies, with a view to the improvement of their moral condition; they are mostly aged from 15 to 18, and out of 16 there are 12 mothers. Is this the state of affairs as it should exist in this land of Christianity, where collections are being daily made for the reclamation of the heathen? A heavy charge rests upon the ministers of religion for allowing such depravity. Where are our lady district visitors? We have heard of curates posted at doors, and in the name of the vicar of the parish, defying them to enter the houses of his parishioners. Where are the encouragements to thrift, and the engendering of a spirit of independence of eleemosynary relief? In only one parish are any efforts in this direction made by those whose duty it is to aid all such efforts. What is the state of the homes of our working classes? can they be worse? Were it not for the purifying nature of the salt with which our atmosphere is charged, and which we doubt not destroys the germs of disease, we should scarce ever be free from some epidemic or other; we are so now in spite of our unhealthy surroundings; there are hovels inhabited by families which are scarce fit for pigs, yet no inspector or sanitary officer interferes. We commend the recent directions circulated by the Local Government Board to the notice of our authorities; let them act upon them, and Droitwich will be a far healthier and happier place to live in.

Let the ministers of religion remember that more good work can be done in the week-day than in the Sunday pulpit; let them remember it has been said of the Christian minister—

> "He 'stablishes the strong, restores the weak,
> Reclaims the wand'rer, binds the broken heart,
> And, arm'd himself in panoply complete
> Of heav'nly temper, furnishes with arms
> Bright as his own, and trains, by every rule
> Of holy discipline, to glorious war,
> The sacramental host of God's elect!"

BLACKPOOL.—A deputation from the Society for Promoting Female Education in the East attended at Christ Church Schoolroom, Queen's-street, on Tuesday evening, August 21, to give a lecture on "The Domestic Life of Eastern Women, their thraldom, degradation, and seclusion." Major Ferris gave a detailed account of the domestic life of the Mussulman and Hindoo, and their worship of God through the prophet Mahomet. The sacrificing of female infants could only be broken down by Christian women going inside and educating the women, and laying before them the wondrous story of the Saviour, and so bringing them to Christ.

THE WRECK OF THE GOLD SHIPS.

By THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn.

THERE are many passages in the Word of God that most readers pass by, as they would pass unlighted transparencies in the street at night. If somebody sets a lamp or kindles a gas-jet behind the transparency, its picture or inscription becomes luminous, attracting all eyes to it. One purpose of good preaching is to set lamps behind neglected passages.

Among the over-looked episodes in Old Testament history which are full of suggestive wisdom is one in the life of that good and great Judean monarch, Jehoshophat. His reign exalted the southern kingdom to a high prosperity. He wrought a good educational work among his people, and established a commission for expounding the Mosaic laws. He did many other noble things; but upon the lustre of his character and reign fell one great and grievous shadow. It was the sin of alliance with wicked men. Jehoshophat had riches and honour in abundance, and his heart was lifted up in the ways of the Lord; yet he "joined affinity with Ahab," the profligate tyrant of the northern kingdom. He gave his son in marriage to Ahab's daughter, and made a military alliance with Ahab, which ended in the battle of Ramoth-Gilead, in which the northern king played a treacherous part and lost his life. Not satisfied with these entangling alliances, which were both prompted by selfish policies, he entered into a commercial partnership with Ahab's successor, the Godless Ahaziah. Jehu, a prophet of Jehovah, had the courage to administer the sharp rebuke: "Shouldest thou help the ungodly, and love them that hate the Lord? Therefore is wrath upon thee from before the Lord."

The narrative of Jehoshaphat's venture with wicked Ahaziah reads very much like some of the "big bonanza" schemes of these days in Colorado and Nevada. The two monarchs joined hands in a gold-hunting expedition. The sacred chronicler tells us that they built ships in partnership on the Gulf of Akabah, for the purpose of seeking gold in Ophir. But the ill-starred enterprise was blasted by the Lord; the "ships went not; for they were wrecked at Ezion geber." This was no accidental catastrophe; for the fearless Eliezar told Jehoshaphat plainly, "because thou hast joined thyself with Ahaziah the Lord hath broken (or wrecked) thy works." Upon that illuminated transparency which pictures the wreck of the gold-ships, there blazes out this truth: Partnership with sin is a fatal mistake.

(1) We could fill columns with illustrations of this truth drawn from our own observation. Many a sorrowing father can tell the story of what befell his beloved boy. The youth, fascinated with a set of gay fellows, who were "posted" in all the amusements of the town, fell into their snares, and spent his evenings with them in their favourite haunts. His night-key admits him to the door of home in the "small hours," while his foolish parents are on their pillows. It is the old, old story, short, but crushing. Like Eli, the father "restrains not" the son when he is "making himself vile," and, like Eli, he pays the bitter penalty. When the ruin has been wrought by a round of wine-suppers, theatres, brothels, the parents get their eyes open to see that evil company has wrecked their gold-ship. The streets of all our cities, like the rocks of Ezion-geber, are strewed with the ruins of high hopes that went to pieces in wicked associations. When parents entrust a night-key to a son who has no self-restraint or Bible-conscience they give him a free pass on the road to perdition.

(2) There is another phase of domestic life in which this Old Testament episode finds its frequent parallels. We recall now an only daughter, of rare beauty and accomplishments. Her perilous charms attracted a suitor who was coarse and sensual; but he was the heir to an expected fortune. His anticipated wealth bribed the foolish parents and overcame the daughter's scruples. She consented, contrary to her own judgment, to marry him. Within a few years he was disgraced and she was divorced. God's law is, "Whatsoever ye sow, that shall ye also reap." It was that law, more irresistible than the winds of heaven, that wrecked the poor girl's golden ship in broken hopes and a broken heart. Of all the alliances with sin from mercenary motives, the most certainly fatal are those which are made under the sacred name of wedlock.

(3) The political history of our country is sadly eloquent with examples for civilians and statesmen who have wrecked their careers by alliances with wrong men, wrong policies, or wrong institutions. Every man, on his entrance upon public life, has his "mount of temptation." If he courageously says, "Get thee behind me, Satan!" his subsequent path to honour and true success is assured. If he yields he is lost. The sorceress during more than one generation was slavery. By her much fair speech and promises of promotion she caused many an ambitious statesman to yield to her, and "straightway he went after her as an ox goeth to the slaughter." Who does not recall at once that colossal giant of the senate-chamber, the weight of whose spear was like a weaver's beam? Who does not remember into what unholy alliance he was seduced, with the vain hope of reaching what a life-long ambition coveted? Those of us who loved and admired him most felt the most keenly his bitter disappointment. Southern slavery, in its day, wrought many abominations; but one of the meanest and most hateful of all its evil things was when it wrecked the presidential gold-ship of the magnificent orator of Bunker Hill.

(4) This truth of perilous partnerships is full of warnings to business men. Especially is it admonitory to young men who are anxious to reach wealth by short cuts, and are not scrupulous as to the methods. The market is crowded with sharp schemers, the papers abound with glowing announcements of commercial venturers and "gilt-edged" enterprises. The number of credulous Jehoshaphats who are enticed into gold expeditions to Ophir, with Ahaziahs in the partnership, is almost past belief. The wrecks are well-nigh as numerous. It is not only from wild schemes of speculation that danger arises. Many a merchant, banker, manufacturer, or tradesman, has been induced by friends or partners to ally himself with methods and practices which his own conscience in his better moments did not approve; but he hushed conscience with the promise of big profits, or with the current sophistry, "Oh, everybody does such things!" The men who, like William E. Dodge, refuse to "break God's law for a dividend" are not to be found in regiments. Commerce and trade, like politics, contain a thousand repetitions of that old Scripture line: "Because thou hast joined thyself with Ahaziah, the Lord hath wrecked thy work."

"Be not partaker with other men's sins" is a divine admonition that has not lost its solemn portent. Though hand join in hand, wrong-doing will not go unpunished; if not punished in this world, then surely in the next. Just as certainly as that the wages of sin is death, so certain is it that eternity will reveal the fearful wreck of innumerable gold-ships. The "loss total, and no insurance!" —Evangelical Churchman.

For the Young.

"GOING HOME."

THE mortal remains of Annie Birch, a young and much-loved member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Ramsbottom, were, on Tuesday last, interred at Holcombe. Annie was of too fine a mould for the wear and tear of a factory operative's life, which was her earthly life. Her crystalline simplicity, and sensitive, dove-like gentleness, would have suited a higher station. She had frequent illnesses, and her last—an inflammation in the region of the heart—was a protracted and painful one, but was borne with unmurmuring patience and acquiescence in the divine will. Her grave has been covered by loving hands with wreaths of beautiful flowers; these will perish, but the fragrance of her pure and gentle life will remain a precious influence for many days to come. About midnight, on the 9th inst., after great suffering, and just before she died she said, "I am going!" "Where are you going, love?" asked her sister. "I am going home!" She then stretched her hands eagerly upward, but presently they fell softly by her side, as a storm-tossed bird might fold its wearied wings to rest, and she was gone.

On the morning of Sunday week, at the close of a sermon befitting the occasion, on 1 Thes. iv. 14., and Ps. cxxvii. 2, "So he giveth his beloved sleep," her minister (the Rev. Wm. Hume Elliot) read the following verses, which had been suggested by her last words:—

"I am going home!"
From this tossing unrest,
To the presence of Jesus
The place of the blest;
Where sickness and anguish
Have never distrest,
Where the weak ones grow strong,
And the weary find rest.

"I am going home!"
From the toil and the pain,
From the task and the turmoil
That shatter and strain;
Where the heart's fitful beat
Ne'er shall startle me more,
Nor the eyesight grow dim
On yon sorrowless shore.

"I am going home!"
From the darkness and night,
To the land of the holy,
The realm of delight;
Where the flowers never fade,
And the leaves never fall,
And the sun never sets,
And the joys never pall.

"I am going home!"
But though parted awhile,
We shall meet yet again
'Neath our Father's kind smile;
For the Lord, who, in blood,
For our sins did atone,
Us in love-links enclasps
To himself on the throne.

"I am going home!"
Her last words; then on high,
Waved the pale wasted hands,
As if angels were nigh;
Or the Dearest of all
Were just coming in sight,
To welcome her home
To the mansions of light.

Home! Safely at home!
Calm is breathed o'er her now,
Closed softly the eyelids,
Smooth-marbled the brow;
The flower is transplanted,
The ointment is poured,
The frail casket broken,
The gem with the Lord.

TEMPERANCE JOTTINGS.

MR. T. E. MURPHY has resumed his campaign in the north of Ireland.

Mr. R. T. Booth has been conducting Missions at Newport and Portsmouth.

Mr. S. Insull, of London, has conducted a very successful campaign at Winnipeg, Manitoba. A thousand pledges were taken.

Mr. Thicknesse, of Bradninch, Devon, recently lectured most impressively on Gospel Temperance at Clysthydon, near Cullompton. Many were in tears as the result of his thrilling Gospel appeals.

The Temperance movement has made itself felt at Brighton amongst other places. At the recent licensing session, the Committee declined ten new licences, and are said to have used their influence in every way against increasing the number of public-houses.

The results of the Blue Ribbon Mission at Plymouth and subsequent efforts have been fairly permanent. A walk through any of the streets of the town at any hour of the day will show that a large number of Plymouthians are still wearing the insignia of sobriety.

Several of the Commissions charged to consider the question of drink in the central provinces of Russia consider it would be advisable to persuade the municipalities to take a more active part in the supervision of the drink traffic, and to endeavour to increase the severity of the laws.

Major Poole and Canon Wilberforce are about to conduct a week's Mission in Torquay and neighbourhood. Major and Mrs. Poole will afterwards hold drawing-room meetings in Cheltenham, Exeter, Ilfracombe, &c., on behalf of the Army Scripture Readers' Society.

"One of the Crowd," writing in The Daily Telegraph on the drunkenness of the people, complains very justly of the preposterous prices charged for Temperance drinks; he thinks that so long as this remains the case the publican will continue to have the patronage of the thirsty crowd.

A correspondent of the Dublin Daily Express calls attention to the sale of spirits on board the Channel steamers while in port: "In our cross-channel steamers," he says, "half an hour before sailing, it is not unusual to find the steward's pantry crowded, and the passage to the cabin blocked by persons drinking whisky."

DR. MOFFAT.—The evening of Dr. Moffat's life was spent in translating the "Pilgrim's Progress" into Bechuana.

MESSRS. FULLERTON AND SMITH.—These Evangelists, after the summer vacation, resumed their campaign in North-west Lancashire. They have just concluded Missions at Barrowford, Nelson, Hoggate, and Brierfield. The meetings have been very good, and souls have been converted. Next week they visit Colne.

SUNDAY WORK ON RAILWAYS.—The two months which have passed since President Young issued an order forbidding the running of Sunday trains, except those carrying mails, on the Louisville, New Albany, and Chicago Railroad, says the Railway Age, have been the most prosperous of any in the history of the road. President Young recently telegraphed, "Our June business has been larger than ever before, and the aggregate earnings the largest on record." While the experience of one railroad for two months is by no means conclusive of the question at issue, yet it certainly tends to refute the position taken by so many managers that a single railroad or a portion of the railroads of the country cannot afford to cease Sunday work, and that Sunday observance is not practicable unless all railroads unite in it. The Louisville, New Albany, and Chicago road has discontinued Sunday traffic and has increased its business, and there is no indication that its earnings for May and June are one dollar less than they would have been if its employés had been worked seven days in each week. The result of the reform inaugurated by the management of this important line will be watched with great interest. While the religious element in the problem should not be ignored or undervalued, the decisive point will doubtless be the economical results of the experiment.

WILLIAM TAYLOR, THE PIONEER MISSIONARY.

MEETING Mrs. Reed a few days ago, she acceded to our request for permission to publish the following deeply-interesting letters conveying information of Mr. Taylor's most important work. Its two great features are the preparation and employment of native converts, and the principle of self-supporting Missions—two chief characteristics, as we think, of the Missions of the future:—

805, Broadway, N. Y., Nov. 30, 1882.

DEAR SISTER REED,—I am to sail to-morrow for Chili, South America, with half a dozen workers accompanying me. I have three now on their way to India; three sailed last month also for South America. I have been unavoidably detained in the United States for seven years, less two short trips to South America, but now three of my boys are in business. Reed (his son) is in College, and I am going now

TO SPEND (D.V.) THE NEXT TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AT THE FRONT OF THE LORD'S SELF-SUPPORTING MISSION MOVEMENT.

I will write you to report progress. God bless you and the dear children! I hope to see you all some day. My dear wife and boys all love the Saviour, and all so fully concur in my missionary work, that they consent to my painful absence from them without a murmur or remonstrance. W. TAYLOR.

Coquimbo, Chili, May 2, 1883.

MY DEAR SISTER,—This is my birthday. I am sixty-two years old to-day. I feel delightfully fresh and young, very much better than when I was young, both in body and soul. Glory to God! My self-supporting Missions in Chili were never so promising as now. Our College in Santiago has about 200 students, about 100 each of male and female, and nearly all well-to-do natives. At Concepcion we have about 100, and good growing schools at Coquimbo, Caldera, and Copiopo.

We have regular preaching at all these places, and some soul saving work at each station, but our great harvest is yet to come; it will come in the near future, I believe. We have to break up the hardest kind of "fallow ground," and do much sowing among these Roman Catholic countries, before we can gather much of a harvest. One of my missionaries, Rev. L. C. Smith, in Santiago, was holding a meeting in San Pablo-street, when he and his congregation were attacked by a mob, and some of them were badly beaten. Mr. Smith narrowly escaped with his life, by the breaking of a lamp, which gave him the cover of darkness. The mob made a fire of the seats and furniture of the house, and burnt up about £40 worth of Bibles that were in the house. It has created a great stir, and given Mr. Smith a grand advertisement, for all the papers of the city have filled columns in his defence, and against the mob and the priests and the continued union of "Church and State." It is believed that the next Congress will cut the bonds, and send the Church adrift. The Catolica (the Church paper) alone defended the action of the mob, and hence fathered the transaction.

The disruption of the Church and State in Chili will not make either any better, but it will open the way to masses of Chilenos whose patriotism holds them in bondage and precludes access to them by the Gospel messengers. My minister in Coquimbo, Rev. A. T. Jeffrey, has to go home on sick leave, hoping to recover his health and return in a few months. Meantime I take his work. It is a large circuit. I preached last night at Brillador, nearly twenty miles from here. I go eleven miles by rail, then across a rugged range of mountains on horseback. However, I walk most of the way, and lead the horse, as I like to walk and the horse likes to be led! Yesterday, in the mountains, I was thinking of Henry Reed's rides to his farm in Tasmania on his black horse, and I guess it was imagination, but I seemed to realise that Brother Reed, being fond of wild scenery and sympathising with me and my work, was invisibly so near to me that I spoke to him, and said, "Henry Reed" (I never so addressed him before, I always said, "Brother Reed") "I am greatly obliged by your great kindness in delivering me from the necessity of spending my precious time in selling books to support my family. I am sorry I have not been able to do more in this great work of God, but I have done what I could, and now with improved health—better than I ever enjoyed before—and the command of my time, I hope by the will of God to put in twenty or more years of increasingly effective service in helping to extend the kingdom of our Jesus among many nations."

My feelings were so wrought up in talking to "Henry Reed," that I had to pray to our gracious God and Father to guard my soul against the popish error of praying to the saints, though in my talk I only expressed the real gratitude I felt, but made no request.

I know not how long I shall remain in Chili, probably a year or more. My work in India is moving on nicely, and they are standing firmly on their platform of self-support, and forty-seven ministers were stationed at the conference. We have fifty-seven local preachers in the field, and over two thousand organised lay workers, one-fourth of whom are Hindoos. My address now is Box No. 9, Coquimbo, Chili, South America. Five young persons have received the Saviour here within the last week or two, and are witnessing and working for Jesus.—Your ever loving and faithful brother, WM. TAYLOR.

Writing also from Coquimbo on June 23 to the editor of The Christian Witness, Philadelphia, Mr. Taylor says:—

"I have commenced to organise a Methodist Church in Coquimbo. Thirty persons have given their names as members and probationers—all probationers but three or four, and most of them converted since I came here. This is a much harder field for direct evangelistic work than India. Indeed, we have never yet had 'special services' in Chili. I meant to try that line of work, but have providentially been thrust into regular circuit work by the departure of Brother Jeffreys and Brother Krauser, through the illness of their wives. But I find the field is not ripe for protracted meeting revival effort, such as I was engaged in six days per week all the time I was in India.

"Our school work is opening up nicely, and will yet more and more. We are getting some people converted to God all the time. Most of our pupils are natives. Our College in Santiago has about 150 pupils, nearly all natives, and very promising. Concepcion has ninety-three, and Copiopo about fifty, mostly natives; Caldera about twenty, and Coquimbo thirty, nearly all English and Anglo-Spanish. We have a church organisation in Copiopo, Concepcion, Valparaiso (German), and now in Coquimbo. Will soon organise in Santiago. Regular preaching at every station. We shall soon strike for a great enlargement of our work in Chili. God is leading, and we are succeeding."

SAN FRANCISCO.—Mr. Ben Hogan has been holding nightly meetings in the Y M.C.A. Hall, which are well attended. There is certainly, says The Pacific, a large field for an earnest man of his experiences in this city.

MANUFACTURE OF IDOLS.—It is stated that the idols now worshipped in India and Africa are for the most part manufactured in England. These are frequently sent out in the same vessels which carry Bibles and other religious literature for the conversion of the heathen.

A COREAN CONVERT.—During the rebellion in in Corea a year ago a nobleman named Rijutel saved the Queen's life, and the King offered to reward him with any rank or honour he might aspire to. His reply was: "I only ask to be permitted to go to Japan in order that I may see and study the civilisation of other lands." While in Japan he called upon a Christian Japanese, for the purpose of acquainting himself with the claims and objects of Christianity. He was deeply impressed, his interest ripened into conviction, and before long he was baptized into the Christian faith. Rijutel's great desire is now to give the Bible to his people, and he has zealously begun the work of preparing a Chino-Corean version.

REINFORCEMENTS FOR CHINA.

ONE could scarcely hope to pass a more profitable or heart-stirring couple of hours than that which was spent in the lecture-hall at 186, Aldersgate-street, last Thursday evening. Fourteen missionaries are on the eve of setting sail for far-off China to labour in the Gospel, under the auspices of the Inland Mission. The missionaries returning to China, after a visit to England for rest and change, are Rev. J. and Mrs. Williamson, Rev. E. and Mrs. Pearse, and Miss Horne. The new missionaries leaving are Mr. and Mrs. Rendall, Miss Black, Miss Harriet Black, Miss Muir, Miss Dowman, Miss Butland, Mr. Henry Dick, and Mr. Owen Stevenson. As the excellent custom of this Society is, farewell meetings are held in various places, with the double object of securing a practical, prayerful interest in those going to the front, and of stimulating others to follow their example. They have frequently proved fruitful in both these respects, and we should confidently look for similar results from the present series.

There was a large attendance at Aldersgate-street on Thursday evening, the majority of those present being young men—a circumstance of hopeful augury. Some months ago a Young Men's Foreign Missionary Society was formally inaugurated by the Young Men's Christian Association; probably it is due to the interest thus awakened that two of the out-going party of missionaries are from their ranks. Mr. Rendall was for some time secretary of the Croydon branch, and Mr. Dick has for the last two years been on the staff at Exeter Hall.

Mr. Hodder, who presided on Thursday evening, with all his accustomed geniality, assured the friends who were about to leave us that they would not be forgotten by the praying band that meets day by day at Aldersgate-street. On Tuesdays special prayer is made for Foreign Missions, and they would assuredly be often remembered at the throne of grace.

Mr. Broomhall having given a few details of the work, and Mr. Williamson having recounted some of his experiences in the field during the past seventeen years, there followed a very telling address from Mr. Hudson Taylor. He prefaced it by earnest prayer for those who were going "where Satan's seat is," as he expressed it. In November, 1881, said Mr. Taylor, a few of us met in the city of Wu-Chang, in Central China. We felt the great need of missionary labourers, and we almost wondered that God did not send more out. Many a time during the last year I have been thinking of our brother Stevenson, who has been alone in Bhamo since Mr. Soltau left. We have wanted to relieve him; he has been away from his wife and family for five years, serving the Lord there; but there has been no brother who has gone out whom we could send to stand by his side or to take his place. The number of labourers has been most deficient, and we began to ask ourselves how it was that we were so short-handed. We concluded that it was because we were not asking definitely enough for them. So we agreed that we would ask God that 42 brothers and 28 sisters, 70 in all, should be sent out during the next two years. Then we thought about the 70 whom the Lord sent out. A country as large as Palestine could nearly be covered with the hand on the map of China, and we thought it would be no great thing for the Lord to send seventy workers to a land like China. Some of those who joined in that prayer are now gone upon high; others are rejoicing, as one after another goes out to join the ranks of those in the field. Mr. Henry Soltau, who is with us to-night, will also return soon; I am glad to say he has found a companion who will go with him as a fellow-worker. Mr. Williamson, who is now going back, has said something to us about what are called missionary hardships; as he has told you, these things do not trouble us much. Our great trouble is to see so few going out to take part in the work. It seems as if there was something wrong when we have 1500 counties in China without a single missionary allotted to them, while so many Christians are staying at home. Some of our friends here go to a corner and begin to preach, when another party of workers comes along and says: "That is our corner; you must move on." Again and again they have the same experience. There really is not room for all the workers here, but out in China the people are perishing for lack of knowledge. It is a serious thing to lock up the corn when the people are famishing.

Now let me say a word or two as to how God has helped us in the matter of the expenses. We did not ask for those seventy because we were so rich and had a difficulty in disposing of our surplus income. We were tolerably "hard up" at the end of last year. We had not a great deal to spare, I can assure you. If ten times as much had gone out in some of the later months of last year, it would not have been any burden to us to have used it. But we took the matter to the Lord and He supplied our need, leading people out in China to make up for the lack in what was sent from home. We had some prayer about the matter only a very few days before I left for England. We asked the Lord to stir up the hearts of his liberal servants, and in this way set his seal on our desire for more labourers. We were led to believe that He would induce some of his people to give largely of their means, and who would receive from Him a large blessing. When I was at Aden, about half way home, two letters came to me from my dear wife. She was in England, and I was very pleased, as you may suppose, to see her handwriting. I soon broke the seals and was not less pleased to read the contents of one—that a liberal-minded friend had anonymously given £3000 to help in this work of sending forth seventy missionaries. The living God is worth serving, is He not? Some of us have such confidence in Him that we are glad these matters are in his hands; if they were in our hands we should make plenty of mistakes. It is a grand thing to have to deal with the living God. For more than twenty-seven years I have been living and working on this ground, and though I have gone without my dinner because I had no money to pay for it, not for one half hour have I regretted my position or wished to be on any other ground.

We have not space for the very interesting remarks that followed from Mr. Soltau, Mr. McCarthy, Mr. Piercy, Mr. Cameron, and several of the out-going missionaries. All who heard the simple, earnest utterances of these young friends, who are entering on a blessed life work in a far off land, will surely hold up their hands by frequent intercessory prayer on their behalf. Meetings were also held at Exeter Hall, Croydon, &c. The Exeter Hall meeting had a special interest attached to it, from the fact of Mr. Dick's connection with the Association there. At a social gathering previous to the public meeting Mr. Dick was presented with a sum of money and a medicine chest, by his former associates and other friends of the work.

MR. MOODY preached in Music Hall, Boston, on Sunday, August 5, to young men, his subject being "Sowing and Reaping."

OPEN-AIR MISSION.—During the three months' absence in America of Mr. G. Kirkham, the Secretary of the Open-air Mission, communications may be sent to the office, 14, Duke-street, Adelphi, address to Mr. John MacGregor, Hon. Secretary, or to Mr. John Pamment.

WORKING BOYS' HOMES IN LONDON.—This institution consists of seven "Homes" for working lads in different parts of London. In most cases the boys earn sufficient wages to board and clothe themselves, but for many other expenses the promoters appeal to the public. The moral and spiritual condition of the Homes give cause for thankfulness. Such a useful means of good is worthy of support. The Secretary of the Homes is Mr. H. Bristowe Wallen, 13, Buckingham-street, Strand, W.C.

GO FORWARD.

"Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward."

CLIMBING the mountain brow,
Surely, oh, surely now,
My feet may rest;
Have I not yet attained,
Now this bold peak is gained,
This height possessed?

Go forward! look again
Far over hill and plain,
Towers peak on peak,
Till lost in clouds they rise,
Upwards, beyond the skies:
Their summits seek.

Forward! the widening view
Opens fresh scenes to you,
New glories bright;
Leave gloomy vales below,
For sunny slopes that glow
In fuller light.

Forward the crown to win,
Forward to conquer sin,
Self to subdue;
Forward to do God's will,
Through good report and ill,
Steadfast and true.

Trust but the mountain Guide,
Then can no ill betide,
He leads you on;
Till in the golden land
Your pilgrim feet shall stand,
The victory won.

MR. SCROGGIE IN BELFAST.

WE have to gratefully acknowledge that God has heard and answered our prayers, and those of the readers of The Christian. The meetings have been held in a large wooden circus capable of seating fully 2000 people, and admirably arranged both for speaking and hearing. From the beginning of the services the attendance has been encouraging, but the public interest has now so deepened as to fill the spacious building every evening. On Sunday afternoon, Aug. 19, Mr. Scroggie addressed a large gathering of people in the circus, and in the evening he also took part in the regular service held there. The building on this occasion was densely crowded, considerably over 2000 having found accommodation, and numbers turned away, unable to obtain admission.

Mr. Scroggie speaks in a clear and simple style, with a mild Scotch accent, and his words, always earnest, are often pungent and penetrating. The inquiry-meeting has been skilfully and prayerfully managed from the beginning, and every night the workers have been kept busy in dealing with those remaining behind for conversation. Backsliders have been, we believe, hopefully restored, and numbers have professed to find peace and rest through believing on the Lord Jesus.

We are hoping that our brother may continue his labours among us for a short time longer. Meantime, we cannot but thank God for his manifest presence and power in our midst.

Belfast, Aug. 24. Henry Montgomery.

CÆSAREA, ASIA MINOR, is to-day the centre of a missionary field which comprehends nearly the whole of ancient Cappadocia, with certain parts of Pontus, Galatia, and Lycaonia. During the last year 2000 children have frequented the schools, and 2500 to 3000 persons have heard the Gospel preached in thirty stations. There exist six organised churches with nearly 700 members. In 1882 there were sold in this country 4000 copies of the Bible, Testaments, and portions of the Scriptures, and more than 5000 other good books. At Cæsarea there is a society composed of some hundreds of intelligent men whose object is to reform the Armenian Church. The tendency of this society is becoming more and more evangelical, and its members are seriously studying the Word of God.—Le Temoin de la Verite.

WORK AMONG THE YOUNG.

IN THE VALE OF LEVEN.

ON Friday evening, the 17th inst., Mr. Mackeith, of Glasgow, assisted by Mr. Pratt nd Mr. Steel, concluded a fortnight of work nong the young. The Public Hall, Alexandria, as nightly crowded with an audience of about 00 children, brought together under the spices of the local Sabbath-school Union, and esided over by Mr. A. Orr Ewing, jun. It as indeed a great privilege to be present at e meetings, and see the perfect order and tention maintained by Mr. Mackeith, while ith the aid of lime-light views, illustrative of e Pilgrim's Progress, he preached the Gospel simple but pointed language, which could ot fail to attract, impress, and convince.

One evening an open-air meeting was held ith the lime-light views, specially for parents. few thousand persons were present, and tened most attentively for an hour, while Mr. ackeith explained the views, pressing home e Gospel. The Scripture texts thrown on the reen were most useful in fixing the truth in e minds of the audience, and of this instances uld be given.

Mr. Colvill during the second week gave teresting addresses to the teachers, dealing ith appropriate subjects, which were most lpful. I know that much good has been done, nd trust that many other places will endeavour obtain the services of these kind friends.

M. MacLean, President SS. Union.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE.

A course of Gospel services for children is eing carried on here, under the conduct of Ir. H. G. Harris, the local secretary of the ission. The gatherings are held daily, except riday, on the sands or rocks, and the large at-ndance at each meeting, not alone of children, ut also of adults, evinces a real and growing inte-est among the community of residents and visit-rs, in this simple, though greatly needed work.

Mr. Harris has been conducting the services nce the commencement of the current month; addition to these, he provides amusements for e young people in the afternoon on the sands, ich as cricket, rounders, and other games, and n Fridays an expedition is made to some one of e neighbouring places—Clevedon, Cheddar, &c.

Spontaneous testimonies, from one or two little nes, to benefit derived from the meetings, have fforded encouragement to the friends interested the Mission, and many fresh names have been rolled in the list of members of the Children's nd School-boys' Scripture Union. An iron oom, kindly lent by Rev. W. Hunt, vicar of rinity Church, affords a comfortable and handy eeting-ground when the weather is unpro-itious for seaside services.

SCARBOROUGH.

Standing by a friend just after post-time at Hulme Cliffe ollege, I heard him read the following exulting letter, hich I at once solicited for THE CHRISTIAN. It will rtainly be as interesting to its readers as it was to me.

M.

"Most splendid lantern procession last night; he children sang beautifully. Most wonderful ases of blessing both at Bridlington and here. ne young fellow, about eighteen, comes and is rought in, he goes home and tells his chum, he omes and is also converted. They both bring nother, and he is also brought in; and the me thing happens till seven are brought in in ss than a week. These are only some peculiar ases out of numbers of others.

"We have a capital prayer-meeting, which I ke, and generally say a few words on entire onsecration and letting go of all questionable hings as a hindrance to blessing, and our nswers are seen both in individual cases and in he evening meeting, when there is wonderful ower, and a great crowd of the right sort of eople. Most glorious day, very, very hot, and must be off to the services. It is so different o me, working this year, to last, when I know was clinging to sins which must have been a indrance to the work, all conquered now, and ore than so, through Him.

"We have some splendid lady-helpers, in our converts of last year, although we have lost others who are away. I know you have been praying for us. Return thanks for us to Him for his wonderful answers to your prayer. There is room for one of the boys if they could come; it would be such a lift to them if W. or B. could come to see all of us ten fine fellows (barring self) working away, and all glory to Him; our work is all done because his love constraineth us. I could write sheets of news, but have no time."

CONTINENTAL NOTES.

CLICHY, FRANCE.

A NEW church for Christian worship was opened July 29 at Clichy, near Paris, a town of about 25,000 inhabitants, and a centre of missionary effort. This work is due, under God, to the self-denying labours of a lady and gentleman among the rag-pickers.

DANTZIG, SOUTH RUSSIA.

A revival of religion is reported in Der Wahrhertszenge as having taken place in the Baptist Chapel at this place. It began with the week of prayer, and has resulted in an addition of nearly 150 converts to the ranks of the believers. There is much joy among the people because of this time of refreshing from the presence of God.

ZURICH EXHIBITION.

The Bible Kiosque at this exhibition is directed by a young Swiss evangelist. From May to July, 71 Bibles, 127 Psalms, 257 New Testaments, and 473 Gospel portions have been sold. 16,016 portions have been distributed gratuitously. If any of our readers should be visiting Zurich during the exhibition, they will perhaps visit the Kiosque and give some words of encouragement and Christian interest to the evangelist in charge.

SABBATH-KEEPING.

The question of the observance of the Lord's Day is being more and more agitated in the different countries of Europe, and there are encouraging signs of progress in the July number of the Bulletin Dominical. In Germany the closing of shops on Sunday is more and more marked. In Austria the Government has proposed a motion for Sunday rest in mines. In Italy progress is most marked; many hundred shops are closed. In Russia the day has a pretty general recognition, but is very little observed as a holy day; in consequence the Synod has sent a petition to the Landtag begging that the sale of alcoholic drinks may be prohibited on Sundays. In Turkey a literary society of young men has organised a series of public séances in favour of the observance of Sunday.

SARDINIA.

Some weeks ago our church at Sassars was much cheered by the kindness of Mr. B. Piercy, Director of the Sardinian Railway, who has given us £50 towards our proposed chapel. Mr. Piercy, during his long connection with the island has done a great deal in elevating the people of Sardinia, by whom he is very much loved and esteemed. The whole island for centuries has been under the dominion of Rome, morally and physically. I have recently visited the little town of Portotorres, twenty miles distance from Sassari, and once a very important place. I entered the ancient cathedral, and having distributed on my way some evangelical books, I was presently followed by a number of persons, each eagerly begging for a book. I gave them all a copy of Christ's "Sermon on the Mount," adding at the same time a word of explanation. Facing an altar, where there was a horrible painting of souls in purgatory, I spoke of the falsity of that doctrine, to the approval of my audience. Before leaving Portotorres many asked me for books, but I had none to give. I promised to visit the town again.

DENMARK.

M. Hegard, Professor of Philosophy at the University of Copenhagen, has until recently been the apostle of atheism in his country. He has, says the Semeur Vaudois, just published a second edition of one of his works, and this is what he says in the introduction: "The experiences of life, its sufferings and griefs, have shaken my soul, and have broken the foundation upon which I formerly thought I could build. Full of faith in the sufficiency of science, I thought to have found in it a sure refuge from all the contingencies of life. This illusion is vanished; when the tempest came which plunged me in sorrow, the moorings, the cable of science, broke like thread. Then I seized upon that help which many before me have laid hold of, I sought and found peace in God. Since then I have certainly not abandoned science, but I have assigned to it another place in my life."

GERMANY.

The Liberal Protestants of Germany and of German Switzerland are projecting a united Mission to the heathen. The first meeting of delegates to consider the foundation of the society was held at Frankfort; a committee of seven was appointed under the presidency of M. Buss, pastor at Glaris.

In March of this year Pastors Ninck, Kreussler, and Weymann organised regular religious meetings in Hamburg, which are held in a dancing saloon. This is an experiment to carry the Word of God down to the people which it is hoped will prove fruitful.

There exists in the Rhenish Provinces and in Westphalia a society, whose headquarters are at Cologne, which seeks to instruct and evangelise the people. It has 3500 members; 70,000 pamphlets have been distributed among the people; sixty speakers, pastors and laymen, are ready to conduct evangelistic and instructive meetings. It supplies good and Christian literature to inns, hospitals, and prisons. Many ecclesiastical and political authorities have effectively manifested their interest in this society.

COUNT CAMPELLO.

Your readers will remember the ex-priest of this name, who became a candidate for the ministry in the American Episcopal Methodist Church in Rome, and shortly after declared that he had never united himself with that Church. This step taken, he proclaimed himself an Anglican, but now he is an Old Catholic. In his paper, The Labaro, appears the following announcement: "Chiesa Cattolica Italiana, via Genova, No. 16. On Sundays and obligatory (?) feast-days the Holy Mass will be celebrated and the Gospel explained, and at 8 p.m. Vespers will be sung and a discourse delivered."

The Fiaccola, which relates these facts, adds: "If this should take place"—for it seems that these services are only projected—"the Evangelical work in Italy will find itself in presence of a new foe, the Phylloxera invading the Lord's vineyard." A French paper says that Count Campello officiated on August 5 at the afternoon service in the Gallican Church in Paris, and that Father Hyacinth delivered the discourse. The Fiaccola further gives its readers to understand that Count Campello is at present in England, "trying to mystify the good Christian people there, by promising them a religious reformation after the fashion of St. Bernard, as if the work hitherto accomplished by the various missionary committees in Italy was nothing, or at best heretical." The worst of the matter is, that probably this ex-priest will find people ready to believe in him and to support him in his work! Verbum sap. R. S. A.

UNFASHIONABLE GARDEN PARTIES.—A correspondent writes us pleading that many mothers belonging to mothers' meetings in London might be considerably cheered by being invited for a few hours to a garden party in the country. The expense and trouble are little compared with the great pleasure given to the poor mothers, who seldom see a green field.

Notes and Comments.

THE China Inland Mission has suffered a severe loss in the death of Dr. Schofield, in the prime of life. His medical knowledge and skill, added to Christian devotedness, rendered him a peculiarly valuable missionary. No particulars have been received beyond the telegram announcing the fact of his death. He has left a widow and two young children in China. We need say no more to elicit much sympathy for his family and for the Mission.

The influence of Rationalism on the National Church of Holland appears to be sadly disastrous, according to an account given in the Evangelité et Liberté, and specially so, it is said, by turning away young men from entering the ministry. There are 266 parishes devoid of pastors. The ministries are divided into three classes—Orthodox, Moderate, and Liberals, or Moderns. The latter are Rationalists, and number 397, while the two former number 563 and 355.

We hear so little now in England, comparatively, of the Mormon craze, that it comes upon us with something like surprise and wonder to read in a New York paper a leading article calling attention to the large number of Mormon immigrants who are constantly arriving there on their way to Utah. The writer says they have each year, for many years past, added several thousands to their home force by missionary efforts in foreign lands, and expect this season to increase their ranks by the arrival of some six or seven thousand foreign converts.

The United States Legislature have sent a notice to various foreign Governments representing that the Mormon settlement is under the ban of the law, in consequence of its polygamous system, and suggesting the duty of preventing the emigration of Mormon converts to the American shores. It is in contemplation to pass a law by which the landing of Mormon emigrants shall be forbidden, precisely as is that of paupers and criminals, their presence and influence being far more injurious and evil in its social bearings than that of either. It might be well if such an edict were passed; it would doubtless do much to neutralise the efforts of the Mormonite propagandists everywhere. Strange that there should be thousands annually gullible enough to be deluded by so obnoxious a system.

A statement made by "An Eastbourne Nonconformist" in the columns of a contemporary seems scarcely credible, and yet there is but too much reason to believe its truth. He says that one of the leading brewers in East Sussex is reported to have said the other day at a meeting of the Eastbourne Local Board, that "They had churches and chapels, and he objected that the beach should be seized for the purpose of polluting the air by God's Word. He would like to see such people whipped behind hand-carts."

Judge Jeffries could hardly have exceeded this in intolerance and inveterate hatred to evangelical truth and effort. Public-houses, of which this brewer is said to own a large number, are not likely to thrive through the preaching of the Gospel, and possibly the old cry of the craft in danger may have something to do with this outburst of anything but refined feeling against the Gospel, and those who preach it out-of-doors.

The season for out-door Gospel work will soon be drawing to a close. The opportunities remaining should be diligently embraced, and all who can assist open-air services by their presence and hearty sympathy should hasten to take their stand by the side of preachers so engaged. Christians who cannot preach may find rare openings on such occasions for exerting an influence conducive to winning souls to Christ. Many a worker in the open-air field of service would be cheered and animated to renewed effort by the support of fellow Christians, who would come out and help in song or prayer, and by conversation and other means seek to clench the word preached. Courage and boldness are qualities only too rare on the part of many in the Churches of Christ. We pray that the Lord may thrust out many of his people into the work.

It seems to be agreed, among those competent to judge, that the Shapira MS. of Deuteronomy is a clever fraud. The Daily News of Monday has the following paragraph:—

Dr. Ginsburg's report on these now famous manuscripts has been somewhat hastened by recent events; but it is a distinct condemnation of them as forgeries. Dr. Ginsburg had stated his doubts some time ago to some of the Museum officials, but he deemed it expedient to refrain from publishing them until the whole of the Hebrew had been deciphered and published. This he considered necessary in the interest of other libraries, and of the learned world generally. He is of opinion that six persons have been concerned in the fabrication, and he will indicate the part which has been performed by each, and, it is understood also, their respective nationalities, from certain peculiarities which he has detected. He characterises the conspiracy as one of very great cleverness, and it is scarcely possible to say what the result might have been if the learning of the conspirators had been equal to their extraordinary ability."

While all lovers of the Bible would have welcomed any such reliable authentication of the Mosaic history as this MS. purported to be, it is matter for much thankfulness that such fraudulent attempts to impose on the public must fail in the presence of modern scholarship and criticism. The searching examination that has exploded the Shapira MS. is an additional testimony, in an indirect form, to the authenticity of the Authorised record.

A correspondent in a country town writes to us as follows:—

"A great deal has been written about getting seats for the shop assistants, and yet they seem as far off as ever. Many day by day are suffering greatly from the continuous standing. If Christian ladies would undertake to look after one or more of the young ladies at the shops they go to (gentlemen caring for the young men), inviting them to tea on early closing nights, and on Sundays to a Bible reading and tea, and taking a kindly sympathy and loving interest in them, it would do much good."

All the friends of foreign Missions, as well as those who wish for the preservation of cordial relations between this country and France, will heartily rejoice at the tidings of Mr. Shaw's release from custody at Madagascar. It is further satisfactory to know, on the authority of the French Admiral, that, after investigation, Mr. Shaw has been pronounced innocent of the charges that were brought against him. The incident serves to show the necessity, not only of missionaries keeping themselves clear of political complications, but of caution on the part of belligerents in acting harshly towards the subjects of a friendly Power.

The fact that the sum of 830,000 mark subscribed by the nation as a compliment t the Crown Prince and Princess on the occ sionof their silver wedding has been wholl assigned by their Imperial Highnesses for th benefit of various sanitary and benevolen institutions in Germany, reflects not a litt credit on those illustrious personages. Ac of unselfish regard to the wants and woes others go far to make the thrones of monarch firm and stable, and are brighter ornament than costly gems or golden crowns.

In our last issue we noted the urgent an touching appeal from Miss Mittendorff, o behalf of her work among the orphan chi dren. We have received similar commun cations from two other esteemed worker in this department of Christian servic Mrs. Hilton, of the Stepney Crèche (1 Stepney-causeway, Commercial-road, E. writes that she is almost daily compelled for lack of space and funds, to refus really deserving cases to whom a little hel would be invaluable. We regret to ad that Mrs. Hilton has herself been a grea sufferer, from a rheumatic affection, fo some months past; this has not rendered i any the easier for her to sustain the burde of anxiety entailed by the vicissitudes of th noble work she carries on among the helples children.

Mrs. Parsons, of the Orphans' Home, Cum berland House, Walthamstow, Essex, als writes to the effect that her experiences o late have been almost the same as tha recorded in our last by Miss Mittendorff, o Epsom. While the blessings of health hav been granted to herself and the dear childre in her charge, the temporal needs of th work have, for the last three months, beer very pressing. We are sure we have only t mention these facts to secure for ou devoted sisters the practical sympathy o our readers.

It appears that our note of last week abou rural letter-carriers and the Parcels Pos founded, we may say, on numerous letter to the daily Press, did not represent th actual state of the case. A correspondent who is in a position to know the facts, write to us as follows:—

"So far from their not receiving any increase pay for increased duties, whenever the duties ar perceptibly increased, either assistance is given o remuneration raised (if the wages rate of th district justifies it); and so far from their bein deprived of a source of income from the carriag of private parcels, every man who is debarred fro such work receives compensation on a fair scale."

The British Conference of Y.M.C. Associa tions will be held during the first three day of next week at Liverpool. The friends i that city appear to be making complete an efficient arrangements for this gathering which, we trust, will have results commen surate with its importance. The Y.M.C.A has done grand service for the young men o the nation during the generation of its exist ence, but much land yet remains to be possess ed. We believe there are very many place throughout the provinces where there i either no Association at all, or the existin organisation is languishing and well nig extinct, for want of a little friendly help an counsel from its more flourishing neighbours At the coming Conference we shall look fo some practical suggestions from the recentl formed National Council as to the bes remedy for this unsatisfactory condition o things. We hope to give a fairly full accoun of the Conference deliberations.

Those who have been called to part with children may find comfort in the words of Dr. Pond, which we recently met with in an American exchange. He says :—

"I love to think of my little children whom God has called to himself as away at school—at the best school in the universe, under the best teachers, learning the best things in the best possible manner."

The idea accords with Longfellow's well-known lines on the same subject—

"She is not dead, the child of our affection,
But only gone unto that school;
Where she no longer needs our poor protection,
Where Christ Himself doth rule."

Those parents who have children in heaven may well rejoice in the thought that they are at home in our Father's house, and safe from every harm. Faith follows them there and learns to joy in their security and bliss. "Taken from the evil to come," they wait for us on the other side, where at the coming of the Lord, if not before, we shall rejoin them.

"Can a woman forget her sucking child that she should not have compassion on the son of her womb? Yea, they may forget." The possibility of so unnatural a fact is illustrated by an incident reported in the Pall Mall Gazette, to the effect that a woman in Oldham the other day endeavoured to effect the sale of her two children, one an infant, the other three years old. She actually parted with the elder one for sixpence to a woman who at once drove off with her bargain in a cab. The cause of such a monstrous outrage on natural affection is not stated, but it is manifest that there are circumstances which may override even a mother's love. Only the love of God is beyond the possibility of decay or change.

Mr. J. S. Balfour, M.P., the Mayor of the newly-made borough of Croydon, declared on the Bench the other day his intention to punish as severely as the law will allow, the use of bad language in the streets. He proceeded at once to prove the sincerity of his purpose by inflicting a sentence of imprisonment upon a man who had just been acquitted of another charge, but was proved guilty of this. The nuisance is a growing one, and in days when the telephone and the telegraph are being called into requisition for transmitting profane and obscene messages, as has been the case, according to a recent trial before the New York Courts, it is well that our law administrators should use all the influence in their power to check a practice which is so reprehensible and prevalent. Magistrates are appointed of God to be "a terror to evil-doers," and all who do well rejoice to have them so.

The penalty imposed by the Highgate Bench upon the builder of a number of houses at Highgate for having used bad mortar, may perhaps lead to closer supervision on the part of surveyors and others in authority, and so help to lessen what is an enormous evil in these days of rapid and extensive building. There can be no doubt that ill-built, ill-drained, and ill-ventilated houses, have much to do with the spread of disease and its consequences, as well as entailing loss and discomfort upon their owners and occupiers. It is a consideration of no slight importance to have our homes healthy and our habitations fairly and properly constructed, and it is a comfort to find protection afforded from the dishonesty too often connected with builders and building.

Men of mark have almost always been men of one idea, owing the success by which they have been distinguished to the devotion of their energies to one great aim and purpose in life. This was strikingly exemplified in the case of the late Dr. Moffat, as the following lines written by him in the album of a friend indicate :—

"Mine Album is the savage breast,
Where darkness broods and tempests rest
Without one ray of light;
To write the name of Jesus there,
And point to worlds all bright and fair,
And see the savage bow in prayer,
Is my supreme delight."

In the service of Christ the undivided and ardent consecration of the heart to his work is a matter of first importance. We can never attain eminence or achieve success in Christian effort unless, like David, "the man after God's own heart," we can say, "One thing have I desired of the Lord, that will I seek after," or like the great Apostle of the Gentiles, "This one thing I do." "Their heart is divided, now shall they be found faulty," was a charge brought of old against the people of God. It is so with many still; they have no fixity of purpose or definiteness of object in connection with their position as disciples of Christ. They therefore lack concentration of thought and endeavour in relation to his service and work. The example of such men as Dr. Moffat and others who, like him, have set the Lord always before them, may serve to stimulate us to higher and holier endeavour.

It is stated that the authorities at the Vatican are publishing two volumes of documents concerning the career of Luther, which have been found in the library there by Signor Balan, the chief librarian. The object is to throw discredit upon the character of the great Reformer, and so neutralise the effect of the centenary celebrations throughout the world. Happily, save in priest-ridden lands—which are, thank God! becoming fewer, and far less completely under Papal thrall than they were—the world is too old to be deceived by such means, and Luther and his work can withstand and outshine such attacks. Rome has ever been afraid of free inquiry, and ever eager to stifle it.

The Indian Witness calls attention to what it justly describes as the "abhorrent practice" which is prevalent among English Christian people in India of wearing "swamy jewellery," which consists of gold and silver images and idols worshipped by the heathen around them. Doubtless in many cases this is done without thought, and simply for the sake of being Oriental, and because of the novelty of such ornaments; but it is regarded with satisfaction by the natives, who boast of it, and say they have influenced the Christians by their religion, and claim it as an evidence that there can be nothing so very repulsive and evil in their idol worship after all. It is not only inconsistent with Christian example, but we have only to read Deut. vii. 25, 26, to see that it is a direct violation of Divine command.

On the same subject we may reproduce a short paragraph from the pages of a contemporary which will doubtless strike some of our readers with surprise. It is as follows: "It is stated that the idols now worshipped in India and Africa are, for the most part, manufactured in England. These goods are frequently sent out in the same vessels which carry Bibles and other religious literature for the conversion of the heathen." No wonder educated and thoughtful natives look with something like incredulity and a sneer upon the claim of England to be a Christian nation. We have abundant cause to rejoice in the prevalence and power of Christianity in our land, but much must be done yet before we are, as a nation, likely to convert other nations by our example.

Referring to the attempts made by some to prove that Buddha and Mahomet, with other corrupt founders of false systems, are not unworthy to rank with Christ, and the systems allied with their names to vie with Christianity, a returned missionary, who had been long in the foreign field, is reported to have said, "I have come home to find heathenism popular." It is a strange and anomalous fact that the country which surpasses all others in missionary enterprise, and has been the pioneer of Gospel Missions to the adherents of false systems of religion, should produce teachers who are ready to exalt those systems as second only to the religion of Christ.

On page 22 of this issue will be found a letter from Mr. J. B. Gough, traversing a statement of his view of the Blue Ribbon movement, made in the columns of a contemporary, and which we somewhat hastily transferred in an amplified form to our own pages. On reflection, we felt sure that the statement could not be correct, and must have been based on a misapprehension of what Mr. Gough really said to the writer of it. We are, therefore, glad to have from Mr. Gough himself a true version of the circumstances, and we much regret having caused him any trouble by the insertion of the paragraph referred to.

In another and more lengthy communication also received from Mr. Gough, he gives the gist of his observations made to the English friend with whom he conversed. Mr. Gough says :—

"In speaking of the Blue Ribbon excitement in England, he asked me if I should not visit them again. I replied something in this form, though the phraseology I cannot declare: That it would not be a suitable time for me to come, for there would be no room for me with my style of speaking, when the public attention was so fully engrossed with the Blue Ribbon movement."

It may be observed that these words will bear a very different construction from that which has been put upon them. The whole circumstances of the incident show that great circumspection is needed in repeating from memory the casual and unstudied utterances of public men. We would add that we do not think Mr. Gough need have any fears that a visit from him now, or under any conceivable conditions, would be unsuitable. We are certain he would meet with as cordial a welcome as ever, and his earnest words would be as potent for good as on any former occasion.

MR. HASLAM IN MONTROSE.—Rev. William Haslam has been conducting a series of meetings during the past week, on Sunday in several churches and the other evenings in St. Paul's Free Church. One great essential point in which Mr. Haslam differs from the majority of evangelists who visit our town is in simplicity of language. His addresses during the week, both to old and young, have been characterised alike by the ease and gracefulness of their delivery. The large audiences which assembled each evening, and the rapt attention given to all that was spoken, gave unmistakable proof of a real interest in what was said.

SOUTHAMPTON CONFERENCE.

THE series of meetings convened by Canon Wilberforce in the Deanery grounds, Southampton, to which we briefly referred in our last issue, were extended to Monday last. They have been fraught with real interest and practical results. The large marquee, capable of holding over a thousand, has been more than filled at most of the meetings.

The Conference was prefaced by a sermon from Canon Wilberforce, earnestly pleading with the members of his congregation to attend the various meetings to be held, and combating the existing prejudices against such gatherings. He strongly expressed his belief that under the term "Unorthodox," men and women in our churches sheltered themselves from the responsibilities of taking part in the Lord's work, denouncing a bigoted orthodoxy as "the mildew of spiritual life." Many, he said, stood aloof, declaring they could not receive spiritual teaching from Nonconformists, and he urged that such limitation of the power of God's Spirit should be cast aside as unworthy of his children, expressing as his opinion that one half of the work of God was done in our midst by Nonconformist bodies.

The speakers were Canon Wilberforce, Lord Radstock, Revs. J. Pelham Stokes, J. J. Luce, J. Hudson Taylor, J. Perrin, Major Evered Poole, Messrs. H. Varley and C. R. Hurditch, &c. During the first three days of the Conference an early Prayer-meeting was held, the attendance being very small. Meetings were held at eleven and three, announced to be for INSTRUCTION IN THE SPIRITUAL LIFE.

These were continued the following week at 11 only, a notable feature being the absence of most of the ministers of the Gospel in the town.

A very deep and earnest spirit was witnessed in these morning meetings, the key-note being struck by the prayer that the Lord's people might meet daily, not only to get blessing and joy for themselves, but realising that it was their glad privilege to give joy to their Lord, Rev. J. J. Luce and Mr. C. R. Hurditch giving striking addresses on Cant. iv. and v. The Bride's invitation to her Lord to enter his garden and find pleasure in it, and the Lord's quick response to his Church, were pointed out. The soul of the believer was pictured under the guise of a garden—private, purchased, and possessed, and a solemn warning given to those who, being on the threshold of blessing, failed to grasp it through unbelief.

Mr. Henry Varley's practical addresses on the Christian life were most valuable, "The indwelling of Christ" as a fact to be simply believed and acted upon, and used as a splendid power in daily life, being forcibly brought before those present. "Union with Christ," "Death with Christ," and the solemn responsibilities attached to the recognition of these facts were the themes of his subsequent discourses.

Mr. Hudson Taylor followed with a simple and touching account of his own experience, based on the words, "Abide in me, and I in you." He pointed out that this abiding in Christ was no grand spiritual attainment to be reached after earnest effort by certain favoured Christians, but the actual state of everyone who simply received the living Christ and daily fed upon his fulness (John vi. 53—56). It was not a matter of realisation or attainment, but of fact and of faith. Drawing analogies from natural facts surrounding us, he showed that everything God created had a design and represented the Christian life and the Christ of God, the whole creation fitting into God's place of redemption and silently picturing eternal mysteries. It is worthy of notice that the desire of every speaker and the longing breathed in every uttered prayer was that the Lord should manifest Himself to his waiting people, and that the teaching about Him should never for an instant obliterate the remembrance that all teaching must be from Him.

"WE WOULD SEE JESUS,"

was the longing of every waiting soul, and the gatherings seemed more to be round an unseen though well-loved Friend, than to listen to even the most revered servants of the Lord.

The evening evangelistic services were well attended, and the addresses by Mr. Varley and Lord Radstock were followed by manifest tokens of the Lord's presence and blessing. To an onlooker the scene, night by night, was deeply solemn—the audience, hushed and tearful, listening in the dim light to the fervent pleadings of one and another to come to Christ; now and then a caught breath or a half sob as some shaft struck home; then the after-meeting with its added solemnity, enhanced by the audience remaining nearly the whole time, while one and another stood up at the preacher's request, to express a new-born trust in Christ.

While thoroughly appreciating the work done at such meetings, it is impossible to avoid allusions to the evident dangers surrounding them. After-meeting work is the most solemn part of the whole, and requires a Divine guidance and the exercise of much sanctified common sense on the part of those conducting them. When we realise for a moment that eternal realities hang in the balance, that decisions affecting heaven and hell are made, that the meeting is the scene of a fierce battle, we cannot fail to see that on the part of the Lord's people extreme caution should be used that no advantage should be given to the enemy of souls.

There seemed to have been no arrangement made at the evangelistic services to close the tent while those impressed remained to the after-meeting, hence those remaining and those rising for prayer were subjected to the curious gaze of numbers who idly stood to watch the scene. God only knows if some poor souls, through the fear of man and the want of a little judicious sympathy with their soul-shyness, have lost a blessing which they might to-day be enjoying.

It also seems to us hardly wise to call upon all who are Christians to "stand," the danger of such an appeal being not only to cover hypocrisy, but actually to delude souls into the belief that they are in a state of safety because of their profession.

CONFERENCES SHOULD BE SIFTING TIMES

as well as times of refreshing from the presence of the Lord; many a soul still standing on the border-line 'twixt danger and safety is to be found at a Conference, hardly daring to say "I am the Lord's," trembling with fear lest it should hear Him say "I know you not."

Such need instruction on how to enter into life, and if the Lord's people would remember to give a word to such while speaking to those already established in the faith, many a one would bless the day when light and liberty followed their attendance at the Conference.

There is work to be done by the Christians of Southampton. Numbers have stood up during the past ten days to testify to a change of heart. Who will tend these homeward-brought sheep? Who will give the Christian hand-grasp, the warm word of sympathy, the earnest exhortation to those beginners in the Christian life? Christians have testified to blessings received. The reason God blesses us is that He may "make us a blessing," and "in blessing He will bless thee." Do you want to keep the blessing you have got? Rise and share it with thy brother!

The town of Southampton has been visited with many a wave of blessing, and the question uppermost in the hearts of some to-day is not how to get the blessing of the Lord, but how to retain it now that we have got it. The concluding addresses by Canon Wilberforce and Major Poole pressed home upon their hearers the need of all who had received blessing at the Conference going forth to engage in "active service" for the Master. On Saturday evening there was a good attendance, though not specially advertised, for "young converts and believers." Mr. Varley's address was to them, his text being, "Therefore being made free from sin." The after-meeting was specially solemn and a manifest impression of God's Spirit.

On Sunday afternoon last upwards of 1200 men were present to hear an address from Mr. Varley, his subject being, "This day is salvation come to this house," and the attendance in the evening was the largest of the Mission. At the after-meeting sixty stood up to witness to having received Christ during the Mission. The Sunday previous over eighty confessed Christ as their Saviour; the week evening meetings likewise were blessed to the conversion of very many. The Monday closing meeting was devoted to praise.

DR. ZIEMANN IN GERMANY.

RECENT accounts tell of the continued blessing that rests on the labours of this servant of God in Westphalia. The correspondent in Soest who furnishes the following particulars, says that many prayers are ascending to God that England would send more evangelists to Germany. The doors are open and praying people look for great things.

In its issue of August 10, the Fielder Chronik states: "Dr. Ziemann has returned from London to resume his evangelistic work. The churches are now closed to him, but not the hearts of the people. Wherever he speaks he draws the multitudes. This could not be otherwise; the story of the Cross proclaimed truly and warmly will attract. In most places the halls prove too small for the crowds who come. In Dortmund, Iserlohn, Wesel, &c., where the hearers numbered several thousands, every place was occupied long before the hour. Yesterday afternoon the Doctor spoke in Haspe, where even side rooms were overfilled. The occasion was the 'anniversary conference for Missions;' the speakers were Inspector Dr. Fabri, from Barmen, and Dr. Ziemann. The latter based his searching and powerful sermon on Psalm ciii. 1—5. We learn that Dr. Ziemann has already arranged for about 200 meetings. May he be made a rich blessing to our land."

"A secular paper, the Halversche Zeitung, of Aug. 11, after describing the crowds that came from far and near to the Gospel service, says: "We have neither space nor, we confess, ability to reproduce the sermon in its freshness and power; but if we ever felt that a speaker was filled in his inmost soul with the truth he uttered, it was the case here with Dr. Ziemann. In a very unique way he drew pictures from life to show how the power of the Gospel is alone able to settle all the ills and woes of nations and individuals. Governments could make laws, but who could give corrupt hearts the strength not only to obey good laws, but to love to obey? He pictured, out of the inner life of people of all stations, the corruption which defies God's laws and makes this world a bad world. The picture was terribly thrilling! God in Christ the great Healer and Saviour was then pointed out as willing and able to save to the uttermost.

"Evidently moved and exhausted the speaker (who had addressed the day previous two large meetings in Breckerfeld) closed, and after Pastor Quinke had pronounced the benediction, numbers besieged the Doctor to plead personally for his speedy return."

Y.M.C.A., NEWCASTLE.—The Committee and members of this Association held a meeting lately to consider the purchase of St. James's Chapel, Blackett-street, for the purposes of the Y.M.C.A. The cost, including alterations, will be about £9000. Towards this amount £3400 has been subscribed, and a committee was appointed to receive subscriptions for the remaining £5600.

MISSIONARY METHODS IN CHINA.

WE are glad to publish the following interesting and suggestive extracts from a letter Rev. J. L. Nevius, of the American Presbyian Mission, Chefoo, China. The letter is lressed to a friend in this country, and is ted June 6 :—

"I will give you a little information about at interests me most, and will, I believe, erest you more than anything else that I ld write. My work is divided into literary rk and teaching Bible-classes at home in efoo, and long and systematic itinerations in e country. These two kinds of work alternate th each other, and each occupy about half the year. My country work is somewhat culiar in its character, and, as I think, very ll of promise for the future. I speak of it as newhat peculiar because its methods are differt from those which I followed years ago, and e still adhered to by most workers in this, d, I believe, in other Mission fields.

"I commenced itinerating about ten years ago, a new and extensive field, where I was almost tirely alone, and have had everything my own ay. I have been of the opinion for years that issionaries have, as a body, erred in being hasty d premature in formally organising native hristians into churches, and endeavouring to asten on work by using paid agents, who would ave been more useful if they had been let alone their callings. We have, as I think, coming om home, with home ideas, naturally, and most unconsciously, introduced home ideas and ethods connected with and fitted to an advanced age of Christian development, rather than following Scriptural methods much better adapted the state of the Church in its early and initiory stage. In other words, I think we have sed money and men which ought not to have een used, and the using of which has done harm ather than good. I cannot, however, enter into his subject at length in this letter.
